Fourth—We have been much pleased to note that in all the addresses delivered at this meeting each speaker has put the emphasis in the strongest possible way upon the word "Christian" as applied to education. The church must insist more and more upon making the Christian religion the center and core of all our education. All of our training must be shot through and through with the spirit of Him whose we are and whom we serve. Let this fact be thoroughly and continually emphasized during this entire movement. The church at large will be impatient with anything else. Respectfully submitted,

ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Such Cases.

Cairo, Ill.—"Sometime ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."—Mrs. J. R. MATTHEWS, 3311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letter, and many others like it, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

A Misleading Headline.

"Sacrifice Offer of Devoted Wife Wins Her Praise."

This is quoted from a leading "Southern Daily" that has a vast opportunity for moulding public opinion. Such a headline implies sympathy for the offer which follows:

"Chicago, Aug. 22.—The amazing sacrifice proposed by 'Jane Ellison,' the young wife who offered to sell herself for $2500 that she might take her invalid husband South and restore him to health, has provoked much discussion."

We think, without passing judgment upon the motives of the young woman, that at least it is safe to say we would announce it—"An Amazing Proposal," rather than "Sacrifice." We have been taught to believe in the Christian church, and, even in America, that sacrifice would give life if need be for the loved object or ideal, but never, honor.

An amazing proposal, indeed, that would break the laws of God and man!

White slavery is under the ban. There are hospitals and institutions of many kinds in which to place the sick when without means of support.

We must differ from the good pastor who found in this a parallel to the case of Abraham and Isaac. All sorts have always been able to quote Scripture, both in season and out of season.

Knocking It Over.

Once in a while the editor goes to a picture show. He first tries to find out if it a good picture and worth looking at.

A friend had been to see a certain picture and he was enthusiastic over it.

"It is wonderful!" he said to the editor. "You must see it. It is tremendously well told and one out of a thousand!"

The editor finally went to see it. His friend had not exaggerated. The picture was beautiful, the story was clean in its humor and true in its pathos; it taught a great and needed lesson, and was as wholesome and pure and strong as any story of human interest could be.

At its close, he found himself profoundly impressed. He was wiping his eyes. There was a choke in his throat. His heart beat with high resolve to think more of his fellowmen. And as he looked around on the audience, he saw scores of men and women with tears on their faces, and the man next to him was sobbing like a child.

And then—

The man in charge of the business of the film house "knocked it all over." That is, the impression. It might have been better if he had knocked the house over, unless he intends to use it in better ways. For there flashed on the screen, immediately following the clean, pure, strong, wholesome, great human story, a cheap, vulgar, (at times indecent) so-called "comedy" which was an insult to the audience and a contradiction to everything taught in the picture that had gone before.

The great Film Companies say they can not control the use of films in local houses, and have nothing to say about the number or character of any other films than their own.

How about that—you local film man? Are you knocking over all the good impressions? Most of your comedies in the film are not comedies. They are insults! It rests with each local community to insist that good impressions shall not be pushed out by bad ones. Tell your local man you will not tolerate it.—Christian Herald.

FROM LAMBERT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I seldom write to the paper, perhaps not as often as I should, but I want to report our work. The church interest is growing. Our Sunday schools especially are doing good work, and we have just completed our revivals. At Lambert, Evangelist L. J. Miller, of Nashville, Tenn., did the preaching, and Prof. C. E. Edwards, of Barlow, Ky., led in song service. We had a great meeting—had 11 added to the church.

At Marks, the pastor started the meeting, and after three days, Brother J. B. Randolph, of Winona, Miss., came to us and did some faithful work. His preaching was appreciated by every one. At Marks we had 25 additions.

At Belen, Brother W. V. Shearer, of Benoit, Miss., was with us, and his work there won the esteem of all. Only one was added to the church, but the church was greatly revived.

We are now reviving the work on our new church building at Marks; will begin to receive material within a very few days, and work will begin.

THE CHRISTIAN INVESTMENT IS PAYING.

Our work in Osaka is most interesting these days. It was a hard pull to break away this time. We moved out to Ashiya last September and were getting fairly well settled and making a host of new friends there. The biggest joke I have ever heard in all my twenty-five years of service is "The Lost Opportunity of Japan," by which people who use the phrase mean the time thirty years ago when Japan seemed so eager to hear the Gospel and when the church at home failed to send the proper reinforcements. The implication that the phrase seems to carry with it in the minds of some is, "The harvest is passed, the summer is ended and (Japan is) not saved." Of course Japan is not saved—only a very small proportion of the people are saved, but the Christian investment is paying as well to-day as ever it did. Japan's day was not yesterday. It is to-day and to-morrow. I would far rather be beginning now than twenty-five years ago when I did begin. If you hear anybody say, "Japan's day is past—put your men and money somewhere to make it count for something," just tell them for me they are false prophets and that the Lord of the harvest has no idea of giving up the sowing of good seed in Japan, knowing, as He does, that "In due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Bachmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write to-day.

ADDITIONAL NEWS FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

Still being confined to the parsonage because of my wife's illness, I will send a few additional lines to those recently sent to your columns.

Not being able to get to Mt. Olive, Brother L. L. Stokes, one of our assistant pastors on this work, after preaching twice on Sunday, got busy and secured Brothers Paul Grice, of Meadville, and W. W. Murray, of Auburn, and continued the meeting until Thursday, August 19. He (Brother Stokes) writes me they had a good meeting. To use his own words: "We had a good meeting. The Lord came in great power and blessed us. Seventeen joined the church." I am so glad Brothers Grice and Murray could come "to the help of the Lord against the mighty." God bless them!

As well as I could count when the propositions were made, there have been twenty-five new family altars erected over the circuit this year. This means a whole lot as to the spiritual welfare of the children in these homes and the maintenance of "old-time" religion in general in these parts. Have baptized five infants.

Brother Chambers is anxious about the Sunday School Day observances. The following places on the charge have observed this day: Woodland, Mt. Olive, Liberty, Gloster, and Mt. Vernon, with $53.70 collection. Woodland had only a sermon and collection, but the other places had programs that did credit to the cause and occasion. I don't think I ever heard one service commented on more, and all favorably too, than the children's service here at Gloster. Mrs. Wells and the other ladies get all the credit, for I was not even present when the program was rendered.

We have added nineteen to the list of Advocate subscribers, with ten renewals. Others have renewed themselves. With the 17 additions at Mt. Olive and 5 at Gloster, we have had this year 55 accessions—33 on profession of faith—42 net increase. Faithful and persistent prayer is the human agency that brought about these revivals and accessions. God gets all the glory. On account of sickness in the parsonage, the meeting at Gloster has been postponed indefinitely. We are sorry, but, with the lamented McKinley, say, "Not my will, but God's way be done." I find the Lord is precious in watchful and prayerful waiting around the bedside as in the midst of the fight. "What need I fear when Thou art near, and thinkest Lord, of me!" I ask special interest in your prayers, especially for the stricken helper who has been near my side most of the battles now for about four years—has been a special helper since coming to Gloster.

Resigned and happy,

THE MISSISSIPPI JUNALUSKA CLUB.

Under the inspiration of our great Standard Sunday School Training School held annually at Lake Junaluska, N. C., there has grown up the custom of organizing the various State delegations each year into Junaluska clubs. The reason for this is obvious. Certainly it needs no explanation or vindication to those Sunday school leaders and workers who are fortunate enough to reach Junaluska, and come under the spell of its inspirational influence, during the session of its Standard Training School.

A number of the States having larger delegations because of their geographical proximity to this Mecca of Southern Methodism, have had Junaluska clubs in operation for two or more years. How much they have contributed to the enthusiasm, spirit and social good fellowship of our Sunday school forces at Lake Junaluska cannot be expressed in terms of material things, or be measured by figures and statistics. They have been invaluable to the success of these annual Sunday school gatherings. But the reflex influence upon the Conferences and States represented has been infinitely greater than any contribution made to the Junaluska Training School, great as all who are acquainted with the facts know that contribution to have been. The enthusiasm, fine spirit of co-operation and the efficiency developed by these organizations have reacted most happily and helpfully upon the Sunday school work in the Conferences and States thus organized. North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida are striking illustrations of this fact. Already the general status of Sunday schools in those States is bearing evidence to the impact for progress made by these State Junaluska clubs upon the work back home. They not only carry back the inspiration, the information, the efficiency that Junaluska stands for, but they rally the home workers and inspire them to go to the Standard Training School in ever-increasing numbers. They thus increase its points of contact with the Sunday school forces of Southern Methodism, and help to disseminate the leaven of the Junaluska spirit throughout our great church.

Because of the comparative smallness of Mississippi's delegation prior to 1920, its representatives had not attempted an organization until July of this year. A canvass of the situation at that time showed thirty-six Mississippians on the grounds at Lake Junaluska. Twenty-four of these were registered for credit work under one or more of the ten instructors who offered courses during the 1920 session of the Standard Training School, from July 7 to the 21st. The other twelve Mississippians were daily visitors to several of these classes. All were intent upon securing definite help in the solution of their Sunday school problems at home. Already the fruits of this work are becoming manifest in our midst. Three of the instructors at the North Mississippi Conference Training School at Grenada were among the Mississippians who took credit work at Junaluska this summer. These were Rev. J. E. Stephens, Rev. Robert Ruff, and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt. Reports are forthcoming to the various Conference Superintendents showing that some Sunday schools are being reorganized and put upon a standard basis by their representatives at Junaluska, who returned not only with new zeal but with new knowledge of what to do and how to do it.

It is confidently expected that the Mississippi Junaluska Club organized this summer will very materially affect for good the Sunday school activities of Methodism throughout the State. It is the earnest desire of its officers and charter members to increase the attendance of Mississippi Sunday school workers upon the annual sessions of the Junaluska Training School. They wish in every way possible to give publicity and endorsement to the high character of work done there, and its inspirational value. One member of this club, the superintendent of a live Delta Sunday school, left Junaluska this summer fully resolved to ask the official board of his home church for an appropriation of $500 to send Sunday school teachers of the local church to Junaluska in 1921. A convincing testimony is this, from a practical business man, to the value of specialized training in the field of religious education, as represented in the Sunday school. May this progressive type of superintendent increase! And increase it will as rapidly as our religious leaders are brought under the influence of Junaluska, and are given its mountain-top vision of the larger efficiency, and the more intelligent and consecrated service made possible through a trained leadership in our Sunday schools.

Fifty Mississippians taking credit work at Junaluska in 1921 is not too high a goal for the two Conferences to set themselves. The Florida Junaluska Club registered room reservations for fifty delegates to Junaluska, as early as January, 1920. They arrived there nearly one hundred strong at the opening of the Training School in July. So much for a club systematically at work, with a definite goal in view! Let Mississippi follow suit in 1921.

The club officers as elected at Junaluska in July are: Rev. E. H. Mohler, Sardis, Miss., President; Mr. E. C. Cropper, Fernwood, Miss., Vice President; Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Shelby, Miss., Secretary-Treasurer. May they not urge the pastors, superintendents and Sunday school teachers to begin even now an aggressive campaign to secure a large attendance of officers and teachers upon the Junaluska Training School next summer? It will repay the expenditure of time and money a hundred fold to any Sunday school undertaking it.

Mississippi Sunday school workers, enlist in this good cause! Join the Mississippi Junaluska Club at once. Begin your praying and planning for one of the richest experiences that can come into your lives—a term of inspiration and training for service in the genial atmosphere of Christian culture and good fellowship at Junaluska the beautiful, that Methodist shrine in the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Yours for a large Mississippi delegation at the Training School in 1921.

Mrs. J. M. WYATT,
Secty.-Treas.

Shelby, Miss.

FAMILY NAMES.

"A great many family names represent the trades or occupations of our great-great-great grandfathers. John, the miller, and after that his descendants were known as Miller," says Clifford Howard in an article on the meaning of names in the September number of Boys' Life. "And Robert, the baker, started the family name of Baker. And thus we have many other familiar names—Carpenter, Mason, Taylor, Shoemaker, Brewer, Draper, Shepherd, Fisher, Hunter, Clark (clerk), Page, Harper, Singer and a whole lot more. But chief among them all is Smith. The reason there are so many Smiths today is because there used to be so many different kinds of smiths—blacksmiths, goldsmiths, silversmitbs, coppersmiths, tinsmiths, locksmiths, arrowsmiths, and so on. Each, for short, was known simply as a smith; and each different kind of smith started his own family Smith.

In many cases if there was something very striking about a man—if he was very short or had very red hair or had some peculiar trait or habit—it was used for starting a family name, and that's how we have such names as Little, Small, Ross (which means red), Black, Gray, White, Strong, Long, Longfellow, Whistler, Noble, Swift, Doolittle, Savage, Wise, and many, many more of the same kind."

FROM AMITE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We are glad to report that we are still doing things for the Master up here. Brother Lutz, our presiding elder, came to us August 22, preached one of his masterly sermons at 11 o'clock, and held our third quarterly conference in the afternoon. He found that the pastor's and presiding elder's salary had been paid in full up to date, and that twenty-one adults and five infants had been baptized, thirty-one added to the church membership, and seven couples married. The thing that made the elder catch his breath and open his eyes, was when Dr. C. S. Stewart reported the working prayer meeting, with an attendance of from 65 to 70; that is not all—they are leading and praying.

Repairs have been made on the parsonage and church to the amount of $140. We are making arrangements to look after the Centenary money and the Orphanage quota.

There is considerable talk of raising the pastor's salary another year to two thousand dollars; Amite is capable of doing it.

Come up to see us. Yours truly,

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WORKING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

Any kind of man can do easy work under favorable conditions; but it takes a good one to accomplish a hard task when the odds are all against him. Give a barrel a start, and it will roll down hill of itself; it takes a bended back and tense muscles to get it from the bottom to the top. Too many of us are looking for down-hill jobs. We profess to love work—but we hate difficulties. We complacently accept big pay for little effort, but we growl fiercely when somebody suggests that we do more and receive less. Yet the test of manhood is in what we give, rather than in what we get. He is a bigger man who wrests a bare living from the clenched fist of Adversity than he who fares daintily upon the abundance of prodigal Fortune. The traveler over the plains goes easily, but he never sees the wonderful visions that greet the eyes of the struggler up the mountain-side.

THE CORRUPT THEATER.

A well-known dramatic critic has recently expressed the opinion that a young man who would take a young lady to some of the popular plays to-day ought to set himself right before the world by marrying her next day. We cannot, of course, express an opinion from first-hand knowledge of the moral character of what is being presented on the stage, but such opinions as the above, held by those who are professedly friendly to the theater, certainly indicate a condition that is scandalous as well as exceedingly dangerous. It is a pity that men, for money, will write and present on the stage plays that cannot but degrade the moral nature of those who see them; and it is a shame that the decent citizens of a community will allow them to continue a work that wrecks individual lives and lowers the moral tone of society. Clean plays—and there are some—can be used for many good ends, but the dirty things that some managers seem to favor because they bring in the money are a shame and a disgrace. We honor the men and women who fight them to the last ditch.

SHIFTING GEARS.

Automobiles, as a rule, have four gear shifts—low, intermediate, high, and reverse. Experience has shown that all these are necessary, and the skillful driver makes use of them as occasion demands. The easiest and fastest running is done when the gears are in "high;" and when the going is good and the road is clear it ought to be used. But frequently the car has to be slowed down for the development of greater pulling power or to avoid danger; and sometimes it actually has to back up! We speak of this merely to get a starting point for saying that a wise man will not keep his energies keyed up to the highest pitch all the time—he will use common sense and good judgment in conserving his strength that he may do his best work under all circumstances.

THE OLD-FASHIONED HOME.

We are not among those who lament the passing of all old-fashioned things, but we do wish we had among us more of the old-fashioned homes where all the members of the family enjoyed social companionship in the evening, where outside diversions did not interefere with the peaceful intimacy of the family circle, and where family prayer was as much a part of the daily program as were the meals. We are strongly of the opinion that most of the social problems of to-day had their origin in the failure of our homes to function fully as the supreme teachers of the essential social and moral virtues, and that these problems will not be solved apart from a new emphasis upon the home-life as the pattern by which all social activities are to be regulated. Frivolously-inclined, shallow-pated, morally untrained children do not normally grow up into solid, God-fearing men and women; and the social fabric cannot be any better than the material of which it is composed. Instead of spending all our energy in attempting to purify the water in the stream miles from its muddy source, it might be well for us to devote more attention to removing the polluting elements from the spring itself.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In our emphasis upon the value of a college education we should not lose sight of the fact that the primary preparation for college is made in the public schools. If it is important that our higher institutions of learning should be properly endowed, equipped, and manned, all the more is it important that our public school system should be so developed as to do in the best possible way the work upon which later progress is so largely dependent. Indeed, if a distinction should be made, it would seem to be even more imperative that our public schools do well what they are supposed to do than that our colleges and universities should be placed upon the highest possible plane. As a matter of fact, if the elementary schools are not thoroughly efficient, it will be impossible to make the higher institutions what they ought to be. In addition to its importance as an educational factor in the lives of our young people, the public school is about the only agency we have left for democratizing our citizenship. As the meeting place of rich and poor, high and low, it can do more than any other one institution to maintain and perpetuate that community of interests that is so essential for our national well-being. Poor public schools mean a decadent national life.

SACRIFICIAL GIVING.

The term, "sacrificial giving," has gained considerable currency of late in connection with the various urgent claims that are being presented to the Christian people of the country. We have no objection to it as expressive of a spirit of consecration that withholds nothing when a need is to be met; but it is a term that very few of us have any right to use if we place what we give over against what we keep. In most cases, sacrificial giving will require a readjustment of our schedule of personal expenditures. It means that after we have given of our abundance, we can still find ways to do without what we thought we must have, and make additional gifts from the amount saved by rigid economy. A man may give liberally, freely—as the world counts giving—and still be as far from sacrificial giving as the east is from the west. When we give sacrificially, we have given to the extreme limit of possibility; until we have done that, we ought to be careful of the terms we use to describe our benefactions.

DOING ONE THING WELL.

While we are not willing to maintain the thesis that no man can do more than one thing exceedingly well, we do undertake to say that every man should acquire special proficiency in at least one thing. To be called a "Jack-of-all-trades" may be considered a compliment by those who are willing to remain upon "the dead level of mediocrity," but "good at none" is the consequent phrase that is almost sure to express the opinion of the community at large. It is a poor accomplishment at best, but it is better to be a good whistler than to be good for nothing. Certainly there is no excuse for the man who does indifferently well the thing to which he has professedly devoted his life.

MY PORT.

By Ulysses Grant Foote.

One distant port, beyond all anxious years
Of time or tide, is picturesque to me.
Its lifted scene, uprising from the sea
To purple hills, holds calm for all my fears,
When rounding to its rest my bark appears.
Some curious eyes may crowd the quay to see
What passport or what tongue that mine may be,
Who seek this port alone throughout the years.

Whate'er the vision seen or music heard,
When I shall round at e'en the restless bar;
Whate'er the debris on the seething foam,
I'll end my voyage with a single word—
Though swift or slow I've sailed, or far—
For I will shout with laughing tears: "Home! Home!"

A LABOR DAY ADDRESS.

By Dr. John A. Rice.

President Wilson, in his address to the American people from France, speaking of the treaty of peace and the League of Nations, said:

"If it is ratified and acted upon in full and sincere application of its terms, it will furnish the Magna Charta for a new order of affairs in the world."

The bringing in of this new order of affairs is the task upon which we must now enter. Religion and industry are central agencies in the re-creation of the world, for men will always work and always pray. It will not be amiss, therefore, to inquire on this Labor Day whether there are any points of contact, any common meeting places between religion and industry in the Sermon on the Mount, which is the Bible's greatest summing up of spiritual values. For the church cannot fail to make some contribution toward the Magna Charta of the coming industrial order. The forward moving hosts of the new democracy are halting at our doors, only for a moment, to hear whether we are afraid of Jesus or have the courage to express his ideals in terms of economic relationships and help make the worker the man that the free gospel and the free school have taught him to know himself to be.

The Primacy of Personality.

Religion and industry depend alike upon the primacy of human personality, which received first emphasis in the Sermon on the Mount. The Beatitudes give the elements of character necessary to the new social ideal: the poor in spirit rather than the self-complacent; the mourners who realize the self-comforting power of sorrow rather than the light-hearted who miss the deeper issues of life; the meek rather than the self-assertive; the hungry rather than the self-satisfied; the merciful rather than the masterful; the pure rather than the corruptible; the peacemakers rather than the peacebreakers; the heroic rather than the timid. These characteristics are in conflict with popular ideals; yet these are they to whom tomorrow belongs; these are they upon whose free unfolding religion and industry alike depend. They are both concerned that such an individual come to his own—religion for the sake of his spiritual value, industry for effective productivity. Neither can survive that forgets the infinite worth of one. Both are interested in securing his right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; in supplying his wants and perfecting his powers. Neither can be content till the gates of life are thrown open to every soul on the face of the earth. Universal education is, therefore, our common task, whatever the meaning of that term might be.

Sacrificial Socialmindedness.

Religion and industry agree also in requiring the sacrificial socialmindedness of the Sermon on the Mount. Both demand that we pass on to others whatever saving power, salt-like, we have received. For it is by the contagion of life that society is to be transformed and redeemed; by the shining of radiant spirits in such way that men might glorify, not themselves nor their clients nor their cause, but their God.

This sacrificial socialmindedness would make every act, the least as well as the greatest, such that its controlling principles ought to become universal law. It forbids even a shrug of the shoulders which reveals an anti-social attitude, a calling of names which shows an unbrotherly spirit. It goes to the roots of grosser sins like murder, adultery, divorce, profanity, revenge, resentment and hate, and makes us incapable of any of them.

The emotional waste caused by class antagonisms would disappear in a moment and good-will prevail in capital and labor alike if each would forget self and begin to seek the other's welfare; if each would live by what it affirms rather than by what it denies, by what it confers rather than what it demands, by the force of the ideal rather than the ideal of force. Turning the other cheek has never been required of any man or cause, but vengeance that hits back is one of the costliest of luxuries.

Socializing, however, must begin with the man at the top. Power must become sacrificial. It must not only refuse to use the law as a cloak, but must rise above law into the region of love.

The Reticent Reserve Self.

Again, efficiency in religion and industry demands the reticent reserve self urged in the Sermon on the Mount. Men were doing even righteous acts for the sake of the impression they would make. They were parading their inmost selves, their prayers even, before the vulgar crowd till reality had gone out of them. There never was a time when an impression brought so much in cash or cost so much in manhood as now.

Men in every walk of life are seeking to secure social approval or catch public attention for the vending of their wares or the winning of their cause, righteous or unrighteous. Big interests are spending millions in such a way as, in not a few cases, to deceive even the elect. Hirelings are selling even their souls for so much as a column.

On the other hand, not a few are the victims of an economic pressure that exacts more than they have. Specialization is driving still others into grooves that soon become their graves. Feverish excitation is whipping our nerves into premature exhaustion. Neither religion nor industry can view with indifference the muffling of our heart songs, the drying up of our soul springs, the drawing off of our sources of power, by whatever cause, till we have little left when the day is done. Let Jesus give us the remedy: "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and having shut the door, pray to thy Father, who is in secret." How leisurely the scene when a soul retreats into the silence for the culture of the Reserve Self!

The scale of values to be cultured in the secret place is given in the little poem we call the Lord's Prayer, which sets forth in perfect perspective and proportion the things necessary for the individual in a world community. Living under the sway of this value sense, we are ready to be used in full for complete social redemption.

The Social Ideal of Jesus.

In order that we may come to an adequate appreciation of the sacredness and worth of the one—in order that sacrificial socialmindedness may have a fair chance among men—in order that an ample reserve self shall be within reach of all, religion and industry unite with Jesus in urging: "Seek ye first His kingdom and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Aim to make the whole world a commonwealth of co-operative effort, in which the social ideal of Jesus shall prevail, and you shall not go hungry, you shall not go naked, you shall not live the divided life, and you shall not be without investment in the riches of the Spirit—but, carefree, you may live the life of appreciation under the spell of the gospel of the lilies and the birds.

It will profit little to have destroyed autocracy in European statecraft and left it free in America, to rule by edict millions of unrepresented human beings on the one hand, or millions of unrepresented capital on the other. The four parties at interest—capital labor, the manager, the public—must now share proportionately in the democratic control of every enterprise in which human beings invest their lives.

The new democracy requires that we change our social attitudes and spirit in the intimate affairs of life as well as in the control of economic enterprises. Our feelings toward each other are wrong in many cases because of the way we trade and work. We need a new definition of justice, so applied that the sun will rise no more upon a world bisected by a line that leaves on one side ten per cent of the people with all the leisure, luxury and freedom from care, with all the civic, social and economic power; and on the other, ninety per cent of the people with all the weariness, poverty and misery, with all the civic, social and economic subjection; that leaves on one side the corporation president with a wife and two children drawing $50,000 a year, and on the other the floor sweeper with a wife and ten children drawing three dollars a day. Business was made for man, not man for business.

Religion and Industry Interdependent.

The task of religion is a gigantic one. Billions are required for its work. It is more intimately related to Industry than we commonly suppose. Jesus said far more about work and money than about heaven and hell. The early church did not a few things now done by labor unions. The Swabian peasants had on their banners in the Protestant Reformation a serf kneeling at the Cross with this legend: "Nothing but God's Justice." The Wesleyan movement prepared the way for English trade unionism. The mission of the church is to the whole human life in all its relationships. Nothing human is foreign to the gospel.

Industry is dependent upon religion for an adequate dynamic. Reformation must go deeper than reform. The economic strain calls for power enough for each, enough for all, enough forevermore. Only in Jesus Christ, Lord of our lives, can this be found.

In view of all this, the church can offer with confidence the Sermon on the Mount as the Magna Charta of the new industrial day.

THE SCARCEST THING IN THE WORLD.

By David Martin Key, Ph.D.,
Professor of Ancient Languages in Millsaps College.

Young man, if you will get into your possession the thing that the world needs most and has the least of, you can settle with the world on your own terms. What is that thing?

It is a strange fact that, at the end of a materialistic age, the world faces a universal shortage of all material goods. Things command a high price in this country because there is not enough of them. In vast regions of Europe and the Near East, the necessities of life cannot be bought with any amount of money, because they do not exist. But the sun still shines and grain still grows. Driven by the goad of need, labor will become productive again. The ten or twelve million working men destroyed in the war were a small percentage of the world's billion toilers. And education has made labor ten times as productive as it was. It used to take two hours of a man's time to raise a bushel of wheat. Now it takes less than fifteen minutes. Do not become alarmed. There will be silk shirts a-plenty in 1925. The world shortage of material goods will be quickly supplied.

The most alarming shortage that the world faces is in a commodity which cannot be quickly replaced. Education is essential to the world because it was education that enabled men to organize an orderly society and to devise the machinery for multiplying the productivity of labor. Education is the scarcest and at the same time the most indispensable commodity in the world to-day.

The World Almanac gives the attendance each year at the 512 American colleges and universities. Taking the number for the year 1917 (457,488) as the normal yearly attendance, the totals for the next three years show a shortage as follows: for 1918, a shortage of 46,372; for 1919, a shortage of 34,011; for 1920 a shortage of 17,419. These figures are cumulative and up to the present amount to 97,802 college years. This shortage is of course due to the war, the draft, and the diversion of young men from college into industrial life. There should be added a vast number of college graduates of the years immediately preceding 1917 who were killed in the service or whose careers were interrupted by their army experience. It is a conservative estimate, therefore, that the accumulated shortage is above 100,000 college years, or 25 per cent of the normal supply of college men.

This is the shortage of educated men in America alone, and America was least affected by the war in this respect. Exact figures as to the number of students in the universities of Europe are not obtainable, but the testimony is quite uniform that these institutions were practically suspended during the period of the war. Owing to the wider scope of the draft over there, it would be safe to say that 90 per cent of all college and university graduates for the five years preceding the war and of the men who would have graduated during the five years of the war were either killed or diverted from their careers of leadership. The grand total of twenty million killed and wounded beyond doubt includes practically the entire output of educated men for a decade. But with the exception of Japan, whose universities scarcely supply her own needs, the American and European universities constitute the only source for the world supply of educated men. With these facts in view, we may estimate that the world shortage of educated leaders is at least 60 per cent of the normal supply.

But the world need for educated men is as far above the normal as the present supply is below it. Apart from the unparalleled demand for college trained men in the ordinary channels of politics, business, commerce, engineering, law and medicine, a huge volume of unusual tasks must be done by college trained men, and since the supply is almost non-existent in foreign countries, American college men must do them. In the reconstruction of war-ruined countries, American engineers must carry on such work as that of Ford in the rebuilding of Rheims. American railway and industrial engineers must continue the work of bringing order in chaotic Russia. In social, physical, and medical relief, Herbert Hoover and the American Red Cross employ tens of thousands of American college men and women and will continue to do so. The missionary program of the Christian churches of America is now planned on a scale and in a manner that will demand many thousands of workers of every type, and a college degree is made a requisite of all the Boards. Furthermore, the European universities will be crippled for years by the disorganization produced by the war and by the fact that many of their best scholars were carried off by the conflict.

In the face of this world shortage of 60 per cent to 75 per cent and a need so overwhelming that it is tragic, the American college-trained young man for the next decade will hold in his hand that commodity that the world wants most and has the least of; from the altruistic or the selfish standpoint, as you will, he will possess, in the highest degree, the power of contracting loans and of demanding his own reward. Will you qualify?

VACATION ENDED.

By the Late Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

(This article was in type when the news came of Dr. Holloman's death. How significant the caption—how strange the coincidence! We think of him now at home—in the Father's House.—Editor.)

At the close of my first round, August 8, I announced to my people that as all first-class appointments allow their pastors a vacation, they might not expect any preaching until the first Sunday in September, and if they needed any special service, to call on Alford for a part of his unoccupied time.

Speaking of vacations calls for as much and as varied talk as "speaking of operations"—for vacations are as variant as operations, from appendicitis to removing a blood clot from the brain or an eye from its socket.

The value of a vacation depends upon the when and the where, and—don't forget it—the pocketbook. Having received invitation, and check for all expense, from one of the best sisters that ever blessed and brightened a brother's life, I spent one week in Booneville, in the home of Rev. J. W. Ward, enjoying the company of Judge Marvin Brown, of Fort Worth, Texas. Mrs. Ward and Judge Brown are the only children of Mrs. Brown.

My, my, what a week! "Pressed down, shaken together and running over." Think of it, Henry, me and my sister, Brown and his sister, all turned loose at one time on people, things and experiences of the years agone! If Ward had anything to say, he didn't get it in; then, too, there were the nine grandchildren (only four, however, were Wards) to enliven the occasion and add to the "sound like unto many waters."

From breakfast time to "sleepy time" the clatter went on. And what a preacher's home that one at Booneville is! roomy and comfortable, all the beds full, and pallets on the floor—"Backward, turn backward, O, Time, in thy flight," etc., was the echo in my heart. A dozen Elbertas, loaded with their ripening fruit, the thoughtful work of Dr. Wier some years ago, furnished delicious eating between meals. That fine garden, those patches of corn and Nancy Halls, large front yard and, don't you forget, plenty of space for the proverbial preacher's luxury and stocked with R. I. R.'s make that the ideal preacher's home. Ward is a lucky fellow, enjoys his surroundings, and, more than all else, is so beloved of all the community that the new law may be evoked when the four years are ended. If my subject were Booneville, I could say much, but it's vacation. I liked Booneville, I enjoyed her people and shall not forget their courtesies to the visiting preacher.

In the Nashville Advocate of August 20 appears a communication from one J. E. McKellar, on "Popularizing Junaluska," worthy of a reprint about first of May or June, 1921. Looking back over a long pastoral life, I am impressed not only with my own loss, but with how much more my people would have benefited had they closed the doors against me and then made possible a month's associations with those who gather at such resorts. I never could be a bookworm, and, as Bishop Kavanaugh was wont to say, much of my "preachment" I got from mingling with and hearing others. To such a disposition "much study is truly a weariness to the flesh." Accepting the old theory that reading makes a full man, and believing it to be my duty as an instructor to give the best that was in me, I tried; but my little cup would soon run over—recesses came very frequently—and the weekly grind of books, books, books sapped the energies.

By the way, Henry, that little "Mississippi Methodist" from Germania presents her case well; and why not, for few writers measured up to her ver-

[illegible], honored father, "sweet sixteen" of the [illegible]. Can't you prevail on her to write [illegible]?

A week to attend Bank should be sufficient. [illegible], it will have taken as many recesses between campers and drill, and not kept his head so [illegible] in a book, he wouldn't be so worn-out. [illegible], Dr. Hooper, and those old fellows gave [illegible] to be, while this old classmate had often [illegible] the youngster over the drumstick: "Old [illegible] you lie there I'll rest a while."

[illegible] I have digressed from my subject—[illegible] I beg for Sam Steel to take a vacation. [illegible] tells so many things that are interesting. If others who travel were as generous with [illegible] as he is, there would be [illegible] that our Advocates are dry. Write [illegible]. Who says so?" [illegible].

Now my three weeks have ended. Repairing [illegible], building fences, getting the turnip patch ready for the first good rain, have been the spices of my vacation. Seven times plus one I have been drenched to the skin in these days, and not a [illegible] of "rheumatiz;" drinking the limestone water from the springs and not a symptom of nausea; eating watermelons forenoon and afternoon and not a chill to remind me of my youth, when the old family physician told us there was a chill in every slice. And the chicken pies prepared by the landlady in honor of my vacation must not be forgotten (four days out of seven I spend among the people). If I were playing presiding elder, writing life insurance, or running up and down in the earth delivering lectures, I might be the "old, worn-out," but not with such a menu as that above.

And here comes Terry on's brook again. Past 10 and this John Plowman must hie to bed and be up with the birds.

FULL COLLECTIONS FOR THE CENTENARY.

To the Pastors and Laymen of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: While the pastors and presiding elders and stewards will be very busy during the next ninety days winding up the year's work, and getting ready for Conference, it is of the utmost importance that the collection of our Centenary pledges be not neglected. Hundreds of Centenary subscriptions are overdue, and will go by default, unless the pastors, Centenary treasurers, and local committees bestir themselves enough to push the matter of collecting. In the majority of cases, the delinquent subscriber must be seen personally by somebody duly authorized to do the collecting; otherwise, the results will be disappointing.

Let us not forget that a big shortage in our collections for the Centenary will seriously cripple our General Board of Missions in carrying on the splendid work already enterprised. To retrench now would be shameful and calamitous. Let us remember also that ten per cent of the Centenary money collected in each Conference is refunded by the Centenary Commission to the Conference Board of Missions to be used in supplementing the salaries of our poorly paid domestic missionaries. There has never been a time when these faithful brethren needed this help more than now when prices are so high.

As loyal Methodists and servants of the Master, we must pay our Centenary pledges in full, if able to do so, or lose ground spiritually. We ought to be even more prompt and faithful in meeting our Centenary pledges than in meeting a note at the bank. Shall we be honest with men, and dishonest with God and the church? "Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than thou shouldest vow, and not pay." Yours in the Master's cause.

M. M. BLACK,
President Board of Missions, Miss. Conf.

It is a good deal easier to regulate the world than it is to set your own house straight.—Exchange.

THE PERAMBULATOR STARTS.

That title sounds good and "catchy," so I am using it to catch the eye of the readers of the Advocate, hoping that when they see it they will read my brief narrative—and wish for more.

At last, after seven years of hoping, expecting, and planning to attend the World's Sunday School Association Convention, I find myself really on the way, having left dear old New Orleans on I. C. train No. 4 at 8:30 this morning. It's a long, long journey before our party of three will turn their faces homeward—and, in the meantime, we will have traveled up the Mississippi Valley, across the fertile fields of Wisconsin, into the hills of Minnesota, over the rolling prairies of the Dakotas, through the great wheat fields of Canada, under the shadows of the mountains of the wonderful northwest, arrive at Vancouver, and there take steamer for Yokohama. Once in Japan, our tour will take us to Shimonoseki, Fusan, Tokio, and Nikko. Three days will be spent in Seoul and surrounding Korean country; thence we journey to China, visiting Peking and Shanghai. Leaving this latter place, we will again touch Japan and visit Nagasaki, Kobe, and Yokohama, sailing for Seattle, where we hope to arrive Nov. 24.

While on the journey, our whole time will he given to Sunday School Association work, for in all the cities visited Sunday school conventions will be held with the expectation that a great stimulus will be given to all Christian activities in China, Korea and Japan, and that those who compose the tour will receive a vision of the Christian needs of these countries to such an extent that when we return to the homeland we will inspire, instruct and enthuse others to do more than ever before attempted that the people of these lands may truly have within them Christ, the hope of glory.

Chicago will be our first stop. Friends will meet us, take us to Sunday services, and then to dinner in the best Southern hospitality that great city by the lakes knows of. Only eight hours will be spent there, for we must hurry on to Banff and Lake Louise among the Canadian Rockies, where within easy reach are gentle climbs and gorgeous panoramas like Bow Falls, Tunnel Mountain, the Cave and Basin, the heautiful Vermillion Lakes, lovely Paradise Valley, Mounts Le Roy and Victoria and Lake Agnes, a thousand feet above Lake Louise, shut in by sombre cliffs, wnere the great white anemone blooms by the late snowdrift and where reigns the silence of eternity among the high hills.

But we have just started! We will write of these wonders when we behold them, and will try to share with our readers the joy and hlessedness that will be ours as we look upon them with the realization that they are God's great handiwork and He doeth all things well. Come and go with us, "friend of mine," and "greater things than these shall ye see." THE PERAMBULATOR.

En Route No. 1.

FUNDAMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS.

By E. D. Kohlstedt.

One of the best definitions of Christianity the writer ever heard is this: "Jesus Christ, enthroned in the heart of the believer, reproducing himself in the life of the believer." If that be true, then the supreme business of the church of God is to get folks acquainted with Jesus Christ; to persuade them to enthrone him in their hearts, to incorporate his teachings in their lives, to reproduce and give expression to his spirit in convincing terms of life and service.

As we face the whole evangelistic task of the church of Christ there are three fundamental considerations which ought to be thoroughly grounded in the consciousness of the Christian public:

First—Jesus Christ is not on trial in the world. He passed the judgment hall centuries ago. He is now the regnant Prince of Life. The world may be on trial: nations, governments, society, church and people may be on trial, but Jesus Christ is supreme; for he is judge of all the earth. No man has any right to present the claims of the Christ in a spirit of apology; he needs none. The claims of Jesus Christ have been conclusively validated by centuries of human experience. They challenge the attention of thoughtful men. More than ever before, they grip the heart of the world. Every disciple of Jesus Christ should glory in the high privilege of challenging men with the justice of the claims of the Master of men with respect to every man's life. It is the challenge of the gospel that grips hearts and transforms lives: "Try me; test my claims to cover every legitimate want of man, and I agree to abide by the result."

Second—The church must be broad enough to be social, big enough to be different.

Jesus was interested in every phase of human life. His representatives are to share his fate among men: they are to reflect his image, to project his spirit into every phase of community life with which they may be identified. The church has a real mission to every phase of life, social, recreational, industrial, educational, spiritual. No merely negative attitude toward the social inclinations of her young people will ever solve the amusement problem. Only a positive, constructive, social-recreational program will meet the needs of the situation. At the same time it ought to be borne in mind that the social and every other phase of the program of church activities is a means to the one great end of getting more folks acquainted with Jesus Christ as a personal Savior. The church is infinitely more than a social service institution. Broad enough to be social, the church must he big enough to be different; to make her social service program distinctively Christian in motive and intent, never for a moment losing sight of the ultimate objective.

Third—At heart, men are hungry for knowledge concerning God.

Sweep aside a bit of the debris of life. Get underneath life's superficialities, right down to where the heart throbs and men really live, and you will discover that men actually want to know about God. "That I might find him" is still the heart cry of the prodigal world. How shall men come by this knowledge of God, the saving grace of Jesus Christ? Mainly through contact with life, enriched hy the divine touch; through association with those who have been with Jesus and learned of him. Herein lies the challenging opportunity of the organized church of Christ, the blood-bought responsibility of the individual Christian to dedicate a portion of his time to the business of personal evangelism, huttressed by a program of daily intercession in behalf of those who are the objects of his Christian solicitude, his heart-heat quickened by the spirit embodied in the following lines:

"Stir me, O, stir me, Lord. Thy heart was stirred
By love's intensest fire, till thou didst give Thine only Son, thy best heloved one,
Even to the dreadful Cross, that I might live;
Stir me to give myself so back to thee
That thou canst give thyself again through me."

THE CONFERENCES GIVE APPROVAL TO THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

Reports from the sessions of the Annual Conferences held to date indicate that the church is of one mind in the matter of support of the Christian Education Movement. No Conference has failed to give its unanimous approval to the action of the General Conference of 1918, and, without exception, quotas and surplus askings have been accepted.

Two of the smaller Conferences—Denver and Illinois—have no Conference schools, hence their quotas are for connectional work. These Conferences gave their endorsement by unanimous vote, and their quotas of $10,000 each were guaranteed. The Kentucky Conference approved the surplus askings of $120,000, making its total $520,000. The Western Virginia Conference, with a quota of $450,000, added $150,000 as surplus askings, making its total $600,000. The Missouri Conference added $179,000 to its quota of $529,000, thus accepting a total of $771,500. These surplus askings represent an additional amount for Conference schools, and in the case of each Conference will be forty per cent of the original amount approved by the Commission for these schools. No part of the surplus askings is for connectional institutions.

It is indeed gratifying that to date there has not been in any Conference a dissenting vote, as touching either the enterprise itself or the matter of additional askings for the schools of the Conference. The church will give itself without reserve to the Christian Education Movement, and in this great enterprise will make secure the future of its schools. This will be done both in the pledging of this fund of $33,000,000 and in giving Christian Education its rightful place in the thought and conscience of the church.—Bulletin.

THE LAYMEN'S DUTY.

By Gov. Henry J. Allen.

It seems to me that no higher duty rests upon the laymen in connection with their support of the church than that of helping to create a fund out of which we may guarantee to our ministers in their declining years peace and security for themselves and their families.

From a financial viewpoint, the ministry of God is the least attractive of all the callings, because it is the poorest paid. Hence no man enters it through any other than a sense of service. We exact of our ministers a spiritual standard so high that it seems to preclude the thought of gain, and yet we provide for their well-being with salaries so small that the men who are bidden to keep their eyes always upon spiritual matters often are obliged to suffer such mental worries over their common needs as must, in some cases, reduce life to a sordid and trying basis.

If we would keep the church a live and vital thing, we must guarantee to it the right type of ministers, and we cannot attract men of ability unless we provide a proper safeguard for them and their loved ones against sickness and age.

Out of the troubled and brooding spirit which followed the war, there comes a new test upon the church, and laymen are now demanding that it rise to meet the challenge of this new period. It is for the laymen to do some rising. It is necessary for them to meet some challenges, and among the gravest of these is that which is presented in behalf of the Conference claimants. If we are to expect services of the right quality from our ministers, then we must give them better protection against the worries which hinder them in their spiritual leadership.—Zion's Herald.

THE BURDEN OF LONELINESS.

We read the other day a short article on "The Zone of Loneliness," In which the author developed the thought that all great souls had had their hours of loneliness, which to a certain extent lay involved in their very advanced spiritual development and was part of the penalty which naturally was attached to their greatness. The great crowds are never found upon the mountain summits. The spiritual pioneer, in the very nature of the case, must blaze his own pathway, and that pathway leads from, not to, the haunts of men. This is the story of all great souls. There might be supreme enjoyment of human society, hut this could not prevent, but only intensify, the horror of the Gethsemane, where the soul wrestled all alone in its dark and desperate struggle. Moses had his years in Midian; Elijah his soul-horror at Horeb; John the Baptist his dungeon in Machaerus; and even the Christ had His Gethsemane.

But we do not wish to talk of the loneliness of the few great souls, but of the loneliness of common men, the burden which rests not upon the shoulders of the world's Titans, but upon the weary backs of the world's masses. If loneliness be a test of greatness, then most men can qualify. It is not a strange experience, but one which is common to our race. The stranger in a strange land feels it; the child in a new school, or even in a new class; the lad or girl in the boarding-houses of a great city; and even the boy and girl, even the father and mother, in their own home. Friends may be all around us, but many of our struggles must be fought out in utter loneliness. Change of scene does not banish loneliness; success in business does not get rid of it; wealth is no insurance against it; and even domestic happiness does not render us proof against it. It is part of humanity's burden and we may not escape it.

But while this is true, it is also true that God never meant any man or woman to be overwhelmed by this sense of loneliness. It is a burden, but it need not be a crushing one. It does need courage and strength, but it was never intended to disqualify any man for toil; in fact, it often serves as a spur to toil, and the toiler finds life worth living in proportion as he loses himself and forgets his loneliness in his chosen and God-appointed task. Work is often a successful remedy for loneliness. If the hours drag wearily, then seek out some congenial task and the hours will pass swiftly enough.

Probably the great mission of loneliness is to develop our sympathy for other lonely souls, and banish loneliness by developing friendliness. The man who has never had a lonely hour cannot understand the isolation of another; he may wish to, he may try to, he may think he does, understand—but it is a hopeless task. But the man who has trodden the winepress alone, who has faced his foes all alone in his own Gethsemane, will never need introduction to another soul in distress; for all time to come, he is bound by closest ties to the lonely soul in the heroic struggles. The road to helpfulness lies through comradeship in suffering.

But there is another message, also, for lonely hearts. The God who made us knows all about us. He knows our ancestry for thousands of years; he knows our special weakness and our special strength; He knows our hearts' desires and purposes; He sees every day's journey, and He has weighed every day's burdens; and He is our Father, and the greatest gain of the lonely hour is when it leads us to discover the presence of our Father. We are not left alone; God has not placed us here, and then deserted us. He would become to us the everlasting Comrade, the One whose sympathy will never cease, whose love will never waver, whose strength will never fail, and the One upon whom we can depend day and night for a million years. He will never leave us. Too often loneliness is largely the failure to realize this. Men may forsake us, but God will not. And to every lonely heart this brings a world of comfort. Our friends cannot always go with us; they cannot always understand us, but our Father always understands, and He will never fail us. Even the sparrows are not forgotten; how much less His own dear children! You may have forgotten God. He never has forgotten you.—The Christian Guardian.

THE SUPERANNUATE.

By Rev. J. F. Campbell.

I saw a preacher young and spry
Before the Conference bar,
He promised there to do or die
For home and lands afar.

He put himself upon the Cross,
And Christ was in his heart.
He counted all things here but loss,
That he might do his part.

He looked not for the halls of fame,
Nor the world's gold to share;
He only hoped a crown to gain
In the land, bright and fair.

He gave us law, and art,
The world to better make;
He sacrificed it at the call
Of God, for Jesus' sake.

The world, with treasures rich and rare,
Would yield at his command;
In all its glories he could share,
In mansions high and grand.

He chose rather the will of God,
And these things counted loss;
He walked the path our Savior trod,
A soldier of the Cross.

He made our churches, and our schools,
He gave us law, and art
He taught to us the "Golden Rule"
From an unselfish heart.

Of all his exploits no one knows,
Nor would I try to pen
What civilization to him owes
Nor what it might have been.

The church now built of brick and stone,
And with rare pictures shine,
Stands where there stood in days agone
A log house made of pine.

I see him now; he's old and bent,
Battle scars are on his face;
His clothes are old and worn and rent;
Young men now take his place.

With winter's frost his head was white,
With summer's toil he's worn;
He faced the dangers of the night,
He brushed the dews of morn.

The church no longer has a place
For him, he served his day.
But oh, my brother, what disgrace
To give him such small pay.

Oh, church of God! Let us repent,
And all atonement make,
And help his life to be content,
Oh, church, for Jesus' sake.

Let not now his declining years
Be marred by our sin;
But let us wipe away his tears,
And let the sunshine in.

If joy to them we give, you know,
That joy we, too, shall see,
As I to others mercies show,
That mercy's shown to me.

Madison, Miss.

A BURNING AND A SHINING LIGHT.

A compliment from Jesus Christ is most of all worth while, for His estimates are sure, and His recommendation when given is most hearty. If we may say it reverently, two of Christ's admirations, though for somewhat different reasons, were the two Johns—John the Beloved and John the Baptist. The latter was the pinnacle man of the Old Testament period and the pioneer man of the New. He was no ordinary character. His nature was not just translucent, it was fairly transparent to heavenly truth. Jesus justly called John a burning and a shining light. This glory was not the self-advertising vanity of a man sure of himself, but the radiant virtue and the valorous vim of a man sure of his God.

The world to-day needs more of this extraordinary type of piety, this excess upon conventional religious profession. And there is really no good reason why the uncommon type of piety should not be more common. When the "average" quality of human nature is steadily raised from generation to generation, the number of instances of geniuses and exceptional leaders will be increased. Out from the common people, when there are enough of them and of the right sort, arise the greater prophets and the chiefest of the apostles.

No age can do without leaders, and there is no good reason why it should not produce them out of its own ranks. It takes morality and consecration, however, to create Johns and Peters and Pauls. John the Baptist was a burning and a shining light. If he had not burned, he would not have shone; and if he had not been consumed, he would not have lived in the undying love of the Christian church.—Zion's Herald.

PREACHING MADE EASY.

Many preachers seem to feel that the preparation of sermons is hard work, to be accomplished only by the full exercise, each week, of all their mental powers. This is not necessarily true, for there are other preachers who have so completely mastered the art of easy preparation that they have but to touch a spring, so to speak, and the sermon comes bubbling forth.

Of course a text must be chosen, but the Bible is full of good ones which come to mind quite easily. Suppose the one selected be, "Let patience have her perfect work." This must be stated with good oratorical effect, and followed by a few incontrovertible propositions, such as "Patience, brethren and sisters, is a great virtue," or, "No great work is ever achieved without patience." Then begin, say, with Abraham, something after this fashion: "Note the patience of this patriarch of the olden time." Tell all about it, and come on down through the Bible in the same way, pausing for a special flourish over poor old Job. Next, begin in the fields in which patience is needed, as "The life of the business man calls for patience," "The housewife has a constant demand made upon her patience," etc. If emphasis is sufficient the representatives of these various callings may be seen to wake up as their names are called. Next, open "Golden Sheaves of Homiletical Illustration" at "Pat," and pick out half a dozen stories which can be told with good elocutionary effect. If your hearers are of a literary turn of mind, it might be well to take down "Sparkling Jewels from the Poets," and select a few gems from Pope and Tupper for the further embellishment of the production. The end is now near, but by all means there should be a personal appeal by way of finale—as, for instance, "Are we as patient as we should be?" or, "Shall we not resolve that we will strive to be more patient?"

The method speaks for itself. The pastor of a prominent church was recently heard to say that he had not prepared a new sermon for a year, having made a change of fields just over a twelvemonth before. It is believable that a preacher of this type would be encouraged to changes sufficiently frequent as to make further preparation unnecessary for the term of his natural life. Had he mastered the art of preaching made easy he need never have prepared a sermon.—From The Christian Century.

SEEKING THE LOST.

One of the most frequent and exasperating experiences of life is the mislaying, or utter losing, of some article which, perhaps of no great intrinsic value, has become dear to us from long familiarity or daily use. Often we spend anxious moments of even weary hours looking up these waifs and strays.

It has always been so—things have gone astray from the first. History is, a large part of it, a series of lost values. Our Lord emphasized this fact when He used the metaphors of the lost coin and the lost sheep to point the moral of the seeking love which is restless till it finds the strays.

The supreme illustration of the seeking of the lost is afforded by the sacrificial example of the great Sufferer who shepherded the sheep at the cost of His precious life. But all who call themselves Christian must have a similar, if not an equal, interest in reaching out for the unsaved.

The church should awake to the need of evangelism in unlikely fields, and so prove that it cares for the souls of men. The world scarce believes in the sincerity and genuine concern for souls of the average church member, but a church that actually seeks the lost commands the utmost respect. Our interest in the wayward and the wilful ought to be like Christ's own love—deep, yearning, and restless in its evangelistic passion.—Zion's Herald.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE CENTENARY STATEMENT.

The report below will be of special interest to every reader of the Advocate in the Louisiana Conference in connection with the following letter from our presiding bishop:

"My attention has been called to the plan to make the eight days, beginning with the fourth Sunday in September, September 26, and to include October 3, a period of special activity in the matter of collecting Centenary pledges that are due and overdue.

"I heartily endorse the plan, and hope that the presiding elders and the lay leaders and the preachers will make a diligent effort to bring the Centenary collections as nearly up to par as possible. I trust when the reports from this period shall have come in, we may realize that the special effort has been very fruitful of good results.

W. F. McMURRY."

This plan has been unanimously concurred in by all our presiding elders, meeting with Bishop McMurry at Little Rock, Ark., a short time ago. Every pastor has been asked to present Centenary accomplishments on September 26. It is hoped that the week will be an unusual event in our Centenary activities.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCHES, NORTH AND SOUTH.

By Rev. John W. Boswell, D.D.

A notable article by Bishop Enoch M. Marvin, contributed to the Methodist Review in 1872, has been reprinted under the title of "The Duty and Destiny of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." The work was done under the supervision of Bishop W. A. Candler, "at the request, and with the aid of a company of spiritual men (lay and clerical), who are deeply concerned that our church should maintain its unworldly character, remain faithful to its sacred trust, and fulfill its divinely appointed mission." Nearly fifty years have passed since the article first appeared, but it is as timely as if it had been written to-day.

Bishop Marvin was a wise and holy man. He was by no means an uncharitable partisan, but he was thoroughly devoted to Southern Methodism—its doctrines, polity and policies, believing it to be, not only the best exponent of our holy religion, but that so "far as Methodism is concerned" the custodian of the vital truth that Christ's kingdom is not of this world. This trust he was firmly persuaded the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, could not surrender without dishonor.

Bishop Marvin was prompted to write the article by the effort which a few months previous had been put forth by the Methodist Episcopal Church to bring about the union of the two churches—an effort evidently too previous, since the two churches from 1844 to 1870 were utterly "out of harmony," a condition for which the Church, South, was not to blame, the Methodist Episcopal Church at its General Conference in 1848 having abruptly, not to say contemptuously, rejected the overtures of Dr. Lovick Pierce, our fraternal messenger.

The first offer of union was brought to the General Conference of our church in 1870 through Bishop Edmund S. Janes and Dr. William Harris. The writer was present as a looker-on when the distinguished visitors presented their credentials and pleaded their cause. By some stroke of fortune he was close up to the front at the time. The scene is vivid to-day, though he does not call to mind all that was said. Dr. Harris followed Bishop Janes in a short talk. When through, and before he was fairly seated, Dr. John C. Keener (afterwards bishop), was on his feet. Was that great man ever caught off guard? He had the official document in his hand. This document showed that the commissioners were authorized to negotiate only with Methodist bodies seeking union with their church. "And," said Dr. Keener, "as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not seeking union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, the commissioners are not authorized to negotiate with our church." The commisssioners were caught. The reader can imagine, better than I can describe, how Bishop Janes looked. Reunion was frosted and killed.

Bishop Marvin acknowledged the desirableness of union. This, he said, "every good man desires." But he opposed the union at that time because conditions were not favorable. "Let the churches not come together under conditions that will insure another explosion. Better nothing than a mere botch." His general proposition was this: "The two Methodist Churches must be cleared of everything not proper to them as Methodist Churches before they can in any true sense of the word be one." In arguing this proposition he did not claim his own church to be faultless, but he did show that the Methodist Church, North, was not blameless. It had largely become what is called a politico-religious organization. It meddled to much with civil affairs. It began when that side of the church undertook to legislate concerning the matter of slavery, which, as an institution, was under the control of the government, some Conferences going so far as to appoint committees on "The State of the Country;" it was encouraged by Mr. Lincoln, who advised much with one or two of their bishops, and who flattered the Methodists because they furnished so many more soldiers for the Union army than any other church. They have not yet purged themselves, as witness the proceedings of their General Conference at Des Moines, 1920. In these things Bishop Marvin charged that the Methodist Episcopal Church had forgotten that Jesus said, "My Kingdom is not of this world." And he urged other and serious objections against union in 1872:

1. "In case of reunion, the Northern Church would give its character to the whole organization." This would be effected by the overwhelming majority on that side. Whatever is distinctive in Southern Methodism, and whatever is committed to her in trust, "merged into the larger body will be lost." This objection has as much force to-day as it had in 1872.

2. Reunion of the two churches would force upon Southern Methodists the practice if not the opinions of Northern Methodists in regard to the episcopacy. They hold that the episcopacy is the creature of the General Conference, and that bishops may be deposed or set aside with or without cause. Southern Methodists hold that the episcopacy is a co-ordinate branch of the church and that bishops cannot be deposed without formal trial, and for cause—for crime, or maladministration, etc. This was the supreme issue in the General Conference of 1844. Bishop Andrew was deposed arbitrarily—without trial, no formal charges having been made against him. This action was resisted by the Southern delegates, and separation followed.

3. Reunion cannot be generally desired, nor satisfactorily brought about until reparation by way of apology is made by the Methodist Episcopal Church for the insult and injuries heaped upon the Southern Church towards the close of the war between the States. The history is painful. I do not blame the Northern Methodists for saying, "Let bygones be bygones." But we who suffered the smart, and still feel the hurt, cannot forget. Were it a personal matter so far as this writer is concerned, long since the things complained of would have been buried. But my church suffered and was made to bleed because of the Northern effort to "disintegrate and absorb" it, as was declared by one of their bishops to be the program. The Northern Church should be ashamed of her conduct in seizing our churches and appointing her preachers to occupy them. If in any public way this shameful thing has been atoned for, I have never heard of it. All these things and more, are discussed in Bishop Marvin's pamphlet.

The Northern Methodists are dominated by the same spirit they were in 1865—the desire to absorb Southern Methodism. That is evident, it seems to me, from the unanimity with which they rejected the Plan of Unification at their late General Conference. Too many persons without reason and indifferent to causes, take it for granted that the "churches have nothing to do but just flow together and be one." Bishop Candler says this is "a delusion as widely prevalent in 1920 as in 1872 and more misleading now than then."

DAVID A TYPE OF CHRIST.

David the shepherd is the type of the one divine-human shepherd of souls—of the good Shepherd who giveth his life for the sheep—of him, who, going before his flock, leads them in the way to heaven. David the warrior represents him, who came into the world to fight against the foes of our households, who utterly vanquished them, and who holds them ever in subjection for the safety and defense of all who put their trust in him. David the king foreshadows and signifies the King of kings, whose "dominion is an everlasting dominion, who shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."—James Reed.

The Home Circle

JUST SMILE AND PASS IT ON.

By Willie Conger Page.

If somebody does you a kind, loving deed,
When you are in trouble, or sadly in need;
If somebody cheers you along life's road,
When you are burdened by a tiresome load;
If you wait to repay them, the chance may be gone;
Just smile and pass it on.

If something is done to brighten your day;
Some one stands guard while you rest on the way,
Scattering the sunshine by hope's golden beam,
Radiating happiness by love's soft gleam;
If you wait to favor them, the chance may be gone;
Just smile and pass it on.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

By Emma Gary Wallace.

A business magazine carried this single-line statement the other day, "Every man knows more about some subject than you do." That's all there was to it, yet it set James Anderson thinking.

"Do you suppose that's true, Dad?" he asked, rather skeptically at the dinner table. "Do you really believe that every normal man knows more about something than you or I do?"

"Why certainly," Mr. Anderson smiled. "That's what makes life so tremendously interesting. It's a continual game of 'Finding Out.'

"This morning a man came into my office who wanted to borrow some money. I couldn't see any reason why he should be in need of funds, for he earns a good salary and his father left him a substantial sum of money only a few years ago. The story he told me as to why he needed the money was plausible. I excused myself for a few moments after listening to him, went into my inner office and rang up his cousin, who is a banker. I know his cousin well, so I said bluntly, 'What's the reason that Will Jones needs to borrow money? He ought to have resources enough of his own to swing a five hundred dollar deal.'

" 'He would have, too,' came back the answer, 'if he hadn't learned to gamble. For all he prides himself on being a skilled player, he has lost nearly all his property and is continually hard up.' "

Mr. Anderson looked up at James keenly.

"Will Jones knows more about games of chance than I do. He knows more about rapid company than I do. He knows more about a family in distress without comforts than I do. The kind of knowledge that Will Jones has is nothing I crave.

"He hadn't been gone out of my office more than ten minutes before Wilbur Stevens came in. Wilbur is a young fellow but as keen as a briar. He was much interested to tell me about the new laboratory over at the munitions plant and the precautions the Government was taking to safeguard its workers. Wilbur knew a lot of things that I didn't and which I was glad to learn from him.

"Old Ben is out hoeing in the garden. I always enjoy a chat with him because he is so familiar with all the native trees and the best way to handle fruit trees to get the biggest yield. He is an authority on grass of all kinds. You know how shady our lawn is and I have tried and tried to get some variety of grass which would grow luxuriantly under the conditions of soil and shade out there. I tried for ten years unsuccessfully, until old Ben took hold of the lawn, and under his management it is like a piece of green velvet now."

James was eating his dinner thoughtfully.

"That may be all right as far as old Ben is concerned," he said, "but what do you suppose that Amos Kelley knows more than I do?" and James grinned as though he had put a sticker this time, for Amos Kelley was a well-known town character who, owing to an injury in his babyhood, suffered from a partially paralyzed arm and leg and was mentally slow.

"That's easy," Mr. Anderson replied back genially. "I have known a boy in my time who sometimes forgot to feed the chickens or to mail a letter, or to get up when it was time in the morning."

James had flushed slightly.

"But with Amos Kelley the case is different. For all he is not keen mentally, he is faithfulness personified, and if you hire him to mow your grass or shovel your walks, you need never be afraid that he will forget.

"The other day Mr. Manning was telling me that Amos had taken care of his store for ten years without failing to do it well. Because the store is so located that it has to open at 6 o'clock, Amos makes his appearance promptly at 3 o'clock, rain or shine, winter or summer, and works until six. His desire, as he often says, is to have everything 'beautiful.' "

"Well, what about old Biddy Cronk? Just wherein does she excel? I'd like to know, for maybe I'd feel more cheerful about going down with the basket of stuff mother wants me to take after dinner."

"Biddy Cronk is old and feeble and is not in possession of the faculties of her maturity, but let me tell you, son, that she did something once no one else in this town had the courage to do. A man came to the hotel, was taken sick, and his trouble was diagnosed as smallpox. That was years ago before there was a hospital. No one was willing to take care of him except Biddy. He was moved into a small house on the edge of the town, and when he recovered he couldn't say enough about her never-failing kindness and good care. Then, after her own children were grown, she took two orphans and reared them by taking in washing. Oh, I guess we could find a number of things that Biddy knows that neither you nor I have dreamed of."

James was toying with his dessert as though he were thinking of something else.

"Looks like that business magazine is right, doesn't it?" he said, "and it's going to be some fun from now on trying to find out whether what the other fellow knows is worth while or not."

"That's just it," nodded his father. "It's the power to discriminate between the worthy and worthless and to adapt good ideas to our own use which marks the difference between success and failure many times."

"It surely looks," James returned, "as though no one person has it all, doesn't it?"

"It surely does," responded his father, folding up his napkin and slipping it into the ring, "but the trouble is some people forget that fact and run away with the mistaken idea that they are the sum of all wisdom. It's the pride that goes before a fall usually, too. Excuse me, son; I want to go out and have a little chat with Ben."

Kind Words.

WHY GERTRUDE WENT TO CHURCH.

By Elizabeth Donovan.

"Father is coming home. Father is coming home," sang Gertrude on Saturday as she hurried about with mother making the whole house spick and span, and cooking the things which father liked best. For two whole long months he had been away.

What a happy, happy evening it was! How slowly the clock hand moved until train time, and then, when they all wanted to visit, how those same clock hands flew!

Everyone was happy but little May next door. Her mother had said: "I suppose you'll have to miss Sunday school to-morrow, for Gertrude will stay home and visit with her father, of course." May had cried herself to sleep because she loved to go to Sunday school.

But early the next morning a bright-eyed Gertrude came to May's door. "Why, we did not look for you this morning," said May's mother, as she hurried around to get May ready, "we thought you would be too busy visiting with your father."

"Oh, he and mother are going, too!" said Gertrude quickly. "We couldn't stay home to-day, for it would seem as if we did not thank God for bringing father safely back again. Of course we thank Him at home, but when we go to church it lets other people know that we thank God, you know."

May's mother nodded thoughtfully as she tied her little daughter's bonnet. "You've preached me a good sermon on thankfulness this morning even if I couldn't go to church," she said. "I know you will have a happy, happy day."—The Sunbeam.

WHAT IT COSTS—A THREE-MINUTE TALK.

There was a time when the work of a missionary was looked upon as a kind of romance, appealing to those who lost sight of stern realities in the glamor of a life in strange lands, among strange peoples. It is a romance—we thank God that a high emprise still stirs the soul and arouses the imagination—but it is also a work that involves hardships, self-sacrifice, weariness of spirit and, oftentimes, unutterable heartache. The missionary has to give up home, loved ones, friends, pleasant associations with congenial people, and many of the comforts that most of us have come to look upon as indispensable to our happiness. He has to learn a new language, accustom himself to strange customs, set himself tactfully but determinedly against established institutions, and labor without ceasing for the establishment of spiritual ideals in an atmosphere that is charged with the grossest materialism and superstition. Far away from the sustaining influence of a great company of like-minded fellow-workers, he labors alone, upheld by his devotion to duty and his consciousness of the ever-present grace of God.

But the missionary never complains, never gives way to doubts and fears, never loses heart, and never cries, "Hold, enough!" In spite of all he has given up, in spite of all the difficulties he has to face, in spite of loneliness that comes from separation from friends and loved ones, he labors on, month after month and year after year, striving with all his might to hasten the coming of the time when the Kingdom of God shall be established even to the uttermost parts of the earth.

What a small thing it is for us, in the enjoyment of plenty and in the midst of friends, to give our money and our prayers that these heroes and heroines of the Cross may be encouraged and inspired by the realization that we are solidly back of them in their glorious undertaking!

DEATH OF DR. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

We hardly know how to write the words—but we are forced to the sad duty by the telegraphic announcement of the death of this distinguished servant of the church at Yazoo City, Miss., on Thursday of last week. Beyond the announcement of his death and the statement that he would be buried at Itta Bena, Miss., we have no details of the end, but we knew him so well that we can confidently say,

"There was no moaning at the bar,
When he put out to sea."

Dr. Holloman was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference in 1873. He soon took rank as one of the most accomplished, efficient, and popular members of that body, and found himself in demand as pastor of the leading appointments, presiding elder, and college president. He loved people, and everywhere he went he received their love in return. He was a winsome servant of God, enforcing by his life what he taught with his lips.

Our readers have enjoyed with us the bright, entertaining, suggestive articles he has contributed to the Advocate from time to time; we shall see them no more. In this week's issue we are printing the last communication we received from his pen, under the captien, "Vacation Ended." There was a strain of humor in all he wrote, yet underneath was a current of deep feeling and profound thought that interested and profited his readers. Whether there was a strange premonition that he was soon to leave us that caused him to write of "Vacation Ended," we do not know; but we do know that he was always eager to be at work, busy about the things that make men better and happier in this world and that prepare them for the world beyond. His work on earth is done, but his influence will remain a long time in the lives of those to whom he was a blessing throughout the long years of his ministry.

A suitable memoir will doubtless be sent us for publication in due time.

GETTING READY FOR CONFERENCE.

In last week's issue of the Advocate we had something to say about the importance of getting ready for Conference by beginning now to take such steps as will insure the full payment of all financial obligations. The suggestions made then had to do largely with the material interests of the church and the work of the official boards; we trust we shall not be thought presumptuous if we call to mind this week a few things about which pastors ought to be especially concerned.

In the first place, the records of the year's work should be so carefully made as to insure a perfectly accurate set of statistics to be included in the annual report. The blanks upon which this report is made are as nearly as possible self-explanatory, yet it is a well-known fact that the work of the statistical secretaries is hampered every year by discrepancies and inaccuracies that could easily have been avoided if sufficient care had been used in making them out. As we see it, this annual report is not merely an incidental of the year's work, but it is an exceedingly important statement of the visible results of a whole year's activities. Take, for example, the question of a decrease or increase in membership of the church at large. It is no small matter to have to publish to the world figures that show a net loss of communicants in one of the most virile religious organizations in the country; yet that could very easily happen, and perhaps has happened, through carelessness in tabulating additions and removals. It is hardly necessary to suggest that the church register should be so accurately kept that it will, at all times, give the exact status of the church as to membership. It is sometimes the case that the pastor relies upon memoranda, rather than the official record for his figures. Just in passing, we would add that during the Conference session in a crowded room is not the best time or place for making out reports.

In the second place, in getting ready for Conference the pastor should see to it that the work of the year is brought to such completion that his successor, if there should be a change of preachers, would have no difficulty in taking up immediately and going forward with the work. It will be hard enough for the new man to become acquainted and properly adjusted to a new situation, without his having to gather up the loose ends of the preceding administration and solve left-over problems that he should never have to confront. "I'll attend to that after Conference," may be a satisfactory statement by a preacher who is absolutely sure that he will be returned for another year—but what Methodist preacher can be sure of his appointment in advance? Even if he could be, it would be no better for him to enter upon a new year with a clean sheet than to have to begin it by disposing of some vexatious left-overs. In theory, at least, when a preacher leaves for Conference the affairs of the church should be in such condition that his successor would have no difficulty in taking up the work even if the old pastor should not return for a single hour.

Again, as a preacher is getting ready for Conference, he can do much toward encouraging his people in view of what has been accomplished, and toward inspiriting them for the work of another year, whether under his continued pastorate or the administration of another man. It is not according to the spirit of the itinerary that we should be independent workers, or that we should be concerned for our own success merely, regardless of what our successors will have to face. Whether we are laying foundations or building upon another man's work, we should remember that still others are to come after us, and that we have it largely in our power to make the way easy or difficult for them. The preacher has done a good year's work after all, who leaves a sweet-spirited people and carries no ouch himself when he goes to Conference.

The most important suggestion we have left for the last—the personal preparation of mind and heart for the great annual gathering to which we all look forward. Of necessity our Conferences have developed into great business assemblies; but that does not mean that the religious element should be subordinated. And it will not be subordinated unless we, as ministers, go to the place of meeting with our minds fixed upon temporal things, looking forward to it as a place merely of delightful hospitality and social recreation. It is all these—but it is infinitely more. It is—or should be—a place of spiritual rejuvenation, of revival within our own lives of those spiritual influences and energies that we have sought to make powerful in the lives of our people as we have labored among them. Above all things else, in getting ready for Conference let us expectantly pray for such an outpouring of the Spirit as will make this a memorable year in our religious experience by reason of the enduement of power we shall receive for the work that yet lies ahead of us.

A GREAT MISSION FIELD AT HOME.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. F. J. McCoy, we spent a recent Sunday at Houma, La., a beautiful town in the French-speaking, Roman Catholic section of the State. While there we were a guest in the MacDonnell White Home and School, which is conducted admirably by Miss Ella Hooper and Mrs. Lay M. White. This institution, which is maintained as a center of missionary operations for the surrounding territory, is doing a magnificent work in the practical application to the whole life of the people of the principles of Protestant Christianity. While a guest in the Home, we were the recipient of a most gracious hospitality on the part of Miss Hooper and Mrs. White, and the two charming little French girls, Gertrude and Lucy Boquet, who are at present members of the family. We had the pleasure, too, of meeting the Mrs. Pullen and Mr. Robichaux, who are actively identified with the work of our church in Houma, and of receiving appreciated courtesies at the hands of Dr. and Mrs. Warren.

Our congregation at Houma is small, but it is loyal, and it is just entering upon a new era which will be marked by the erection of a beautiful and substantial brick church, for which a large part of the necessary funds is already in sight. When this building is completed, Methodism in particular, and Protestantism as a whole, will be in a position to do a great work in a field that is white unto the harvest. We are glad to have had this close-up view of the work that is being done by our church in one of the greatest home mission field in our territory.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Amory, Miss., recently did the preaching for Rev. A. T. McIlwain in a meeting at Senatobia, Miss.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Oakland, Miss., was recently with Rev. J. B. Conner in a meeting at Cypress Corner, on the Longtown charge.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor of First Church, Water Valley, Miss., assisted Rev. J. M. Guinn in a good meeting at Crenshaw, Miss., last week.

We learn from the South-Reporter, of Holly Springs, Miss., that the new organ for our church at that place has been shipped, and that it will soon be installed.

Our new church at Inverness, Miss., will be completed in the near future. It is a handsome brick building which will be a credit to the community. Rev. E. B. Sharp is pastor.

It is good news that comes to us through our exchanges that Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo is steadily improving in health, and that his physician says that, with continued rest, he will recover completely.

Mr. Q. R. Henry, a graduate of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., has recently received an appointment in the Government Rehabilitation Service, and has been assigned to educational work at Greenville, S. C.

Rev. U. G. Foote, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, is this week assisting Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Slidell, La., in a series of meetings. The singing is being led by Rev. Bunyan Champlin, a member of Felicity Church.

Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Snelling entertained at an informal luncheon on Monday, September 5, all the Methodist pastors of the New Orleans District. Needless to say, there was "a feast of reason and flow of soul," which was enjoyed by all.

The Mississippi friends of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Broome will regret to learn that Mrs. Broome has recently been seriously ill in the Wesley Hospital, Oklahoma City, Okla. Brother Broome is pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Norman, Okla.

A community welcome was given to Dr. I. W. Cooper at the First Baptist Church, Brookhaven, Miss., on Sunday evening, September 12, on his safe return from his tour of Europe. Dr. Cooper is held in very high esteem by the people of his own community.

Brother pastor, have you held that church conference yet? It will help you to revise the Church Register, to check the lagging items in church activities, to pay in full the Centenary and all other claims, to plan for a better and bigger work for the coming year.

Miss Irene Estelle Leggett, daughter of Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, was operated on for appendicitis at the Jackson Infirmary recently. She was seriously ill, but her condition was reported as greatly improved after the operation.

A very successful revival has recently been held at the Wesley Memorial Church, Biloxi, Miss., in which the whole community received an uplift and about 25 were converted and added to the church. The pastor, Rev. L. A. Darsey, was assisted by Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Felicity Church.

Rev. V. R. Landrum, our pastor at Harleston, Miss., requests us to announce that the Salem Camp Meeting will be held, October 6-10. The preaching will be done by Rev. J. S. Purcell. A cordial invitation is extended to the public generally, and to former pastors especially, to attend the meeting.

The vacation Sunday school at Seashore Camp Grounds presented Master Inman Ueber Townsley with a handsome silver wrist watch, as a token of appreciation of his faithfulness as "official bell-ringer." His record was 100 per cent on time. Inman says he loves brass and noise! He is a true son of his father.

Among the delegates named by Governor Russell, of Mississippi, to attend the International Congress Against Alcoholism, to be held at Washington, D. C., September 21-26, we note the names of Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson District, and Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson.

Mr. Van Carter, General Secretary of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, left on September 4 for Tokio, Japan, to attend the World's Sunday School Convention. Brother Carter will be away about three months. Under the pen name, "Perambulator," he will give the readers of the Advocate interesting sketches of his travels.

The ninth session of the Seashore Camp Grounds School opened last Monday, September 5, with an enrollment of more than 100 on the first day. The President, Rev. H. W. Van Hook, expects to enroll at least 125 during the first month. Opening addresses were made by Rev. M. B. Sharborough, President Van Hook, Mr. J. R. Abels, Dr. J. W. Bolton, and Rev. A. Inman Townsley.

We learn from the Lincoln County Times that the opening of Whitworth College has been postponed from September 22 to September 29, in order to allow time for the completion of improvements that have been under way during the summer. The announcement is made that, although the capacity has been largely increased, every room has been engaged and applications are still coming in.

The Louisiana Conference Epworth League Cabinet will hold its annual meeting in New Orleans, the guests of the ten Chapters of the city churches, on October 1 and 2. Among the out of town speakers are Rev. W. W. Drake and Rev. J. B. Gramhling, of Shreveport, and Mrs. R. H. Wynn, of Ruston. The social features of the occasion will be in charge of Mrs. Lillie Ueber Townsley, of Felicity Chapter.

The opening of Millsaps College on Wednesday was auspicious in every way. The new dormitory was in readiness, and the campus was "spick and span." Within the past three years and a half, Rev. M. M. Black, the Commissioner, has raised nearly $100,000 for the college. Considering the numerous calls for money that are being made nowadays, the response of the laymen to the needs of Millsaps College has been very gratifying.

A note from Rev. H. M. Ellis, our pastor at Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., informs us that Rev. G. A. Klein, one of our most successful general evangelists, has been engaged to hold a meeting for all the Methodist churches of McComb, beginning the third Sunday in October. The meeting will continue until a revival is had. Brother Klein has an open date immediately after this meeting, which he would be glad to have taken in this section. Any brother wanting to engage him can reach him by addressing him, Box 484, Memphis, Tenn.

A SUPERANNUATE VERY SAD.

My life-long friend and greatly-loved brother, Tom Holloman, has left us for heaven. Good-bye, Tom! I wish I could have been at your bedside when God called you away; I wish I could have held your hand, and spoken a word to cheer you as you went down into "the dark valley and shadow of death;" I wish I could have been by you to catch the vision of the angels sent to bear your ransomed soul to the glory world. But I knew nothing until loving hands had laid your precious body in its final resting place.

I shall miss you, Tom, my dear old friend; but it will not be long. I was sure I would beat you to heaven—you may look for me soon. You wrote me a few days ago that if I got "home" first, it would not be long till you would join me. Now, it will be for me to join you. Your going breaks the link that binds me to my boyhood days—there is no one left in the Conference whose friendship and love has reached back so far. Our fellowship and love for each other has been unbroken for more than fifty years. Nothing has ever disturbed it. Thank God for it! The memories of these happy years of fellowship with you will cheer me. Thoughts of you in heaven will help me.

By the help of God I am going to meet you, Tom, my loved friend, after awhile.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

In accordance with our policy for the year 1921, we have planned a series of District Institutes. The Central Office has been considerate enough to furnish us the services of Mr. E. O. Harbin for lectures in an Institute in every district.

The Conference Cabinet has tried to arrange the dates so that as little time as possible will be lost from one place to another. The dates are as follows:

Holly Springs District, at Holly Springs, Sept. 23; Aberdeen District, at Tupelo, Sept. 24; Corinth District, Corinth, Sept. 26; Columbus District, at West Point, Sept. 27; Winona District, at Winona, Sept. 28; Durant District, at Durant, Sept. 29; Sardis District, at Coldwater, Sept. 30; Greenville District, at Merigold, Oct. 1.

It is certainly a well established fact that if the Epworth League work is to be what it deserves to be, the District Institute is the proper way to accomplish that state. I am urging all League workers and sympathizers to try to make these meeting helpful.

W. R. LOTT,
Conf. President.

IN MEMORIAM.

MRS. W. J. HUTCHINSON, an old-time Methodist and simple servant of God, fell on sleep on August 18 last, and with her death there passed from earth to heaven a rare character, beautiful in all her walks and one abundantly fruitful in all that makes life worth while. Sister Hutchinson was of old Virginia stock, her ancestors being from England, and in her forceful character she showed the sturdy energy and courtesy of the Cavalier, plus all the romance and love of the beautiful usually associated with their gallantry.

In 1858 she was married to Mr. W. J. Hutchinson in New Orleans, La., and for a short while lived at Filmore, Bossier Parish, but moved to Caspiana, on Red River, in Caddo Parish, during the early part of the Civil War.

There were given to this worthy couple nine children, all of whom grew to adult life, and eight of whom are still living and all members of the Methodist Church, and four or more of the sons are stewards in the church. The two daughters, Mrs. Jno. M. Robinson and Miss Margaret Hutchinson, are earnest workers for the Master, and have always made the Methodist minister to realize that he was most welcome and could rely upon them for their support and aid.

In the social circle, as queen of her own fireside, Mrs. Hutchinson was seen to fine advantage. The old hospitality of ante-bellum days lingered in her home to the close of her life, with a setting of roses, garlands of flowers, abundance of music and the cheer of cultured conversation. The background of her life and the golden thread which ran through her whole life was faith in God and service to Him in serving humanity. She was blessed with a strong personality and was essentially a leader, causing things to happen whenever she moved, yet was not swayed by prejudice, nor was she given to impatience, as is frequently the fault with those so endowed, but was gentle, kind, thoughtful of others and considerate. Her faith was beautiful in its simplicity and her walk was with God. The longer I live the more it is borne in upon me the fact that only the great are really simple, and that humility is an evidence of greatness of soul.

If one may be judged by one's friendships and the wealth of regard given when bestowing friendship, the family and community have lost a great woman from their midst. Blessed with wealth, she administered the same for God and humanity, and her gifts, given quietly, have reached out over a field larger than is usual with the ordinary life. What she did was done without word or comment, and but few knew of her acts.

If one could be judged by the results of life, then this life as seen from its influence on her family, her community, her circle of friends, her simple personality, its helpfulness and power to impress truth, was that of a strong, pure soul. Her end, like her life, was quiet, simple, beautiful.

JNO. F. FOSTER.

MISS BESSIE BROWN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brown, was born at Sallis, Miss., Dec. 1, 1881. She was educated in the public school of her home town and in Grenada College. In early life she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South. She came to Oklahoma in 1903, and has made her home most of the time since with her cousin, Mrs. George McMillan. She died in Oklahoma City, Feb. 28, 1920, after a brief illness. Her remains were taken back to the old home at Sallis, Miss., and buried in the family burying-ground. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, her former pastor, assisted by Rev. T. L. Oakes. I have never known one who attended to her regular work as she did who gave so much of time and thought and prayer and work to the church as she did. Her work outside the church was enough for one much stronger than she; yet, from what she did, it would appear that she gave her whole time to the church. We wonder yet how she ever did it all. Her faith in her Lord was wonderful. Her love for His church was strong. Her consecration and devotion were beautiful. Her life was an inspiration to all who came in contact with her. Her work among the young people of Bristow, where she lived the last few years of her life, will abide. A book that she and the Junior Leaguers made to represent "Victory is of the Lord" will be kept and prized by the whole church for years to come. Her last thought and words were of the work with the children of the church. I am sure that no purer or more unselfish life than Miss Brown lived has ever been seen since the Master showed us how to live. We can truly say of her—

"Servant of God, well done;
Thy glorious warfare's past.
The battle's fought, the victory's won,
And thou art crowned at last."

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

REVIVALS ON THE WALNUT GROVE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have finished our revivals on the Walnut Grove charge for this summer and I am back at Millsaps College, busy with my studies again. We have had a great time this summer. First, we were assisted at Walnut Grove by Brother L. L. Roberts and had a splendid meeting there. The whole church and community were drawn closer to God and everybody enjoyed the meeting. Two members were added to the church. We went from house to house during the meeting, and, besides getting the people nearer to God, Brother Roberts was very favorably impressed with the community and said it would take him a long time to eat up all the good food those people possessed. He claimed to be on a diet, but he digressed from that about three times a day. I think the whole of the Newton District can testify that Walnut Grove is blest with plenty of good food and hospitality, the district conference being held there in June.

Next we went to White Plains and the pastor held the meeting there without any visiting preacher to assist. We had a good meeting there. The house was full every day and wouldn't hold the people at night. Eight members were added to the church there and ten babies and children were baptized.

From there we went to Zion, where we were assisted by Dr. Rolfs Hunt. We had a splendid meeting at Zion and everybody seemed to get a blessing. Dr. Hunt did some splendid preaching, and visited with the pastor all over the community. Eight members were added to the church there and two babies were baptized.

Our next meeting was at Freeny, where we were assisted by Brother M. L. Burton. We had a good meeting there and we feel that much good was accomplished. Brother Burton did some extra good preaching and four members were added to the church. Freeny is nearly thirty miles from the railroad and was a long trip through the country for a crippled man to make, but he made it without any complaint and said he went into more homes and saw more dead chicken than at any previous meeting he ever attended, and before he left he testified that there were plenty of live chickens left also.

Our last meeting was at Sebastopol, where we were assisted by Brother E. L. Hillman, of the North Georgia Conference. We had a great meeting there and the whole community felt that God was there. We were all drawn closer to God, and thirty-two members were added to the church. This being a new church, twenty-one of the members were by certificate; the other eleven were by vows and baptism.

Immediately after the meeting at Sebastopol, my wife and I boarded the train for Jackson and are now ready for another year's work in college.

Yours in Christ,

THE PASSING OF A FAITHFUL BRAZILIAN PREACHER.

This morning I received a telegram from Sao Paulo, announcing the death of Rev. Leonel Lopes. Rev. Jose Leonel Lopes was admitted into full connection in the Annual Conference, July 29, 1899, after having served at least two years as a pastor, if not more, before that, and from that time on was one of our most faithful pastors. His circuits were nearly always large, thus requiring incessant travel, mostly on horse-back, and many privations. Salaries were low and there were many difficulties, but that unwavering soldier of the cross pushed on. Even in the last few months of his active ministry, when both feet were growing cold and were almost completely paralyzed, due to diabetes, when it was necessary for his son to accompany him to help him along, he never complained, but insisted on filling all his appointments on a hard work. When urged to take time for treatment, others seeing how badly it was needed, he said, "No, this is nothing. It will pass," and went on.

Finally gangrene set in, and he was sent to the hospital in Sao Paulo, where he passed four long months, suffering much, and losing in successive operations, both limbs. He still was bouyant, and anxious to get his artificial limb (before the second operation) which a friend had promised, that he might go back to his work, and have his family all together once more. But the disease was implacable.

He was a consecrated man. One of the consuming desires of his life was that the Lord should call one of his sons to the ministry. The result is that one daughter has just finished the course in Collegio Methodisto in Riberao Preto and is preparing for missionary work. Josaphat says he has prayed for the Lord's call, but it has not come yet, but that he is ready for it, and Josias is an enthusiastic little Christian. I do not know the other children.

During his sickness, in various places friends made offerings for his support, and when they learned he was in a general ward, and not a private room, many were grieved and even indignant that a national preacher should be left so, and censured their brethren in Sao Paulo. But, in reply, the brethren there said that Sr. Leonal, as we all called him, had not been neglected, that he himself wanted to be in the general ward, where he would meet more people and tell them the glorious Good News! And this he did to the last. The funds that were raised, in this part of the country at least, were placed in the savings bank for the family, as he was being cared for already

A saint has gone to his reward. What a challenge to us all!

Thus our ranks are being depleted. Another of the old guard has fallen at his post. Others of that same old guard are on their last watch, and will soon hear the trumpet call relieving them of all earthly cares. And the young men in preparation are not yet ready to take their places, though some of them are being forced to do so, even without sufficient preparation. The urgent appeal I hear from all our work in Brazil is pathetic indeed. Pray for us. CHAS. A. LONG.

Juiz de Fora, Brazil, July 12, 1920.

A REVIVAL AT BROWNSVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As I have not written anything to the Advocate this year, I will give an account of the meeting at Brownsville.

Rev. J. O. Ware, of Centreville, came the third Sunday and did the preaching for us. We had a real good meeting. Brother Ware did some splendid preaching, and helped our people wonderfully in a spiritual way. We received four additions to the church, one by letter, and three by baptism. We intended to close the meeting Thursday night, but the people were so interested and so insistent for it to continue until Friday night. They paid Brother Ware a nice little sum and helped the pastor on salary and Conference funds, and, best of all, surprised him with a nice pounding, which will be helpful through the school months this fall.

I will say to the brethren, if you want some one to help your people and do them good spiritually, you will make no mistake in calling on Brother J. O. Ware, for he is an earnest and faithful worker. It is always a pleasure to be associated with him.

"My husband and I keep Black-Draught in the house and think it is splendid to keep off sickness. I have used it in small doses as a laxative, and there is nothing better.

"Black-Draught is a mild liver medicine . . . any child can take it. I have found it splendid with them for colds."

Thedford's Black-Draught has benefited thousands in relieving liver ailments. It helps to drive bile poisons and other unhealthful matters out of the system.

A LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE ITS SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Wanted, fifty men, who will teach one of the books in the course for teachers. Training the Devotional Life, is a good book to use in the prayer meeting. It has twelve chapters of vital importance to the entire church membership. Get a dozen or more people to buy the book and give one chapter each Wednesday night until the book is finished; let such people as care to study, take notes, send for the questions and let as many as will, stand the examination. Do this and you will build up your prayer meeting and at the same time train teachers for your Sunday school.

Rev. Melville Johnson, pastor at Batesville, is trying to train his entire school in the divine art of worship. He is having each department worship separately, using a program of worship adapted to the needs of each group of worshipers. He is aiming to give religious education to all his people. Of course he is not having smooth sailing to begin such a radical change, but he is doing work that counts.

When your school observes Promotion Day the last Sunday in September, you are expected to give an exhibit of the hand-work done by the juniors, that everybody may see the kind of work you are doing in forming right habits. It would do a lot of good to have these exhibits at your county fair, so the schools in the county can see what you are doing and thus spread the idea of correct religious education. When a good piece of work is done, it ought to be shown to others to stimulate them to do the same thing.

What kind of records are you keeping in your school? Are they worth anything to the child? Do they stimulate the child to do good work? Records should not be kept just to be doing something, but should be kept for a purpose. The "O. K." record system gets the results you want. Take, for example, the records for juniors: each child has a page for the year, beginning the first of October, and is marked on church attendance, Bible reading, hand-work and other items of importance. At the end of the month, the teacher makes out a report of these nine points and sends it to the parents, the child is encouraged to do the work, and the parent becomes interested in what the child is doing. There is record book for each class in the school. They are only fifteen cents each. Try this system of records and note the results.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last week was spent at Kingston Church, Laurel. I taught a class on "Life in the Making" and we had a fine attendance. The crowd grew from start to finish. While none of those who came took the examination at this time, we feel that several will take it. As a result of the work, the Beginners' and Primary departments were reorganized and put on a new basis.

The First Church, Laurel, has remodeled their basement, making room for the Elementary Department, which will be serviceable for many years to come.

West End has outgrown their church and are putting in a basement in order to take care of the Sunday school.

The Kingston Church is gradually being completed; and for the amount of money put in it it is one of the neatest and prettiest churches I have ever seen.

Promotion Day is the first Sunday in October. I am anxious for each church to observe this Day. If you have only two classes, hold a Promotion Day service, promoting those who ought to be promoted. There is nothing that will put life into your church like a sure-enough Promotion Day.

I wonder how many individuals there are who are willing to pay the price of efficient leadership? I would like to hear from them.

It is only a short time until Annual Conference. I wish to make an appeal that each and every Sunday school will make an accurate report.

I wish to thank the children for their loving-kindnesses to me. They have been so gracious in their reception and so kind in their acts.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

DREW AND THE "FORGOTTEN MAN."

Rev. J. H. Bell, Field Agent for the Superannuate Endowment Fund of the North Mississippi Conference, was at Drew, Sunday morning, August 29, and made a strong appeal in behalf of the old preachers who have given their lives in sacrificial service to this great country in which we live. As was clearly shown by the speaker of the occasion, many of these aged ministers are now in want, although they have given forty, fifty, and some of them sixty years of service to the church. They are the men who have made our civilization possible, who have established churches throughout the land, and who have helped to make our homes safe and pure. That they are permitted to suffer in their old age is far from being a credit to a great church. The laymen of the church, as well as the membership at large, are coming to realize this deplorable condition and are resolving to correct it by providing a fund whereby these "Veterans of the Cross" may be saved from destitution. In making this fund a reality the congregation at Drew is glad to have a part. It has already subscribed $8,840.00, and has authorized the agent to report the subscription at $10,000, assuring him that the small balance would soon be raised. The joy and readiness with which this response was made proved to be the means of a very impressive and a truly religious service. The people responded as if they deemed it a privilege to give.

In his spirit of presentation of this worthy cause, Brother Bell is very pleasing and effective. He does not coerce; he does not even insist. He clearly presents facts, kindly places the matter upon the hearts of the people, and then simply announces that an opportunity for paying a debt of love is before them. He frankly says that every one must give joyously or not give at all. The people are made to feel that they themselves have discovered the need, and that the offering must be free and voluntary. The movement has originated with them; they are the leaders in it; and, therefore, they can not and will not allow it to fail. This being the spirit of the occasion, the appeal, the response and the abiding sense of joy are all beneficial to the local church.

Brother Bell also assisted the pastor in a meeting at Sandy Bayou. For five days he preached in a plain, practical and decisive manner. The attendance and interest grew with each succeeding service. Nine persons united with the church, many more were induced to become active in their service for the Master, and the spirit of fidelity and true devotion was revived in the heart of almost every one present. W. N. DUNCAN, Pastor.

Paying the debt of nature does not pay the debt of sin.—Exchange.

DECATUR AND HICKORY CHARGE.

Last Sunday, September 5, was a red-letter day for the Hickory church. Brother W. D. Hawkins, our secretary and treasurer of the Centenary work for the Mississippi Conference, was present, and gave us a splendid address on the importance of this great work and what it means to the world. It was well received and I hope will be of much help to that individual church.

In the afternoon, with the assistance of Brother Hawkins, we organized an Epworth League with a membership of fifty members. All of them seemed to be delighted at the chance of doing something for the Master through the League.

At night, we were interested by another talk from Brother Hawkins, followed by a moving picture, illustrating the work done and being done by the aid of the Centenary Fund.

At the morning and night services, an opportunity was given for people to join the church, and we have eight names, with, we hope, others to follow next Sabbath services, to be received into the church. We are looking forward to a fine ending up of the year's work at this church; also, on the entire work. W. L. BLACKWELL,
Decatur, Miss. Pastor.

FROM LUCEDALE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Last Wednesday night we closed an eleven days' revival meeting at Lucedale, with sixty-one additions to the church. Rev. C. M. Crossley, pastor of our Court Street Church in Hattiesburg, was the preacher; and he preached with great power and acceptability. The attendance was large, so much so that at times the building would not hold them, and many were turned away. All say that it was the greatest meeting held in Lucedale for many years. Many who had resisted all effort for years to bring them to God, yielded and were converted. Our church has been greatly blessed and the prospect for the future is bright.

Yours cordially,
J. L. GREENWAY, P. C.

HAS NO PAIN NOW

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Warner.

Onalaska, Wis.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of stomach I could not lie in bed. I suffered so it seemed as though I would die, and I was not regular either. I suffered for a year and was unfit to do my housework, could only wash dishes once in a while. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women and decided to try it. It surely did wonders for me. I have no pains now and I can do my housework without any trouble at all. I will always praise your medicine as I do not believe there is a doctor that can do as much good in female weakness, and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. LESTER E. WARNER, R. 1, Box 69, Onalaska, Wis.

The reason women write such letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. and tell their friends how they are helped is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives. Freed from their illness they want to pass the good news along to other suffering women that they also may be relieved

Hens Lay While Moulting

First to lay is first to pay. "I used 'More Eggs' Tonic, and for the first time my hens laid through the moulting season," writes Mrs. C. Luginbuhl, of Norwood, Ohio. E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. Letters from many users tell how they actually get eggs during moulting! You, too, can make your hens moult fast, get eggs sooner and more eggs all fall and winter. This scientific tonic has been tried, tested and proven by over 500,000 chicken raisers. Try Reefer's "More Eggs" on his iron clad money-back guarantee of satisfaction.

If you wish to try this great profit maker, simply write a postcard or letter to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 8259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and ask for his special free package $1.00 offer. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned at any time within 30 days, on request. So there is no risk. Write to-day for this special free package offer. Profit by the experience of man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

FROM SULPHUR, LA.

On last Thursday night we closed the most successful revival that Sulphur has ever had. Some of the old strongholds of Satan were broken up and the works of righteousness established. Prof. W. J. Wilcox, a consecrated man, led the singing, and Brother H. T. Young did the preaching. Brother Young is the most sucessful evangelist that we have ever had. His preaching was a great blessing to the church, and fifty-three members were added to the church, most of them on profession of faith. We baptized twenty-three adults.

This being the fifth year with us here, it has been in every way the best. The work has grown from a $500 appointment to $1500. We have raised more money for all purposes, we haye baptized more children, we have already received sixty-seven into the church, and we are expecting to receive one hundred before Conference. We are looking this way for another year, but we haven't heard from the bishop.

We are going to begin our meeting at Vinton, Oct. 24, with Brother Young and Prof. Wilcox. Pray for us that the Lord may use these men as he has used them here.

L. HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

FROM RIPLEY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: If tooting a fellow's own horn is still in order, I will give the readers of the Advocate some words from the leading charge in the North Mississippi Conference. We are not doing this in a boastful spirit as to the pastor's part in it, but give it for the praise of the official members and every member of the church in Ripley, as each member, practically, has had a part to play in the excellent record made by this splendid church in the "Hills of Tippah."

Up to this year Ripley charge has been a circuit composed of Ripley and Blue Mountain (and, by the way, Brother S. J. High, in your report to the Advocate of August 26, you put us down as yet a circuit and we feel that we are very much a station; however we are taking your title of us good-naturediy), but this year Ripley took the responsibility of a station, increasing the pastor's salary $150 above that paid by the whole charge last year, with P. E.'s salary and Conference collections raised in proportion.

To show how weli this church has answered to its new responsibility, we only have to say that our Conference collections were in the hands of the Conference Treasurer before the meeting of the district conference and that at our fourth quarterly conference yesterday, pastor's and presiding elder's salaries were paid "in full." As to the Centenary subscriptions, as will be noticed from the report in the Advocate of August 26, one hundred and sixty charges in the North Mississippi Conference have paid less than Ripley and only ten have paid more. Up to the time of this report, our Treasurer had never sent out a statement to the subscribers.

We feel that the above figures will, in some degree, give an index to the spiritual life of our "city in the woods." The spiritual condition is indeed good. We have had additions to the church on profession of faith at the regular Sunday services, notwithstanding the fact that we have not held our revival yet. We have a score of people who will lead a prayer meeting; thus the prayer meeting goes on in the absence of the pastor. Our Sunday school superintendent, H. E. Finger, is a progressive Christian gentleman, our teachers are wide-awake and thus you see our church lives.

Pray that our soon-to-be revival will be the most glorious in the history of this charge. Sincerely,

J. D. WROTEN, P. C.

50 Eggs a Day

"'More Eggs' Tonic is a Godsend," writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky. She adds, "I was only getting 12 eggs a day, and now I get 50." Give YOUR hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," the wonderful egg producer, and you will be amazed and delighted with results.

Eggs While Moulting

While moulting your hens will need "More Eggs" to hasten the moult, revitalize their organs and put them in fine laying condition. Letters from many users tell how they actually GOT EGGS WHILE MOULTING.

If you wish to try this great profit maker, simply write a postcard or letter to E. J. A SUGGESTION CONCERNING THE RACE QUESTION.

Dear Brother Carley: I here give an account of the opening of a district conference held here by the Colored Methodist Church, which, I think, is very significant. I was asked to give them the welcome address, which I did. I spoke to them as follows: I welcomed them in the teachings of Methodism, dwelling on the way of salvation, that all were saved through the blood of the Lamb, and that we were all made one in spirit; and that all who were saved through the Spirit's operation would be gathered together in Heaven, for there was but one place for God's children; and that there was but one church, the invisible. Yet this being true, there would never be one church for all peoples.

A big black answered the address, as they call it; and he spoke in part as follows: "This is the first time I ever heard a welcome address given from the Bible. I usually go to sleep when a white man gives the address; I stayed awake to-day." He quickly took up what I had said concerning the one way of salvation, and the unity in the Spirit, and said some things of prime importance. His utterances were plain and the meaning clear. "The Negro has been the offscouring of the earth; there is something radically wrong, and the Negro is not to blame. I am black, indeed, as you see, but my heart is as white as any white man's; my skin is black, indeed, as you see, but my blood is as red as a white man's. When the Christ comes, the white man will be here, the other nations in their places, and the Negro stationed with them all taking the Sacrament together from Christ, but we are denied it here, though Christ has made us one." At all these points there were "Amens" from every Negro present, the house being almost full.

Several of the leading whites were asked to discuss openly the social question with them, since the present status is bringing a terrible strife between the whites and the blacks. Most of these Negroes were fairly well educated and the way these Negro preachers teach their people is the way they are going. If the fountain is muddy, the whole stream will be colored. You can not pick up a stick and teach the Negro preacher his place, because he knows how to be polite, and he is; and when we are asleep he is doing his teaching. And the outcome is in the unlearned and bigoted laborer, and loafer, and gambler. To put a few of these in their places does not stop the source from sending forth the muddy water. Unless we clear the fountain, there will be trouble. I offer a suggestion in dealing with this question. As we can not deal effectively by force on the parties from whom the trouble is made, then we must teach the Negro preacher and frankly instruct him, and reason with him so far as he will reason. I suggested to the Negro presiding elder to memorialize the Annual Conference of the Mississippi Conference to appoint a committee to meet a committee from their body to talk over any relation they deemed proper to discuss. In such a way we will be able to help them in many problems.

I would like to write more, but this is enough to get this question before the minds of the church, that immediate steps may be taken to prevent many catastrophes in many localities.

Yours in Christ,

E. D. SIMPSON.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Missionary Societies of the Mississippi Conference, Greetings:

In this, the initial number of the Conference Bulletin, your president has only good words of encouragement. Our conference work moves on with a steady good will. Every department shows growth. Financially, the first quarter was 20 per cent ahead of the first quarter of 1919. Half of our year is now gone, and we must gird ourselves and work strenuously for the remaining half of the year. Elsewhere in this Bulletin you will find the plans for 1920. Let us give close attention to each item of the plan.

But if your president has one burden above another on her heart at this time, it is the burden of intercession. If we are people conscious of the presence of Christ, if we have covenanted together to do His will, then we must be in close communion with Him. At the recent council meeting in Kansas City, the motto before our faces all the time was, "Prayer is not preparation for the battle; Prayer is the battle."

If we could only realize that the only true advancement is made on our knees, how much and how fervently we would pray. Let us repeat the prayer reminders of the Council Bulletin.

Pray for the summer conferences being held in all parts of the country, that the young people may get from them messages so searching and vital that God's will may be wrought out in their lives.

Pray for the district conferences, that the women may find in them not only inspiration for better and larger work, but that they may be drawn into closer fellowship with one another and with the Lord Christ

Pray for the missionaries sailing this month for their respective fields of service, that they may have a safe journey and that in the loneliness of a new work and a strange land they may be encouraged and strengthened by the thought of the love and sympathy of the women at home and by the sense of God's constant nearness.

Pray for the deaconesses and home missionaries now going on vacation, that these weeks may be to them seasons of real refreshment both in mind and body.

Let us pray for our conference work and our conference officers in the carrying out of the work; our auxiliaries and their members, our Wesley Houses and our deaconesses; our missionaries in China and Korea, and our Miss Marzie Hall, sailing this month for Africa; and our students and volunteers preparing for the work. The sovereign summons is to intercession.

Dr. Robert E. Speer says, "Communion without service is a dream; service without communion is ashes. The supreme need and the final appeal is that all our work be underwritten by prayer. The King, holding in His life all energies and all plans and all love, calls on us through intercession to realize His energies to discover and execute His plans and to make His love known to mankind.

MRS. B. F. LEWIS,
President.

Report of Corresponding Secretary of the Mississippi Conference—Second Quarter, 1920.

As conference officers, we have come to expect a falling off in figures in the reports for second and third quarters; but this year we are encouraged by the fact that an increase of 23 per cent in funds is shown. The first quarter showed a 20 per cent increase. We hope that this encouraging feature may characterize the two which follow this year.

Several all-day and district meetings have been held in different places and others are to follow in the early fall. Notable in good results is the one for the Newton District, detailed account of which has appeared in our missionary column of the Advocate. Mrs. W. L. Hunter is the consecrated, enterprising secretary of this district, and she is to be commended for the earnest way in which she has taken up the work which had gone forward under the capable leadership of Mrs. J. H. Hill.

May I take this opportunity of stressing the observance of the Wesley Houses drive early in October? The hot summer days with their attendant falling off in attendance upon the regular auxiliary meetings, will soon be over, and first to be considered of the special occasions throughout our conference during the months of the last quarter is Wesley House Day. Splendid results were manifested last year, and we want to put special emphasis on the same cause this year. The support of our two Wesley Houses is the particular duty of our conference and should call forth our best interest and efforts.

From various auxiliaries and districts a gift amounting to almost $250 was sent to Miss Marzie Hall, our missionary who sailed for Africa July 31. In addition to this the Central Meridian society gave her a delightful farewell service, following with a "shower" of many beautiful and useful articles. We pray often that the Lord of the harvest will "thrust forth laborers," and when one offers herself for service as this splendid young woman has done, we should spare no pains and efforts to prove our gratitude in a material way. May her example be a direct inspiration to many others of our young people to give themselves to definite Christian service.

Following is the statistical report for the conference for the second quarter with the omission of some items not deemed necessary to report at this time: Number adult auxiliaries, 165; number new auxiliaries 5; number members, 2,850; number Y. P. auxiliaries, 33; number members, 390; number Junior Divisions, 50; number members, 500; number Baby divisions, 25; number members, 200; subscribers to Missionary Voice, 900; number subscribers to Y. C. Worker, 160; amount sent Conference Treasurer, $2,896.95.

Conf. Cor. Secretary.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND NEWS.

Every summer on the Seashore Camp Grounds there is conducted a Sabbath school for about three months. Of course the population is a floating one, but for that very reason a great many lives are touched, we hope for good. The school is always an interesting one, but this year it seems to be more keenly alive than ever. There has been but one drawback—a lack of teachers. In the first place, unless a teacher is here for the summer, he or she hesitates to take a class, knowing there must be a change. The main reason, however, for the shortage is that nearly all say they have come to rest from their labors or else they teach all year and want to join the Bible class and "fill up," so to speak. There have been, though, a number of faithful officers and teachers, mostly from New Orleans, the majority from Rayne Memorial. The superintendent, Mrs. Alfred Snyder, the secretary, Mr. Walter Grant, the teacher of the Beginners, Mrs. Walter Grant, the Bible class teacher, Dr. George S. Brown, and the Junior teacher, Mrs. George S. Brown, are all from Rayne Memorial. Mrs. O. Fleuriet, who teaches the Primary Department, and Mrs. Presley Werlein, of the Intermediate Girls, are from Carrollton, Mrs. A. I. Townsley, who teaches the Young People, is from Felicity Church, Mr. J. R. Ables, Intermediate Boys, from Ponchatoula, and Mrs. Lindsay, who assists in the Primary Department, is a resident of the Camp Grounds. She is also pianist.

The average attendance has been 75, and we have had as many as 132. A missionary program is held every last Sabbath in the month, which has proved interesting and instructive, and the offering for missions, which was sent on to headquarters to be used as thought best by the Board, was $30. Besides that, all the literature has been bought and paid for, and all things necessary for a good, live Sunday school. Altogether in the two months thus far, the offerings have amounted to about $75.

Mrs. Snyder makes a superintendent any Sabbath school might well envy. She is full of life and vigor, always has something new, is a splendid leader in song, and keeps up a lively interest throughout the session. Mr. Grant has clear, concise reports and has never been absent. Mrs. Lindsay, the pianist, is always in her place and willing to give time to rehearsals. Many who have been here this summer have expressed themselves in a most appreciative way of the Bible teachings learned through Dr. Brown's interpretation of the lessons, and declare they have gleaned much that will help them in their home churches.

Mrs. Townsley has had all of the young people on the grounds and her class is always alive, not only to the lesson, but they have been the source of all the social features on the grounds.

To see the little chilren flock around Mrs. Fleuriet, Mrs. Lindsay and Mrs. Grant, one would know that they are eager to hear the Bible stories. Mrs. George Brown has had a junior class that is equal to many of the Junior departments, having had thus far 56 during the summer and as many as 32 at a time, usually entirely too many to handle; but they have been attentive and interested. Altogether we feel that we have had the very finest Sunday school that can be found anywhere and surely the seed that has been sown will fall on good ground and bear fruit in the years to come.

We would not forget to mention our faithful little bell ringer, Master Inman Townsley, who has never once forgotten his duty; in appreciation, he was presented with a wrist watch by the Sabbath school.

A Story Hour is held every Tuesday by Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. George Brown, and is well attended, and many songs and Bible lessons are committed to memory. A number of Catholic children have been in attendance.

There has been preaching every Sabbath morning through the untiring efforts of Mr. Ables, and nearly every Sabbath night, there nearly always being some minister or layman available. When such can not be found on Wednesday nights, the women on the grounds have taken hold of the prayer services and there are more in attendance than at any of the city churches, even during winter.

AN INTERESTED VISITOR.

PICKENS, GOODMAN, AND RICHLAND, MISS.

I held my fourth quarterly conference for this charge last Monday, Aug. 30, and they had such fine report that I think it is due them to give a report of same.

When the question was called, "What has been raised for the support of the ministry, and how has it been applied?" they made this kind of report: "Everything in full for the whole year." They had raised their benevolences in full in April, which is the thing that all charges should do.

This good report is due both to the faithful pastor's work and the wide-awake business men's interest in the church. However, I would not be just if I did not say also that the faithful women did their part, too.

I am going to ask the question, if any charge in the North Mississippi Conference can make as good a report as this wide-awake charge has made. Just think about it—two and one-half months until Conference and [illegible] in full for the year!

Middle Age at 35 or 60?

Physician Explains Why Lack Of Iron In the Blood Saps the Strength and Vitality and Often Makes Men and Women Look and Feel Old Before Their Time.

By Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author

Signs of old age are plainly to be seen in many a man and woman who ought still to be enjoying the rugged health and activity of the early prime of life. Yet often the real cause of their decline is nothing more than lack of iron in the blood and it is surprising how quickly these conditions are frequently corrected once the right kind of iron is supplied.

I am constantly coming across cases in my practise where people not yet 40 show much of the nervousness, lack of energy and general run-down condition which might possibly be expected to come twenty years later in life while others at 60 may still be young in feeling, mentally alert with steady nerves and strong bodies.

Whether we have health and long life is often a question which each one must determine for himself. Signs of old age are largely due to a deposit of waste matter in the blood vessels and cells of the body. Without plenty of strength-giving iron the blood is utterly lacking in the power to overcome the slow poisoning process and keep the body strong and healthy. To make up for this deficiency I usually prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron which by enriching the blood and creating thousands of new red blood cells helps renew the wasted tissues and brings strength and energy to withstand the ravages of time. I know of no more reliable preparation which a person can find out if they suspect that they have by making the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength and see how much you have gained. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength, power and endurance of delicate, nervous run-down people in two weeks' time in many instances. You can procure Nuxated Iron from your druggist on an absolute guarantee of satisfaction or your money will be refunded.

FROM SUMMIT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: With God's help, we have made a fight against sin and the devil at each of the four churches in the Summit charge. We were assisted by Revs. A. M. Broadfoot, A. J. Davis, and W. W. Nelson. God's presence was mightily felt at each place, especially so at Pisgah. Men and women prayed through to victory in the old-fashioned way. Quite a few were saved. Two have answered the call to preach—Brother J. D. McCullough will preach to-night for the first time, and Brother Albert Long will preach his first sermon Sunday, Sept. 5.

We closed this revival Sunday afternoon, and the congregation met Sunday night in a praise service. I was with them last night. Prof. Charley Hayman led the service, and God's presence was mightily felt in scripture reading, song, prayers, and praise service. We have wired the Publishing House for literature, and the Sunday school at Pisgah will be revived Sunday.

Brethren, pray for us; we are looking for God to come in greater power and save more souls.

Yours in the work.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A DAY AT A TIME.

It is a merciful dispensation of Providence that we do not have to work, or live, more than a day at a time. We could not complete a mighty undertaking in one day, nor could we round out a full life in the same limited time; but we can accomplish the apparently impossible by making every day count toward its achievement, and we can live a whole life as we ought to live it by filling each day with the faithful performance of the duties that come with it. A day at a time may not seem to be much—but it is enough.

PITIABLE.

Local newspapers a few days ago treated in a light vein the incident of a young lady's appearing on Canal Street in such abbreviated hosiery as to attract a crowd of followers, who scattered only when she "blushingly" turned into a store to escape their curious gaze. From the standpoint of the news-gather, it was an amusing occurrence; viewed as an indication of the standards of social propriety, it was a sad commentary upon the ideals of the young lady herself and of the home in which she was reared. If the indecencies of the stage are to be transferred to the streets without public protest, it is high time for us to begin to look at the foundations of social morality. The incident was a pitiable exhibition of a calloused conscience.

HOMES AND GARAGES.

A press dispatch from Pittsburg, Pa., states that figures compiled by the Bureau of Building Inspection of that city show that during the months of May, June, and July, the proportion of garages erected to dwellings was three to one, and that for weeks not a residence has been erected in seven of the twenty-seven wards of the city, despite the urgent demand for houses. The explanation suggested is that high wages permit the purchase of automobiles by workers, while the high cost of building discourages those who would like to own their homes. It strikes us that this is an explanation that does not explain. We have an idea that the true reason is to be found in the fact that a great many people—not only in Pittsburg, but also in all other places—put luxuries above necessaries. Wages that are high enough to provide automobiles, gasoline and garages, but not homes—well, homes must be pretty expensive things in Pittsburg.

THE RESULT OF THE CITY ELECTION.

In spite of contrary views that may be held by individuals, in the mind of the public the recent municipal campaign in New Orleans was closely drawn upon the issue of "ring" government and the evils that are associated with such government, including one-man control, and the right of the people to put into office men who would vigorously strive to bring about reforms that would be for the betterment of the city morally, politically, socially, and industrially. While the majority in favor of the "reform" ticket was not such as to give reason for undue rejoicing, the fact that it was victorious is evidence that the people of the "city that Care forgot" are ready to enter upon a new era under new conditions and under a new leadership. The new administration will go into office with weighty responsibilities and wonderful opportunities. Its clear-cut pledges of municipal betterment must be redeemed and its promises of reform made good, or it will deserve the reproaches that its enemies are all too ready to heap upon it. Too much cannot be expected in a day; but four years will be ample time in which to vindicate the judgment of the people in desiring a change.

IN AMERICA, TOO.

According to a recent discussion of the moving picture business, there is a great scarcity of competent scenario writers in Europe, as a consequence of which the literary and dramatic quality of the pictures is very poor. We do not pose as an expert judge of motion pictures, but if our opinion is to be based upon the few screen productions we have seen within the past year or two, we fear there is a scarcity of good writers on this side the "big pond." If crowds are any sign, though, the people are pretty well satisfied with what they are getting.

OF COURSE!

Just as we were about to rejoice over the statement in a daily newspaper that foodstuffs have decreased in cost more than twelve per cent during August, our eyes fell on another statement to the effect that coal is steadily going up. We might have expected it, but we were grievously disappointed. We'll warrant that the increase in the price of coal for the winter will more than offset the decrease in the price of food. What the food profiteers lose, the coal barons will gain—and the consumer will come out at the little end of the horn as usual.

THE SIMPLE FORMS OF RELIGION.

Religion is essentially a thing of the heart—a consciousness of the presence of God and a loving determination to do His will. But there are certain simple forms of religion that ought normally to be practiced even by those who are only nominally Christians. Among such, we mention saying grace at meals, attending public worship, reading the Bible, and holding family prayer. If we are neglectful of these simple forms of religion, how can we hope to enjoy the spiritual experiences of those who truly love God?

THE BOMB OUTRAGE IN NEW YORK.

The explosion of a bomb, or what is supposed to have been a bomb, in the financial district of New York City on Thursday of last week, causing the death of more than thirty people and the destruction of property valued at more than a million dollars, is more tragic in its revelation of a dangerous situation that exists in this country than in its immediate results, though they were awful beyond expression. If it can be proved that we have among us a band of organized anarchists who are determined to overthrow existing institutions by violence and terrorism, we have before us a task of eradicating this dangerous element that is both urgent and difficult. If this fiendish deed was the act of determined enemies of our present social and industrial order, it is likely to be but the beginning of a series of outrages that may be expected to occur in other places; and unless its perpetrators can be discovered and brought to justice and their sympathizers made to realize that their radical measures will be suppressed at any cost, we shall be facing a period of uncertainty and fearful suspense that will unsettle the minds of the people and threaten the welfare of the whole nation. It is an encouraging sign that the federal and municipal authorities have taken up the investigation with all the resources at their command, with the prospect that the mystery will soon be cleared and the criminals properly punished. Without, in any sense, palliating the enormity of the crime that has been committed or suggesting a shred of an argument to justify the use of violence in remedying wrong conditions, we do think it is timely to say that all the right-thinking elements of our people should give themselves diligently to the work of discovering and correcting evils that make possible the existence of militant dissatisfaction with the present order of things. When social injustice exists, we may always expect disturbances until it is corrected.

IN THE SHADOW OF THE ROCK.

O shadow in a sultry land!
We gather to thy breast,
Whose love, enfolding like the night,
Brings quietude and rest;
Glimpse of the fairer life to be,
In foretaste here possessed.

That which the garish day had lost,
The twilight vigil brings;
While softlier the vesper bell
Its silver cadence rings—
The sense of an immortal trust,
The brush of angel wings.

REJOICE EVERMORE.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

There is no real joy outside of a real experience. In order to rejoice evermore, the soul must be filled with the majestic Spirit. Jesus said, "My Father and I will come and make our abode with you." How? In the person of the Holy Spirit. What a blessed truth!

With this fountainhead of joy, there is no obstruction that can stop its constant flow. In the midst of trials and tribulation there is joy; even in the dark valley and shadow of death, there is joy in the face of disappointments, there is joy. When our friends forsake us and our enemies triumph over us, let us remember that in gaining and losing, there is joy just the same.

The joy of the world is too often turned into sadness and heart-ache. In the midst of such joy we find ourselves in sorrow, cast down and discouraged; but with the Spirit-filled saint it is altogether different. God gently speaks, saying, "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord"—not some things, but all things. This is a sweet message on which the soul that is filled with love divine can rest contentedly. It enables us to see in all the disappointments of life only God's opportunities. God is ruling in the universe of His saints, and says. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Again He says, "Be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication make your requests known to God." Paul, after years of the most heartless persecution against him, said, "I count it all joy." It is a true saying, if we obtain a great experience in life's pilgrim way, we will have constant joy in this hurly-burly age that nothing can destroy.

We are glad, indeed, that we can say, with the poet:

"I've found a joy in sorrow,
A secret balm for pain,
A beautiful to-morrow
Of sunshine after rain.
I've found a branch of healing
Near every bitter spring,
A whispered promise stealing
O'er every broken string."

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, AND THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Having been requested by a group of our Conference Sunday School Field Secretaries to give my interpretation, as General Sunday School Secretary, of the action of the General Sunday School Board in regard to the Reorganized International Sunday School Association and of the present relation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Association, I reply as follows:

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Not Officially Related to the International Association.

The General Sunday School Board, in its action, assumed no authority to establish any kind of official relation between the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Reorganized International Association. On the contrary, the Board specifically stated that the matter must be referred for final settlement to our next General Conference. The preamble to the resolutions passed by the Board declared that the Board "cannot at this time take final action in the matter of the relation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Reorganized International Sunday School Association" and that "it will be necessary to refer the whole matter of such relationship to our next General Conference, which does not meet until two years hence."

In my official report to the Board, after explaining the plan adopted by the Sunday School Council and the International Sunday School Association for reorganizing the association in such a way as to give to the denominations official representation, I added the following paragraph:

"You will see that our adoption of this plan and our agreement to relate ourselves organically to the Association would involve us in responsibility for the budgets both of the International Association and of the various State organizations. I stated frankly in the Sunday School Council that it would be impossible either for me individually or for the General Sunday School Board to commit the church officially to an action of this kind and that the only body having such right was our General Conference."

This position the Board evidently accepted. Until the General Conference shall act, therefore, the relation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the International Sunday School Association must remain as heretofore, namely, heartily friendly, but entirely unofficial.

In response to a request from the secretary of the Sunday School Council, the General Sunday School Board agreed to designate eight persons to act temporarily on the Reorganized International Committee. This action, however, must be interpreted in the light of the official opinion of the General Sunday School Secretary, stated both before the Sunday School Council and in his report to the General Sunday School Board, that no body except the General Conference has the right to commit the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to an official relation with the International Association, and of the Board's explicit statement that it concurred in this opinion. Therefore, in speaking of the eight persons to be designated for membership on the International Committee as "representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," the Board could have meant nothing more than that they should represent the church in an unofficial way while the problem of co-operation was being considered. In other words, this action was taken not as committing our church to an official relation, but because the Board believed that this would be the most effective way of studying the entire situation and of reaching wise conclusions as to what final action will be desirable. The International Committee clearly understands that the arrangement is only tentative and that the Southern Methodists on the committee have no right to commit their church in any way whatsoever.

Authority of Conference Boards.

The General Sunday School Board, in its resolutions, distinctly recognizes the fact that it has only an advisory relation to Conference Sunday School Boards and that it has no authority whatever to instruct Conference Sunday School Boards as to what action they shall take in regard to their relation to the State Sunday School Associations. I advised "co-operation and representation in the new organization of State associations when practical and satisfactory co-operation is provided for;" but this again must be interpreted in the light of certain facts of which the members of the General Sunday School Board were clearly cognizant. Within certain limits, each Annual Conference is at liberty to determine for itself how far and in what ways it will co-operate with the State Sunday School Association. These limits are determined by the legislation of the General Conference dealing with the matter of religious education. That is, the Conference Sunday School Board, like the General Board, must work under laws enacted by the General Conference. When, therefore, the General Board advised Conference Boards to co-operate with State associations, where practical and satisfactory co-operation was provided for in the reorganized State associations, its counsel must have been based upon the following definite understandings:

(a) No Conference Board has a right to take any action that is not in harmony with the Sunday school policy adopted by the General Conference for the entire church.

(b) Within the limits set by this general principle, Annual Conferences are at liberty to determine for themselves whether or not the plans of organization offered are "practical and satisfactory" and whether or not participation in the State organization is expedient.

A Brief Explanation by Way of Making the Above Statements Clear.

The General Conference has provided for the employment in each Annual Conference of a Sunday School Field Secretary and for co-operation between the General Sunday School Board and the Conference Boards; and the General Board, acting under the authority of the General Conference, has worked out a plan for Conference, district and local organizations, a plan for Sunday school extension, and a plan for the training of Sunday school teachers. No Annual Conference has a right to commit itself to any arrangement that would suspend or tend to interfere with this connectional program. In other words, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is definitely committed to a plan for developing its own Sunday school workers, and the General Sunday School Board and the Conference Boards are under an imperative obligation to co-operate in carrying out this plan.

The General Sunday School Board has always maintained a friendly attitude towards the International Association and counseled co-operation with the Association so far as it was found practicable. The Board is now studying in an open-minded way the entire situation with a view to determining whether or not plans for a larger and more effective co-operation may be worked out and has expressed the desire that each Annual Conference shall give this matter the same kind of prayerful and intelligent consideration.

But meanwhile it may as well be definitely understood that there is not the least prospect that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will ever agree to surrender its policy of making the most ample provision for training its own Sunday school leaders and developing plans for the religious education of its people, or that it will ever consent to turn over this important work to any outside organization.

We want, as far as possible, to co-operate with others and especially to co-operate with them in reaching the millions of spiritually disinherited children in our country. But we believe that the poorest imaginable way to make ourselves an effective agency for aiding in such an undertaking would be to weaken our denominational program for the religious training of our own people. Such a policy would be suicidal to the church as a whole, and I should, therefore, regard it as a calamity for any Annual Conference to take a backward step in its Sunday school work. It is the earnest desire of the General Sunday School Board and of the General Sunday School Secretary that each Conference Board shall not only stand by its Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, but that each shall provide more ample funds for the extension and development of this work. And we do not think any action should be taken by any Conference Board that cannot be taken in perfect consistency with this general policy.

Just what this involves for any particular Conference neither the General Board nor the General Secretary has undertaken to say. We are entirely willing to leave this to the wisdom and loyalty of the respective Annual Conferences, it being definitely understood that in seeking to determine its policy each Conference shall keep steadily before it the general principles enunciated above, namely, that the only way for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to make itself an effective factor in helping to promote any co-operative educational program is by making its own denominational program just as comprehensive and thorough as possible.

Concluding Statement.

May I be permitted to add in conclusion that any effort to interfere with the plans and policies which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has adopted for the development of its Sunday school work or to force Conference Sunday School Boards to adopt policies which they either deem inexpedient or know they have no right to adopt, will be sure to hinder the cause of co-operation instead of helping it? This is too important a matter for hasty action. The Sunday school leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are ready to give the most serious and prayerful consideration to the whole matter of Christian co-operation in religious education; but they know that it would be unwise for them to permit themselves to be forced into positions the full meanings of which they do not yet understand and from which they might later find themselves compelled to recede. They must be allowed to work out the problem deliberately and in their own ways, and for any action which would involve any radical change in our denominational Sunday school policy they must wait for the action of our General Conference.

E. B. CHAPPELL,
General Sunday School Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

A LETTER FROM REV. L. E. ALFORD.

(The letter below was received last week after the Advocate had gone to press.—Editor).

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. T. B. Holloman ceased his earthly labors at 10:25 p. m. on Thursday, September 9, in the Yazoo Sanatorium, Yazoo City, Miss., his wife and all his children, save Leon, the youngest son, being present when he breathed his last. He was taken sick while preaching at Lake City, Sunday night, tho 5th inst. He was brought to Yazoo City Monday morning. I went to see him late that evening as soon as I heard of his sickness. I knew then that he was a very sick man, though his physician did not seem to think he was in a dangerous condition until Thursday morning. He suffered so intensely from the time he was taken sick until he died, that he did very little talking; hence he did not leave a parting message for his brethren in the ministry. But I have been with him frequently since March, have had him in my home, and have listened to him talk, and I am sure the way was clear and bright on the other side.

After his body was prepared for burial, it was brought to the parsonage until the funeral service was held in the church here, at 2 p. m., Friday, the pastor of the church leading, and impressive talks on his life and work being made by Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Jackson, and Rev. N. B. Harmon of Crawford Street, Vicksburg.

After the services held in Yazoo City, the body was carried to Itta Bena, where three of his sons and one daughter live, and was laid to rest in the lot where two of his grandchildren rest. There was a large number of his friends and the friends of his children present at the burial service. At that time appropriate talks were made by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Lockhart, Rev. S. L. Pope, Brother Bacon, and the writer.

I have looked upon Brother Holloman more as a father than as a brother in the Conference. His sons and I were at Millsaps College together, and when I came to the Conference for admission on trial Brother Holloman was on the examination committee. Truly a good and useful man has gone from us.

L. E. ALFORD.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE CENTENARY STATEMENT.

The following corrections in last week's report should be noted: In the Alexandria District, Eden and Melville have paid their second year's subscriptions; in the Baton Rouge District, New Hope has paid its first year's subscription, and Darlington and Slaughter have both paid their second year's subscriptions, Slaughter having oversubscribed its quota; in the Lake Charles District, Franklinton has paid its first year's subscription; in the Monroe District, Waterproof has paid its first year's subscription, Humphreys Chapel and Magnolia have paid their second year's subscriptions; in the Ruston District, Lisbon and Jonesboro have paid their first year's subscriptions; in the Shreveport District, Coushatta has paid its first year's subscription, and Peason and Bayou La Chute have paid their second year's subscription, Bayou La Chute having oversubscribed its quota.

This list has been carefully checked. If your church does not have its proper standing, our records may not be correct. Please advise. Your treasurer may not have reported your collections.

The following churches have done especially well: In the Alexandria District, Trout subscribed 175 per cent of its quota; paid its first and second year's subscription and 27 per cent of third year. De Ridder oversubscribed its quota and paid more than its first year and is erecting a new church.

In the Baton Rouge District, First Church subscribed 180 per cent of its quota; paid its first year and 50 per cent of its second. Antioch subscribed 131 per cent of its quota and paid first year and 50 per cent of the second. Ethel subscribed 140 per cent of its quota; paid first and second years and 20 per cent of the third. Slaughter subscribed 113 per cent and paid more than its second year.

In the Lake Charles District, Crowley subscribed 122 per cent of its quota and has paid more than its first year's subscription and has a new church ready to dedicate; Gueydan subscribed 125 per cent of its quota and has paid its first and second year's subscription and 28 per cent of its third year; Lafayette subscribed 153 per cent of its quota and has paid first year and 53 per cent of second; Rayno subscribed 181 per cent of its quota and paid first year and 77 per cent of second; Vinton subscribed 119 per cent of its quota and has paid first and second years' and 84 per cent of third year.

In the Monroe District, Farmerville subscribed 103 per cent of quota and has paid first and second years' subscription; Gilbert subscribed 120 per cent of quota and has paid first year and 76 per cent of second; Mer Rouge subscribed 116 per cent of quota and has paid first year and 51 per cent of second; St. Joseph subscribed more than its quota and has paid first and second year and 26 per cent of third; Wesley Chapel subscribed 112 per cent of quota and has paid first and second year and 56 per cent of its third year.

In the New Orleans District, it is significant that every church in New Orleans oversubscribed its quota, the percentages of subscription being from 117 to 328, and from last week's report it will be clearly seen how well these churches are coming up with their payments.

In the Ruston District, the Bernice charge subscribed 125 per cent of its quota and has paid first year and 30 per cent of second; Homer subscribed 120 per cent of its quota and has paid first and second year and 21 per cent of third; Ruston subscribed more than its quota and has paid first year and 81 per cent of second year. For the past two years the crops in North Louisiana have been very short; therefore the record of these churches should be highly commended.

In the Shreveport District, E you La Chute subscribed 170 per cent of its quota and has paid more than its entire quota; Belcher subscribed 97 per cent of its quota and has paid first and second year and 44 per cent of its third year; Lake End subscribed its quota and has paid first and second year and 80 per cent of third; Robeline subscribed 162 per cent of its quota and has paid first and second year and 36 per cent of the third year; First Church, Shreveport subscribed 130 per cent of its quota and has paid first year and 77 per cent of second year; Noel Memorial subscribed 127 per cent of its quota and has paid first year and 35 per cent of second year.

This office will be glad to furnish, gratis, up-to-date literature on Centenary accomplishments to all who may desire it.

WHOSE VACATION WAS IT?

Dear Brother Carley: During the hot days of August I decided that my good wife ought by all means to take a vacation. I wanted her to go over in Virginia and visit some relatives right in the heart of the Blue Ridge. I felt that it was too long a journey for her to make alone with the children. There was nothing left for me to do but go with her. It was like going with the children to the circus. That Virginia country is a fine land to summer in. The scenery is wonderful. Those fine mountains lift you up.

But what I wanted to tell you about was a little trip I made to Washington City. I made this trip especially to visit our Representative Church. I wanted to see it; I wanted to see the congregation; I wanted to hear Dr. Chappell preach. As my custom is, I went to Sunday school. I was much interested in its organization and work. At 10:45 o'clock I went up to the auditorium for the preaching service. I was cordially received and given a seat on the front row in the "Amen Corner," but I wasn't given this seat because I had a pious or clerical look—it was for another reason, which I shall presently give. The auditorium was large and beautiful. It has a seating capacity for probably fifteen hundred, including the gallery. Dr. Chappell was down in Panama delivering a series of lectures. The regular organist and choir were away on a vacation but the people were there. They filled the great auditorium and gallery—and still they came. This explains why I was given the "Amen Corner." I was glad to have this comfortable seat. It gave me an opportunity to see the great congregation and to hear and see the preacher. The songs sung were the great old hymns of Methodism. The preacher was a young man, a Dr. Smith from Dallas, Texas. He preached a truly great sermon—great in its simplicity and in directness of appeal—and listen, Carley, he made a call for sinners. Think of it, in our Representative Church, in the Capital City of the greatest nation in the world, to the largest and most representative congregation, perhaps, in that city, at the close of the morning service, a call being made to sinners to come down to the altar in old Methodist fashion and repent of their sins! And they came—yes, they came. The finest thing about it all was that it was no exception. It was an every Sunday, every service, occurrence. The people told me that Dr. Chappell preached always with power and effectiveness, and that there was always a response. Bishop Keener used to say to me: "If you want crowds to attend your services, have a conversion now and then." Great throngs of people are attending the services at our Representative Church. Bishop Keener was right.

REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN: AN APPRECIATION.

When I was a small boy, about eight years of age, I had the misfortune of breaking my arm. In some way Brother Holloman heard about it and took time to write me a letter of sympathy, telling me of a similar misfortune he had suffered once. That letter won my heart, and though I had never met him I fell in love with Brother Holloman and have loved him ever since. Years passed and the time came when I entered Millsaps College and every year of the five spent there was a year of struggle and trial. Brother Holloman was presiding elder of the Jackson District most of that time and showed a great deal of interest in the welfare of the college boys. His friendly interest in me was a great inspiration and encouragement to me, and I feel I owe much to him for whatever success I had in getting through college.

It was here in Vicksburg, however, that I came to know him at his best. He was always profoundly interested in the work of Gibson Memorial as well as his own at Crawford Street. His attitude to me and the work was a source of great encouragement. He was a real brother pastor in every sense. When he learned of any Methodist family moving into South Vicksburg, he would tell me of it and say, "Brother Osmond, those people ought to be in your church and I want you to see them." Thus was shown his lovely, unselfish spirit that made my work at a "second" church much easier. He was absolutely fair with me.

I have been with him at the bedside of the sick and seen the look of appreciation and peace that came as a result of his talks and prayers. I have stood by him at funerals and noted the effect of his consoling words in the dark hour of sorrow. He was a friend to everybody, and was always ready to spend and be spent for the good of others.

It was always a genuine pleasure to be in the home of Brother and Sister Holloman, and Mrs. Lewis and I, with our little girl, have spent many happy hours with them. We had a great time together in our preparations to entertain the Annual Conference in 1917. I greatly enjoyed his reminiscences of past happenings suggested by the names of some of the preachers, as well as some of the hosts.

Brother Holloman was loved by the people of Vicksburg, and I have heard people in all walks of life say of him, "He is a good man." The last letter he wrote to the Advocate expresses the real spirit of the man, for he truly "went about doing good." "His works do follow him," and "he being dead yet speaketh." Blessed be his memory.

OSMOND S. LEWIS.

ITEMS FROM METHODIST HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN.

The Commission of the Methodist Hospital of the Mississippi Conference will hold a meeting at the Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, at 2 p. m., Thursday, September 23, for consideration of any new propositions that Hattiesburg may have to make as to location and other matters connected with the campaign for funds.

The writer, as Campaign Manager for the Commission, has represented the cause before some congregation each Sabbath since the last meeting of the Commission, which was July 20, and has taken subscriptions at each place, except at one where the crowd was so small that the pastor advised returning at some time when more of his leading people would be at home.

At one place a young man who is deaf and dumb, but who makes money, subscribed twenty dollars; at one country church a young lady headed the list with forty dollars; one young man who is a vocational student signed his card for forty dollars, and figured on the back of his card how easily he could pay it, as he tithes the monthly amount allowed by Uncle Sam. One small congregation, where it was prophesied barely railroad fare to and from would be secured, quickly raised one hundred and fifty dollars, one man stating that he himself ought to pay one hundred dollars.

Judging from results in every case where the appeal has been made directly to our people, we are led to believe that they see, or can readily be led to see, the need of a Mississippi Conference Hospital and that they wish to have a hand in building one.

In a statement issued by the Commission July 30, the following appeared: "We ask our preachers to give our representative of this enterprise right of way at the earliest possible moment and to formulate, in co-operation with him, some generous program for the same."

NEW MEMBERS EVERY SUNDAY.

Result-Producing Methods Used in Lakewood Church, Cleveland.

By G. W. Grill.

Salvation is, of course, as free to-day as in the olden time, but the ability to persuade people to accept it and to evidence the acceptance by church membership is indicative of salesmanship of a high order.

There is a Methodist church in Lakewood, the fairest and most populous suburb of Ohio's largest city, which three years ago had a membership of less than 1,400 and to-day has a membership of more than 2,600, representing a net gain of more than 85 per cent. Practically all of the members live within a radius of twelve city blocks of the church, which territory might, with reason, be called "Lakewood Parish," and in fact is frequently so denominated by the Methodists of Cleveland District. During the last three years the net gain in total population of the territory comprised within "Lakewood Parish" would not exceed 10 per cent, which fact, taken in conjunction with the 85 per cent gain in the membership of the church, indicates to some extent the intensity of the cultivation to which the community has been subjected, especially when one remembers that within the bounds of the parish there are two Presbyterian churches, one Baptist, two Lutheran, one Congregational, one Episcopalian, one Swedenborgian, one United Brethren, one Christian, and one Christian Scientist, with varying sizes of congregations, but all active and hard-working.

During these three years of phenomenal growth of the Methodist church, the popular pastor of this deservedly famous congregation has been the Rev. M. B. Fuller, D.D. Since the day of his arrival, in the fall of 1917, from the West Ohio Conference, new members have been received into the church every Sunday he has been in the pulpit and the invitation to join has been given. "New Members Received Last Sunday" is a standing head that is used every week in the columns of "Tidings," the little weekly newspaper that goes into every home in the congregation every Saturday.

A Record Repeated.

During the first year of his ministry in Lakewood, Dr. Fuller added 548 new members to the congregation.

When that report reached the official board every one said, "Fine; let's raise his salary to $4,000; we will never have another good excuse like this, for he has worked the field so hard that it never can be done again."

But the minister said: "Well, I may not be able to do it again, but I have found as many good, fair, and indifferent prospects within the bounds of the parish as there are now members in the church, and they ought to be brought in, and with a reasonable degree of co-operation on the part of the membership they can be brought in."

The second year when he went to Conference he reported 501 new members added to the roll, and again the congregation through the official board asked him to return, and the committee on estimating ministerial support added another five hundred dollars to his annual cash salary.

But the wiseacres and gloom-mongers said, shaking their heads sadly, "It can never be done again, for the fertility of this field is surely now exhausted."

With appropriate confidence and becoming humility the minister replied: "Well, I may not be able to do it again, but some other good man can, if he has the co-operation of the members, for there are still as many prospects in the files as there are members in the church."

So far in this present Conference year more than six hundred new names have been added to the roll, three hundred and ninety of whom were received on Palm Sunday. There have been more than sixty baptisms of children and coming adults, more than one hundred baptisms during the year. And still the field is far from being exhausted, and apparently there are still as many prospects in the files as there are members.

How It Is Done.

Practically every one of the 1,500 new members that have been received during the last three years has been won through the personal efforts of the pastor in personal calls in the homes or offices, or through the efforts of Sunday school teachers and workers supplemented by the work of the pastor. No special evangelistic meetings have been held, but each sermon, each address, each prayer meeting talk, has contained the evangelistic message.

Dr. Fuller is an indefatigable worker—both of himself and of other people. One of the unique activities of the church is the "Win One" and "Hold On" organization. There are Win One workers and Hold On workers on each street or in each district in the parish, and it is their duty to call on prospective and new members and to get other members of the church to make similar calls. This organization also conducts a series of district social events for members and friends of the church during the winter and spring, culminating in a great, church-wide social on the Friday evening before Palm Sunday, which is the great ingathering day of the church year.

In addition to the work of the Win One and Hold On workers the members of the Ladies' Aid Society make not less than seven hundred church calls annually where they will do much good. Many other calls are made by Sunday school teachers and workers, by the calling committees of the adult Bible classes, the Epworth League, and the women's missionary societies. The object of all this extra-mural lay activity is not only the addition of new members to the various organizations mentioned, but also the creation of an atmosphere friendly to the church and its pastor.

Each person that comes to the church on Sunday is greeted at the door by a member of the reception committee who knows his business as well as the head clerk of a big hotel. If a person appears to be a newcomer in the community and friendly to the church, a record is made of his name and address on a pink-colored card, which indicates to any one using the church files that the owner of said name is a "friend." He may, and in the course of a few weeks usually does, graduate in the files from a pink to a blue card, which indicates that he is now a "prospect." In the course of a few more weeks, when the "prospect" turns into a "member," his name is inscribed on a white card.

Rarely, if ever, does a Sunday pass by without the addition of some new names to the Sunday school roll, which has now passed the 1,700 mark. These Sunday school registrations are recorded in the files on a buff-colored card, and they constitute the most prolific and satisfactory source of information concerning "friends" and "prospects" that the church has in operation.

These polychromatic files are of inestimable value to the minister in making his calls and to all other church workers. One set of cards is arranged alphabetically by names, and another set by streets.

Decision days are made much of in the Sunday school. The school is completely departmentalized, and the departmental decision days are arranged so that the minister can be present. In addition to the presentation of the Christ-life in each department as a whole, the importance of making the right decision is brought closer home by having it presented in each class either by the pastor or by some chosen worker. Several years ago Dr. Lynch, the Sunday school superintendent, instituted the junior church, which takes the place of a junior league. This fine department of church work with its corps of efficient workers contributes to the church each Children's Day from forty to fifty full members ranging in age from nine to twelve years.

In addition to all these agencies that have been enumerated, much use is made of circular letters and of the publicity afforded by the little church newspaper, "Tidings."

Dr. Fuller's very efficient helper, or executive secretary, is Mr. Walter J. Bailey, who formerly held a similar position in Epworth Memorial Church, Cleveland. His adaptability, his willingness to assume added responsibilities, his geniality, and his efficiency have won for him many friends. He is ably assisted by Mrs. P. A. Clapper, the office secretary.

Lakewood Church is already among the larger ones of the denomination and is destined, under Dr. Fuller's able administration, to grow still larger. While the results have been spectacular, the methods adopted, the chief of which has been the three thousand calls made annually by the pastor, could be used in any charge and by any minister with good results. The ideas and methods of work suggested in this article are neither patented nor copyrighted.—Exchange.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Board of Church Extension, at its Annual Meeting, on April 30, 1920, provided for the enlargement and reorganization of its Executive Committee on the advice of Mr. T. L. Jefferson, President, and on the recommendation of a strong committee to which had been referred the President's Report.

The Board also elected Bishop W. F. McMurry, President, and Mr. T. L. Jefferson, who had been President for fourteen years, was elected Vice President and Loan Secretary.

At the called meeting of the Board on June 23, which was provided for by the Annual Meeting, a strong paper numerously signed, requesting the new President, Bishop McMurry, to move his residence to Louisville, Kentucky, was adopted, the Board declaring that in its judgment "the best interests of the Board and the church would be served by the removal of the residence of the President to Louisville, the headquarters of the Board, where he will be more accessible to the members of the Board, and especially the Secretary and other members of the Executive Committee." All of this looking to an increase of service in the administration of the rapidly growing operations of the Board.

In this action, the Board recognized the fact that it had no right in any way to interfere with his work as a bishop of the church, and appointed a committee which was "authorized and instructed to act for the Board in arranging with the Bishop for such change of residence, should be favorably consider the request made."

This action of the Board was based on the perfect familiarity of the Bishop with all the affairs of the corporation, his long experience as Secretary having been instrumental in securing to the church the greater part of the one and one-half million of funds now held in trust for the church by this Board, and upon the judgment of the Board that its Secretary was entitled to the best counsel obtainable in the discharge of his heavy duties as executive officer, which judgment found expression in the strengthening of the Executive Committee at the Annual Meeting.

I am glad to be in position to announce to the church that Bishop McMurry has consented to move his residence to Louisville, and am sure that the contributors to the Board's funds, Loan and others, will be glad to learn that we are to have the benefit of his presence and counsel in our Executive Committee meetings and otherwise, and that he is to be accessible in a degree that has not been possible hitherto.

The church may be interested in knowing that the residence adjoining on the South the office building of the Board of Church Extension, 1119 Fourth Avenue, has been purchased at the very reasonable figure of $12,500, and that the Bishop and his family expect to move into it in the near future. This purchase is very strategic, for probably within a few years this property will be needed because of the expansion of the business of the Board.

The title to this property has been vested in this Board, and the purchase money has been secured since the Annual Meeting from friends of the Board, thus making it unnecessary to use the regular income of the Board, Centenary Fund, or funds on hand at the time the action of the Board was taken.

The committee could not ask the President to undertake the heavy task of removing his residence to this city, without in some degree providing, as had been done in St. Louis, for a residence.

The volume of business annually transacted by this Board is enormous, far beyond the realization of most of our people and the average great bank or trust company, of such magnitude, would have a much larger executive force than has this great Board. The present executive Secretary and all associated with him eagerly desire one thing—to render to our beloved church, and to our Lord, faithful, constructive service, and to this end the pasters and laymen of Southern Methodism are urged to a glorious co-operation.

S. H. C. BURGIN, Secretary.

CENTENARY COLLEGE OPENING.

On September 15, at 10:30 in the morning, Centenary College opened her doors for the 81st session, with appropriate exercises. The fact that first struck the visitor on arrival at the campus, was the evidence of substantial improvement visible. In the first place, the underbrush and all unsightly objects had been cleared away from the beautiful grove surrounding the college, giving a park-like appearance to the grounds; and new driveways had been graded about the grounds. Two new buildings had been erected at a cost of nearly $100,000, adding greatly to the appearance and capacity of the college plant. One of these will be used to house, for the present, the college department, having offices and class rooms on the first floor and dormitories for college students on the second floor.

The old building, with necessary changes, will house the preparatory department, making possible the complete separation of the two departments, each of which has its separate faculty.

The other new building, which will be the gymnasium, is also used on occasion as an auditorium. This delightful assembly room, with its seating capacity well filled with students, members of the Board and visitors, was the scene of the opening exercises. Rev. Claude L. Jones, pastor of the Central Christian Church of Shreveport, led the opening prayer, which was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Walter Crowder, whose singing is always enjoyed. Prof. R. E. Smith led in an appropriate devotional service. His son, Mr. Garland Smith, rendered a beautiful violin solo, and the chief address, on "The Meaning of Christian Education," was given by Dr. Jasper K. Smith, for many years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church and one of Shreveport's best loved and most influential citizens, who has always been one of the best friends of the college. The writer gave a brief message from the Board of Trustees, reaffirming the policies and ideals for which the college stands.

Dr. Bourne, the president of the College, made the announcements, including the introduction of the members of the faculty, all but one of whom were present. The only absentee arrived a few hours later. This introduction may in substance be profitably repeated for the benefit of your readers: Rev. R. E. Smith, founder and sometime president of Ruskin Cave College, Tennessee, and more recently professor in Southern College, Sutherland, Fla.; Prof. R. J. Kelly, associated with Prof. Smith in both these institutions; Rev. D. B. Raulins, of the Memphis Conference, graduate of Ruskin Cave and Vanderbilt; Prof. Pierce Cline, graduate of Emory and formerly professor in Birmingham-Southern College; Prof. E. V. Levie, also of Emory and with successful teaching experience; Prof. G. P. Evans, Vanderbilt graduate and member of last year's faculty; Prof. G. M. Reynolds, son of Dr. John H. Reynolds, of Hendrix College, graduate of that institution and post-graduate student at Columbia University; Prof. R. R. Riske, of Indiana, graduate of a Normal college of that State, and Rev. Roy Moore, of Virginia, graduate of Southern University and Vanderbilt.

It will be seen that the faculty has been increased by two, and each member has been selected as carefully as possible for scholarship, teaching ability and genuine Christian character, and leadership. Many of the professors are newcomers, but as far as can be judged, they are all high-class Christian gentlemen, whose character and record assure the maintenance of the ideals for which the college was founded.

The present prospect is that the enrollment will fill both preparatory and college departments to the limit of effective work with the present buildings, the college classes realizing a healthy increase.

The enlargement and equipment of the plant is due to the loyal and generous zeal of local members of the Board and other friends who are determined to assure the success of the college. When it was seen that about $20,000 was needed to furnish and equip the new buildings, improve the grounds and meet other pressing needs, about a dozen of these men promptly contributed the amount in cash, in contributions ranging from $500 to $5,000 each. Those nearest to the college feel that the future is brightening.

W. WINANS DRAKE,
Secretary of the Board of Trustees.

TO THE MINISTERS AND LAY DELEGATES OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, WHICH CONVENES AT CHARLESTON, MISS., NOV. 15-22, 1920.

My Dear Brethren and Sisters: Without apology for conditions over which I have not power, further than to say all the good people of our town regret the fact, I am compelled to give warning that no preacher or layman can bring his wife to Conference, save those preachers and delegates whose wives happen themselves to be delegates.

Charleston will gladly, courteously and efficiently take care of the Conference proper, but we will not be able to extend invitations to those who just desire to be entertained as visitors to the Conference.

I trust that this will suffice and that no minister or layman will embarrass us by compelling us to refuse to do a thing that is in our hearts to do, but that can not be done on account of lack of homes in which to entertain.

Cordially and fraternally,
J. TILLERY LEWIS,
Conference Host.

THE MAN IN THE PULPIT AS SEEN BY THE MAN IN THE PEW.

By Dr. Howard Reber, Managing Editor Dayton (Ohio) Daily News.

Strictly speaking, the man in the pew is interested in the man in the pulpit as a rather difficult subject to understand. The man in the pew made that discovery quite long ago. His personal opinion of him is not. The man in the pew has not changed. He has simply been ready to admit that he was a fool for the man in the pew long ago knew enough to be very thoroughly understands this one thing. He has developed a religion which regards ministers as people and which expects the man himself to prove factor in religious life.

The well-rounded man who attends church services Sabbath after Sabbath is a man who has learned how to devote hours a day, six days of the week, to business. Business is beginning more and more to walk along side of religion, to take religion as a partner in the furtherance of its affairs. The average man in the pew is puzzled when the week's work is completed.

I like to think of the somewhat recent experiment made by Rabbi Stephen Wise, the great Jewish teacher of New York. You will remember that when the time came for Rabbi Wise to take his vacation one summer, he donned the overalls and went into one of the great shipyards of the Eastern coast. And here he labored for more than a month, drawing his regular pay envelope each week and turning it over to the Red Cross. Rabbi Wise has said that he would not sell his experiences during the six weeks he was so engaged for a fortune if he could not enjoy the experiences again. Eight hours a day he labored with laboring men. He knew their lives; he knew their experiences. It was all new to him, this business of working with one's hands for a living, and many a night, he relates, he went to his barracks tired and wearied, but always happy.

"The proper study of mankind," we may well repeat once more, "is man."

The minister has made this great discovery. Years ago he thought he knew the man in the pew as well as it was possible to know him. He met him of a Sabbath morning, rarely saw him at the Sabbath evening service, and hardly ever found him at the mid-week prayer meeting. In other words, shaking hands with the man in the pew Sabbath morning after church service, an occasional visit to his home (about meal-time), and sometimes a surprise meeting on the streets constituted about all the time the man in the pulpit spent with the man in the pew.

Now things are changed—the man in the pulpit makes it a matter of conscience to drop in ever so often to see the man in the pew at his work. I know some ministers will say they do not like to visit business men at their desks; that the business man does not like to be bothered. The impression is incorrect. If a minister has made any favorable impression at all upon the man in his congregation he will be as warmly welcomed in the private offices of these men at their places of business as any business associate would be.

In these latter days of religious development there has sprung up a system of having assistant pastors for good-sized congregations. We have all seen congregations struggling under such a burden. The pastor of the church preaches the sermons, baptizes the members, makes the announcements, and after the service is over he is generally not to be found. In his place the assistant pastor is found at the front door shaking hands with friends and members of the congregation. The assistant pastor calls upon the people and in various ways leaves the impression that the pastor of the congregation is holding himself aloof from the members. It doesn't take very long in a church of this type for a deep-seated religious aversion to that pastor to develop.

In my position I have occasion to meet pretty nearly every pastor in the city of Dayton. I think I have some idea of various methods employed to win men to the church. I find many of the pastors are themselves unable to understand why the man in the pew doesn't take a deeper interest in the eternal things that the church stands for. One layman minister came into my office a few weeks ago and said he had just finished a romance with his official board. The matter of some church policy was involved and there was a look of triumph in his eyes as he sat beside my desk and told me in confidence how he had succeeded in winning over the board to his way of thinking. I am not sure that the pastor's way was the best way in this particular case. Perhaps it wasn't. But the thought came to me as I saw that minister, a fine-looking young fellow who was full of "pep," as we all it in our every-day phraseology walk out of the door with a cheery "good-by," that here was a minister who is going to make good both as a pastor and as a man among men. He knew his place was to lead in his congregation, and when it came to a point where pastor and official board did not agree, that minister's leadership asserted itself and he conquered.

Business men like successful men—whether they are in the pew or the pulpit. They like to see a man hustle for all he is worth.

The most successful minister I have met in the city of Dayton is a man who calls men by their first names when he meets them on the street. He never fails to inquire about every member of the family (men like that too). He is not particularly brilliant as a pulpit orator, and he knows it, but the secret of his success is to be found in his ability to keep his feet on the earth while he reaches to the skies in supplications of prayer for his own people and for the city. And, after all, the business man cares most about people who are like himself. The Ralph Connor type of "sky pilot" somehow or other has always impressed me as being the type which accomplishes so much. The pastor in the home or engaged in some serviceable work outside the church is worth a dozen in the pulpit. Our modern age demands a change, and the minister has to meet conditions as nearly as he can. He isn't asked to forget his sacred calling, but rather to make his calling so much admired by those with whom he comes in contact that the man in the pew (who, after all, has to be humored because he is merely a human being) will want to shake him by the hand and makes of him a counselor and a friend. No man, whatever his religious development is, will want to sit for any length of time under the teachings of a minister whom he does not admire. It is the minister's place to make men admire him. And it can be done.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

KEEPING AT ONE'S BEST.

"On Thee do I wait all the day."—Psalm 25:5.

What I am thinking about is this—that so many of us only wait on God for a very little while, and then we withdraw, and it is all over. Our waiting is a passing visit; it is not an abiding. We merely call upon the Lord; we do not live with Him. We go and we come away; we do not wait on Him all the day.

The trouble with many of us is found in this broken and fragmentary idea of the devotional life. We think of our devotions as a sort of discipline or gymnastics which we can pack into five or ten minutes. We do not regard them as a vital communion which runs right through the day. And so fellowship comes to be looked upon as a kind of morning drill. Not that I would disparage the morning drill, even in physical exercises; but the morning drill is not worth much if it is followed by the careless indifference of a lounging attitude, or a shambling walk, or if we huddle up in our chairs in an almost hunchbacked deformity. And the morning devotion is worth just as little if it is regarded as something we can do and have done with, and carrying no shaping devoutness into the rest of the day. We have not really entered into the secret place of the Most High if we can leave it behind. The only vital fellowship is that which waits on God "all the day."

Professor Gairdner used to say, "One never knows what work God may ask one to do at any moment, and one should always be at one's best."

And surely that is not a presumption of the Master's counsel: "Have your loins girt, and your lamps trimmed, and be ye ready." And if this spiritual readiness is to be ours, it will become a spiritual habit and not merely an occasional act. For it implies a way of living. It means that the soul keeps itself reverently quiet toward the eternal with an alert readiness to know what is the will of the Lord.

That is one of the running distinctions of the angels of God: "They do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word." Their spirit is ever ready; they are ever alert. They are receptive and appreciative, and their mood is constant. They serve Him day and night in His temple, and it is a service in which they never tire, and never grow old.

That we should always be at our best, and the secret of being at one's best is found in waiting on God "all the day." We must seek continuity of communion. We need a Divine fellowship which remains unbroken even in seasons of detachment, and in the hours when we earn our daily bread. Our God is a companion for the whole journey. He will accompany us all the day and all the way.—British Weekly.

MAKING THE SERVICE HELPFUL

By A Pastor

The writer of this article has recently received the letter embodied herein of a nature which seems to him so suggestive that he wishes the readers of the Advocate to have the benefit of it, eliminating names and places.

How little do we pastors suspect the hearts that are in attendance upon our ordinary services and the needs represented by them. How little did the author realize that in that Sunday night there were present in his congregation a couple merely strange and with their hearts heavy because of a little casket down in the baggage-room!

I furnish the letter that we, as pastors, may have a suggestion to us what our ministry possibly means to unknown people in the audience.

The letter is as follows:

"Dear Brother ————:

"I was passing through your city on August 1 with my wife, on our way to bury our eight-year-old boy at our old home at Emory and Henry College, where I used to teach, and as we had six hours to wait, we went to your church for the night service. I have wanted to tell you ever since how we were helped by the spirit of the service, although the sermon itself was not devoted to any topic which would naturally be supposed to offer comfort. Everything was done in a way which suggested the church and all it stands for.

"We have often since remarked how unfortunate it would have been for us if the service had been foolish or flippant. I have attended such services in my life, and, I fear, have conducted Sunday school classes the same way. You did not put things forward which are intended to be kept in the background, and, as I have said above, I have felt impelled to write and tell you how fortunate it was for us.

"The song, 'The land where the roses never fade,' was beautiful. We tried to find it in Emory to be used at the funeral, but could not. Please express our appreciation to the lady who sang it. It was not 'professional,' but in a sweet spirit, and, naturally, meant a great deal to us. I do not know her name and cannot write her.

"I have said—I may not stick to it—that hereafter, in so far as I am able, no church service shall be in a spirit which shall mock those who may need comfort.

"With best wishes,

TIT-FOR-TAT

When Freddie pulled his kitten's tail,
It never once grew longer;
But oh! how strange, for kitty's claws
Just grew instead—grew stronger.

When Freddie pulled, then kitty scratched;
He said: "I wish you'd stop it!"
She said: "That tail belongs to me;
I'll stop it, sir, when you drop it!"

TIRED TEDDY.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

Teddy was a bright, rosy-cheeked, plump little boy, five years old. He had two jolly brothers, a sweet little sister, a kind father and mother, a nice home, and plenty of toys, so that he should have been a very happy little lad, but he was too lazy to enjoy any of his blessings. If his papa wanted to take him out, he would invariably ask: "Is it far to walk? Can we ride all the way?" And if he had to walk only a few blocks, he would prefer to stay at home. His brothers called him "Slow Drag," because he lagged so far behind them going to school that he often made them late. At the table he would lay his head back on his chair and puff and blow as if every mouthful was an exertion; and he simply could not pass a bed without crawling up on it and lying down to "take a little rest." A bed was just like a magnet to Teddy. He loved to look at picture books and to draw and to paint, but he would never sit up like other children—he would lie flat on the floor. If his mother would ask him to go on an errand, you would have thought him a hundred years old, to see him slowly drag one limb after the other and creep along like a snail. If the children called him to "come play fire engine," he would say: "Not 'les I can be driver,' cause I'm too tired to run."

Santa Claus was very good to Teddy, and when his mother saw the array of toys, she thought surely now her little boy would be happy; but (would you believe it?) after admiring each thing, he carefully put them away and began his old tune of "I don't know what to do."

"Don't know what to do?" said papa. "Why, go play with your big cyclone wagon. You can ride yourself in that." "Yes," drawled Teddy, "but I get so tired working my feet, and then I have to bring it up the steps, and it's so heavy."

"Build with your new blocks," suggested mamma.

"Will you make me pick them up when I get through?" questioned the lazy boy.

"Most assuredly," answered his mother; for it was one of her rules that the little folks must learn order and tidiness by putting the toys in the proper place.

"Then I don't want to build," Teddy yawned.

"Come, let's play ball," called his brothers.

"No, I might have to run after it."

"Spin your top, so sister can hear it hum."

"Oh, it's too much trouble to wind it up," he groaned.

And there he sat, looking at his toys, but too indolent to play with them. At night he would fall asleep with his clothes on, too lazy to undress, and one would have thought that he had done a whole day's work to hear him constantly moan: "I'm so tired."

The children teased and laughed at him; but his laziness worried his parents very much, and they tried to break him of it. Sometimes they made him stay in bed all day, but he did not seem to mind very much. They made him run, take physical culture exercises, etc.; but it was like pulling out eyeteeth to get him to move, and they would be as tired as Teddy was with the effort.

Finally his mother said: "I am really alarmed about Teddy. There must really be something radically wrong with him, for it is not natural for a child to be so inert. I am going to send for the doctor and have him examined from head to toe, inside and out."

Accordingly, Teddy's father went to call on the old family physician, Dr. Lloyd, and asked him to prescribe for Teddy's weariness for his wife's sake, if not for Teddy's, as she was on the verge of nervous prostration trying to find something to amuse her little boy that would not tire him.

Teddy was very much surprised the next day when Dr. Lloyd walked in and asked to see him.

"Why, I am not sick," said Teddy, who was lying on the floor at his usual occupation of doing nothing.

"Then, why are you lying down, my boy?" queried the doctor. "I'm just tired," sighed Teddy.

"Well, that's exactly what I came to see about. You must be sick to be always tired, so I am going to ask mamma to put your gown on and put you to bed." Then Dr. Lloyd began to thump and plump Teddy all over, and he looked very grave indeed. "It does seem queer that a chubby, rosy-cheeked little boy should be ill, but I find he will require very severe treatment if we are really to effect a cure. In the first place, the medicine I prescribe is quite bitter, but he must take it three times a day, and no candy after it. Then I find all his bones and muscles diseased, so his arms and legs must be put in plaster casts—that is, if he wishes to retain the use of them at all."

All this Dr. Lloyd said in a manner most profound, using big medical terms, while Teddy looked on, too frightened to speak, and mamma had a suspicious moisture in her eyes; but she said nothing, for she realized that her boy must be cured of a bad habit before it became fastened upon him. A lazy boy is apt to grow up to be a lazy man, and we all know that a lazy man never amounts to anything. Bad habits are easily cured in childhood, but if we let them grow along with us, it is impossible to shake them off. Therefore, Teddy's parents resolved that their boy must be cured, no matter what the cost might be.

Teddy was too alarmed to protest while the doctor made plaster casts and securely fastened his two little fat legs and both dimpled arms.

"Now, my little man," said the doctor," you know God gave you your legs to walk, run, skip, jump, and hop, and your hands to work and play with; but they seem so diseased that you will lose the use of them altogether if we do not resort to heroic methods. We'll try these molds, and if they do not restore your limbs to their proper usefulness, we may have to cut them all off. It won't really matter, as long as they are useless to you, but" (seeing Teddy's eyes grow as big as saucers) "we hope not, we trust not. We'll see."

Teddy's mother had a trying time all next day, and the doctor was hailed with delight when he walked in.

"Oh, doctor, I'm sure my arms and legs are well and won't have to be cut off. Won't you let them out of prison?"

Dr. Lloyd carefully unbound one leg, and, after a vigorous rubbing, said he would try what the plaster had done.

Oh, how glad Teddy was to have even one little leg free! Every lazy bone in it seemed to have disappeared, for he hopped all over the house, never once thinking of being tired, although, of course, the strain was great. When his brothers offered to ride him in the wagon, he actually said he would rather hop after it, and his father chuckled, for he saw that the remedy was working wonders

Next day Dr. Lloyd came and unbound the other leg, and when he left the house Teddy was playing horse and running so fast that his brothers could not keep up with him.

On his next visit the doctor took his right hand out of the plaster; and my, my, the wonderful things Teddy found he could do with one hand! He built great, tall houses, he drew, he wrote, he put his toys all away at night; so when at last Dr. Lloyd set his other arm free, Teddy's joy knew no bounds. The children said his name should be changed from "Tired Teddy" to "Jumpling Jack," for he waved his arms wildly in the air, jumped up and down, turned somersaults, raced, and romped. He declared he "never knew what good things arms were before," and from that day to this he has never been known to complain of being tired.

When we come to know the facts, we find that our previous infallibility has a flat tire.—Exchange.

A TIMELY MESSAGE.

Nearly twenty-four centuries ago the prophet Malachi asked: "Will a man rob God?" Sad to say, the passing of ages has not brought the church to the place that this question need no longer be asked. It is still a timely message. Nothing in the past has so shortened the line with which the resources and the wonderful possibilities of the kingdom have been measured as the refusal of God's people to be faithful in the discharge of their duty with respect to the material things which God has given them. They have circumscribed the work of the kingdom and hurt their own spiritual lives by the misuse of trust funds.

The misuse of trust funds will always be discovered. There is no safe way to juggle with figures. Embezzlers may make false entries, and juggle with their figures, but ere long comes the evil day when despite all their pains, the theft is known. So it is in the church of God. The misuse of trust fund is written everywhere over the world. Yonder is a church which everybody knows is not composed of tithers because they have a church debt that has been running on for years, when it could have been paid long ago, with an excess overrunning expense, if the people had been giving the Lord what was justly due. Yonder is another church which is not composed of tithers, as everybody knows because there is a needy field almost within its shadow which nothing is done to reach. Yonder is still another church which is not composed of tithers, as everybody knows because it is housed in a ramshackle building, is not better than the barns of the prosperous farmers in the neighborhood, and perhaps not as good, and a pastor is employed for only half his time and meagerly paid. And over the land are millions of Christians, as everbody knows, who are not tithers, because the church is really only playing at the task of reaching the waste places of our own land, and of doing its work in foreign lands with no prospect of ever completing the task, unless the church can do better than it is now doing. These are some of the facts which, like juggled figures and false entries, tell of our unfaithful stewardship.

But you may say this is failure to tithe, not failure to be stewards. The law of stewardship is the law of the New Testament, a law much better than that of the tithe. Is it better because it allows us to give a smaller amount? By no means. The law of stewardship in no wise contradicts the ancient law of the tithe. It is only in amplification, an enlargement, of the ancient law, which recognizes the fact that God is the real owner of all we are said to possess, and that we must return a proportionate part of it to him for the maintenance and enlargement of his kingdom in the world. If you feel that this doctrine of the New Testament does not expressly define the tithe, does not fix the percentage you are due God, you can not believe that it would be less than the tithe of the ancient Jew.

The misuse of trust funds, or covetousness, is the great sin against which warning is given in the New Testament. Certainly Jesus had a great deal to say about the wrong use of money. "Whom did Jesus put in hell?" some one has asked. "Not the thief on the cross, but Dives, who ignored his stewardship obligation and fared sumptuously every day. Who had to be left out of the kingdom? Not the repentant prodigal, bad as he was, but the exemplary rich young man who in sorrow turned away from the acknowledgment of stewardship. Who was cast into outer darkness? The adulteress? No! It was the man who with his unused talent buried also his stewardship responsibilities. And who was the fool? Not, according to modern thrift, the poor widow who rashly threw in all her living, but the rich farmer who stored his goods for his personal gratification." And at the last day when the King shall come in his glory he shall separate those before his throne, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats, according as they have observed or repudiated the stewardship obligations of life.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE OPENING.

The opening of Millsaps College on Wednesday, September 15, was a delightful and auspicious occasion. President Watkins and the faculty were in their places, ready to begin the work of what promises to be the best session in the history of the college, and a goodly company of visitors, both from Jackson and a distance, were present to lend encouragement to the resumption of scholastic activities at this great educational institution. It was estimated that the number of students present was twenty per cent in advance of last year's attendance on the opening day.

The program for the opening exercises was informal, but interesting and inspiring. After some appropriate remarks by President Watkins, impromptu addresses were made by Mr. Boyd Campbell, the editor of the Advocate, Rev. Robt. Selby, Professor J. T. Calhoun, Mr. W. M. Bule, Rev. C. W. Crisler, Professor G. L. Harrell, Dr. D. M. Key, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Professor White, the successor of Dr. A. A. Kern in the Department of English, and perhaps others whose names do not come to mind at the moment.

Announcement was made that all the rooms of the new dormitory had been engaged in advance of the opening, and that it would be difficult, in all probability, to find places for all the students applying for admission. The opinion was freely expressed that double the present dormitory space could easily be filled. In view of the demand for adequate boarding facilities, we earnestly hope that the Board of Trustees will be diligent in devising ways and means of completing at the earliest possible moment the third unit of the present splendid dormitory building. We doubt not that the Methodists of Mississippi will be more willing than ever to co-operate in a work that means so much for the educational welfare of their boys and girls. A laissez-faire policy at this time is altogether out of keeping with the educational spirit of the times.

It was impossible not to be struck by the enthusiastic interest manifested by the student body in the athletic program which now includes football. As a subordinate but very important part of college activities, athletics must be properly provided for by the college authorities, not only as a means of developing college spirit, but also as a means of cultivating certain qualities that find their best expression and their best training on the field of play. Under the strict eligibility rules of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and under strict faculty regulation, we have no fear that the inclusion of football in the schedule of sports will be productive of anything but good.

Our pride in the notable achievements of Millsaps College thus far should not make us lose sight of the fact that it still needs much in the way of endowment and equipment. It is one of the great educational institutions of the church and of the South, but it will not hold its place in the educational world unless its friends rally to its support in a way that will enable it to meet the demands that will be made upon it in the future as it has met those of the past. The Christian Education Movement now under way in the church will furnish the opportunity for Mississippi Methodists to show that they will be satisfied with nothing less than the very best in the way of educational privileges for their young men and young women. We believe they will make full use of the opportunity.

THE MEMORIAL HOME.

The Memorial Home, an institution maintained by our church in New Orleans for the Christian care of fallen girls, is doing a work that should commend it highly to the Christian people of this section of the South. By the nature the case, its work is unobtrusive; but it is carrying on a kind of ministry that Protestantism cannot afford to neglect in its mission of mercy to those in whose faces the doors of hope are almost closed.

This institution is supported by the gifts of friends and by appropriations of $1500 each by the Louisiana and North Mississippi Conferences; the Mississippi Conference has not, thus far, made a specific appropriation, but it has opened the way for the cause to be presented in its churches and promises of substantial aid have come from its bounds.

Since we know something of the financial difficulties that have attended the maintenance of the Home this year, and of the problems that are connected with its future operation, we find it in our hearts to call the attention of those who have already promised to help, and of others who may be inclined to do so, to its present needs. The presiding elder of the New Orleans District, Rev. J. G. Snelling, has borne a heavy burden in providing the money that is absolutely necessary for the proper carrying on of this work, and he and the Board which has the Home in charge are deserving of practical sympathy and help. We sincerely hope that our people throughout Louisiana and Mississippi will not fail to do what they can for this most worthy cause.

BISHOP McMURRY TO BE IN NEW ORLEANS.

A note from Bishop W. F. McMurry informs us that he will spend Sunday, September 26, in Meridian, Miss., and that he will be in New Orleans on Monday and Tuesday following. The note was written from Winona, Miss., in which section of the State the Bishop has been preaching and dedicating churches. Bishop McMurry is not a stranger in New Orleans, where his visits are always looked forward to with interest and pleasure.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"All goes well here," writes Rev. J. W. Faulk from Lecompte, La.

The Fourth Annual Roll Call of the American

Red Cross will be held, November 11-25. The purpose of the call is to secure members for this great organization.

Among the new missionaries that bave recently been accepted by our Board, is Miss Catherine B. Steens, of Grenada, Miss., who will teach in Hiroshima Girls' School, Hiroshima, Japan.

Dr. W. B. Godbey, for many years a member of the Kentucky Conference, and for a long time one of the best known evangelists in the church, died at Cincinnati, Ohio, on Sunday morning, September 12.

Rev. Robt. Selby, Commissioner of Emory University in Mississippi, honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week. The editor missed the privilege of seeing him by reason of being at home, sick abed.

October 1 has been designated as Rally Day in the Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, for the purpose of getting everything in readiness for the Annual Conference. Rev. C. D. Atkinson is the wide-awake presiding elder.

Electric ceiling fans have recently been installed in our church at Rosedale, Miss., where Rev. John W. Robertson is pastor. They were in operation in time to relieve the discomfort of the hot spell through which we have just passed.

Our congregation at Greenville, Miss., Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor, has recently spent $5000 in renovating the parsonage, which makes it one of the best homes in the Conference. There have 105 additions to the church at that place this year.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, has assisted in nine revival meetings this year, and he has one yet to hold. Thus far six young men have said they feel called to enter the ministry. The district has made advances along all lines.

Rev. J. H. Grice, of Vancleave, Miss., requests us to announce that the New Prospect Camp Meeting will be held October 13 to October 17, inclusive. Rev. P. H. Howse and Rev. J. E. Williams will do the preaching. The pastor reports that the work of the Vancleave charge is moving along nicely.

Dr. J. C. Ballard, a prominent Mississippi physician who is connected with the Government Rehabilitation Service in New Orleans, will occupy the pulpit at Felicity Methodist Church next Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. Inman Townsley, who is assisting in a meeting at Stephenson, Miss.

The Work Day collection for the Mississippi Orphans' Home will be taken on Sunday, October 10, this year. The superintendent of the Home, Rev. B. F. Lewis, is hoping—and expecting—that there will be a most generous response. The institution is doing a great work, but it is feeling keenly the present high cost of living.

The Extension Department of Millsaps College is interesting itself in developing the valuable art of debating among the high schools of Mississippi. It is offering the resources of the college library to principals and students who wish to avail themselves of this help, and is calling attention to the matter through a bulletin recently issued. Dr. S. G. Noble is in charge of the work.

According to the Brookhaven Leader, the address of Dr. J. W. Cooper at the First Baptist Church, on Sunday evening, September 12, was the occasion of an ovation to this distinguished minister and educator. The congregation that greeted him was the largest, with perhaps one exception, that has ever assembled in that city. The address dealt with his experiences and observations during his recent tour of Europe.

After an unavoidable delay, ground has been broken for the erection of the new $70,000 church at West Point, Miss. When completed, this will be one of the finest Methodist churches in Mississippi. The pastor, Rev. Carroll Varner, began a revival meeting on Sunday, September 12, in which he was assisted by Rev. J. J. Clark, of Knoxville, Tenn., a successful pastor and evangelist. The meeting was expected to continue about two weeks.

Mr. J. M. Way, secretary of the Department of Minute Men and Lay Speakers of the Centenary Commission, suggests that all Southern Methodists who expect to attend the Congress of the World's Brotherhood, at Washington, D. C., October 9-13, write a week or more in advance to Dr. E. O. Watson, Woodward Building, Washington, for hotel reservations, so that all Southern Methodists may be together in one hotel. A good many of our people have already made reservations.

Bishop W. F. McMurry will lay the corner stone of the new East End Church, at Meridian, Miss., next Sunday, September 26, and, on the same day, carry a message to the congregation of Central Church that will doubtless inspire them to an early lifting of their indebtedness. Our Fifth Street Church is now busy transforming the ruins of its burned building into a thing of beauty, at a cost of about $12,000. With new buildings for the congregations at Central, East End, and Fifth Street, Meridian Methodism will be adequately housed for the first time in many years.

A note from the pastor, Rev. A. F. Vaughan, informs us that there has been a generous response to the recent appeal in the Advocate for assistance in rebuilding our church at Covington, La., which was destroyed by fire several months ago. The plans for the new building have been completed, and it is hoped that work can begin soon. It will cost about $10,000 and will have ample facilities for all departments of work. It will be erected on a splendid lot on Jefferson Avenue, just a block from the High School. This congregation has recently bought a new parsonage and arrangements have been made so that there will be no indebtedness. These forward movements will give our church a fine working plant at this important point.

A SERMON OUTLINE.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., has furnished us with the following outline of a sermon on The Prodigal Son, which Bishop Lambuth told him was worked out by one of our Chinese preachers. Can you beat it?

1. His Madness:
   a. His traveling.
   b. His reveling.
   c. His groveling.
2. His Sadness:
   a. He went to the dogs.
   b. He ate with the hogs.
   c. He homeward jogs.
3. His Gladness:
   a. He receives the seal.
   b. He eats the veal.
   c. He dances the reel.

THE POWER OF PERSISTENCY.

By D. W. Howell, D.D.

"I coveted the life of that young man for my Master," were the words of a deaconess, who confessed that she had been angling to win a bright, alert, intelligent, ambitious young man for the service of her King. He was attractive and popular, but was bending in the wrong direction. He was not openly irreligious, but he was not avowedly religious. It was easy for him to see flaws in the actions of professing Christians, and he would magnify them by exaggeration. He would be delighted when he could make uncomfortable those whom he considered overzealous in pious profession. While he seemed to take pleasure in opposing the church, yet he was in constant attendance at church gatherings and no social circle was complete without his presence. He moved among people as a prince among men. It was easy to detect the logic of the mind of this deaconess. She realized the power of such a life to the Kingdom of God, if it were dedicated to Christian living. She never lost faith in him, even though he seemed possessed to shock her on every conceivable occasion. While his keen thrusts made her inwardly uncomfortable, she tried not to betray her feeling.

On one occasion he placed her in a most unfavorable light by an unkind insinuation. The company laughed, but the eyes of the deaconess and the young man met and his eyelids fell. It was only the dropping of an eyelid, but it was a ray of hope. She was encouraged by this slight indication and she persevered in her effort to enlist him among the disciples of Jesus. Was she successful? If you could ask the pastor of one of the prominent churches of our denomination for the best all-round layman in his church he would instantly name this same young man. The persistency of this deaconess was divinely used to transform a life.—Exchange.

OUR SLOGAN

Adopted by the Christian Education Commission at Blue Ridge as a Part of the Policy of the Movement.

In our efforts to raise $33,000,000, our slogan must be, "A contribution from every Methodist in proportion to ability to pay." Some have said this must be a campaign among wealthy people only; that the people of small means should not be expected to contribute much, if anything. Nothing could be more fatal to the campaign than such an announcement. It would defeat large gifts and would cause the great mass of people to conclude that they have no part in the Movement. We cannot emphasize too strongly that the General Conference ordered a popular, intensive, church-wide campaign for education, using exactly the same language in reference to this campaign that it used touching the Centenary campaign. However, the lesson of our Centenary experience must be learned, namely, that our people of means did not give proportionately to what our poor members and people of ordinary means gave. We evidently failed in our methods to get the case of the Centenary thoroughly before our people of means. We must, therefore, emphasize in this campaign that we expect every member to contribute in proportion to his means, and find some way of getting on the conscience of our wealthy members, as well as on the conscience of the great mass of the people, the compelling appeal of our cause.—Bulletin.

I first knew Sister MOORE when, as a young preacher I served the Lebanon Charge and visited in her home at which time she was a mother to me. On the third Sunday in August, while having Brother Weems in a meeting at Bridgeville, she came to hear me preach. She was very feeble and scarcely able to come. On the following Monday she was taken very ill and on the fourth Thursday in August passed away. She was a consistent Christian and was ready when the summons came. She was born [illegible] 1837. Her maiden name was Miss Ann Bridges. In 1851 she married Lewis Sigler, who was killed in the battle of Vicksburg. In 1866 she married A. J. Moore, who preceded her in the good world of [illegible] years. She leaves seven children and one sister [illegible] years old. Many of the friends of the family were present at the funeral. Brother Weems preached a splendid sermon from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Brother Weems is a member of Bridgeville Church, and I am glad to say that he is a minister to me. On the third Sunday in August, while having Brother Weems in a meeting at Bridgeville, the call came to bear me home

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS CONCERNING OUR REVIVAL CAMPAIGN IN THE RURAL DISTRICTS.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard.

Does the church keep in mind that there are perhaps three thousand revival meetings in progress at this time? Are we praying for them as we should? Does the good news that good results are following these efforts thrill the church as it should? Will the ninety-day campaign bring to Christ and into the church as many people as were brought in by the pre-Easter campaign, that is, one hundred thousand? Are our city pastors helping all they can in these country meetings? Are the preachers preaching the exceeding sinfulness of sin? Are they holding up Christ as the only hope of men? Are they recognizing at all times the sovereignty of the Holy Spirit and depending upon Him for power? Do they expect the new converts to have the witness of the Spirit? Will the revival make people more prompt in paying debts? Will it make neighbors love each other more? Will it impel the rich man to make the right use of his money? Will it make a community more intolerant to public vices? Will it result in the establishment of many family altars? Will the local church lapse into its former state of lethargy after the meetings close? Will this revival spirit be permanent or evanescent? Will the three revival periods of the year, first for the schools and colleges in the fall, for the towns and cities in the pre-Easter campaign, and the ninety-day rural campaign, like the one now on, be the permanent plan of Southern Methodism in its revival campaigns? Shall we reach two hundred thousand people this year?

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr Benigh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says. "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1892 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked for means of getting rid of your rheumatism you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write to-day.

DODSON TELLS THE HORROR OF CALOMEL

You Don't Need to Sicken, Gripe, or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Saltillo, Miss.

The work prospers under the direction of Rev. E. M. Shaw and Brother Percy Shell at Houston. We expected to hold a district institute for the benefit of the teachers and workers of the Aberdeen District, but rains or something else kept them away. The workers at Houston seemed to get great good out of every service. Miss Manaker delighted the teachers with her presentation of the elementary work. From Houston we went to Mathiston, where we had a profitable meeting. Miss Manaker did some work at Emporia.

The Bible class at Winona must be doing big things. The first thing you hear after getting off the train is about a piano just bought and paid for. Mrs. Randolph is the guiding genius that inspires these men to do their best. We expect a lot of help from these men in boosting the Wesley Bible Class Federation next spring. A big surprise is in store for all of us when we hear the reports of the organized classes over the Conference.

We have forty-nine other teacher training classes to organize before we get the fifty we are needing. Mrs. Randolph is the teacher of a class of seventeen. This class is studying Organization and Administration. Do not get the idea in your head that it is too near Conference to start the teachers and prayer meeting people on "The Training of the Devotional Life," by Kennedy and Meyer.

Talking about Conference, you know some good people think it is too near Conference to hold institutes. Judgment Day might slip up on me and what would I have to say? If you do not want to go to the trouble of helping get your teachers together for institute work, let me come and talk with them one at a time and give them the help they crave.

A district institute has been announced for the Durant District, to be held at Ackerman, Monday, the 27th. Institutes for four other places have been announced for this district with the hope of reaching a large number of the workers. These meetings ought to help conserve the results of the revival campaign held during the summer. I can say this, the men who are putting the emphasis upon teaching religion to all the people are rejoicing over their continued success in all the work of the church.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The past week has been spent with Brother Lane, at Rankin Street Church. Brother Lane is closing out his four years at Rankin Street, and this year bids fair to be the best of the four. We are hoping that our services there will be helpful.

It is not too late for you to observe Sunday School Day. We will be so glad for you to do so. If you do not think it advisable to have a program, please hold a children's service and take an offering for the Sunday School Board.

We need your help and you need to emphasize Christian Education in your community. I should be glad to hear from you in regard to Sunday school work.

Don't forget to promote those who need to be promoted. Do not let any child remain too long in any class or department.

We would be glad to hear from you, not only of the good things being done, but your criticisms, too.

Don't forget to pray for us.

Yours in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Sunday School Board will soon be in session at the Annual Conference, and it is hoped that every member of the Board will think through some definite plans for better work next year.

You will make report to C. V. Breithaupt, Alexandria, of your Sunday School Day offering. We are not going to write you every month about this offering. Meet this at once.

You will aid the pastors in getting good and full reports of your school. Superintendents will report to me.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.
CAROLINE HESS,
Elem. Supt.

FROM WEST MONROE, LA.

Dear Advocate: West Monroe made the following report last quarter: Finshed the church, installed the seats and lights at a cost of nearly $3000, bought a new piano for the Sunday school auditorium, furnished several Sunday school rooms, raised in cash unsubscribed over $5000, received 51 members into the church, organized two Epworth Leagues that are doing fine work, organized choir with paid directress.

We think by Conference we will report a hundred new members, as we have received eighty-one to date and have prospects for more. Over half received to date were on profession. More people pray in public than were ever known before.

We have enough money raised to assure the building of a church at an afternoon appointment.

Cordially,
H. W. LEDBETTER.

FROM FRANKLINTON, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Our meeting at Franklinton closed last Tuesday night after running thirteen days. Rev. R. A. Bozeman did the preaching and Brother Paul Templeton the singing. We had a fine attendance, and good interest. As a result of the meeting 18 were added to the church, and the membership was greatly revived. A fine work was done among our young people. We have had 32 accessions altogether at Franklinton, and 42 in Franklinton circuit.

Yours faithfully,
F. N. SWEENEY.

SICK WOMEN HEAR ME

You Can Be Free from Pain as I Am, if You Do as I Did.

Harrington, Me.—"I suffered with backache, pains through my hips and such a bearing down feeling that I could not stand on my feet. I also had other distressing symptoms. At times I had to give up work. I tried a number of remedies but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me more good than anything else. I am regular, do not suffer the pains I used to, keep house and do all my work. I recommend your medicine to all who suffer as I did and you may use my letter as you like."—Mrs. MINNIE MITCHELL, Harrington, Me.

There are many women who suffer as Mrs. Mitchell did and who are being benefited by this great medicine every day. It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains no narcotics or harmful drugs. It is made from extracts of roots and herbs and is a safe medium for women. If you need special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

Hens Lay While Moulting

First to lay is first to pay. "I used 'More Eggs' Tonic, and for the first time my hens laid through the moulting season," writes Mrs. C. Luginbuhl, of Norwood, Ohio. E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. Letters from many users tell how they actually got eggs during moulting! You, too, can make your hens moult fast, get eggs sooner and more eggs all fall and winter. This scientific tonic has been tried, tested and proven by over 400,000 chicken raisers. Try Reefer's "More Eggs" on his iron clad money-back guarantee of satisfaction.

If you wish to try this great profit-maker, simply write a postcard or letter to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 8259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and ask for his special free package $1.00 offer. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned at any time within 30 days, on request. So there is no risk. THE LAST DAYS OF DR. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Dear Brother Carley: I know papa's sudden death must have been a shock to you and many readers of the Advocate. He was sick such a short while. He filled his morning and night appointments, September 5, at Lake City, Miss. Not feeling well, he went in to Yazoo City the following morning. Drs. Swazye and Darrington, at the Y. C. Sanatarium, examined him and found him suffering with acute gall bladder trouble. He was at once put to bed. Heart action would not permit of an operation.

When he left the old home, on Friday, the 3d inst., he told mamma he had business to attend to, and not to be alarmed if he did not reach home (Phoenix) before Tuesday.

In Tuesday evening's mail came a card from papa (written by his nurse), saying he was at the Yazoo City Infirmary, but was feeling better, and hoped to return to Eagle Bend by the last of the week.

Mamma reached his bedside Wednesday, the 8th. The doctors thought of nothing alarming until Thursday, the 9th, at 7 a.m., when he fell into a stupor. Then the children were 'phoned for. What a shock to us all! John, Bascom, Frank, Mary (Mrs. Scott) and myself, left at once, in two cars, reaching his bedside in time for him to rouse and know and kiss each one. Then, in his ever cordial manner, he said, "Have seats and be comfortable." Then he lapsed into unconsciousness, from which he never roused. Gradually his strength left him and his breath became shorter, and, at 10:25 Thursday night, September 9, without a struggle, the pure, unselfish life went to its reward, as Brother Alford (who was untiring in all he could do), prayed a beautiful prayer.

While we know papa was prepared at any time the summons came, yet how hard to give him up! His own children, as well as the grandchildren, needed him in their homes. His visits were enjoyed so much. He lived such a true, open life; so patient and kind, and the good name he has always held!

The community at Phoenix had changed. So it was his request months ago not to be taken to the old graveyard.

Brother Alford asked that the body be at his home. So Friday morning after the body was prepared, the casket was taken to the parsonage. Then, at 2 p.m. Friday, services were held at the Methodist Church where for four years papa was pastor, after which the remains were placed on the train for Itta Bena, where, at 10 a.m., Saturday, the 11th inst., services were held at my home and the body laid to rest in Mr. Robertson's and my lot, where two of our little one's sleep.

Mamma is bearing the shock really well. She is now at the "old home" (John is with her), and will return to Itta Bena in a few days' time and make her home with us.

I am trying to bear my sorrow bravely, as I know papa would want me to.

STELLA HOLLOMAN ROBERTSON.

Eggs While Moulting

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Miss Hall in Meridian.

For a number of years past the Woman's Society and the Young Woman's Society of Central Methodist Church, Meridian, have had the privilege and honor of supporting a missionary in China.

The first was Miss Nevada Martin, who was successful in kindergarten work in Soo Chow. She was followed by Miss Olive Lipscomb, whose work was in the schools, and the past year has been principal of one of the leading colleges. She has recently returned for her furlough after five years' absence.

Our church now has the honor of claiming for its own another, Miss Marzie Hall, who has just sailed for Africa with Dr. and Mrs. Mumpower and three other young lady missionaries.

Miss Hall goes as the Centenary special from the Central Methodist Church.

We are glad to have the privilege and honor of supporting and caring for this lovely Christian girl who has given her life to the service of the Master in going to Africa.

Miss Hall was born and reared within the bounds of our Conference, and when quite a young girl she attended the Woman's College, Meridian, where she had kind, Christian influence, and there gave her heart and life to our Lord and His service. She had a two years' course in Scarritt Bible and Training School, that splendid home where body, mind and spirit are trained and prepared for world service. She was consecrated at the last meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council in April, and work was assigned her in Africa.

Miss Hall visited us in June; we wanted to know her and assist in her preparation for her long journey and her life in far away Africa. Loving hands tendered her a reception where she received many useful articles that will minister to her comfort.

When leaving home to begin her voyage she was accompanied on her way as far as Meridian by her sister, Miss Willie G. Hall, who is also preparing for missionary work.

At the home of Mrs. Sallie Ferguson there was an informal reception—friends met to say goodby and spend the last hours in sweet communion.

We are happy to call her our missionary and feel that the "Lord has anointed her to carry good tidings to those who are still in darkness," and we pray His blessings to descend upon and abide with her evermore.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Grand Cane.

Dear Readers: For a long time I have wanted to write you about our Missionary Society at Grand Cane.

I believe it is one of the oldest in the State, having been organized about twenty-one years ago. In all that time it has never had to be reorganized. It is unique in that almost every woman in our church is a member of the Missionary Society.

In fact, this is a "peculiar people." almost every woman in town is a member of one of our three Missionary societies—Methodist, Baptist or Cumberland Presbyterian—and so many of them tithe that the societies have sufficient funds for all calls without ever resorting to money-making plans. In our society all departments are at work.

The Study Class has almost completed that splendid little book, "Adventures in Faith in Foreign Lands."

We all enjoy the Woman's page. Brother Carley is giving us a fine paper.

Wishing all of God's blessings in our work. Mrs. S. J. DAVIES.

WOMEN WANTED.

This is truly the woman's century. Europe was for four years placarded with the sign, "Women Wanted." It came to be written on our own sky line, and women heard the call everywhere. It was her pre-war experience which gave her the ability to function so efficiently during the war. Her knitting, her surgical dressings, her millions of garments, her catering on such a colossal scale to weary and hungry soldier-boy defenders, the amount of work and wise organization she achieved are still a marvel.

She has more leisure now to look at her own plans and purposes as the conserver of the ideals of the race. Being more concerned with the simple interests of humanity than with the expansion of industry or the extension of trade, I doubt not but that as we understand more about the causes of war and as we adopt new national ideals we shall come to rejoice that we have something more potent than our silent influence to help in making the world secure from future bloody conflicts.

Women wanted! The world cry is no less insistent because the roar of our guns is stilled and the din of our battles is hushed. Women, real women, godly women are wanted. Look out as you respond to the call, O woman, and as you see a world of wretchedness and sin and want, where joy and beauty and holiness should dwell, be glad that you have come to the kingdom at such a time as this equipped to do battle for the great constructive forces that exalt a people and honor our God.

PAY THE CENTENARY PLEDGE.

The Centenary money and dynamic has already belted the globe. Around the whole wide world it is now—at this moment—spreading the gospel of Christ and the merciful ministrations of Christianity among suffering peoples.

It is doing the will of those who have paid the Centenary pledge—doing it in the name of the King.

Nothing can stay the onward marching of the Centenary cause except a failure to pay the pledges that have been made. This seems a remote pos-

REVIVAL AT WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH, BILOXI, MISS.

What! A revival among these shrimp-picking French, and oyster-shucking Bohemians at the Wesley House in Biloxi! Yes, indeed, and a genuine and thorough revival that reached the entire community! No "fuss and feathers nor frills nor furbelows," but just a real plain, old-fashioned revival. Of course, we held an old-time Methodist love feast and celebrated the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, but this is not all. We had real convictions and bright conversions.

A unique and interesting thing is that every one of the 25 members uniting with the church was converted at the meeting. No "swapping of members," and no proselyting from other churches. (Methodists don't steal sheep or goats, either!) It was planned to run the meeting only one week, but so great was the interest that the people demanded it be continued two weeks.

The singing was led by the Wesley House boys and girls and the personal work and friendly visiting were done by the five women workers, Misses Tinsley, Chapman, Freeland, Palmore and Ott. The preaching was done by Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Felicity Church, New Orleans. Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Biloxi, and Evangelist C. S. Shugard, of Birmingham, Ala., preached one sermon each, and Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, Rev. H. D. Hocutt, and the Pastor of Wesley Church, Rev. L. A. Darsey, rendered faithful service in prayer and in altar services.

The Wesley House and Church reach a population of about 3,000 persons, composed of French, Bohemians, Austrians, Poles, and Spanish, with a large percentage of native-born Americans. About 500 children are helped by the day nursery, play grounds and Sunday school and church.

The Wesley Memorial Church will be dedicated by Bishop W. F. McMurray about the last of September or first of October. This is the second meeting held here by the writer and we will be ready for the third next year. Quite a liberal offering was given by the brethren for this "parson." It was greatly appreciated, for it represented great self-sacrifice on the part of the workers here.

NOT BEGGING, BUT BUSINESS.

By a Paster.

While the Centenary campaign of stewardship was in progress, when the pastor was preaching on tithing, it became apparent that some very loyal members of the church, loyal in other respects, were becoming cold and even antagonistic toward the Centenary and especially toward the idea of tithing.

One man in particular worried the pastor. He was a Sunday school teacher, a "prayer meeting man," spiritual, highly respected in the church. He was a minute man also, but he gave up his badge and refused to serve longer.

The time drew near for the fourth quarterly conference, and the pastor wrote this brother asking if he wished to be renominated as a steward. The reply came back that he did not so desire, and furthermore would probably go to another church. The pastor saw he had made a mistake in writing him and sent a note begging pardon. This was followed by a pastoral call at his place of business. In the office they talked and knelt in prayer, parting with an agreement to work together.

A few days afterward the pastor, with another solicitor from out of town, visited the brother to secure his subscription for the Centenary. As they walked into the man's office, he looked up, smiled, and said, "You need not ask me what I am going to give to the Centenary: this is not a begging affair, this is business for the Kingdom: I am going to give $500."

"Do you mean it?" was the surprised pastor's response.

"Of course I do," said the layman, "and I am going to sign that other card, too," referring to the tithing card. This he did a little later, inserting the words "at least" before the words "the tenth of my income."

After pledging $500 to the Centenary, this man, who had opposed the tithing plan and had resigned as a minute man; who, moreover, had been paying only five cents a week for all the benevolences of the church; leaned back in his chair and said:

"I want to tell you something. About three weeks ago I asked myself the question whether I was master of my physical life or a slave. I was smoking considerably and decided to stop. I have stopped. It has been a struggle, but I have done it."

The pastor then asked this question, "How much a week did it cost you to smoke?"

"More than $2 a week," came the reply. "Now I can easily pay that subscription."

He is now an enthusiastic supporter of the Centenary, of tithing as an evidence of Christian stewardship, and of the great work of the Kingdom. The next Sunday after making this subscription, he made a minute man speech in his church, telling about his victory over the tobacco habit, and how it helped him to give to the Centenary.—Exchange.

ability indeed is that of the woman who can divert our minds. We may well thank God for the women.

The record in the printed pages of a report is simply astounding. The first impression one gets is a feeling of pride. The like of it was never known before. The question is, with this splendid possibility of accomplishing the task—regular tasks of former administrations—are we doing this as the most urgent of them. They will not have it be this.

The entire range of Centenary activities are now engaged in the public service by the Commission. The most careful investigation has been made by competent authorities, and the results have been the enthusiastic and cordial expressions of commendation from the bishops and the Board of Missions.

Now it is by the Centenary pledge. Two payments are now due, unless special arrangements were made. The flag of the battle against the world's evils have been thrown out. The forces are in the field. Missionaries are streaming across the seas. Churches, schools, hospitals, institutions are going up wherever Methodism is known. All of this must be maintained by our payments, or the Centenary program falls with a crash.

Pay the Centenary pledge promptly. Any delay keeps a missionary out of the field that long—and thousands may be thus prevented from ever hearing the gospel of Christ.

THE LEADERS AND THE LED.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

There has been much talk in recent years about the need of leaders in both church and State; and this talk has so fired ambition in many minds that we are in danger of having more leaders than followers. We certainly have an over-supply of men who aspire to lead others, but who are unwilling to follow anybody else. In fact we have too many leaders unless they were larger.

Both the leading political parties of the country had more candidates for the presidency than they knew what to do with, and most of the candidates were men of small caliber. Some were so obscure that even a man of intelligence and information would find it difficult to remember their names.

A somewhat similar condition obtains in the churches. We have had books written on "The Future Leadership of the Church," and specific processes have been prescribed for producing "future leaders." The thing has been quite overdone, and the subject needs reconsideration.

In the first place we should remind ourselves that not many leaders are necessary, and that no man can make himself a leader by merely saying, "Go to, I will now become a leader."

The great leaders, whose lives and labors have given them place in historic records, did not set out to be leaders at all; they became leaders by espousing great causes, and they drew followers after them because they aimed at objects which others desired should be attained.

Martin Luther, John Knox, and John Wesley did not set out to become leaders, but to accomplish certain great and worthy ends for the religious welfare of mankind. Men followed their leadership because they stood for something which commended itself to the conscience of their contemporaries.

Into the lives of these mighty men personal ambition did not enter. They did not aspire to leadership, nor did they dream of the prominence into which they might come by their efforts. They were leaders before they knew it, and found themselves burdened with the heavy responsibilities of a leadership which they did not seek.

A man who goes about making himself a leader may become a politician or a demagogue, but a real and worthy leader of men, he can never become. He misleads far more than he leads; for he moves not under the constraint of great principles, but under the impulses and designs of selfish ambition. He seeks to use others for his own aggrandizement, rather than to serve God or bless men. Spurious leadership may be easily detected by this test. It wobbles and seeks to secure applause and position; but it never toils and sacrifices and suffers for a great cause.

Self-sacrifice is the essence of all worthy leadership. So Jesus taught when he said to his disciples, "He that will be greatest among you, let him be your servant." And he exemplified his teaching by his life. He has become the leader of the human race because he suffered for it as no other man ever has. His crown of thorns has been turned into a royal diadem by the irresistible power of moral and spiritual law. When an unthinking multitude sought to put a political crown on his head, and make him a king, he put away the suggestion with the utmost emphasis and the most peremptory refusal. He knew that real kings could not be made that way. Herods and Pilates and petty potentates of every sort can be set up on political pedestals by processes of popular favor, or by skillful and selfish scheming; but real royalty is not so produced.

It is a characteristic of spurious leaders that they seek to discredit all who have gone before them, and they set aside the most fixed principles under pretenses that they have discovered truths which were never known until they appeared and proclaimed them. Radicalism is their boast and innovations are their stock in trade. So Absalom sought to discredit his father David, and to steal away the hearts of Israel with many fair promises of what he would do, if only he were king. And, sad to say, there were many who were foolish enough to attach themselves to him. He brought on a dreadful civil war, disturbed and damaged the nation, and came at last to a shameful end.

The great leaders of the human race, by whose toils and sufferings all progress has been made, never called themselves "progressives." They harked back to great principles of righteousness from which men had departed and sought to reenthrone those principles in the lives of the people of their day.

Jesus said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." John the Baptist, who went before him and the apostles who came after him, spoke after the same conservative manner.

Luther and Knox and Wesley were great conservatives. They proposed no new religion, but proclaimed anew the abiding truth which was held by the glorious company of the Apostles, the goodly fellowship of the prophets, the noble army of the martyrs, and the holy church throughout the world. They were not parvenus, but prophets of God, who preached the eternal gospel of Jesus Christ, who is "the same yesterday, today and forever." Defending what he preached, Wesley said, "It is the old religion as old as the Reformation, as old as Christianity, as old as Moses, as old as Adam."

Some among us, who are disposed to discredit everything belonging to the past, fondly call themselves "forward-looking men," and never weary of talking of the great things that will come to pass in the immediate future into which they are just about to lead us. But no man can do anything that will bless the future who breaks with the past. History is a continuous movement, and it is not made by a series of disjointed fragments of human effort, without connection with anything that went before and incapable of connecting with anything that will come after. Constructive leadership constructs its mighty works out of materials produced and prepared by its predecessors; it recognizes the truth which Jesus uttered when he said to his disciples, "Other men have labored and ye have entered into their labors."

The [illegible] which we now need most, and which we should know most truly, is that of men who call us back to the [illegible] of [illegible] and good government. A period of [illegible], such as that through which the world is now passing, calls for fundamental truth as the only means by which to solve its problems and cure its disorders.

We have had too much hysterical leadership during the last few years. Turgid declamations have caught the ears of the people with all sorts of misleading devices for "reconstructing the world," but the world can not be reconstructed after that manner. Sensationalists can not soothe and save a sorrow-stricken race. They can not manufacture a rainbow out of good out of untried innovations.

Most of us do not belong to the class called "leaders;" but are of the led. But while we are not wise enough to lead, we ought to have sense enough to choose leaders who are fit for us to follow. And if we are wise enough to be sensible followers, we will seek men of fixed principles to guide us.

In following any man we should endeavor to discover where he is going and what he is leaving behind. Many men who are aspiring to leadership, just now, are headed for destruction. They are Absalons, and not many years hence they will be found hanging by their hair, dead and disgraced in the forest, and forsaken even of the donkey upon which they sought to ride into power. For this is as certain as fate.

What has become of the wild leaders of twenty-five years ago? They filled much space in the newspapers then, but now they fill graves unmarked and unknown, or they live on in an obscurity as dark and unlifting as the tomb.

And the vain idols of today will go the same way. To follow them is as foolish as the folly of Israel, when the descendants of Jacob made them a golden calf and declared that the stupid creature of their hands was the god which had led them out of Egypt. They could dance about it; but it could lead them nowhere, either out of Egypt, or back to Egypt.

Israel in the wilderness was safe only when obeying the moral law and following the pillar of cloud and fire in which the presence of Jehovah [illegible]. And we too must follow God and keep His commandments, if we are to escape the perils which beset us in these disquieted days, and come forth into an era of order and security.

ly prone, when we cannot secure the kind of men we should like, to take the kind we can get. Instances could be cited of men nominated for the presidency and other important offices, not because they are manifestly qualified for the positions, but because they seem to be the only ones who can be nominated, or because the votes can be secured for them; and this, too, when a host of better qualifications are available. When a Conference knows the work cannot be supplied unless these applicants be nominated, when these men seem to be the only available men, he knows little of human nature, his own included, who is surprised that a vote of two-thirds is given.

This is the condition the church faces, and the remedy it is now proposed once more to lay bare before our people the need and to call upon them for seemingly, though not really, large contributions for our educational institutions—seemingly large when looked at alone, not really large when the present distress and our great ability are considered.

Our people demand, as they have a right to demand, a ministry in every respect equal to our opportunities. The fact most generally overlooked is that they themselves must provide what is necessary to meet this demand. The church has no other earthly means than those which its members place in its hands. It is not reasonable to call on the church for preachers fitted to do the work, and at the same time to give the church nothing with which to fit them upon. What would be thought of the intelligence of the nation that called for soldiers and refused or hesitated to supply arms and munitions? The church will find the men when the members supply the means, because our Lord has never failed, nor will He ever fail to move men to do His work.

It would be waste of time to discuss the advantages of an educated ministry. The whole country is rapidly growing in its appreciation of accurate knowledge, and especially of training the mind. Starve the pulpit and you empty the pew and close the church and abandon religion. Much yet remains to be done to make clear that a diploma, no matter where obtained, is not, never has been, and never can be an infallible evidence of an education. An error, perhaps the most difficult to extirpate, is that graduation is education. We have been deafened and benumbed by the ringing cry of "units" and "years"—mere quantities. Education is not a quantity, though undoubtedly it takes a larger quantity of time to attain it than most men suppose; it is predominantly a matter of quality, of long, hard, patient, persistent, painful work, such work as very few men are willing to do. No wonder there are so few really educated men, nor that those few lead the world.

Christian education, difficult as it is to state its factors, and especially its difference, is an addition to simple education. It includes all that is meant by education, and much more. It brings into its sphere God, His revelation, His will as our rule of action, duty, our need of Him to make a life and to live a life, character, and clear, true, pure ideals full of moving power to strive to make them real. More than twenty years ago for a pamphlet, "Suggestions for Education Day," published by our Board of Education I wrote substantially that Christian education was the highest possible apprehension of truth and the clearest possible conception of duty, together with the best possible equipment, intellectual and spiritual, for loyalty to God in the life-long service of men.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" There is the question put. The great heart of the Master longed for love. Nothing else sufficed Him. Service is great, sacrifice is greater, but love is greatest, greatest because all-inclusive. It shuts in all the best, and shuts out all the worst. Peter, wayward, recreant, impulsive, willing to fight and die for his Lord, must learn that love is greater, mightier than death. Its crystal light shines

REV. JOHN FRANKLIN WYNN.

By Rev. W. Winans Drake.

The ending of the life of a man like the Rev. John F. Wynn deserves more than a passing notice. The whole story of his life and ministry is a record of unusual fidelity, consecration and that kind of success that is more lasting than conspicuous. If one were asked to name the main outstanding characteristic of his life, there would be no hesitation in saying that he was preeminently a man of God.

John Franklin Wynn was born in Livingston County, near Athens, Ala., February 10, 1836. He was the sixth of a family of eleven children born to John Henry Irby Wynn and Frances Martha Brownley. While neither of his parents was a member of the church during his early childhood, their lives were guided by strict Christian principles, they were careful readers of the Bible, the father making it a point to read the sacred volume through every year; they were regular in habits of prayer, and their home was the frequent stopping place for the consecrated itinerants who rode the surrounding circuit. The following incident recorded by him and evidently treasured in his memory, illustrates the vital result of the godly lives and efforts of those pioneers of the church. He says: "When about four years of age, I remember very distinctly that one of these godly men took me upon his knee and talked so kindly with his hand upon my head that I was impressed with the importance of living a Christian life, and felt that I had rather be a Methodist preacher than anything in the world."

In 1850, at the age of fourteen, he attended the Cambridge Camp Meeting, where his parents regularly went as tenters, going, as he says, determined to seek salvation; and after some days of earnest seeking near the hour of midnight, he realized God's forgiving grace, and at once united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in whose membership he spent seventy faithful years. Up to this time neither of his parents was a member of the church, but the following year, at the same camp ground, and doubtless inspired by the example of their son, they were both converted and joined the church. Just one year after this happy event, at the same camp ground, the mother was taken sick and was carried home to die. His father died in 1854, leaving the young man at 18 without father or mother.

In 1857 he moved to Louisiana, and shortly afterward, in August of the same year, he was licensed to preach by the late Rev. Lewis A. Reed. The following winter he was received on trial into the Louisiana Conference, thus beginning a ministry of sixty-three years, within its ranks, of which forty-three were spent in the effective list. In 1859 he was admitted into full connection and ordained deacon by Bishop Andrew. In 1861 he was elected to elders' orders, but on account of the confusion incident to the Civil War, no bishop was present to ordain him, and so his ordination was delayed till near the end of the following Conference year.

In December, 1862, he was happily married to Miss Paulina Wynn, of Waterproof, La., who for nearly fifty-six years was not only a faithful companion to him, but an effective helper in his labors, whose quiet and saintly life did much to add to the success of his work. She preceded him to the better world by about two years.

Of the children born of this marriage, six grew up to mature years and all of these are still living, fulfilling in earnest Christian lives the hopes and prayers of the godly home in which they were reared. Of these Rev. Robert H. Wynn, D.D., is a member of the Louisiana Conference; Mrs. Octavia Rickey is the wife of Rev. H. W. Rickey also of the Louisiana Conference. The others are J. W. Wynn, of Rayne, La., Miss Alice Wynn, of New Orleans, Miss Mary Wynn, of Crowley, and Mrs. E. W. Wall, of Baton Rouge. A sister also survives him, Mrs. Ellen Edwards, of Alexandria, La. Another sister was married to the late Rev. B. F. White and was the mother of Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria.

The charges served by Brother Wynn were: 1858, Floyd, as junior preacher; 1859, Atchafalaya; 1860, Floyd again, as junior preacher; 1861, Chicot Pass; 1862, Trinity circuit, junior preacher. Immediately following his marriage at the close of this year, he was stationed at Waterproof, but the county being soon occupied by Federal troops, making it impossible to carry on the work, he was changed to Oakley in Franklin Parish, where he remained for nearly three years. In 1866 he served the Atlanta charge, and in 1867 and 1868 the same charge with Montgomery added; 1871-1874, Rapides circuit; 1875-1878, Columbia; 1879-1880, Washington; 1881-1882, Plaquemine-Brulee; 1883-1886, Oak Ridge; 1887-1890, Montgomery; 1891-1894, Pineville; 1895-1896, East Baton Rouge; 1897-1900, East Feliciana. At the close of this year, the forty-third of his active service, he was granted a superannuate relation at his own request, on account of failing health, and spent the last twenty years of his life in Crowley, La. At the ripe age of eighty-four, "having served his generation by the will of God, he fell on sleep."

A study of the facts behind these simple chronological annals reveals a life rich in piety, abundant in labors, and notable for self-sacrificing fidelity. It is noticeable that in six different charges he remained the full four years allowed by the law of the church, and that, in several instances, he served a second pastorate in the same charge after an interval of a few years. All of these charges, served so faithfully, were inconspicuous and offered scanty financial remuneration; in several instances in his early years as a junior preacher, he was left by the departure of his senior with the whole responsibility of the charge; often hardships and sacrifices were increased by reason of war and overflow; in one or two instances he found it necessary to add to the scanty stipend by teaching school; but through all these difficulties there was no complaint, and in spite of them the growing family was educated and prepared for useful life and service.

He was never characterized as a preacher of unusual ability and he never occupied prominent places, but wherever he had served, there was left behind the universal and emphatic feeling that he was a man of God. He was preeminently a man of prayer. In frequent seasons of private prayer and Bible reading, he waited on the Lord, literally carrying "everything to God in prayer." His fervent and direct petitions in the homes of his people left a benediction behind them. He seemed always ready for personal work, taking advantage of chance meetings as well as in his regular visiting to bring men to Christ, and scattered throughout Louisiana may be found a great company of those who were saved or blessed by his untiring ministry.

Perhaps the best illustration of the genuineness of his work is to be found in his life as a superannuate. This closing period of his life was a constant and spontaneous ministry to human need, and his humble home became a resort for those who needed sympathy or counsel or help. An illustration of his quiet influence in these days is to be found in the story of a woman, formerly a Roman Catholic, who was converted in a union meeting. When asked what church she wished to join, she said, "I want to join the church Brother Wynn belongs to."

His own religious experience was deep and satisfying. During his earlier ministry, while pastor at Columbia, his attention was directed to the experience of perfect love, and he earnestly sought and claimed the experience of entire sanctification. His life of whole-hearted consecration and happy obedience through the forty-five years that followed, furnishes the best commentary upon this profession.

He passed away on August 4, 1920, and was buried on the day following in the Crowley Cemetery with appropriate services conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. W. Tucker, assisted by Revs. E. C. Gunn and A. I. Townsley. Great crowds of his neighbors of every faith and every station assembled in sincere sorrow to offer the last tribute of affection to "Brother Wynn."

He has left to his family and friends, and companions in the ministry of Jesus Christ, a precious heritage of faith and piety, and has gone on to the blessed and eternal fellowship of those "who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

PERAMBULATING STILL.

To appreciate the vastness of the North American Continent, one has to travel across it before its immensity can be realized. Our party left New Orleans on Saturday, September 4, at 8:30 a.m., and, with the exception of seven hours and a half stop in Chicago for train connection—which time we used to splendid advantage in visiting friends and co-workers in the International Sunday School Association—we have been traveling constantly since and it is now Tuesday afternoon and our first stop, Bouff, is still 18 hours' ride ahead of us and our terminus, Vancouver, B. C., is 560 miles beyond Bouff.

Our party is traveling by way of the Soo-Canadian Pacific R. R., which carries us across the Canadian provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. At present we are riding through Saskatchewan and all morning we have passed fields and fields and fields of wheat, all cut and shocked and waiting for the threshers to bag the golden grain; but Canada is like our own dear country in that laborers are not sufficient to go round, so each farmer has to wait his turn—and take his chances with the elements. The country itself is very familiar to our eye in that if we did not know we were in Canada and glanced out the car window we would think we were riding through the rice country of dear old Louisiana, except that away off in the distance, to our left, you can see the hazy outline of the foothills. In fact, since leaving Moose Jaw, we have been climbing a steady grade which will grow heavier and heavier until Stevens, the summit of the Rockies, is reached; but long before then, in fact at Bouff, our first stop, we will be in the midst of the mountains and drinking in to our hearts' delight all out-of-doors made glorious by the handiwork of God.

You cannot tell much of a country by viewing it from the observation car of a trans-continental cannon ball; yet as you run through villages and stop at towns and wait at division points you can keep your eyes and ears open and note at least that there is a difference. The most striking sudden change to the eye of our party is the absence of the "nigger"—even the dining car waiters are Canadian boys, and the porter in our car is one of these modern "colored gentlemen" who has charge of this car from St. Paul to Vancouver." The only real "nigger" we have seen is a porter in charge of the tourist car. There is a tremendous lack of trees, as this whole country is either flat or rolling prairie and, look as you may, you are rewarded only once in an afternoon by the sight of one, and then when you get close to it you are prone to class it as a bush. In many places each side of the roadbed is paralleled by snow fences to hold the snowdrifts back, so that winter railroad traffic may not be delayed. The people are large in stature and have the appearance of being firm, solid, substantial, and this cold climate has given them bright, rosy cheeks that make both the men and women fair to look upon.

Getting into Canada by rail was very easy. The Pullman conductor gave each passenger a slip on which to record his or her place of citizenship and distinction. The slips were gathered up that night and on arrival at Portal at 5:15 the following morning the customs officers received the slips and examined the baggage without disturbing us from our sleep, for which every one was very grateful.

The Canadian country through which we have come is strictly a wheat and cattle one until you begin to reach the foothills about 30 miles west of Calgary, and then for 24 hours as you ride through this wonder world and for 500 miles view snowy peaks, ruggid precipices, waterfalls, foaming torrents, glaciers, and lakes like great sapphires and turquoise set in pine-clad mountains you realize that nature has thrown up the Canadian Rockies on so vast a scale that the human mind can with difficulty grasp their greatness. Among all these wonders that God has placed in this wonder world, again and again do you come face to face with the realization that man and God are co-workers to overcome the obstacles of life and thus make living all that God intended it should be. One of the most notable examples of this co-working of God and man is in the engineering feat of the "spiral tunnels"—the principle used is the same as the railroad in the United States put into practice in the famous "Georgetown Loop" in Colorado. The track enters the first tunnel 3,255 feet in length, and after turning a complete circle and passing over itself emerges into daylight 54 feet higher. The track, turning and going up, crosses a river and enters the second tunnel 2,291 feet long, and again making a complete circle and passing over itself, it comes out 50 feet higher and then continues up the side of the mountain. In the old days—about 20 years ago—5 huge locomotives making about 5 miles an hour were required to haul the passenger train which to-day requires only two; and twenty-five miles an hour are covered because of the tunnelling—and all this, too, where as late as 1883 Sir Sanford Fleming records that he and his guides and his cayuses were "from five to eight hundred feet high on a path from ten to fifteen inches wide, and at some points almost obliterated, with slopes above and below so steep that a stone would roll into the torrent in the abyss below."

Until the end of 1916, the railway climbed over the top of Rodgers pass through a gorge, subject in winter to heavy snow slides, against which the track was protected by four miles of snowsheds. All this is now a thing of the past because Connaught Tunnel, the longest tunnel in the world, and double tracked, pierces its way through Mt. Macdonald on so straight a line of five miles that its entrances are never out of sight.

In all this wonder world the Dominion Government is constantly opening up the spectacular country and making it accessible to the outside world. It already has set aside four national parks, in which there are nearly 200 miles of wonderful carriage roads, and innumerable pony and foot trails, over which the tourist may wander and at every turn see the Rockies with shining peaks against the horizon, or behold the long transverse valleys down which the foaming torrents flow, or look upon the spray from a 300-foot cataract, or gaze down into a canyon—and always is the sight awe-inspiring and there is naught else for man to do but to exclaim with the Psalmist, "Unto thee do I lift up my eyes, O thou that sittest in the heavens! Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised. The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein."

So much for what we have seen en route. The stopping places are even more unique—but of them in my next. THE PERAMBULATOR.

REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN, D.D.—AN APPRECIATION.

By H. Walter Featherstun.

We met when small boys; again when we were larger boys; and then when young men; and all through the years since then I have known him intimately, and have loved him, for he was worthy. I entered the Conference two or three years earlier than he; but since his entry into the Conference we have been much associated; we were together in two cabinets—I have been his presiding elder and his successor in two pastorates. I found that his people loved him, for he was worthy. In the homes of his people he was tender, loving, and wonderfully helpful. The little children were always very fond of him, and he led them to Christ; and the poor loved him and followed him Christ-ward.

He was thoroughly a Christian, yet as free from cant and display as he was from sin. He was a manly Christian, strong in faith, clear in his concept of Christianity, following the Christ humbly, yet bravely, and loving his fellow-man tenderly and strongly. It is about true that "none knew him but to love him." This was specially evident when he, having come to that crucial time that comes to all of us who live long enough, when he felt that he could no longer say to the cabinet: "I will go where you send me," and in a spirit of splendid chivalry asked to be located; but his request met a chorus of "noes," and he was given instead an honorable though unasked superannuation.

My boyhood friend, my preacher brother, my comrade, my co-worker is gone on before me. Bright was the path he trod, and buoyant and joyous was his going on it. I have heard nothing of the manner of his passing over; but my heart assures me that "he died as he lived." He waits us in the glorious beyond.

"WORK DAY" FOR THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

In accordance with the custom of the Methodists of Louisiana, established for several years, and authorized by the Louisiana Annual Conference, the second Saturday in October is "Work Day." This is followed on Sunday as Harvest Day, when, in each church and Sunday school in the State, collections are to be taken for the Orphanage. This is understood, of course, to be for the maintenance of the work at the Orphanage—to meet the expense of feeding, clothing, schooling, housing and the general care of the 130 children in the institution. As no collectors for this cause are sent out, and the church makes no other provision for this work, the Orphanage must depend on the proceeds secured from the observance of this day for the necessary means to do the work during the winter months.

It is, therefore, very urgent that all our people observe this occasion and contribute as liberally as possible for this cause. Do not forget, Saturday, October 9, is "Work Day"—Sunday, the 10th, is "Harvest Day." If all will do their part, there will be no lack and our work can go forward without let or hindrance.

We now have 130 children in the home—they are all healthy and strong, full of life and vigor. All of school age are in school. Our children are being taught at the Orphanage through the seventh grade. About twenty attend high school and several are in the Louisiana Industrial. Our children must be fed, clothed, sent to school, kept warm and comfortable, and everything necessary for their well-being done. This all costs heavily—more this year than ever before. So, if our work does not suffer, our people must be not less generous than in other years. So we appeal to you again to do your utmost.

Appreciating the loyalty and devotion of our many friends, and trusting our people to rally to our support, I am, Gratefully,

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Supt. Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.
Ruston, La.

A CHALLENGE TO THE MINISTRY.

The failure of the intellectual appeal to transform lives, to create a virile righteous character, is so apparent that argument on that score is well-nigh vain. The half-hearted condition of the American people to-day, in spite of their advantages, their culture, their wealth, and their benevolence, in the face of the greatest opportunity in history and the most potent call of ages, is a living illustration of what I mean. I do not refer to the few great souls who from the beginning have seen the vision and opportunity, and with prophetic voice have endeavored to arouse a slumbering nation; nor to the many hundreds of thousands, only a modicum of the whole body of our people, who from the start have bared their bosoms to the great sacrifice. I refer to the easy-going masses.

If you gentlemen could enter the workroom of some of our industrial establishments at the hour when mechanics are off duty, and could listen for one hour to the conversation, the debates that there take place, you would be astounded and dismayed at the illogical processes of the average intellect, at the immoral reasoning, the lack of economic sense, the [illegible] that there find expression. You would be surprised to know how many of our [illegible] workingmen have become so [illegible] in their moral and intellectual processes that they can heartily sympathize with the Bolshevik view that the looting of great banks, the stealing of millions that do not belong to them, are highly moral acts. You would get your eyes opened to the fact that there is spreading over the world today a great wave of hysteria which is uprooting moral standards, and that our own beloved country is in danger from these forces.

What the American people need, what they will continue to need, and what the whole world needs, is the voice of the prophets of the living God, who have received their message as it were in living, vital communion behind the cloud on Sinai; they need to be faced with the hammer stroke of "Thou shalt" and "Thou shalt not," by a voice as of one having authority, and to be rounded up in the face of great sins and sinful tendencies with the bold, face-to-face hold-up, "Thou art the man."

For such a message and such a mission no mollycoddles are wanted. No hair-splitting theology will be tolerated. No compromise with influential pewholders, no lowering of the bars to money bags, however threatening, should even be thought of. The times call for the preaching of the Word, as a positive faith, for reproof, for rebuke, for exhortation, since the times are here when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts do they try to gather teachers having itching ears. Such teachers are in abundance everywhere, notably within a mile of this spot. I believe with Phillips Brooks that "there must be a man behind every sermon." I go one step further and affirm that behind that man must be the spirit of the living Christ.—Herbert H. Fletcher in the Boston Transcript.

PERFECT SELF GIVING.

Yes, the one perfect human life was one of perfect self-giving, and the Howards who have gone down into our prisons with the sweet, cleansing words of the gospel; the Grace Darlings, who have plunged into the seething seas to rescue shipwrecked mariners; the Whitmores, Booths, and Toynbees who have spent their days and nights in the reeking slums looking for the jewels that have fallen from the Master's crown; the Queen Louisas who have left their palaces of luxury and fashion and have gone down amid their subjects to carry hope and inspiration to them, the Livingstones and Patons who have given themselves to cannibals and savages, because they saw in them the possibilities of divine sonship—all these have gained the beauty and sublimity of their lives from self-giving, and they have gained the inspiration for that self-giving from looking to him who died for men in his self-giving.

Let me say in closing that this law also holds good in the spiritual life of man. We give our souls to God, and he gives them back to us clothed with beauty and filled with eternal life, his own life. We die unto self and live unto God. When we truly give ourselves to God, he takes us and puts us into the world of things and persons round about us, and thus gives us back to ourselves, through things and persons, beautified and glorified. Fred G. Caldwell.

TWO DAYS IN NEW ORLEANS.

(The following article appeared in the Texas Christian Advocate of September 16. It was written by Mr. A. T. Wilson, better known as "Tom," the genial advertising manager of the paper from which we clip it. Doubtless many of our readers will be interested in this glimpse of "old-time" New Orleans.—Editor.)

Forty years is not long, looking backward, but it seems far off looking ahead. Forty years ago I bade adieu to New Orleans. Horace Greeley's advice, "Go West, young man," was accepted literally. So in quest of "fame and fortune" I cast my lot in Texas. I've been "patient and long-suffering." At times I have grown weary of the chase. The end of the rainbow has not yet been reached. Way off yonder "lies fame and fortune," but for full forty years I've trudged on and on, only to discover "a mirage."

But back to New Orleans—the scene of my boyhood. Yes, it was there I met and wooed the sweetest flower that ever bloomed in the Crescent City. She, too, came to Texas and for 42 years shared my "joys and sorrows" and then faded away, to blossom again in the garden not made with hands, where I hope to meet and woo her again. The first fruit of a happy union was born in New Orleans and the best mother that any boy ever had lived and died in that city. There is much sentimentally to tie me on to the great city, but only sentimentally. To one accustomed to the "push and hustle" of Dallas, it seems to be living in the past. Since coming to Texas, frequent trips have been made to the old home town but in later years the visits have grown few and far between. Recently en route to Blue Ridge, N. C., a stop of two days was made there. It seemed longer, though. Oh, yes, there were the old, familiar scenes, with only a few exceptions, in the business section. The same old buildings along Canal Street. It is true some of them had undergone slight alterations to adapt them to the needs of new tenants, and old firm names had given way to a new generation of tradesmen. It must not be gathered from what is written here that New Orleans is dead- not by a whole lot—the South's greatest city has been enjoying a long "siesta" only. It is waking up, though, and in the next decade will surprise the Nation. On Canal, Carondelet, St. Charles and Camp Streets some few "landmarks" have passed away and office buildings of the "sky-scraper" variety have been erected. These buildings are modern, of course, and compare favorably in point of conveniences, if not in height, to some of the Dallas office buildings. But what a difference in the residence section! On St. Charles, Tulane and many other uptown streets veritable palaces have taken the places of the fine homes of yonder days. Perhaps no city in America can boast of finer boulevards or handsomer homes. There's where New Orleans "shines" and on the whole globe or around its edges can there be found a finer people.

The writer, returning to New Orleans from Georgia directly after the surrender in 1865, though a mere boy, became the support of his mother and younger brothers and a sister. After a short season in a prominent Canal Street dry goods store as "cash-boy" he entered the shipping business as messenger in a towboat office, in which business he remained until coming to Texas—not, however, as messenger all the while. In fact, he rose to the position of levee agent of the tow-boat association, skipper of a ferry boat plying between the third district and Algiers and finally trod the upper deck of a lake steamer. Years have come and years have gone, but the love for the boating days is still rampant in this heart and will so continue until time ends with him. The towboat business now lives in memory. No longer do the big sailing vessels call at the "passes for orders." Steamships, some of the regular lines but mostly the "tramp" variety, have superseded the sailing vessels and the powerful tugs of other days have been "junked" for lack of occupation. So, too, with the demand for rapid transit, the big mogul with its trail of cars invaded New Orleans and with its advent the great river packets which navigated the Father of Waters have gone away. Or, if one could hearken back to the days of the Robert E. Lee, Natchez, Richmond, [illegible] Fairgould, Jno. W. Cannon, Grey Eagle, Gen. Keppler and a score of other mighty "side-wheelers" that made weekly trips to "Vicksburg and the Bends" and made for New Orleans a reputation that was the envy of all ports. These days are gone, never to come again. Then, too, the levee front was lined with sailing vessels, [illegible] barks, brigs and schooners in the busy season were moored two and three-tier deep from [illegible] street in the third district to "Bullshead" uptown. The levee was free of house obstructions in those days and except for the bends in the river a full view could be obtained along the entire front. Not so now. It has become modernized. The levee is housed-in and the broad visage is no more. The writer could not repress the desire to visit the "front" once again. Instead of the mighty fleets of days agone, one little "sternwheel" steamer lay broadside to the wharf discharging cargo, and several small coast boats (gasoline [illegible]) were discharging and receiving freight.

The visitor to New Orleans is impressed with its cleanliness. It is quaint and in many respects is "foreign." It is the latter condition that suggests the "long siesta." The French market, the "show place" for the first-time visitor, bears no resemblance to the French Market of forty years ago. It was then a scene of animation, a gathering place for the nations of the world. A visit to the French Market Sunday morning, if for no other reason than to sit at a "coffee stand" and partake of the famous French "dripped coffee" and the delightfully crisp cakes that were served with it, was a great event looked forward to. Yes, coffee is served there now, but the "crisp, flaky" cakes are no longer in evidence; and the coffee is not the same. There, too, were vacant stalls in the market, a condition unknown in the palmy days. The fat "Creole" with wooden shoes was absent, but in his place was the ordinary every-day butcher. No, the French market was different to the writer. The negro at the head of St. Ann Street, who, in his boyhood, the "good" Indian and his squaw gathered to sell their wares, was occupied by [illegible] of the modern type. The writer was disappointed, as he wished to buy a few blowguns for his grandchildren. Nowhere, but in New Orleans has he ever seen a "blowgun" and doubtless the present generation in New Orleans has never known the pleasure of shooting one. But why ruminate on the past? History as written and to be written will deal with what has gone before and what is to come. The writer is no historian.

Reaching New Orleans Sunday morning, he took an early train for Slidell, La., just across the lake, to visit a niece who is living there, and returned to New Orleans about 6 p. m. On entering the hotel where a reservation had been made, he met a Dallas friend, C. M. Crookshank, treasurer of Tyler Street Church, of which church the writer is a member. Cliff was on his initial trip to New Orleans and had much yet to see and talk about. He was very lonesome and perhaps never before have I been so warmly greeted by a friend. After supper together, we went to First Church, as it is now known, but to this "old-timer" it's Carondelet Street Church, and can never be any other. Forty years ago last November, at a Wednesday night prayer meeting, the saintly Dr. J. B. Walker received Him into this church. Are there any living now who were members then or about that time? You will say no. So would I have said no had I not seen and talked with two of the old boys that night—C. H. (Pettie) Wasson and Sam Montgomery. Both are stewards, the former being president of the Board. Old Sister Bustillos, now palsied and basking in the shadow, still lives. She is ninety years old and loves to sing the old songs as she did in the days when this writer was a youngster. Pettie, Sam and I went over the roll as we recalled their names, but only three answered "present." It was a great meeting between old friends. Rev. R. H. Harper is pastor of the church. He is in his third year, and is a strong preacher, and is popular with his people. But somehow I didn't feel quite at home in the church. There was lacking that democracy of former days. A formalism that never did seem to jibe with the Methodist Church was there. No, it was not the ritual, though it is also out of place in a good old-fashioned Methodist Church, but a real honest-to-goodness, up-to-date "trecked choir." While Rev. Gibbs Mood was at Deaton he had a "trecked choir." He claimed, however, not to be responsible for it and any one that knows him is willing to believe that is so. At any rate he don't "trock 'em" at Sulphur Springs. Bertie said it was a tryout in First Church, and further comment will be reserved until the result of the experiment is learned. I had the pleasure of meeting the pastor, both at the church and at the Advocate office the day following, where I called to see Brother Chalmers, publisher, and Brother Curley, the editor of the New Orleans Advocate. Hugh Jamieson, a boyhood friend, and member of the Carondelet Street Church, was at one time publisher of the Advocate. He has long since answered the "roll call up yonder." His widow is my cousin. She has reared several boys and girls and they are all Christians and active in church work. One boy, Hugh Jamieson, Jr., is a preacher. Mrs. Jamieson is a valued member of Carrollton Avenue Church. During the writer's time in old Carondelet it was served by Dr. J. B. Walker, Dr. Tudor, Jno. Mathews of sainted memory; Linus Parker (later Bishop); Dr. Carradine and others whose names are forgotten. Old Carondelet was the cradle in which rocked the Knickerbockers, Haley Worden and Frank and Fitzgerald Parker. Dr. J. L. Pierce, now living in Dallas at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. D. Blaylock, was a favorite pastor of that great church. That, however, was after the writer's time in New Orleans. It was good to have been there that night, even though the pleasure was marred because of "trocks." Lots could be written of New Orleans; much of its past history is familiar to the writer. Reconstruction days, the Republican carpet-baggers, the riot of July, 1866, the 14th of September battle for independence, the overthrow of the Packard government and the final victory of Governor Nicholls and the passing of the Government to its own people. Yes, there events and many more could be recalled, but time and space will not admit.

In the Odd Fellows Cemetery our first child was laid to rest; there also lie the remains of several brothers and sisters and close relatives. On the recent visit I passed this sacred place—just passed by. In Mobile, Ala., another spot is made sacred to me, for there lies that good mother, beside her mother and father, in Magnolia Cemetery. There is much to endear me to New Orleans. At times I like there once more, but then—the alarm goes off, and I know it is time to get up. A. T. W.

NO ROOM.

Here, for instance, is this busy scene of college life, with its absorbing interests, its ambitions and competitions, its daily demands. It seems a beautiful thing to be won thus to the scholar's life, and to be indifferent to all other ambitions and desires; and yet it sometimes happens that the scholar's life leaves no room for the very interests which make any life worth living. Leisure finds itself crowded out, peace of mind is lost, friendships languish, professional life which was once liberty becomes more like imprisonment, until, as Mr. Darwin touchingly records how his mind by degrees grew atrophied toward the music and poetry he once loved, a learned man sometimes loses the capacity to care for the things which give meaning and color to life. He has missed the end of life in his pursuit of the means of life. Instead of seeking the truth that makes men free, he has been tempted by the truth that shuts men in, and when the great ideal interests come knocking at his door and asking a generous welcome, there is no room for them within his absorbed and stunted mind.—Francis G. Peabody.

The Last Race

THE BOY THAT LAUGHS.

I know a funny little boy—
The happiest I've ever found;
His face is like a book of joys,
Although his clothes are torn.

I saw him tumble in the mud,
And waited for to hear him cry;
But how he laughed! I do suppose
He didn't hurt his funny bones!

There's sunshine in each word he speaks,
His laugh is ringing sweet;
Its ripples are contagious,
Like waves on smoky sand.

He laughs the moment he awakes,
And all the day is his;
The school is but a place he takes;
His lessons are but fun.

No matter how the day may go,
You cannot find a sadder boy;
He's wonderful, I know
Who can't make me sigh.

EDGAR IN THE DEVIL'S HOLE.

By Annie A. McDevitt.

Edgar Phillips was ill and the doctor ordered a change of climate. It was decided to go to Florida where no railroads, trolleys or [illegible] existed.

Edgar enjoyed the whole trip, from the packing up to the return home. The travelers sail on the ocean did not escape the usual sickness, but the sight of land at last was hailed with delight.

The cool days and the restful rest made Mr. Phillips feel much better, and the last few days of the visit were spent in sight-seeing. Among the places visited was one called "The Devil's Hole." This was a deep pool of sea water surrounded by a [illegible] wall over which grows a great deal of vegetation. At a short distance away it looks like a pretty place, but once you get into the hole it is hard to get out except by the door which has been built in one side. The pool is filled with some queer ugly fishes.

Edgar's parents were Christians and he had been taught both at home and at Sunday school to love and obey the Lord, so that Satan or the devil might have no chance to tempt him. Therefore when he heard they were to visit "The Devil's Hole" he was very much upset. "Mother dear, aren't you afraid you will meet him there?" asked the worried little boy. Mother was busy dressing just then and laughingly replied he need not worry.

After the family were seated in the carriage and had started on their drive, Edgar again brought up the subject, saying, "Mother, please, do you mind not going to 'The Devil's Hole?'" Mr. and Mrs. Phillips were surprised at this request, and then Mr. Phillips recalled Edgar's question and anxiety while getting dressed. She explained that the name was given because of its pleasant appearance from the outside but how difficult it would be for anyone to get out of it once they were in. "You know, Edgar," she continued, "the devil does not spend his time in one place. If you take God with you, the devil cannot trouble you anywhere, but if you do not let God dwell in your heart, the devil will be with you even at home. Do you remember the rainy day at home last spring just as you were getting over the measles? While I was away shopping you went out and played in the rain against my orders. You found it very pleasant at the time, but the next day you had to stay in bed again and suffered many more days because of your disobedience. It looked so pleasant to go out when you were feeling well—until you got into trouble. That is the way the devil works, and he is to be found everywhere that little boys and girls, big men and women, are willing to listen when he tempts them to do wrong. "Dottie, will you go to the [illegible]"

"Dottie," said mamma [illegible], "you didn't bring me three chips, and it is time to start dinner."

"I will, mamma, by and by, but I should love to be a princess, like this one, and be able to make every one around me happy."

Mamma finished peeling the potatoes and brought the basket of chips herself, while Dottie scarcely looked up from her book.

"O Dottie, please get in some kindling; the old one's burned out." This was all in vain.

Dottie threw down her book hastily. "You are a little nuisance!" she exclaimed, as she grabbed the string from baby's hand so hastily that she broke it. "I wish you'd go 'way and let me alone. I never can have a good time all by myself."

Mamma was coming out of the pantry with a jar of preserved pears just in time to hear her little daughter's last words. But there was only a little wonder in her voice as she inquired: "Did the princess in your book try to have a good time all by herself?"

"N-no, mamma, I guess not," said Dottie, very slowly.

"Well," continued mamma, "if you want to be like her, you can't begin a minute too soon."

Dottie stooped and picked up her book, but forgot to answer. But as she went out of the room [illegible] a thoughtful expression on her face that [illegible] Our little ones.

THE WAY OF LOOKING AT A THING.

The difficulty of an undertaking often depends upon the way we look at it. If we assume that it will be hard to accomplish to begin with, then analyze it carefully to discover its weakest features, and then compare it, to its disparagement, with other undertakings that have required much time and effort to carry through, we shall very likely be discouraged before we begin and defeated before we have made a fight. On the other hand, if we consider the greatness of the goal to be attained, the feasibility of the proposed plan as a whole, and the undoubted resources at our command in going forward with the undertaking, we are likely to begin with hope, continue in faith, and end in triumph. And the difference is due largely to the way we looked at the undertaking in the beginning.

The determination to succeed is the great secret of success in a righteous cause. When difficulties produce discouragement, it is time for us to look into our hearts to discover the hidden enemies that are sapping our strength. It is the slothful man who says, "There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets." The courageous man girds up his loins, arms himself with the most approved weapons of warfare, and goes forth to do battle, prepared to "do or die." And he usually does.

As a general principle, no righteous cause is destined to fail. It may be hindered in its progress, it may be delayed in its triumph, but it will survive its opponents and, ultimately, it will put to shame its faint-hearted supporters. Truth has a self-propagating power, and righteousness has an invincible quality that enables it to emerge victorious through all the "wrecks of time." We are untrue to ourselves when we allow any discouragement to keep us from espousing with all our might any good movement which is presented to us authoritatively as a part of our work. If we look at it right, we shall find that there is more to inspire than to depress.

EXPERIENCE COUNTS.

(Because of its point of view with reference to the value of the work of the older men in the ministry, we reproduce the article below from the editorial pages of a recent number of the Northwestern Christian Advocate. It will be a sad day for us as a church when we discount the pastoral efficiency of men merely because they are getting along in years.)

"Printers' Ink has just undertaken an interesting experiment which it has printed in an article entitled 'Selecting a Friend from the Advertising Faces.' An art director submitted seven faces of different ages and types to a committee of fifty people of various professions to secure their answers on the following questions:

"1. If you had to choose a friend from among these seven men, which one would it be?

"2. If you desired advice on a serious problem, to which one would you go?

"Of the seven two were past fifty years of age and plainly revealed that they had seen their share of trouble and hardship; while the others were comparatively young men. The two mature men received the vote of the committee by all odds on question number two.

"Gray hair and age's approach may disqualify one for desirable standing in certain walks of life, but when it comes to the deeper issues that touch sorrow and perplexity the elder friend is sought out and confided in.

"Applying this test to the minister of the gospel, the overwhelming asset of experience due to long years of service is not sufficiently appreciated by the average congregation. Youth has certain advantages that cannot be gainsaid, but any or all of these suffer in comparison with the one rich asset of experience that comes to a man of God who has given himself in loving service to his people for a quarter of a century or even longer.

"Our readers can easily apply the test to their own selves. There are few reading these lines who cannot recall some moment in their past when sorrow or trouble had overtaken them that they were not deeply comforted in the fact that he who naturally should come with consolation was a man whose many years of experience had converted him into a veritable artist of consolation. So far as we are able to judge, the demand for young men in the pastorate which in years past developed into a decided craze is not so pronounced at this time. Of course young men will always be in demand, not only in the ministry, but more particularly in the field of business; but we look to certain reactions which will advantage the man of years above his wont. So long as a minister keeps abreast of the times, his graying hair should be a badge of love and honor, for, after all, the greatest service a pastor can render his people comes at the crises of life—financial reverse, unoccupation, loneliness, sickness, and death. At such hours one man of years who has traveled along each of these dark lanes and held the hand of groping, sorrowing ones, is worth half a dozen freshlings just from the seminary.

"We make this observation on the basis of a fair up-to-dateness on the part of the elder preacher. That, of course, does not obtain in all instances. The temptation to relax not only physically (which can be measurably excused), but intellectually (which should never be condoned) not infrequently overtakes a man past fifty, and when that occurs and he leans almost solely upon his past, he jeopardizes his standing and soon declines in popularity.

"A hustler will doubtless perform sensationally: he will start all manner of innovations and speed up the congregation to almost a dizzying degree, but it has been our observation that after a church has had a number of years of such administration permeated with stunts, the coming finally of an old-type gospel preacher whose years of contact with joy as well as sorrow have capacitated him to act as priest and comforter, is appreciated in no small degree.

"There is no reason why years should not add to rather than detract from a minister's power for usefulness."

WORK DAY FOR THE ORPHANGES.

We are sure all friends of our orphanage work in Louisiana and Mississippi will keep in mind the fact that Saturday, October 9, has been set apart as Work Day for the benefit of the two institutions maintained by our church in these two States, and that they will cheerfully and generously make liberal offerings on Sunday, October 10, for the support of this work.

Statements issued by Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, and Rev. B. F. Lewis, superintendent of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, show that it is especially important that Work Day be generally observed this year. The two institutions are filled to capacity with children for whose welfare the church has become responsible, and the cost of providing for their needs is greater than ever before on account of the high price of food and clothing. It is not to be thought for a moment that our people will be unmindful of these increased needs as they take their offerings to the church or send them to properly designated persons, and that they will, of their abundance, give freely to help these dependent and helpless little ones.

The cause of the orphans is one that appeals strongly to all of us, young and old alike, and the proper presentation of this cause in our Sunday schools and churches will be sure to meet with a ready response. Let no preacher or Sunday school superintendent deprive his people of the privilege of helping to maintain so noble a cause by his failure to carry out the plans for Work Day.

CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

It is a matter of general knowledge that it is becoming increasingly difficult each year to provide for the entertainment of many of our Annual Conferences. This is due largely to the increased size of these bodies, the lack of servants in the homes, the scarcity of spare rooms in many of our modern dwellings, and the heavy expense attendant upon the entertainment of guests for nearly a week. We are sure the trouble is not to be found in a lack of hospitality on the part of the members and friends of the church, or in an unwillingness even to suffer some inconvenience for the privilege of entertaining these notable gatherings. Conditions have arisen of late years, beyond the control of our people, which make it difficult for the average community to take care of so large a body for several days on the basis of free entertainment.

Whether it is already here or not, the time is likely to come soon when the entertainment of our Conferences will have to be provided for in a way that will relieve all embarrassment and that will provide adequately for the attendance of members and all visitors who care to attend the sessions. Some Conferences have already adopted the plan of meeting in places that have ample hotel and boarding house facilities and paying their way at the favorable rates that are usually granted conventions and other large gatherings. The situation in our own Conferences may not be acute, but we suggest the wisdom of taking the matter under consideration in order that we may be prepared to meet any situation that may arise in the future.

BISHOP McMURRY IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop W. F. McMurry spent Monday and Tuesday in New Orleans. On Tuesday he was guest of ministers and laymen at a luncheon at the Monteleone Totel. Bishop McMurry came to New Orleans from Meridian, Miss., where he preached in Central Church last Sunday morning, and in the afternoon laid the corner-stone of the $40,000 church to be erected by the congregation of East End Church, of which Rev. J. L. Sells is the pastor.

The Bishop will go from this city to Memphis, for a meeting of the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference, to be held in the interest of their hospital work. On Thursday he will deliver an address in the interest of the St. Louis Conference Educational Campaign, at Poplar Bluff, Mo., and on Sunday next he will dedicate the church in Ripley, Tenn.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Advocate office enjoyed a pleasant call by Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, on Thursday of last week.

Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Jackson, La., is in a meeting at Ethel, which began last Sunay. He is being assisted by his presiding elder, Rev. A. S. Lutz.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Lambuth Evans, of Oakdale, La., are rejoicing over the arrival of a daughter in their home on September 19. Blessings upon the little one!

According to an exchange, Bishop W. R. Lambuth has established his official residence in Shanghai, China.

A note from Rev. S. W. Miller, of Frisco, Texas, informs us that he will soon attend his fifty-first Conference. He joined the Memphis Conference in 1869.

The editor, on account of illness, found it necessary to take a little rest this week. He spent the early part of the week with his parents, at Ellisville, Miss.

According to press reports, three hundred applicants have been turned away from Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., this year. The Freshman class will number ane hundred and sixty.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached to a good congregation at Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, on Sunday evening, September 19, filling the pulpit in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt.

Rev. W. W. Graves and family, of Hazlehurst, Miss., are back at home after a four-weeks' vacation made possible by the kindness and liberality of the good people of the congregation which Brother Graves serves.

A note from Brother J. R. Jones states that little Claude P., son of Rev. and Mrs. Claude P. Jones, of Fayette, Miss., is very ill, and has been for more than a week. Let this home be remembered before the throne of grace.

Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Barefield, Jr., of Russel, Miss., are the proud parents of a fine young son, born on September 9. Mrs. Barefild is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Barry, well known to many Methodists in Mississippi.

The Midland Methodist, official organ of the Holston, the Tennessee, and the Memphis Conferences, has yielded to the inevitable and advanced its subscription price to $2 a year. The change becomes effective on October 1.

Mrs. Sue F. Mooney, widow of the late Rev. Wellborn Mooney, died recently at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. W. Turpin, in Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Mooney was well known to the readers of the church press through her writhgs.

Rev. P. A. Sowell, an honored superannuate member of the Tennessee Conference who is well known to readers of the Advocate through his contributions to its pages, has returned to Lawrenceburg, Tenn., after spending the summer at Monteagle, Tenn.

Judging from the reports that come to us from all sides, preachers and presiding elders are making diligent efforts to have everything in readiness for the approaching sessions of the Conferences. Laymen, too, are showing their concern about this important matter.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, has recently been assisted in a good meeting by Dr. U. G. Foote, of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans. Much good was accomplished. There have been about thirty-five additions to the church at Slidell this year, most of them on profession.

We hope all our readers saw the article by Dr. David Martin Key, of Millsaps College, in a recent number of the Advocate. It dealt with "The Scarcest Thing In the World"—truly educated men and women. If you have not already done so, look it up and read it.

The Bureau of Specials of the Board of Missions has just issued a most interesting booklet, profusely illustrated, in which the value of the specials idea is strikingly shown. A copy of the booklet will be sent upon request to the Bureau, Box 510, Nashville, Tenn.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Lintonia charge, Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, pastor, will be held at Bethany, Sunday, October 3. Two services will be held, morning and afternoon. Rev. J. M. Morse will do the preaching and the Millsaps Quartet will sing at both services.

According to the Lincoln County Times, Rev. W. H. Lewis and family have recently moved into a new parsonage, the old parsonage having become a part of the equipment of Whitworth College through the liberality of our Fernwood congregation. Brookhaven Methodism is virile and progressive.

A recent number of the Conservative, Carrollton, Miss., gives a good account of the revival meeting in the Methodist church, in which the preaching was done very effectively by Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, of Indianola. The congregations were unusually large, overflowing the auditorium at times. There were twelve additions on profession of faith.

We are informed that the Hospital Commission of the Mississippi Conference held an interesting session in Hattiesburg, Miss., on Thursday, September 23, and that the members of the Commission considered that progress is being made toward the consummation of the movement. It is expected that another important meeting of the Commission will be held about the first week in October.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., has been highly honored by the Louisiana division of the American Legion. At the recent State convention, he was elected chaplain, which carries with it membership on the executive committee, and he was also elected a delegate to the national convention, now in session in Cleveland, Ohio. Brother Gunn honored the Advocate office with a call while passing through the city last week en route to Cleveland.

BISHOP McMURRY TAKES AFFECTIONATE LEAVE.

From St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Early in the summer we published in the Advocate the action of the Board of Church Extension requesting, in a most earnest manner, that Bishop W. F. McMurry remove his residence to Louisville.

This action on the part of the Board seems to have been based on the necessity it found itself under of increasing and reorganizing its Executive Committee, to care properly for its growing business, and give to its Secretary the support and backing to which the large responsibility of his office entitled him. Bishop McMurry promised the Board at the time the action was taken that he would seriously consider the request and and give his answer later on.

Last Thursday evening the Bishop appeared before the St. Louis Church Extension and City Mission Board, in which corporation the title to the Episcopal residence, 4111 Westminster place, is vested, and announced his decision to comply with the request of the Board of Church Extension and remove his residence to Louisville, Ky. He said this conclusion had been reached after advising with friends, both ministers and laymen, and after matured thought and earnest prayer. The fact that the appeal of the Board had been strongly reinforced by the Secretary, Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, D.D., he declared, had not a little to do with his decision. He further stated that he could not at this distance render the best service in the capacity requested without interference with his Episcopal duties.

The Bishop spoke in most complimentary terms of the new Secretary of the Board, Dr. Burgin, and expressed the belief that having back of him a stronger executive organization than any of his predecessors, he would surpass all of them in the practical results of his administration.

Continuing, the Bishop referred to the fact that Missouri was his native State and that so far as he was concerned there was no better place in all the world; and that he had never lived in a city where friends were more loyal and faithful, and where better fellowship could be found than in St. Louis. He said he was not going away to stay; that his interest in Missouri Methodism would be the same; that he expected to be in the State and the city frequently; that his relation and duty to the Board of Finance, which, by the way, was located in St. Louis through his influence, would remain unchanged and that he would maintain a St. Louis address in care of the Board of Finance, 510 Security building.

When the Bishop had concluded, the following resolutions were read by the Secretary and adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, Bishop McMurry has announced his removal from our city caused by the demands of the Church Extension Board that he move to Louisville to execute an important trust, and,

Whereas, Bishop McMurry has been a most welcome resident in our city for the last two years; therefore, be it resolved, that we learn with deep regret of the decision on the part of Bishop McMurry to move from our midst.

We look upon him as one of the most valuable citizens of the city and State; a great servant of the church who grew up in the home soil.

Resolved, that we express to Bishop McMurry and his family our appreciation of their residence among us and our regret at their departure and assure them of our very best wishes for their future happiness and welfare.

MRS. MARY ANDERSON WARFIELD was called Home to God, from Rosedale, Miss., June 23, 1920. She was born in Natchez, Miss., on September 20, 1843, and was the daughter of the late James Carson, an illustrious lawyer of Natchez, Miss. She was happily married to Col. Elisha Warfield, on August 23, 1864, at Laconia, Ark., and became the proud mother of eleven children, eight of whom grew to manhood and womanhood. Five of those children are left to mourn her loss, and to exemplify her life: Mrs. Lillie Nugent and Mrs. Walter Sillers, Sr., of Rosedale, Miss.; Mr. Guy Warfield, of Gunnison, Miss.; Mr. A. E. Warfield, of Louisville, Ky.; and Mrs. J. E. Edmonds of New Orleans. She is also survived by two brothers, Thomas and Charles Carson, of Natchez, Miss. A more beautiful life and character one seldom sees; her name is synonymous with love, patience, kindness, gentleness, unselfishness and long-suffering. It can truly be said of her, "She hath done what she could." In her last affliction she never murmured nor complained, contending to the very last that she was not sick. She was a consistent and devout member of the Presbyterian Church, yet her labors were not circumscribed by denominational lines, for she was a Christian. Her last years were spent in laboring with the Methodist Church, South, at Rosedale, and she missed services at both church and Sunday school only when physically unable to attend. She was a benediction and a blessing to all who came in touch with her beautiful life. As her pastor, I can truthfully say, "Oh how I shall miss her," for she always had a smile and a "God Bless You," for her minister.

"Dear Christ, who reign'st above the flood
Of human tears and human blood,
A weary road this saint has trod,
O house her in the Home of God."

Her pastor,
JOHN W. ROBERTSON.

WM. A. BYNUM was born near Lux, in Jones County, Miss., March 30, 1838. At time of his death, September 11, 1920, at his home west of Ellisville, he had reached the ripe age of over eighty-two years. On Feb. 18, 1871, he was married to Miss Sophronia Tisdale. To this union were born seven children; two preceded their father in childhood. He is survived by a devoted wife; three sons, Leon, Aden, Wash; two daughters, Mrs. Annie Porter and Miss Bessie, also twenty-two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. At the age of about eighteen he volunteered his services to engage in the Civil War, and at the close of this four-year struggle he was honorably discharged. His profession of Christ was made in middle life, when he united with the Methodist Church, and he was a devout member unto the end. One term he served his home county, Jones, as treasurer and four terms as member of the Board of Supervisors. In the different relations of life, fidelity was a most prominent element in his character, and when the final summons came, he was ready to enter into the joys of his Lord. A very large concourse of relatives and friends was present at the family home, where the funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Coleman, on Sunday morning, September 12. Awaiting at Crosby Cemetery, where the body of this beloved citizen was laid to rest, another large company of friends had assembled to pay their last tribute of love and respect. RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

To the Men's Wesley Adult Bible Class.

Dear Friends: A member of our class has been called home by our Master. Brother Benjamin F. Dudney, a member of our class, and a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, fell asleep August 3, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. I. O. Runyan, in Little Rock, Ark.

Brother Dudney was born October 12, 1849, in Columbia County, Arkansas, and at an early age joined the Methodist Church, and, when arriving at the age of twenty-one, became a very active member in all church work. In 1906 he came to Alexandria and engaged in the commission and brokerage business, and also transferred his membership here to First Methodist Church, taking an active part in all church activities. Every Sunday morning Brother Dudney was sure to be present at the meeting of Sunday school at 9:30 o'clock, with a well-studied lesson, and nothing seemed to give him more pleasure than to attend all church gatherings, to worship our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. But alas, his voice is no longer heard; he no longer answers the roll call of our class. His place is vacant. The family circle is broken. He no longer calls the family around the family altar to read the Word of God and join in prayer for the blessings of God upon himself and family.

Brother Dudney was a man of deep convictions; nothing could shake his faith in the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The good Book says, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Brother Dudney laid up his treasures in Heaven, where neither rust doth corrupt and thieves do not break through nor steal.

Therefore, be it resolved, That in the death of this Christian gentleman our class has sustained a great loss, his family a devoted husband and father, and the world needs more like him. Let us emulate his character; may it be a beacon light to us when the storms of life seem to gather, and clouds darken our pathway; may we, as he, look to Jesus, the Author and Finisher of every good and perfect gift, for the light of the blessed sun that will clear the mists away.

Thou art gone, brother, but not forgotten; we can no more meet you here; we can no longer be greeted with that pleasant smile; but we will ever keep your memory green, and when the summons calls us home, we hope to see you standing on that crystal shore with beckoning hands ready to welcome us home to glory.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our class, a copy be furnished the family, a copy furnished the Town Talk, and a copy furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Respectfully submitted,
Signed by C. W. Ward, C. A. Copenhaver, T. H. Hamilton.

FROM COLUMBIA, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: I wish to report the progress on the Columbia charge. I held meetings at Columbia and Caldwell, Brother R. A. Bozeman preaching ten days at the former and five days at the latter place, resulting in a spiritual awakening and some reclamations and two baptisms and eight accessions.

We also had a nine-days' meeting at Head of River, where the pastor did the preaching, except one very helpful sermon by our wide-awake presiding elder, Brother C. D. Atkinson, who held our third quarterly conference at the close of the sermon, enquiring into the various interests of the church. There were several conversions, eleven baptisms, and eight accessions, and on my return a month later, I baptized ten more and received eight into the church.

We hope to have a good report for Conference. W. J. PORTER, P. C.

Over fifty years ago a young physician practiced widely in a rural district and became famous for his uniform success in the curing of disease. This was Dr. Pierce, who afterwards established himself in Buffalo, N. Y., and placed one of his prescriptions, which he called "Golden Medical Discovery," in the drug stores of the United States so that the public could easily obtain this very remarkable tonic, corrective and blood-maker. Dr. Pierce manufactured this "Discovery" from roots and barks—a corrective remedy, the ingredients of which nature had put in the fields and forests, for keeping us healthy. Few folks or families now living have not at sometime or other used this "Golden Medical Discovery" for the stomach, liver and heart. Over twenty-four million bottles of this tonic and blood remedy have been sold in this country

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Send in a report of what happened in your school on Promotion Day. It may help some one to get ready for such a service next year.

If you think a federation of our Bible classes will do good, write me and express yourself if you are interested.

Prof. John Rundle, superintendent of the city schools of Grenada, will give credit for work done in the Sunday schools. Therefore the Sunday schools must do good work and keep accurate records of that work. The Methodist school has accepted the challenge and is preparing to do the work as it ought to be done and keep a correct record. Brother Woollard has a clear vision of the value of religious education as an evangelizing agency. When I meet such a man, I thank God and take courage.

Brother W. N. Duncan, pastor at Drew, has agreed to teach his teachers and others the twelve lessons in "Training the Devotional Life" at the prayer meeting hour. Twelve signified their desire to take advantage of Brother Duncan's instruction. Brother Curtis Yates agreed to teach the same lessons to his people at Artesia. This makes three classes lately organized, Winona, Drew, Artesia. Who will be the next? Let me hear from you when you start.

At the fourth quarterly conference the preacher nominates and the conference elects the man who is to superintend the Sunday school. In many places there is only one man to be nominated. But where there are several men to choose from, I would want a man that is willing to study. We have but few model superintendents, but most any man who will study can improve himself wonderfully. The superintendent must be a reading man, a praying man or else he cannot direct the affairs of the church school. If he does not read, he cannot be interested to any great degree nor can he improve his ways. If he does not pray much, he is sure to fall into ruts and miserably fail. It takes a reading, praying superintendent to make studious, praying teachers. Why should a superintendent of church school, the man appointed to lead the teachers in giving religious education to all the people, pray any less than the preacher?

Did you know that some of the best superintendents in the Conference are women? It is a rare thing for a woman to be late, they are always ready to take suggestions, they all use the graded lessons, they never fail to observe Sunday School Day, Promotion Day, or fail to do anything the church requires of them. It is a sad state of affairs when you cannot find a man who is willing to fit himself for this work. If you cannot find a man, nominate a woman for the sake of the children and let her train up a new generation of men.

There is a growing need for a Wesley Bible Class Federation in our Conference to gather our men and women together that they may learn how to direct the classes into a deeper religions life and train them to do the great tasks of the church. We are already groaning and staggering under the pending educational campaign projected by our leaders. The organized Bible classes of the Conference will take a hand in this big job. We need to secure a place for this meeting, set the time and mobilize the greatest unused force in the church.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Last Sunday was spent on the Bay Springs Charge. We had a mighty good day there. They took an offering for Sunday School Day at the night service which is something every school can do regardless of their situation.

Brother Simpson is getting along well and the church seems to be on an upward grade.

We also visited the school at Gilchrist Fordny Camp. This school is doing fine work. They are in the midst of a drive for new members and I feel sure that they will get them. Both of these schools promised to introduce graded literature, especially in the Beglnners Classes. This will mark a fine beginning and will mean much for the future life of the school.

Every Sunday school should have a copy of "Phunology." The schools should buy the book and put it at the disposal of their Social Committee. This book will mean much to the life of the church.

Every Sunday school superintendent should have a copy of the little booklet, "The Centenary Speelal." You will find many suggested stories in this little book that will help you to get up your Centenary money and will bring enthusiasm to the Missionary Committee. If you have not rceeived a copy of this little book write to me and I will be glad to send you one.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

In the months of July and August, it was my pleasure to participate in some short meetings. The first one was held at Alabama church, on the Bernice circuit. I gave educational talks on religion at the morning service, and preached at night an evangelistic sermon; using the life of Christ as subject matter. I did a similar work at Winnsboro. These two meetings were the first time I had tried to unite two such subjects in a revival meeting. I was pleased with it and I believe Brothers Mangum and Howard are pleased also. I went to Denham Springs and Friendship churches with Brother Rutledge and had a few days of similar work with him. I believe more of this kind of work will be profitable.

Let every Methodist Sunday school in Louisiana make an offering to the Sunday School Board before November 3. We are counting on this being done. Meet your quota and we will have money enough. Remember, 100 schools with a $5 quota means $500.

Send in your reports at once.

COMMENDING A GOOD ARTICLE.

Dear Brother Carley: It is my purpose to call the attention of your readers to a most interesting article which came to my notice recently. It is published in the form of a booklet and bears the title, "The Duty and Destiny of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." If any reader of the New Orleans Advocate was fortunate enough to receive a copy, he is under special obligation to Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga.

Some five thousand copies of this remarkable article have been sent out by the Bishop to the ministers and prominent laymen of our church. The author of the booklet was Bishop E. M. Marvin, who wrote it nearly fifty years ago, but it reads like the work of a man who lived and wrote but yesterday.

The author certainly had the prophetic eye to see so clearly half a century ahead, and had not his name appeared on the title page, I should have attributed the authorship to Bishop Candler. I certainly hope the brethren will read it.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

BISHOP McMURRY IN YAZOO CITY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On Monday, the 20th inst., the Methodists of Yazoo City enjoyed a rare treat. I learned on the 11th that Bishop McMurry would have to pass through Yazoo City on his way to Eden to dedicate the church there on the night of the 20th.

I knew he would have a few hours that he could spend with us. So I suggested to the Board of Stewards and the Young Woman's Missionary Society that we have a luncheon from 1 to 2 p. m. in honor of the Bishop, and try to get our Methodist men out to hear him on that occasion. My suggestion met with hearty co-operation by all parties concerned. The men furnished the money, the ladies prepared and served the lunch. We had seventy men present, including the visiting preachers of the town and country.

I have never attended a luncheon more elegantly or tastefully served than that one. I think the Bishop can bear a like testimony. The Bishop's address was fine and very appropriate. Some men heard him at that hour who would not have heard him had he preached at 11 o'clock on Sunday. I trust the Methodists of New Orleans will give him a chance to meet the Methodist men while he is in that city.

A VISITOR WRITES OF BILOXI, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I am writing to tell you of a delightful four months spent in Biloxi, Miss. Our church there is a thing of beauty and does credit to the pastor who planned it and under whose direction it was built. Our prayer meetings have doubled in attendance, our Sunday school trebled in numbers, and our church attendance quadrupled since the summer of 1919. It was my good fortune to hear facts and figures from Brother Rush, the lay leader, just before leaving. There has been a large increase of members in the last year; and all the assessments were paid in full up to date, September 1.

Though the pastor very modestly explained that all these good things resulted from the interest in the Centenary movement, yet it is easy to see that the pastor has been the moving figure in this advance movement. He is an indefatigable pastor, a splendid organizer. He dreams dreams and helps them to become a reality.

He has the happy faculty of putting every one to work, and is wise in placing the workers. He has the wisdom that comes from experience, with none of the kinks that sometimes come with middle age. He is a splendid preacher. He towers in the pulpit as an expounder, and the sermons are clear, logical, attractive, and beautifully worded. I speak of an old-time pastor on the Pacific Coast, Rev. M. B. Shatbrough.

I must also mention his first aide, Rev. H. W. Van Hook, teacher, preacher, Sunday school superintendent, musician, who presides at the organ and superintends the choir.

Biloxi church has waked up and I predict for it a bright future, to say nothing of the report that will go to Conference at the end of this year.

A SUMMER VISITOR.

Verona, Miss.

FROM WOODLAND, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Please change my paper to Woodland from Winona, as I moved to Woodland two weeks ago. As I have told you before, I serve the Montpelier charge. Well, our parsonage was burned last fall just before I was assigned here, so we bought a nice parsonage in the nice little town of Woodland. We couldn't get possession until recently, so I moved two weeks ago.

I have finished all of my meetings. All of the preaching was done by the pastor. We had great meetings at every church on the charge. Brother Hendley, from Artesia, sang for me in two meetings. He is a great singer and a very fine man. He did me fine service in both meetings.

My work is in very fine condition, I think. The people are very kind to me. gave us a big pounding after we moved, and are still pounding us every day.

We have started on our collections, and if we are not providentially hindered, we are going to have a full report at Charleston, November 17.

Yours fraternally,

T. J. HALFACRE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Hattiesburg District.

The Annual District Conference of the Hattiesburg District was convened in regular session at Magee, Miss., on September 9, 1920, at 3 p.m. The pastor, Brother S. W. Johnson, led the devotional exercises, reading St. John 15:5-10, and explaining to us the hidden truths of this parable. After an opening hymn he turned the meeting over to Mrs. Cottrell, District Secretary, who conducted the following program:

Welcome Address by Mrs. Cottrell.

In this address Mrs. Cottrell very [illegible] beautifully told of our work and the necessity of efforts to increase all departments of our auxiliaries 25 per cent this year. So far, this District has advanced in all work and all pledges have been increased, some from 25 per cent to 50 per cent, and some have doubled. She reported for this district, 21 auxiliaries, 3 new this year, Richton, Avery, and Santee, all doing nicely. There are 5 Young People's auxiliaries, 8 Junior auxiliaries, and 5 Baby Divisions. Donations for special purposes and for local work have been very encouraging. The district gave to Miss Marzie Hall, our Mississippi missionary to Africa, $74.50, as a parting gift. Our Conference at large gave her $250. We gave to our room at Scarritt, $79.50. Mrs. Cottrell urged in closing, that we hurry our campaign to increase membership 25 per cent. In this connection she urged that we read Round Robin literature prayerfully and be sure to have corresponding secretaries report results to her.

She then called for a chain of volunteer prayers, being led by Mrs. H. L. McCleskey and closing by Mrs. Cottrell.

Message From our Conference Secretary.

In this message Mrs. McCleskey said, "Go back and tell the 'Stay at Homes' that they are missing the blessing that God has so bountifully provided for them," and she led up by scriptural arguments to the crying need for individual responsibility on the part of each woman who is a member of the church. The world, she said, has in a large sense lost the sense of sin. We compare our deeds to those of others and feel that "we are not so bad," whereas, we should look to Christ and compare ourselves to Him and feel our need to lean harder on Him and renew our efforts individually. Be not satisfied with the good works we have done but push on and ever on. There is a wide field of activities and we must never cease to broaden our work. We have a great need for leaders just at this time, and our women are not willing to pay the price of leadership. Christ paid the supreme price for us, let us sacrifice for the promotion of His kingdom. How? By consecration, zeal, and willingness to be used of Him in any way at any time. If Christ had saved Himself He could not have saved others.

She reported a letter from Mrs. Lipscomb that the increase so far this year is $70,000. We have 41 Conferences under our Council. The Mississippi Conference has paid 21 per cent over this time last year. At the Council meeting we pledged $16,000 for this year, over $13,500 last year. She felt confident that we will more than pay this amount.

A great need of our Conference is a field worker to visit new and struggling, also backsliding auxiliaries, to encourage and inform them. She asked our prayers and our encouragement for this new officer to become a reality.

In closing she gave us our calendar for the rest of this year:

October—A call for Wesley Houses, Membership Rally, Mission Study Rally.

November—Week of Prayer, offering to go to Mexico School and Yashti, Harvest Day, every one to report programs on this day.

December—Day of Prayer for Student Volunteers. Let us pray also on this day for Scarritt, we have seven Mississippi girls there.

Next, we enjoyed a reading by Mrs. Calhoun, of Mount Olive. It was a beautiful poem on Service. Three Christians eagerly worshipping and adoring their Savior but, when He sent the Messenger "to go" the first asked "Why" and the second asked "How" but the third, who was not only willing to worship but was ready to be used of God, said "When."

The roll was then called and the following auxiliaries answered present with reports:

Hattiesburg—Main Street, Court Street, Broad Street; Mount Olive, Petal, Mize, Magee.

Young People's Auxiliaries: Hattiesburg—Court Street, Broad Street; Mize.

Junior Auxiliaries: Hattiesburg—Main Street, Court Street, Broad Street.

After announcements, the meeting adjourned with prayer by Mrs. McCleskey.

The evening meeting was in charge of the Juniors. This program was so well rendered and so clearly and beautifully brought out our work at home and abroad that it was indeed a privilege to be present. The songs given by the Magee Senior and Junior Leagues were something to be remembered. The program follows:

Duet, The Old Rugged Cross, Magee Senior League.
Prayer, Mrs. McCleskey.
Devotional Reading, The Story of the Wedding at Cana of Galilee, Main Street, Hattiesburg Juniors.
Reading, In Darkness, Bring us the Light, Magee Senior Leaguers.
Chorus, "Send the Light," Magee Juniors.
Our Lads for Christ, Court Street Hattiesburg.
Play, Sick in China, Magee Juniors.
Solo, My Task, Mrs. Middleton.
Closing Hymn, Children's Missionary Hymn, Three little Magee Juniors.

On Friday morning the district meeting was called to order at 9:45 by our Secretary, Mrs. F. B. Cottrell, with Mrs. Hearst, of Petal, leading the devotional exercises. After the opening hymn, "If Jesus goes with me," Mrs. Hearst read the 25th chapter of Matthew with comments, and called on Mrs. Sullivan of Hattiesburg for prayer.

Then Mrs. Wallace, President of the Magee auxiliary, made a short speech to the delegates and visitors in warm words of welcome. She spoke of the Magee ladies' being Camp Girls, and that more did not come, but made us feel how much Magee appreciated the association of those who did come.

This was followed by the introduction of three visitors from the Jackson District: Mesdames Cross and Middleton and little Miss Lucille Middleton, of Mendenhall.

An Institute Hour was led by Mrs. McMullen, of Mize. She used a large poster showing an automobile with only one passenger going up the road of opportunity toward a gate which bore this legend, A Saved World. The car represented the Woman's Missionary Society and above it were these words: Capacity, "Every woman in the Church." The lady at the wheel represented the power that was to guide and control our Membership Campaign. She explained that the reason our car was empty was because we only have one out of every seven members of our church in our societies. We should not feel discouraged, though, for five years ago we only had one out of ten. Now to fill our car, our goal is 20 per cent increase. Mrs. McMullen called for suggestions and discussions as to methods and plans on membership increase. Mrs. A. L. Calhoun of Mount Olive, suggested that the question is how to get interest.

Immediately Mrs. McCleskey said, "Use your phone." Experiences with this method were given and enjoyed but it was generally conceded that it brought results. Mrs. Calhoun said: "Use our cars." This method proved the best. Many would go if they could be called for and returned home. Mrs. Middleton suggested that we not phone and go for the prospective member just once or twice but three times or even oftener; and Mrs. McCleskey said, "Then, when you have them present, give them something to do."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Mrs. McMullen then said that our car could not cover the road and reach the goal unless every party was properly performing its own particular function, running along harmoniously and smoothly, and that the whole was well oiled. What are the parts of our auxiliaries? Why, president, vice presidents and all officers and members. No one office should be put forward and none should be allowed to lag. What is the oil? Prayer, without which we surely die spiritually.

Mrs. McCleskey then told us that at the Council Meeting she found that so many of the Conferences were paying special attention to their Honor Roll Auxiliaries. In this connection she produced a Standard of Excellence and asked how many auxiliaries were conscientiously trying to meet the requirements. As she read them over it seemed a reasonable thing that each one of our societies attain the Roll of Honor. She also read a letter from Mrs. Lipscomb giving the points adopted at the Council Meeting, some of which are:

An organized Circle of Prayer. The early morning hour is to be used. Think of the power that would go from such a circle of prayer!

The Centenary Fund. Let there be no lack of interest in helping to inform the Methodist people in this and to cooperate in minute speeches and helping to collect funds.

Stewardship. Use all literature available on stewardship. It is, after all, the women we want.

Mission Study. This is self-explanatory, knowledge gives power.

Family Altars. Why should not the auxiliaries promote this form of worship?

Our pledge for the next year, $1,000,000. She read our report in figures as: Number of Adult auxiliaries in Hattiesburg District, 21; number of Adult auxiliaries in our Conference, 166; number of women members in our Conference, 3,575; number of Adult auxiliaries in Council, 5,147; total number of members, 131,880; number Young Peoples' auxiliaries, 1,521; number of Junior auxiliaries, 2,125. This was very encouraging as to the Juniors. Lead them up in the way they should go.

Then followed a quiz by Mrs. McCleskey, "Just how much do you know?" She held in her hand a bundle of white arrows and after sides were chosen for a knowledge match, she shot an arrow at each one and if they could not answer the question they lost the arrow. These questions were on every conceivable thing in connection with our work, as: Who blazed the way in Africa? To whom should we write for mission study literature? Who was the first missionary to Korea? Who is our Conference Treasurer, etc., etc. It was surprising how little some of us knew. These arrows can be had from Mrs. Cottrell, Mount Olive, Miss., and would be fine to use in a fourth Monday program.

After this, Mrs. Walker, of Magee, read a wonderful paper on "Stewardship and Tithing." She told how God wants the whole life, thoughts, deeds and purpose as well as tithe. And, she said, the tithe is not enough. Not that God needs it. He can make the earth bring forth fruit without our help, but we need the blessing and inward glow that comes from tithing and then giving until we really feel it. Stewardship is a command from God. It transforms our lives and links us up marvelously with God. How we did enjoy that paper! If we could only take that message back to our auxiliaries verbatim! So, a motion was made and it was unanimously voted to send that paper to the Advocate.

After announcements by Mrs. Cottrell, we were dismissed by Brother Sproles, the Baptist minister of Magee, and adjourned to partake of an old-time dinner in the churchyard. We ate in true Methodist fashion.

The closing session of the district conference met in the church at 1:30 p.m., Friday, September 10, 1920, with the Young People in charge of the program.

Mrs. Middleton led the devotional exercises, reading II Kings, 4th chapter. She made this point, that the vessels could not be filled until they were first empty, and showed how we are the vessels and God cannot use us until we are first empty of self. She then sang a very touching solo, "I Come to Thee," and called on Miss Clarke to lead in prayer for our missionaries at home and abroad.

The minutes of the conference were then read and approval and Mrs. Cottrell introduced Miss Clarke, of Mize, a volunteer for service.

Miss Clarke addressed us on "What it Means to be a Volunteer," and she seemed to be on fire with zeal for the work and she told of her life at Scarritt Training School and the inspiration she got just from being there and meeting the instructors and getting in touch with the work from a Scarritt standpoint. She said she hopes to go to Brazil, as the need is more urgent there than anywhere just at this time.

"Loyalty to Self, to Others, to Christ," by Miss Cora Crossley, of Hattiesburg.

How can we be loyal to self to others and to Christ at the same time? By making our lives count in working with and for those around us, to uplift and win souls for Christ. We should never cease to praise Him for his goodness to us that He died on the cross that we might have life and have it more abundantly.

"How I Learned Giving," by Miss Alsup, of Hattiesburg.

This was an amusing as well as pathetic reading, telling how a soul unfolded under the influence of giving systematically, and how that life reached out and touched others and made the whole neighborhood better.

Mrs. Cottrell then called attention to the posters and explained how we can use them and where we can get them or make them. They can be obtained for a small sum from Mrs. Lipscomb.

She then held an Institute on Social Service and Mrs. McCleskey spoke for her Young People's Society of Main Street, telling us that we had a social service problem that we have been overlooking under and around for the time past, and that was the Negro. She told of some very practical ways in which we could be of help to the Negro societies. She urged that we send and get the literature on Negro work.

In closing the program Mrs. Cottrell called a Local Work Institute, led by herself, and the discussion opened with what is the meaning of local work and in the discussion it was brought out that there is a difference in local work and social service. Mrs. Cottrell told how a church membership can be judged by the condition of the church and parsonage. Mrs. McCleskey suggested that the Social Service work have a separate treasurer and an account be kept of all funds expended in this way and reported, as it is necessary to get on the Honor Roll.

Reports On Time: get them off on the first of the month if it is at all possible and have all officers meet and make these reports together that they may tally.

The conference was then open for invitations for the place of meeting next year and Mount Olive and Petal ran a close race, Petal winning.

Mrs. Calhoun, of Mount Olive, then thanked the ladies of Magee for their courteous treatment of the delegates and their good attendance on all services, and the pastors for their attendance and thoughtfulness and the Baptist ladies for the delicious iced tea served us.

Brother Johnson then said he had a treat for us from the men folks, and we enjoyed some real red winter apples. Thanks to the men folks. We then adjourned for a trip to the Tuberculosis Hospital. We appreciated being in the hospital and cheering the ladies we met and talked with.

As we rode back to Magee from the hospital we had this thought, what a perfect day and such a perfect meeting. God was in the little church at Magee and His presence could very plainly be felt, and how glad we all were to be there to catch a glimpse of His radiance.

Signed:

Hattiesburg, Miss..

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A STRONG FAITH.

Faith is not so much in words as in acts. When we say that we have faith in God and then act as if we trusted nobody but ourselves, our acts belie our words, and we justly bring upon ourselves the condemnation that belongs to those who "say, and do not." Faith is a fact, not a theory; and if we really have faith in God, our lives will be so characterized by perfect peace and humble happiness that our friends will not be dependent upon our words for the assurance that our citizenship is in Heaven. A strong faith is self-authenticating.

THE OTHER WAY ABOUT.

For a long time most of us have been hoping and praying that the era of inflated prices would give way to more normal conditions. There seem to be evidences at present that those hopes and prayers are being answered in the downward tendency of the markets, but, strange to say, there are those who are now assiduously warning us that lower prices mean an economic upheaval in comparison with which high prices were almost a blessing. We do not understand it all, but we suppose human nature is running true to form. When prices were high, sellers sawed wood and said nothing, while buyers howled; when prices begin to go down, buyers wear a smile and sellers fill the air with lamentations. It makes all the difference in the world, whose ox is gored.

BOY WANTED.

As we pass along the streets, we notice placards in the windows of a good many business places, bearing the legend, "Boy Wanted." These placards, of course, are simply advertisements for the services of youths who may be looking for employment; but they really have a much greater significance than that. They are an epitome of the cries that are going up all over the land for the raw material out of which the leadership of the world is to be made for this and succeeding generations. Business firms need boys who can be developed into princes of commerce; colleges need boys who can be educated in mind and heart for responsible positions in all the activities of life; the State needs boys who will become part of a citizenship that loves honor and follows after high ideals; the church needs boys who will grow up into noble Christian men able to carry forward the great work of the Kingdom of God on earth. Boys are wanted, yes—and the supply will never exceed the demand.

THE LEGAL RIGHT TO REMAIN IGNORANT.

According to a recent bulletin of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, the legal right to remain ignorant is annually granted to thousands of children in States where child labor and education laws are backward. We came across a case not long ago where a girl thirteen years old would go to school for the first time this fall. She was one of a family of seven children, not one of whom had had the slightest educational advantages, their parents not seeming to care whether they ever became anything more than hewers of wood and drawers of water or not. The tragedy of this girl's life made us heart-sick. In the face of wonderful opportunities for enlargement of mind and soul, her life has been dwarfed till it is pitifully weak and almost hopelessly eclipsed. Thank God, the State is beginning to realize that it is undermining its own foundations when it allows its children to grow up in ignorance. Parents never had a moral right to keep their children out of school; the time is almost at hand when they will have no legal right to do so.

A DRY WORLD.

Great reforms sometimes move slowly at first, but the momentum of success carries them faster and faster toward their ultimate goals. The experiment of national prohibition has already proved such a success in the United States that the prediction is being freely made that England will be dry within ten years. Dr. C. W. Saleeby, noted British scientist, leading eugenist, and Chairman of the Birthrate Commission of England, who recently addressed the International Congress Against Alcoholism, made the following statement: "The day is coming when, as predicted by Sir Henry Crookes, America will cease to export food to England. Great Britain imports five-sixths of her wheat supply. On the day that America ceases to export food, England will go dry. On that day the destruction of grain and sugar for liquor will stop. You are making a colossal experiment in this country. Englishmen visiting here carry back stories of the workings of prohibition that will have their effect on the people. Lord Leverhulme, shrewd business man, came here a 'wet' and returned 'dry.' He said we could pay our debt in five years if we shut off our drink bill." Moral sentiment may not be sufficient to bring about world-wide prohibition in a short time, but the economic factor will have tremendous weight with those who care little for moral effect.

JUST FOR A CHANGE.

The weather is disagreeable at times, but let's think about the many beautiful days we have—just for a change; everything goes wrong once in a while and we are sorely tried, but let's think of the times when a song sings itself in the heart and the whole world is bright—just for a change; evil is ever present and it mars our happiness beyond measure, but let's think of all the good in the world—just for a change; people say harsh, unkind things about us sometimes, but let's think only of the gracious things we hear—just for a change; we know we are passing through crises without number in these troublous days, but let's think of the smooth ongoing of so many good things—just for a change; the devil is doing his best to ruin the world, but let's think about God's plans and purposes and his omnipotent goodness—just for a change. To-day is a good day to look up—not down.

AN INVIOLABLE LAW.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is the terse statement of an inviolable law. We may try to deceive ourselves; we may even vainly imagine that we have succeeded in overthrowing the eternally-established principle that like produces like; but the inevitable comes to pass. Sinful lives cannot result in saintly characters, and selfish living cannot eventuate in holy dying. Just as a chain is no stronger than the weakest link in it, so a life is no better than the lowest ideal with which it is satisfied. It is as foolish to say that religion and business do not mix as it would be to say that the sun shines without producing light. Sunday Christians and week-day sinners is so palpably a contradiction in terms that even the wayfaring man, though a fool, is not deceived thereby. And it must not be forgot that we always reap more than we sow, whether it be good or bad.

A SECOND CHANCE.

We sometimes hear a man say that he would like to have a second chance at life—he believes he could make a better job of it. Maybe he could; but the probabilities are that the man who acknowledges that he has failed to make proper use of the chance he knows he has, would not do much better with a dozen more. If it really comes to that, though, a man may have just as many chances as he wants. Adapting a well-known advertising slogan, we may say, "Don't envy the successful man—be a success yourself." Our yesterdays may be filled with mistakes and failures, but to-day is ours and all the to-morrows are ahead of us. What we left out yesterday, we can put in to-day; and what we failed at last week, may be successfully accomplished this week. The man who does the best he can all the time is rejoicing over the future rather than lamenting the past.

THE BATTLE SONG OF TRUTH.

What though the day be lost, and every warrior slain!
A million years are His to win the field again.
The triumph is to God, however long the strife;
For sin and death must yield to Him, the Lord of Life.

The planets are in league against the hosts of night;
The sun itself goes forth to battle for the right.
The ages fight for God! Shall we the contest yield?
Arise, ye sons of truth, and sweep the hostile field!

THE GENEVA WORLD CONFERENCES.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

The month of August, 1920, will be noteworthy in Christian thought for the series of International Christian Conferences which were held, and which formulated plans and issued statements of importance to the future faith and order, life and work of the church of Christ. One of these Conferences, which was held at Lambeth Palace, London, and adjourned on August 7, was, it is true, composed exclusively of bishops of the Anglican communion from the various countries of the world in which that church is working, but the nature of the Encyclical Letter, and of the Appeal made to all Christian people by the Conference are of such a character that they must be seriously considered by all Christian organizations, and will be discussed in a following article.

The three other Conferences were interdenominational as well as international. The first one held at Geneva was on the life and work of the church; the second, held also at Geneva, was on the faith and order of the church; and the third, held at St. Boatenberg in the Swiss Bernese mountains, was for the purpose of promoting international friendship through the churches. The writer was privileged to attend these three Conferences for part or all of the sessions, and is of the opinion that the results, temporary and permanent, will amply justify the time and money expended by the delegates in attendance upon the meetings. On August 9-12 was held the Conference on Life and Work.

This Conference was called upon the initiative of the Federal Council of the churches of Christ in America to itself consider the advisability of calling a Universal Conference of the churches of Christ "to consider the urgent practical tasks of Christian life and service, and the possibilities of world-wide co-operation in testimony and action." The attendance was much larger and more representative than had been expected and was considered to be a clear indication of the desire among the churches for such a conference. The countries were represented as follows: United States 34, France 5, Austria 1, Belgium 1, Denmark 3, Germany 5, Great Britain 5, Hungary 4, Italy 3, Jugo-Slavia 1, Holland 1, Norway 3, Spain 4, Sweden 10, Switzerland 10; total members 90. In addition there were three very prominent fraternal visitors from the Greek Church, who manifested much interest in the plans for the Conference.

A representative committee of arrangements was created with power to add to its members, to which committee were referred with power the following recommendations as to the program for the proposed Conference:

1. Christian brotherhood and righteousness in international relations; creation of a Christian disposition of mind as a necessary soul to the commonwealth of nations.

2. The Christian conception of the system of law as a gift of God, and the necessity for its extension.

3. Christian principles in social life and in the social and economic construction of society; relation to the labor movement.

4. Christian education, liberty of conscience, and protection of religious minorities. International Christian efforts as to ethical questions: white slave traffic, bad business morals, exploitation of natives, intemperance, gambling and family life. Recruiting of the Christian ministry, Bible school work, recreation, home and foreign missions, were also recommended as suitable subjects for discussion at the Conference. (It was agreed that the mission program should be shaped after Conference with the International Committee).

In brief the writer would say that the object of the proposed Conference is to consider and propose the practical application of the teachings of Jesus Christ to the social, industrial and ethical life of our present-day world, including both individual and international relations.

The question as to the composition of the proposed Conference was thoroughly discussed, and finally the following motion was adopted with practical unanimity: "The committee of arrangements is instructed to invite all Christian communions to participate in the proposed Conference." It was understood that this motion included the Greek, Armenian and Roman churches, the responsibility being left to each denomination to decide as to its participation in a Conference concerning life and work of the church, and not discussing in any way questions of faith and order. It was voted that the proposed Conference be held some time in 1922, if practicable, otherwise in 1923.

The American members of the Committee of Arrangements are Dr. Peter Ainslie (Disciples of Christ), Drs. Nehemiah Boynton, Frederick Lynch and Chas. S. Macfarland (Congregational), Bishops Cannon, Hurst and Nuelsen (Methodist). Drs. S. H. Chester, Arthur J. Brown and W. P. Merrill (Presbyterian), Bishop C. H. Brent (Episcopal), Dr. Lauritz Larsen (Lutheran). As indicated above the committee was given authority to add to its number, and at a meeting after the adjournment of the Conference, a number of leaders in the church life in the United States were proposed as members of the Committee. The Committee further decided to carry on its work through three groups: the Continental section, the British Empire section, the American section, including South America, but not including Canada. It was decided that each group should have an Executive Committee of five, and that the fifteen members composing the three sectional committees should compose the General Executive Committee, which should meet in London in January, 1921, to further perfect arrangements for the meeting in 1922.

The Conference adopted an appeal for prayer which will be given later and which expresses the general attitude and purpose of the Conference.

Faith and Order.

The first Conference adjourned on the evening of August 11, and the preliminary meeting of the World Conference on Faith and Order began on Thursday, August 12. Bishop Chas. H. Brent, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Rochester, New York, was elected Chairman, and Dr. Tasker of the British Wesleyan Church, Vice-Chairman. There were present representatives of 80 churches and 40 nations. Indeed, the Christian church throughout the world, including Greeks and Armenians, was represented, the outstanding absentee being the church of Rome. As will be remembered by many readers, a delegation of Protestant Episcopal bishops went to Rome in person to invite the Pope to send representatives, but he positively refused to agree that Romanists should enter into a conference with Protestants on questions of faith and order.

The first three days were taken up largely with general statements as to the desirability and the aims of a World Conference. The speakers were men of ability and standing in their own churches. They were unanimous in their expression that much of the weakness of Christianity was that of a house divided against itself, whose energies were partly exhausted by unnecessary warfare, offensive and defensive, between the different denominations. The Conference agreed that the tremendous pressure of the world's needs must drive us closer together to accomplish the one great mission of our Master upon earth. Federation, no matter how close, is certainly far short of the New Testament ideal of the church. Will it be of value to have a great World Conference to discuss as Christian brethren the fundamentals of faith and order? The Appeal of the Lambeth Conference for Reunion was read by the Bishop of Bombay at the beginning of the Conference, and seemed to be a clarion note in favor of the holding of the proposed Conference at an early date, and, indeed, it was soon evident that the Conference was apparently of one mind that the goal sought was so intrinsically desirable that it would justify the calling of a World Conference.

Consequently a Continuation Committee of approximately 45 members was constituted, with an Executive Committee of ten. The leading communions were given representation on the committee in proportion to their world strength: Anglican 5, (Bishop Brent and Dr. Manning are American members), Baptists 5, (Dr. Woelfkin, American), Congregational 4, (Dr. Boykins, American), Disciples 1, (Dr. Ainslie, American), Eastern Church 8, German Evangelical 3, Lutheran 7, (Dr. Morehead, American), Methodist 5, (Bishops McConnell and Cannon, American; Drs. Tasker and Hughes, England; Dr. Hall, Australia), Old Catholic 1, Presbyterians 5, (Drs. Brown and Chester, American). This Continuation Committee was instructed to arrange for the proper consideration and discussion of vital topics such as: What measure of uniformity is necessary for real unity? In what matters is diversity permissible? What is the maximum of agreement required and to what extent is variety permissible? Is a statement of faith in credal form necessary or is freedom incompatible with a creed? What place must the Bible hold in a united church? Are the Sacraments essential? What degree of unity must there be as to ministerial orders? Are there any conditions precedent to ordination or is any particular kind of ordination necessary?

A simple statement of the above topics shows that the proposed Conference will face squarely the real issues upon which Christendom is divided, and will in brotherly spirit earnestly seek to discover the broadest possible platform for those who while loving and following one common Lord, have allowed questions of form and order, not only to separate them, but too often so to absorb their thought and effort that they could give only meagre, half-hearted support to the great aggressive work of saving the world, for which purpose the Master founded His church upon earth.

The date for the meeting of the Conference was not fixed, but, in view of the present disturbed world conditions, it will probably be difficult to arrange for it in a shorter time than two or three years. In the meantime it is estimated that the work necessary for effective organization, meetings of committee, printing and general publicity, will not exceed $50,000 per year.

The International Committee of The World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the Churches met at St. Boatenberg, Switzerland, August 25-28. This meeting was not more important than either of the other Conferences, but as it was not the first meeting of the committee, and its work had been largely shaped up for it by an ad interim committee appointed at the meeting at The Hague in 1910, it was able to take more positive action.

The fundamental idea of the Alliance is that the teaching and the spirit of Jesus should be applied in international relations by the governments of the Christian nations. The Alliance insists that all Christian States shall substitute arbitration for war, and its great purpose and hope is that the Alliance through its National Councils may be able to create and to develop a compelling public sentiment to this great end. Of necessity the Alliance was tremendously handicapped in its work during the progress of the World War, but the war itself has been the greatest possible stimulus to the work of the Alliance and the St. Boatenberg Conference was exceedingly hopeful of the future.

The Committee discussed among other topics: The Renewing of International Life, Disarmament, Labor Organization, The League of Nations, Christian Missions, Christian Co-operation between the peoples who have been at war, Religious Minorities, Christian Unity, Co-operation with Other Organizations, Special Problems, and discussed and adopted resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the body. The Committee reaffirmed and emphasized its deliverance concerning the League of Nations, adopted at the Hague in 1919, stating that the representatives of twenty-three communions "welcome with hopefulness and gratitude the first meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations. For the first time in history there has been brought into existence a body representing the greater part of the world and (as we hope) soon to represent all civilized nations. In it we see an organization capable of becoming the mouthpiece of mankind and the embodiment of its common brotherhood. We believe that it is only by a complete acceptance of such brotherhood, and of all therein implied, that the world can advance towards permanent peace and we are confident that your august Assembly will ever bear in mind this indispensable condition. But we also know that except the Lord build the house their labor is but lost that build it, and we pray that your deliberations may always be guided by Him who rules our destinies. He alone can bring success to your counsels."

The Committee elected as President of the Alliance, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the following Vice-Presidents: The Most Rev., the Archbishop of Uppsala, S. B. Metropolitan of Athens, The Rev. W. P. Merrill, D.D., The Rev. Pasteur Wilfred Monod, Prof. David S. Cairns, D.D., The Rt. Rev. Bishop Alexander Raffay, The Rev. Pfarrer O. Herold, Excellency Dr. J. Th. de Visser.

World Yearning For Co-Operation.

The most striking and the most important feature of all three of these Conferences was the constant manifestation of the world yearning for Christian brotherhood and co-operation. There was a very positive realization on the part of these leaders from every country that the Christian church was facing a situation different from anything in the past generation, if not in the past century. The World War had been waged between nations all of which claimed to be Christian, and it could not be called a sectarian religious war, for Austria, the dearest child of Rome, was lined up with Germany, the country of Luther, on the one side; and Great Britain, the United States, France, Belgium, Italy, Russia—Protestant, Roman Catholic and Greek—lined up on the other side. At all three of these Swiss Conferences there were leaders from the Christian churches of all these countries. While there were some wounds still unhealed, as will be indicated in a later article, the great and dominating thought was that the church of Jesus Christ in all lands must be joined together in such fashion as to declare, aye even to demand, that the rulers of Christian nations never again call upon Christians to fight each other.

Our Unescapable Responsibility.

Every American at these Conferences was obliged to realize the disappointment felt by other nations that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations, that her tremendous material and moral power has not been joined with that of the other nations to help bear the great burden of stabilizing and remolding the life of the world. No matter what the politicians in the United States may do or say, the Christian leaders of the world know that God has committed to the American people power and responsibility, as a member of the family of nations, for which it must finally give an account to Him. It is impossible to blind our eyes to the fact that, while the generosity of our people as individuals is appreciated by all suffering peoples in Europe and Asia, yet the real leaders of Christian thought and life in Europe feel that the United States as a government has deserted the other nations of the world at the very time when her power and prestige were most needed. It is believed that if we had ratified the Treaty of Versailles as promptly as did the other nations, by this time the unrest, threatened revolutions and actual warfare would have ceased. But no matter what the politicians may do or say, the churches of the United States must give forth a continuous, clear-cut testimony of their sense of brotherhood, and, furthermore, of a sense of unabated responsibility for the welfare of the whole world.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By E. B. Chappell, Sunay School Editor.

The mission of the Sunday school is the Christian education of all the people. It deals primarily with childhood and youth. The Christian college finds it exceedingly hard to make any really effective appeal to students who have received no definite religious training during their earlier years, since without such training the religious nature tends very rapidly to become atrophied, thus rendering the awakening of religious interest increasingly difficult. The success of the college, therefore, in preparing men and women for Christian leadership is largely dependent upon their previous religious training. In other words, if the agencies dealing with the religious education of childhood fail to meet their responsibilities, the task of the Christian college becomes well-nigh impossible.

Furthermore, it must not be forgotten that only about one-third of one per cent of our American boys and girls ever enter college, and of course the proportion of those who enroll in church colleges is very much smaller. This means that a vast majority of the people of America are dependent upon the home and the Sunday school for all the Christian education they are ever to receive. What this involves in the way of opportunity and responsibility for the Sunday school becomes apparent when we come to consider the present serious decline of Christian education in the home. The Sunday school, while seeking by every possible means to awaken parents to a realization of their responsibility for religious training of their children, must do its best to meet the present crisis in such a way as to save us from the dire consequences which would result from the growing up of almost an entire generation without religious training.

Those who are acquainted with present conditions know that the Sunday school as it exists today is not equal to this responsibility. There has been great improvement during recent years, but the goal at which we aim, namely, making every Sunday school a really effective educational institution, is still so far ahead of us that it appears almost like an impossible dream.

The officers and teachers in most of our Sunday schools are not only untrained, but have such an inadequate realization of the meaning and importance of their work that they feel under no special obligation to attempt to fit themselves for it. And these untrained teachers must do their work in most cases in a weekly session of one hour conducted in a one-room building and with the most meager equipment in the way of general helps.

It is not strange that under such conditions the average Sunday school session is dull and perfunctory, that the attendance is irregular, that most of the pupils give no attention whatever to the preparation of lessons and that a majority of them drop out altogether soon after entering their teens.

These statements are not made in order to disparage the work of the Sunday school. In spite of its limitations it is rendering a service to the church and to society in general the value of which is beyond computation. But it is only touching the rim of its possibilities, and what I have in mind is such an increase of its efficiency as will make it the potent factor that it should be in promoting the religious life of our church and our nation.

Before this comes about, however, it must be adequately housed, thoroughly equipped and furnished with a body of trained and consecrated officers and teachers. And this will require an investment of time, energy and money which we shall not be able to command until the whole church is awakened to the importance of its educational task.

This brings me to the point suggested by the title to this article: What interest has the Sunday school in the Educational Campaign? There are two ways in which the campaign will relate itself directly to the work of the Sunday school:

1. The Educational Campaign is to be much more than a campaign for the raising of funds. Our leaders have at length come to see that we can never develop an effective system of religious education until the rank and file of our people are thoroughly convinced of its importance. Appeals made even to good people in behalf of a cause about which they know but little and in which, therefore, they feel no vital interest are sure to fall on deaf ears. Understanding this, the Educational Commission has wisely decided to inaugurate by far the most thorough and comprehensive campaign of enlightenment in regard to the meaning and importance of Christian education that our church has ever undertaken. Facts are to be marshalled and presented in all sorts of ways, by the spoken word, by the printed page, by charts, by pictures showing our present national needs and perils and how these needs may be met and these perils averted and the church started on a new career of conquest and achievement through a vital and comprehensive program of religious education. And, of course, the Sunday school will share in even greater measure than the church college in the beneficial results of such a propaganda.

2. As has already been indicated, the greatest need of our Sunday schools to-day is for a trained leadership. We have already noted the fact that a large proportion of these schools are woefully inefficient. And yet it is a matter of common observation that any community in which there is a single strong, consecrated and prepared man or woman to take the lead may have a successful Sunday school. This shows that with a sufficient number of such men and women we could have a successful school in every community of our territory.

But where are we to look for such leaders? Not to State and independent institutions. They furnish neither the atmosphere nor the training required for the development of religious leaders.

Some of our most useful Sunday school workers have arisen from the ranks with only such assistance as came to them through reading and observation, but their number is very small in comparison with the immense demand.

The only possible agency upon which we may depend to supply this demand is the church college; and the church college cannot supply it, unless it is adequately endowed and equipped.

In other words, the success of our entire program of religious education depends ultimately upon the church college, and the ability of the church college to discharge its responsibility will be in direct proportion to our liberality in meeting its financial needs.

There is not a single little country Sunday school in the most remote section of our territory that has not a direct and vital interest in our Educational Campaign. In the end its success will mean for both country and city more capable leadership and therefore better Sunday schools, better churches, richer community life and a higher type of citizenship. Sunday school workers who do not do all they can do to insure its success will show themselves either blind to a great opportunity or indifferent to a sacred obligation.

REV. J. F. WYNN—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. P. H. Fontaine.

It seems to us that the proper measure of a human life is its influence for good upon the lives of others; so there is the desire on the part of the writer to express his appreciation of the late Rev. J. F. Wynn.

When the writer came to Louisiana to assume his first pastorate, he found himself in charge of a circuit that embraced a large part of Grant and Winn Parishes, in which territory there were no railroads, so he purchased a horse, saddle, bridle and saddle-bags and became a real circuit rider.

Among all the stalwart Christian characters that composed our predecessors, there were none who stood higher in the estimation of the people than Brother Wynn, who had served three different quadrennlums there and who was known to every inhabitant.

He served his charge on horseback and was a true follower of Wesley in his unflagging zeal. He visited all the people and, if possible, prayed in every home. The saints trusted him, for he was a saintly man; the young men admired him, for he was a strong character; the sinners respected him for his honesty and kindly interest in them. and the children loved him, for he loved them. took them upon his knees and told them of the children's Christ.

He had more appointments than he could fill on Sunday, so he had week-day services and the people would leave their work to attend. He professed the experience of perfect love, and best of all, he lived it.

The effect of such a character upon a young preacher is inestimable. Eternity alone can reveal it. The sons and daughters are all Christians. which is not surprising, with such a father.

THE PERAMBULATOR STOPS.

The first stop of our long ride of thirty-one hundred and sixty-six miles from New Orleans to Vancouver was at Banff, in the heart of the Rocky Mountain Park, which covers an area of 2,750 square miles with trails leading in every direction. The Canadian Pacific Railway has erected here a first-class hotel with dining-room sufficient for 600 people at a time; and when we went to dinner we were requested to wait in the lobby till a table was vacated, so popular is the place. Its popularity is due to swimming, as an excellent swimming pool of sulphur water warmed by nature to that degree which make it most pleasing to the body lies at the entrance to the hotel, while right alongside of it, and into which you may jump from the warm sulphur pool, is a fresh water pool filled with the water that comes from away up in the mountains. Besides these pools, the Government has erected a handsome $150,000 swimming pool at the Basin just one mile away. But there are also golf and tennis and boating and the Government Recreation Grounds and buildings, and also walking and climbing, drives and automobiles and pony trips as well, to your heart's content.

Among the many beautiful walks around Banff may be mentioned Bow Fall, at the junction of the Bow and Spray rivers and five minutes' walk from the hotel. A beautiful pine avenue runs from the Bow bridge to the foot of the falls below the hotel passing by the fish hatchery, while on the other side of the river is the road which "switchbacks" up Tunnel Mountain, the highest point being reached by a series of short switches called the Corkscrew. Behind the hotel, rising to an elevation of 7455 feet, is Sulphur Mountain, at the summit of which is an observatory, and on the slopes of which is the clubhouse of the Alpine Club of Canada. In plain view as one walks may be seen such heights as Cascade Mt., Mt.Rundle, Mt. Edith, Stony Squaw, all of which may be climed in a day. There are said to be over 300 miles of trail in the Rocky Mountain Park and along them the tourist may find many worth-while trips. We saw all that we could in the 24 hours our party was here and the memory of the day will linger with us always—though we all want to come again and hope that the next time we can stay at least a week so as to roam over, about and around such places as Mystic Lake, Ghost River, Kananaskis Lakes, Panther River, White Mouse Pass and Lake Minnewonka.

Our second stop was at Lake Louise, altitude 5670 feet, termed the Pearl of the Canadian Rockies—a lake of the deepest and most exquisite coloring, reflecting the pine forests and cliffs that rise from its shore on either side, while at its back are tremendous snow-covered peaks and gleaming white glaciers which make the spot one of the most exquisite in all the world. On first sight one is just satisfied to sit on the gallery of the hotel and look at the dignity of this wonderful lake and its surroundings—and as my Irish friend would say, "drink it all in" so wonderful is its charm—but there are many things to be seen besides Lake Louise, as beautiful as that is, for at the west of the hotel the trail rises gradually to Mirror Lake, 980 feet higher, and on further 225 feet to Lake Agnes, termed the lake in the clouds, as its altitude is 6,875 feet. There are beautiful views on the way up, and the trail is fairly good and not a very steep climb in any place. On the shore a charming tea house has been established and it's "the thing" to take a cup of tea, a sandwich and a few cakes for which you pay 85 cents, and would pay more were it demanded, so keen has your appetite become because of the two and a half mile climb you have had. Continuing around Lake Agnes and up a zigzag path, the observation house on the Big Bee Hive is reached and those who took the latter trail report a magnificent view. Our party chose, after reaching Lake Agnes, to take the trail up the Little Bee Hive, from whose summit a magnificent view of the Bow Valley was obtained, while beyond the valley and right in front of the Little Bee Hive, though some 5 miles distant, was a background of mountains rising tier upon tier. So wonderful is the scene that one has to exclaim with the Psalmist: "Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised! Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, are the mountains of His Holiness."

Many days could be spent here and delightful trips made to Lookout Point, Saddle-back Cabin, Victoria and LeRay Glaciers, Moraine Lake and Valley of the Ten Peaks, Paradise Valley, Sentinel Pass and Consolation Lake; but our stay of 24 hours would only permit the view of the Lake and the climb to Little Bee Hive, for we must needs continue our journey in order to reach Vancouver by Saturday night.

Certainly we have enjoyed our visit to God's out-of-doors and we hope to return again and view the wonderful scenery the Heavenly Father has placed in this part of the world for his children to enjoy—but we must now turn our eyes to the Orient, for thither are we bound upon a great missionary experience to attend the World's Sunday School Association Convention at Tokyo, and to travel through Japan, Korea and China, giving what we can to help our brothers in Christ who all these years have been standing like true soldiers in these lands of unenlightenment and getting such a vision that, when we return to the church at home, we may awaken them to the real need of the hour. The distance to Yokohama from Vancouver is 4200 miles and we will be sixteen days on the water. Perhaps a "log" of each day's doings will prove the most interesting to my readers, so we will try that in our next.

THE PERAMBULATOR.

INTRODUCING DR. JOHN HUGH REYNOLDS, OUR NEW DIRECTOR-GENERAL.

By Dr. A. C. Millar, Editor of Arkansas Methodist.

Because he has worked in the public schools of Arkansas and is still trying to improve them, all the public school teachers love him. Trying to uplift the rural schools and help the farmer, he is honored in the country homes. Giving eleven years to the State University and one year its acting president, and still anxious to see Arkansas have a great university and strong agricultural and normal schools, he has the confidence of all the State institutions. Himself a product of the church college and a factor in its development, he has the friendship of all the denominational schools. Working for better salaries and advantages for the preachers, he is in the hearts of the pastors. Interested in Y. M. C. A. and other activities for youth, he is the ideal man in the minds of the young people. Advocating big things and handling funds judiciously, he has the backing of business and professional men. Standing for progressive political standards and studying passing events in the light of history, he is the confidential adviser of statesmen and publicists. Anxious to help the weak and prevent race clashes, he is the trusted friend of whites and blacks in their efforts to establish better relations.

A native of the county which Ople Read has made famous, a graduate of Hendrix College, with a master's degree from the University of Chicago and the honorary LL. D. from his State University, with horizon widened by a year at Oxford University and in European travel, long a student and teacher of History and Political Science in Hendrix College, Dr. John Hugh Reynolds, at fifty, is a man of large and varied experience and attainments. He has achieved everything that he has undertaken, because he has a large endowment of common sense, patience, good humor, and the ability to see things whole and to co-operate with other men. In our General Conference as a lay delegate three times, in the General Board of Education, in the Unification Commission, and in the Arkansas Constitutional Convention, he has shown grasp of essentials, willingness to yield in minor points, a disposition to be fair, and unfailing Christian courage. Becoming president of Hendrix College at a critical period, he has in seven years had the pleasure of helping to increase its assets from $100,000 to $800,000, and now, although it is one of our youngest colleges, it is paying salaries that are among the largest paid by any of the Southern colleges.

As lay director Dr. Reynolds rendered invaluable service in the Centenary Campaign in the North Arkansas Conference, and as a member of the Y. M. C. A. War Work Council he gave much time to patriotic activities during the progress of the war.

Never pushing himself into unnecessary responsibilities, he has nevertheless cheerfully accepted the tasks to which he has been called. As a potential factor in projecting the Christian Education Movement he has been, perhaps logically and unexpectedly, thrust into the position of Director-General. With his characteristic loyalty and energy he has entered upon this difficult work and with faith in God and in his fellows is now organizing the forces of the church for victory. His comprehension of the situation and his ability to co-operate with others, to say nothing of his uniform success, recommend him to the church. If his brethren throughout the church trust him, he will show himself worthy of their confidence.

SPURGEON'S CHOICE.

It is related of the late Charles Haddon Spurgeon that at the commencement of his ministry, when he was beginning to feel conscious of the wonderful powers with which God had endowed him—like most young people, I suppose, for he was but a boy, or little more than a boy at the time—he was one day walking across a common and seemed to hear, as it were, a voice speaking to his innermost consciousness in the terms of my text, "Seekest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not." Mr. Spurgeon accepted the text which flashed into his mind as a divine message and monition, and from that moment made a fuller consecration of himself, his life, his opportunity, his power to the service of the living God. We know the result, and looking back upon it we know it better, I venture to think, than he did even on the day of his death, but not better than he knows it now. He chose the good part, which was not taken from him. He set his affections on things above, not on things of the earth.

Now, all that was best worth his while, all that was as the reward of his seeking, and his noble method of living has come to him. We will agree that he chose rightly in the day that he obeyed the divine monition which is our text. Yet remember what it cost him. Mr. Spurgeon was not what we ordinarily call a liberally educated man, and because of certain peculiarities in his methods, and in his manner of setting forth truth, he was exposed to persecution even on the part of well-meaning people. And because he was a prophet, and a faithful servant of God at that, and never blinked the truth, however unwelcome it might be to his hearers, he suffered contumely, and his work was attended by every circumstance of ridicule and contempt. At the outset of his ministry, I think he was almost invariably misunderstood except by the few—for they were comparatively few, after all—that gathered around him. But the time came, and now is, when England saw the value of that man, knew and loved him for his personal worth, and there is scarcely anybody, I should imagine, on the globe to-day who has heard his name but would give him credit for sincerity and unselfishness all his life through, from the first day of his public service for the Master unto the last. We know him now. Well, brethren, there was the secret, after all—he chose an interest higher than his own, and he chose a Master higher and worthier than the world.—Reginald J. Campbell.

MILLIONAIRE PREACHERS.

By Rev. W. W. Holmes.

The Methodist preachers of Mississippi and Louisiana have four hundred and forty-two homes, valued at one million, ninety-two thousand, eight hundred and fifty dollars. They do not have to bother with taxes, insurance or rent. Other people who move, spend a lot of time in "house hunting." Not so with our Methodist preacher. The parsonage is open and waiting for him. It is already partly furnished. In most instances the church people have made it ready for his coming by dressing the walls with new paper, by dusting and sweeping, by building a cheering fire on the hearthstone, by stocking the pantry with all good things, by preparing a bounteous meal, and, best of all, by a welcome, sincere and unmistakable. Think of it, this unstinted hospitality is given to the preacher for whom the people had not asked, and who, to most of the people, is unknown. There is nothing like it in all the world. Unfortunately, too many of us take this cordial welcome as a matter of course, and the parsonage—well, we fuss if it is not just right. We blame and criticise the people for their lack of interest. We say the parsonage is not fit to live in, and may be it isn't. The good people and the brother preacher who preceded us are to blame, and we censure them. This censure is certainly unbecoming in us if the parsonage from which we have come has not been made habitable and beautiful by our stay in it. In fact, very little is ever accomplished by censure and criticism. The things worth while are accomplished only through co-operation.

The parsonage is not a rent house, it is not a camping place; it is the home of the pastor of the church—the preacher's home. It is probably the best known home in all the community. It is visited by more people. Everybody knows that "brother preacher" lives there. The church building may be ever so fine and ever so well kept, but if the parsonage is dilapidated, the fences down, the yard bare and unsightly, and the preacher and his family careless and apparently unconcerned about it all, the preacher can not expect his influence to be the best, and the church itself will suffer in the estimation of the outsider.

The preacher has no greater asset than his home and his home life and these are inseparably bound together with the life of the church. What influence can be more wholesome than that of a godly, happy home? The fact that Methodist preachers are itinerants has made it difficult to build the ideal home, yet we rejoice that so many of these difficulties have been overcome, and that our homes have been so blessed of God as to be a blessing to many.

The parsonage is the preacher's home. He can not very well have any other. It ought to be one of the best homes in the community—best built, best arranged, best kept. It ought to be a model for convenience and a model for beauty. It ought always have the appearance that "somebody is at home." If anybody in the world deserves a good home, it is the Methodist preacher's wife. She, more than the preacher, suffers from the inconveniences of the itinerancy. For her sake, for the sake of the church and the sake of the "brotherhood," we ought to have better parsonages. We can have them, and we will.

How can we get better parsonages, or how can the parsonages we have be made better? The secret is found in a single word: CO-OPERATION. Before we can expect the co-operation from the church, we must first get the co-operation of our preacher brotherhood. In this work is a good place to try out the Golden Rule. As it is now, some preachers build up and others tear down. Some put thought and effort into the task of building the home idea into the parsonage; others, by neglect, allow all the hard work of other preachers who have preceded them to come to naught.

The preacher ought at least do as much towards the upkeep of the property as a good renter or tenant. The good tenant will keep the pickets nailed on, and the gate hinged, the garbage removed, the yard clean, the wall paper unscarred, the door locks repaired and many other little things too numerous to mention. The preacher is not a tenant. The house is his as far as the use of it is concerned. Certainly the house is ours—always ours. Every year we will be living in a house that some other preacher has lived in, or will live in, after we have gone. We are landlords, not tenants; owners, not renters.

If the parsonages are ours, and there can be no doubt about it, then we are millionaire preachers and have the greatest opportunity and the greatest incentive to build the most splendid homes in the land. If we work together, this thing can be easily done. We are more than four hundred strong. We have had the advantages of school and travel. We are not unfamiliar with modern conveniences. We have seen the beauty of tree, shrub and flower. We are not averse to working with our hands where "a stitch in time will save nine."

Co-operation on the part of the preachers in the building and rebuilding of parsonage homes will secure a co-operation from the people such as we had never dreamed nor hoped for. If we work together and do our best, the church people will be glad to help. It is but natural that they should take pride in their preacher's home. As a rule they love the preacher and his family and are glad to do anything that will mean comfort and convenience. Co-operation of preachers and people, all working, but all patient, will bring the parsonage, the preachers's home, to its rightful place in the life of the church and the life of the community.

There are certain well defined requirements that determine the Conference appointments. "Good preacher," "good pastor," "good Sunday school man," etc., and how well we understand these terms! That other requirement, "parsonage builder, or home builder," because it is recognized by the people, will be brought to the bishop and his cabinet with increasing emphasis and will govern appointments in years to come more largely than we think. In this time of anarchy and Bolshevism we must do everything possible to establish the Christian home. Where better can we start than in the Methodist parsonage? If there is such a thing as a model home, every Methodist preacher ought to have it. We have the desire, the ideal and the inspiration. We have the opportunity as few others have. May we be thankful, and "faithful in that which is much."

THE TRUTH WITHIN US.

Always the truth must be in us before we can stand in it—the truth of love, of fatherhood, of humanity, the truth of home, and friendship, and high purposes worthy of immortality, before we can stand in the truth of God, and the heavenly home, and the life eternal. Live like a brute, and believe like a son of God? No, never! We cannot do that, for the universe is truthful as well as divine, and there must be truth within answering to the truth of God without, and every falsehood in the heart is a blind spot, and every sin in the soul is a dead nerve, to the light and the love in which Jesus lived on this earth every day as though we were in heaven. Does any man among you want us to prove the existence of God to him? We will not take with us our books of divinity, we will go and search your book of life, and see if we can find any evidence of God there. And if we should find that yesterday or to-day you put down your own desires, and went and did some truth of God; if you, strong man, in your haste, stopped a moment to make that little child happy, or were not ashamed to espouse the cause of that poor man who came to you for righteous help, or if you resisted manfully the devil when he offered to give to you, or your corporation, some kingdom of this world for your compliance with his last fraud, or if you strove even at cost to yourself to see some just thing done on this earth, or in genuine repentance you sought to undo some wrong which you have learned your sin has done, then by these signs and evidence of truth in your book of life, we will bid you find God and worship him; for justice and charity, and fair dealing, and all virtue are essentially divine, and by these things within our hearts we may know the good God above us and all around us, whom having not seen we love. —Newman Smyth.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At the forthcoming Conference at Charleston, Mr. M. W. Brabham, Superintendent of the Department of Circuit Sunday School Work, will represent the General Board and will deliver the address at the anniversary on Friday evening. We are delighted to have Mr. Brabham visit our Conference session. A very large part of our work is in the country, and Mr. Brabham is thoroughly familiar with conditions such as obtain throughout our territory. He is a vigorous young business man and will make us a great address at Charleston. The anniversary will be held at 7:30 p. m., Friday, November 19.

A PROPOSED POLICY FOR CITY METHODISM.

By Rev. O. E. Goddard, D.D.

Southern Methodism said for many years, "We have no well-defined policy for our city Methodism." We said it so often that it came to pass that we could say it without blushing. So long as we had but few cities and no revenue especially provided for grappling with the city problem, we could excuse ourselves. Times have changed. There are now more than thirty great cities within the territory occupied by the Southern Methodist Church. These are all growing with incredible rapidity. The South was once a rural country, once the southern population was rural, but it is rapidly becoming a great aggregation of cities and our people are becoming urban astonishingly fast. Before the present population goes hence there will likely be one hundred cities within our territory with population ranging from one hundred thousand to a million or more.

The cities of the future more than in the past will be the centers of wealth, culture, politics, religion, vice, and all the factors that make up modern civilization. In the past the sturdy country boy left the farm and finally forged his way to the front in the cities. In the cities of to-day many, perhaps the major part of the bankers, merchants, political leaders, ministers, came from the country. This will not be true in the future. The cities are assuming such gigantic proportions, life is becoming so complex that rising to the top in city life in the future will be a vastly more difficult matter than it has been in the past. The city in the future will produce its own leadership. Sons of the present leaders in the cities will in many cases succeed their fathers in business and in other lines. The politicians may continue to tell the "dear people" in the country they will furnish the leadership of the city as they did in the past, but some of us know that this is political bosh. Cities are of necessity learning to produce their own leaders.

What should the church do to meet the exigencies arising from this great aggregation of peoples in the cities? If the cities are to be the centers from which shall emanate those influences that shall make the civilization of the future, what must the church do? Our Methodism succeeded with the rural work when this country was so largely rural. How shall we face the city? How are we succeeding? Methodism must have adaptability enough to meet any and all new conditions. To acknowledge that we have not the polity or doctrine that could be adapted to emerging conditions would be a confession to impotency that no one is authorized to make for Methodism.

We have some individual churches in the cities that are doing great work. Some of them are great evangelistic centers, doing business for the eternities. Some of them are social service centers, applying the Gospel of Christ to alleviating human sufferings here, ministering to all the needs of sin-sick, depraved humanity. Some of them are great centers where great congregations of cultured people hear the Word of God preached from Sunday to Sunday by men of eminent gifts and superb powers. Let nothing be inferred from what shall be said that there is here any disparagement of the succesful men now filling our city pulpits, nothing derogatory of the great churches that are fulfilling their God-given mission in the world. Nevertheless, we as a church, are not satisfied with our city work as a whole. The cities are getting away from us. The leavening influence of the Gospel is not saving the city as it should. We are not now saving humanity, saving society as effectively as our fathers did in the days of rural life. What shall we do? Wherein is the weakness of our present order of things?

Many say that so long as we have such short-term pastorates we cannot have strong churches in the cities nor can we develop men of such commanding power as to be dominant factors in a city. There may be much truth in this statement. It is not the purpose, however, of this article to discuss the merits or demerits of a four-year limit on the pastorate. The writer is frank to say that he thinks the removal of all calendar limits on the pastorate is a desideratum. He is also frank to say that the present law that is a modification of the time limit, as passed by the last General Conference, is a hybrid, neither congregational nor episcopal. If such a mixture of two forms of church government could work amicably, it would be more than the eighth wonder of the world. But it is not the purpose of the writer to locate our present inefficiency in city work in the present law, nor in the fact that we have had short pastorates. There are more fundamental difficulties and weaknesses than these.

Our city Methodism lacks esprit de corps. It lacks homogeneousness, it lacks family consciousness, it lacks the ability to deliver itself in a collective way. It lacks co-ordination and unification. It must learn to work as a unit in a city. It must learn how to deliver itself with a solid impact on a city in whatever matter it undertakes. To reach this ideal some things now prevalent must be eliminated. Methodist churches in a city competing with each other is unpardonable. It is quite as unseemly as brothers and sisters of the same family competing with each other. Some pastors are great sinners in this regard. Yet there is less reason for unethical competition among Methodist preachers than among any other denomination. The Methodist pastor who is doing unethical things against another church may be placed there as pastor next year. Of all pastors who should never say, "my church," most conspicuous is a Methodist pastor. He belongs to the Conference; to the itinerancy; never to the local church.

There are certain things which each congregation can and must do within itself, and certain other things which Methodism can do for a city only by doing team work. This class of work grows larger and larger with the passing of the years. Cities are becoming so big, so unwieldy, that single churches cannot impress and influence a city as they did in days gone by. More and more we shall have to learn so to combine our resources that we may deliver Methodism upon a city in a collective way. We have a good illustration of this in the recent simultaneous revival campaign. In many cities where often one church had attempted revival services without creating a ripple on the surface of a city when working alone, this past spring when all the churches combined and Methodism delivered itself in an evangelistic way the city sat up and took notice. The city felt the impress of the effort. Many thousands of people were reached and brought to Christ and into the church, who could not, so far as human mind can see, have been reached otherwise. The single churches in our big cities cannot any more move a city. A combination of churches can. So with educational, reform and social service movements.

What is Southern Methodism doing to reach this ideal? At the last session of the Board of Missions the Home Department submitted a proposed plan for city work. Looking to this end the following plan was adopted:

Be it resolved, That we recommend the following suggested outline of organization for the conduct of city mission work where our congregations and woman's auxiliaries desire to unite in such work, the same being a revised draft of a plan referred to this committee on yesterday:

Preliminary to any organization let the presiding elders, pastors, and district secretaries who may be related to any proposed work, together with the secretaries of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, make a survey of the field and approve the plan and the location of the work to be undertaken.

When such approval is secured, any city or town having two or more churches and auxiliaries may organize a City Board of Missions to promote local missionary enterprises, including evangelistic activities, relief work, social service, and institutional welfare work in such sections of the city as there is need.

We would recommend that such a City Board of Missions be composed of representatives from each co-operating congregation and auxiliary on the following basis: One representative from each congregation for every one hundred members or fraction thereof, and three representatives from each auxiliary, the representatives from the congregation being nominated by the respective official boards and from the auxiliaries by the members of the respective auxiliaries, and elected by the quarterly conference. No person can at the same time represent both the congregation and the auxiliary. The Board shall be composed, as nearly as expedient, of an equal number of men and women. The Council or Conference officers and the Annual Conference secretaries residing in the city, the presiding elders and the district secretaries of the district shall be ex-officio members of the City Mission Board.

Officers.

The officers of the Board shall be a President, two Vice Presidents, one representing the congregation and one the auxiliaries; the Vice President from the auxiliaries to have direction of the work and workers for women, girls, and children; the Vice President from the congregations to have direction of the work for men and boys; a Corresponding Secretary, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, and a Superintendent of the Departments. These officers, with the presiding elders and the District Secretaries, shall constitute the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee, as nearly as is expedient, shall be composed of an equal number of representatives from the congregations and the auxiliaries. All action of the Executive Committee shall be submitted to the City Board for approval. The officers shall be elected annually from the membership of the Board.

Function.

Such Board shall have authority to regulate its own proceedings and to make its own by-laws; to raise and appropriate money for the conduct of the work; to employ and supervise workers; to determine the policies and departments of the work to be undertaken, provided these policies conform to the laws and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and in no sense contravene the laws and rules of the Board of Missions and the Woman's Missionary Council.

Revenue.

The revenue from this work shall be derived from offerings from the churches and missionary auxiliaries, and may be supplemented by appropriations from the Board of Missions.

Meetings.

There shall be one or more regular meetings of the Board each month, and called meetings when necessary. The Executive Committee shall hold one or more regular monthly meetings.

Amendments.

The Constitution of such Boards may be amended at any regular meeting, after due notice has been given, by a three-fourths vote of the members present and voting, and the concurrence of the Board of Missions and the Woman's Missionary Council.

Plans are now being made to set up such an organization in several of our largest cities. It is hoped that we are at the incipiency of a policy that shall result in so combining our city Methodism in the cities that we may be a mighty power in saving the modern city. In the meantime, let us all be thoughtful, careful and prayerful, lest the city get away from us.

TWO KINDS OF SOULS.

There are two sorts of souls. Those who seek for themselves the advantages of things as they are, and those who seek to give themselves to the advantages of things as they ought to be, and therefore may be made to be; those who accept advancement and those who confer it; those who would exploit the world, and those who would save it—benefactors and malefactors—Christ and the thieves!

If shadows are to fall from truth, and falsehood die, the times challenge and demand souls who shall be filled with the instinct of help, souls ablaze with that love which ever "Seeketh not her own," who, born for resolute, aggressive and undaunted leadership, are exemplars in interpreting every lost task by the largest ideals.—M. Woolsey Stryker.

The Home Circle

BRAVERY.

In daytime I am always brave,
And very boldly I behave—
I play at hunting and at war,
And slay big dragons by the score.
But when the darkness comes along,
Somehow I do not feel so strong;
And when I go to bed at night
I like to take my candle light.

The stairway is so dark and long
That, though I know there's nothing wrong,
Sometimes I look behind to see
If any Thing is following me.
And when I pass a shadowy nook
I sort o' stare, and look—and look!
And then it's pleasant to hold tight
Onto my little candle light.

And when I'm in my little bed
I pull the covers 'round my head,
With just my eyes a-looking out
To see the shadows creep about.
Dark shapes the corners seem to fill
Of course I'm not afraid, but still
It is a very comfy sight
To see my little candle light.

SUSIE SPIDER.

"Now, dears," said Mamma Spider, as she tied on her bonnet, "you must all be good children."

"Yes, mamma," said Susie Spider and her eighteen brothers and sisters.

"As soon as grandmother is well again, I'll come home," said Mamma Spider. Give Auntie Ant as little trouble as possible. It's very kind of her to look after you while I'm gone."

"Yes, mamma," said Susie Spider and her eighteen brothers and sisters.

Mamma Spider kissed her nineteen children good-bye—did you ever hear nineteen little spiders crying at once?—and Auntie Ant put on her spectacles, ready to take charge.

"First," said Auntie Ant, briskly, "we'll have the spinning lesson."

So Susie Spider and her eighteen brothers and sisters crept into their corners. And the eighteen little brothers and sisters began spinning at their little webs, just as they did every morning. But just as she did not every morning, little Susie Spider did not.

"I don't want to spin," she said to herself. "Mamma doesn't make me. She doesn't know when I run away. And I won't spin for Auntie Ant!"

So she waited until Auntie Ant's back was turned. She was sure that she would not be missed, and she stole out into the sunlight.

The eighteen brothers and sisters began playing a new game. Auntie Ant stood on a toadstool and taught them. They climbed to the tops of the tallest grass blades, and they dropped rope ladders and swung on them.

"I want to play, too," said Susie Spider to her nearest sister. "Won't you lend me a rope?"

"But you have to spin it while you're swinging," said the nearest sister. "It's lots of fun. See?"

"Why aren't you playing, Susie Spider?" asked Auntie Ant.

"I think I'm tired," said Susie Spider.

"Perhaps you've been working too hard," said Auntie Ant.

Goodness, how sharp her eyes were!

By and by the eighteen brothers and sisters finished their play. Besides, it was beginning to rain. So they went in to dinner. And Susie Spider went with them.

Auntie Ant was busy stirring the batter cakes. She let the eighteen brothers and sisters set the table. There was some confusion about the napkins, but by the time the cakes were off the griddle every one was ready.

Auntie Ant sat at the head of the table and served the plates. She still wore her spectacles. But for some reason she did not see very well, for there were plates for only eighteen little spiders, and she could not see Susie Spider at all.

"Please, Auntie Ant," said Susie Spider, "you forget me."

"Where's your plate?" asked Auntie Ant.

"I haven't any," said Susie Spider.

"Strange!" said Auntie Ant; "there are just as many plates as there are webs in the spinning room. I counted twice, to make sure."

Susie Spider wished that she had not come to the table, although she was dreadfully hungry. If she had had a web in the spinning room, Auntie Ant would not look at her like that. It seemed that, after all, there was some use in spinning.

By and by the eighteen brothers and sisters finished their dinner and helped Auntie Ant with the dishes. Susie Spider helped, too. But she was not a bit happy.

The rain was still falling; so Auntie Ant took her knitting, while Susie Spider and her eighteen brothers and sisters curled up in their beds for a nap. They were wakened by Auntie Ant's shaking them hard. Then she made them climb with her up to the roof.

All round was water! The rain had stopped, but the flood was creeping up the sides of the house; it was coming to cover the roof.

Susie Spider and her eighteen brothers and sisters did not have time to be frightened. As Auntie Ant told them, it was another game. They should spin their little ropes and swing out over the water to the fine, stout mullein plant opposite. And the wind was all ready to help them, too!

The eighteen brothers and sisters spun their little ropes, as Auntie Ant said. And the wind lifted them and swung them safely to the mullein plant opposite. And only Susie Spider was left with Auntie Ant upon the roof.

"Spin, Susie Spider!" cried Auntie Ant. "You must, child."

"But what will you do?" asked Susie Spider.

"Never mind me," said Auntie Ant. "I promised your mother to keep you safe. The wind will catch you. Spin, child, and go!"

Then little Susie Spider did a curious thing. She spun a bit of rope—not very fine and not very even, for it was the first time that she had spun in her careless little life; but it was strong. And she fastened one end to the chimney.

"Come with me, Auntie Ant," said Susie Spider, "or I'll not spin any more."

"Spin, child!" cried Auntie Ant; "I promise to follow, if you will have it so. Only spin!"

So little Susie Spider spun her rope. The wind caught her and swung her safely to the mullein plant opposite. And following her over the rough and knotted little rope came Auntie Ant.

"After all," said Susie Spider, "there is some use in spinning!"—Abigail Burton, in The Youth's Companion.

THE WAY WE REGARD OUR WORK.

I used to think what a difference there was between Mrs. Hart and my mother, though it would have been hard to say which was the strivingest; but it seemed to me that mother kept her work under her like a queen, and wouldn't be a servant to it, while my mistress was a slave to all that was to be got through.

Mother always called the seasons according to the work God was doing outside over the land. With her it was lambing season, and blossoming, and harvest, and seedtime, unless it was Easter, or Whitsuntide, or Christmas.

Mother use to say, "The heavier the work, the least noise;" and I remember well her standing out with me in our garden one day, looking all down the valley when the harvest was ripe, and saying, "Look-a-down, lass, on all that the Lord's hand is doing over the land." It's grand to think that when the sun comes out of his chambers, and when the blossoms and the fruit and the corn and all are brought forth, it's all wrought so still, and no one hears him doing; and it makes one feel it the more like a kind of a Presence when, as it says in the psalms, "The storms are for his chariot, and he goeth on the wings of the wind." I think it's a lesson to them that he's put here to do their duty in the state of life to which it has pleased him to call them—showing them that his way is to work still, whether it's in the earth or on the souls of men, and that their duties are done best to please him when there's the most thought over them, and the least noise.—Copsley Annals.

MY WANTS.

I do not ask for splendid circumstance,
Ambition I will have, if God approve,
Pleasure, perhaps, if paid for in advance.
Money I need, but never learned to love.
This wish is mine—to wipe away a tear.
To woo the sunshine to a shadowed face.
I want to brighten up the way for all
Whose pathway crosses mine, this day of grace.
A hearty grip I'd give to him who fighting fell,
Courageous word to all with waning faith;
I want my Father God, my brother man as well,
I need them much in life, and more at death.

CO-OPERATIVE EVANGELISM.

Evangelism is one work of the church which is never out of place and never out of date. From the beginning of a pastorate to its very close, from the first day of January to the last day of Deeember, it is in order to tell the good news of salvation and to urge men to accept the offer of grace. Some seasons may be more propitious than others for definite evangelistic campaigns, but every day is a good day for the soul that would seek God.

Saving the world is the mission of the church, but the world can be saved only as the individuals in it are saved. There may be great mass movements, in which thousands turn from their sins in a day, but if a deep work of grace has really been wrought, every one of those thousands has felt his individual responsibility to God and has individually committed his life to God. And that individual has, in all probability, been brought to realize his need of God through the instrumentality of some other individual.

As we ordinarily think of it, the preacher is especially charged with the duty of proclaiming the good news of salvation both to the congregation and to the individual. And he is; but it is impossible for him to do all that needs to be done, or to reach all that can and ought to be reached. Being a man, he labors under human limitations, and his personal activities are bounded by his ability to come into personal eontaet with the people of his eommunity.

It is for this reason, therefore, that we lay emphasis upon the idea of co-operative evangelism. What the preacher cannot do alone, can easily be done by a group of people working in close sympathy and harmony. The burden of souls should rest no more heavily upon the heart of the minister than it does upon the heart of every real Christian, and the minister should always have many willing helpers in the glorious work of bringing men to God. Co-operative evangelism will make all our churches places of light and happiness and joy.

AN INFORMED CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

When we consider the numerical strength of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, its financial resources, its great achievements in the past, its eomprehensive program for the future, we are filled with wonder and our hearts swell with pardonable pride. But when we realize that its continued sueeess is dependent upon the maintenance of a membership thoroughly informed as to its purposes, plans, and the regular progress of its work, we confess to grave misgivings. Our people, as a rule, are devout, our preachers are diligent and efficient, our leaders are wide-visioned and competent; but an essential part of the foundation upon which all progress must be builded is lacking unless we have means of disseminating widely information that will encourage, inspire, and strengthen the membership of the church at large.

Long experience has proved that the periodical literature of the church is the most efficient means we have for spreading broadcast the information that all our people need; yet we have been exceedingly slow to make adequate use of this literature. Simply for the sake of illustration, we call attention to the situation as it exists in Louisiana and Mississippi, reminding our readers at the same time that the situation is not exceptional in these two States.

The Minutes of the Annual Conferences of these States show that our membership exceeds 160,000—about 40,000 in Louisiana, and 120,000 in Mississippi. The New Orleans Christian Advocate, established in 1850 to meet a need that was recognized as urgent then as it is now, is the official organ of these Conferences, owned and controlled by them through a Publishing Committee of nine members—three from each Conference. The present circulation of the Advocate is approximately 10,000. If we assume that full ten thousand copies go into the homes of the Methodists of these two States, and that each copy is read by four church members—a liberal estimate—there would still be 120,000 members of the church who never read their own paper, and who are, therefore, necessarily uninformed concerning much that vitally concerns the church to which they have given their allegiance. On the face of it, this is a situation which should arouse our active eoncern, and stir us to a determined effort to bring about a great improvement in the immediate future.

The church has many things to teach the world—but it can well afford to learn some things from the experience of those who have achieved suecess in worldly affairs. One of these lessons is that newspaper publicity is to-day an almost indispensable factor in the accomplishment of any great undertaking. Business firms spend thousands of dollars every year in advertising their goods; the great political parties rely very largely upon the newspapers to carry their appeals to the remotest sections of the country; the Government has learned that the best possible way to enlist the interest of the people in its activities is by educating them through the public press; in many fraternal organizations, membership carries with it a subscription to the official organ of the organization. The church probably knows the value of publicity, but it has not yet learned how to use it in the most effective way. It is time for it to give most earnest and serious consideration to this exceedingly important matter.

It is seriously to be doubted whether a creditable circulation of a church paper can ever be secured by considering it purely as a commercial proposition. Since its object is not to make money, but to reach as many people as possible with its helpful messages of religious activities and thought, it is not a business enterprise, but more of a missionary undertaking; and its support may very properly be urged upon that basis. By the very nature of the case, it is cut off from certain sources of revenue that a purely secular paper may make use of, and its independent existence is consequently always precarious and sometimes impossible.

The approaching Annual Conferences will have many matters of importance to engage their attention, and their sessions will likely be crowded with urgent items of business; but we are thoroughly convinced that the time will be well spent that is devoted to a consideration of ways and means of enlarging materially the circulation of their official organ.

AN ECONOMICAL CAMPAIGN.

One of the wonders of the great Centenary Campaign was the small ratio of expense to the amount secured in valid pledges. Private business enterprises have not approached it in economy of administration, and the great Government and welfare organization drives during the war far exceeded its cost on a comparative basis.

It is likewise thoroughly understood that the Christian Education Movement will be conducted in a way that will eliminate every item of expense that is not necessary. The sin of extravagance, so characteristic of our nation, will be shunned even as to its appearance, and only such amounts will be expended in carrying forward the Movement as are necessary to insure its success. We hope, however, that the leaders of the Movement will feel that the church is so thoroughly behind them in this great undertaking that they will not hamper themselves in their necessary activities by the fear that they will be subjected to criticism for perfectly legitimate expenditures. A great cause is at stake, and we are sure all our people want to see this campaign carried through in the most effective way possible; they are not afraid that Christian men will squander the church's money.

A "PAY-UP" SUNDAY.

What a fine thing it would be for all concerned if every pastoral charge were fully ready for Conference, all claims provided for, all assessments paid, and money enough in the treasury for the beginning of another year! Some churches are in just that happy condition. The preacher is not losing any sleep at night because of an impending deficit, the stewards are not perturbed in spirit because collections are coming in slowly, and the membership at large is not being importuned to make a special effort to pay their pledges—and a little more—before the preacher leaves for Conference.

Why should not all our churches be in this happy frame of mind within the next two or three weeks? Maybe the appointment of a "pay-up" Sunday would bring it about. Instead of prolonging the "final drive" until the very last day of the Conference year, it would be possible, in many places at least, to have it all done and over within one day; then everybody would be happy, and special atention could be given to the devotional and evangelistic features of the work during these closing weeks of the year.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. R. H. Bennett has come to his office in Nashville. Dr. Bennett is head of the Life Service and Intercession Department of the Christian Education Movement.

Dr. R. N. Allen, of Kansas City, has been appointed Conference Educational Secretary for the Southwest Missouri Conference.

According to press reports, Gypsy Smith will spend the coming winter in America. His first meeting will be in Louisville, Ky., beginning October 17.

The Fifteenth International Conference of Railroad Young Men's Christian Associations of North America will be held in Richmond, Va., November 18-21.

Dr. J. W. Johnson, from Eleventh Avenue Church, Birmingham, Ala., succeeds Dr. Leonidas Robinson as pastor of Fourth Avenue Church, Louisville, Ky.

On last Sunday at 11 a.m., Dr. John T. Sawyer filled the pulpit of Second Church, the pastor, Rev. J. A. Alford, being away. He reports having a good congregation and a delightful Lord's Supper.

From our exchanges we learn that Dr. Len G. Broughton, the well-known Baptist minister, goes from Knoxville, Tenn., to Richmond, Va., where he will be pastor of Grove Avenue Baptist Church.

Mrs. J. C. Sugg, of Amory, Miss., writes that the Advocate has ben coming to her home for fifty years, and that it has become a real part of the family life. We pray that it may continue to be a great blessing.

Dr. J. Campbell White has become vice president of the Bible Teachers' Training School, New York, of which institution his brother, Dr. Wilbert W. White, has been president from its beginning, twenty years ago.

Mrs. R. H. Wynn, wife of our pastor at Ruston, La., was in New Orleans during the meeting of the State Epworth League Cabinet, and remained several days visiting friends.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, had an all-day meeting on Tuesday of this week. This society is thoroughly organized and is aggressively at work.

Brother J. A. Seegers, of Haynesville, La., honored the Advocate office with a call while in the city on business on Friday of last week. He is the father of Rev. S. A. Seegers, of the Louisiana Conference.

Our church at Holly Springs, Miss., made a great occasion of Promotion Day in the Sunday school on the last Sunday in September. Great preparations are also being made for Rally Day next Sunday. Rev. W. R. Lott is pastor.

The Methodist Book Concern celebrated the one hundreth anniversary of its establishment at Cincinnati, Ohio, on October 6. It now has branches at Boston, Pittsburg, Chicago, Kansas City, Detroit, San Francisco, and Portland, Oregon.

Brother P. M. Franklin, of Oxford, Miss., Route 4, has been taking the Advocate for eighteen years, and he says that he has missed only one copy in all that time. He says, too, that we may count on him as a life-time subscriber. Blessings upon him!

Randolph-Macon Woman's College turned away 400 girls this year. Lander College turned away 100 and Wesleyan 325. This is the situation in most of our colleges. They have not room to accommodate the girls and boys who are eager for the kind of education which they alone can give.

Our Sunday school at Clarksdale, Miss., has grown within the past year from a membership of 200 to 538, and, according to the Clarksdale Daily Register, the entire membership was apparently present at the Promotion Day services on September 26. Rev. E. Nash Broyles is the pastor.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago opened its fall term with an attendance in its day classes of more than 800, about evenly divided between men and women, and an attendance at its evening classes of about an equal number. In its Correspondence Department, it has an enrollment of 6,700.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary secretary-treasurer for the Louisiana Conference, has been visiting a number of charges in the interest of his work during the past few weeks. The American-Express, of Lake Charles, La., gives a fine account of his addresses at the local Methodist church on Sunday, September 26.

The Christian Education Movement has appointed Messrs. A. E. Clement, C. C. Camden, and H. D. Dulmage as field men to arrange for the regional conferences to be held this month. These conferences will be held at Atlanta, Ga., Richmond, Va., Nashville, Tenn., St. Louis, Mo., Jackson, Miss., and Dallas, Tex.

Dr. U. G. Foote, who has served Rayne Memorial Church, this city, most efficiently for the past four years, has been transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conferenee and appointed to Central Church, Kansas City. Dr. Foote has made many warm friends in the Louisiana Conferenee who will regret his leaving. The church to which he goes is the leading appointment of the Conference, having a membership of about eleven hundred. In addition to being a splendid preacher, Dr. Foote has unusual literary gifts, as readers of the Advocate who have enjoyed some of his poems from time to time can testify. He and his charming wife will be missed in New Orleans.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., dropped in at the Advocate office for a few minutes on Friday of last week, on his way home after attending the National Convention of the American Legion at Cleveland, Ohio. Brother Gunn received a flattering vote for the national chaplaincy, but he withdrew his name from before the Convention.

The Louisiana Conference Epworth League Cabinet met in New Orleans during the latter part of last week. The attendance was good, nineteen of the twenty-three members being present. Rev. J. B. Grambling, the president, from Shreveport, presided. Plans for the Assembly next summer were matured. The work of the League was found to be in a prosperous condition.

Rev. A. F. Vaughan, our pastor at Covington, La., who rendered notable service as chaplain overseas during the war, has recently received an appointment as chaplain in the Regular Army. He will report at Jackson Barracks, this city, on October 12 for assignment. It is a high compliment to Brother Vaughan that of 300 applicants for the chaplaincy, be was one of the 89 who were selected.

The First Methodist Church of Lake Charles, La., has planned an eventful six weeks for the close of the year's work. Among the special features will be a visit from Bishop McMurry, the adoption of plans for a new church building, commencement exercises in the Sunday school, and a "Go-to-church" campaign. Rev. W. W Holmes is pastor of this outstanding congregation in Louisiana Methodism.

Two of our pastors have recently been pressed into service by the newly organized Kiwanis Club, of Hattiesburg, Miss. On Sept. 16, Rev. C. W. Crisler addressed the club, and on September 23, the club was addressed by Rev. R. H. Harper. On the latter occasion the members of Mississippi Conference Hospital Commission, meeting that day in Hattiesburg, were guests of the Kiwanians, and the affair was a pleasant one.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS IN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

Last week marked out definitely two important lines of work in the Christian Education Movement.

The first one is to set aside one month in which prayer and intercession are to be emphasized; another for the stewardship of life, culminating on the last Sunday in a call for parents to dedicate their children to the service of God, and to the young people in our schools, colleges and churches to give their lives in Christian service. Still another month was set aside for the stressing of the stewardship of wealth. In other words the Christian Education Movement proposes to place the emphasis on the word Christian and to make it a distinctively spiritual Movement.

The second line of development is to organize and unify all life-service work of the several boards of the church and place it under the leadership of the Christian Education Movement. It is hoped through this to develop one great comprehensive policy for the church, behind which all boards and commissions of the church will stand and speak with one voice. It is hoped that as a result of this 5,000 young people will dedicate their lives to the service of God, as preachers, missionaries or other Christian workers. Detailed statement of these plans will be made later.—Bulletin.

REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

As I came out of church on the first Sunday that Dr. Holloman spent in Heaven, a gentleman told me he had gone; involuntarily I exclaimed, "Oh no, not Dr. Holloman!" I could not bear to know another link that bound me to the long ago had been severed, another good pastor had left me behind.

As his life stands out before me, a completed whole, I am struck with his wonderful gift of winning and holding love; in my mind arose the question, "Why?" The answer came in one of those old childhood rhymes which he was so fond of using to impress a moral:

"Why does the lamb love Mary so?" the eager children cry;
"Mary loves the lamb, you know," the teacher did reply.

Yes, this was the secret. He loved the people; his cheery nature, sympathic manner and sense of humor were the magnet that drew hearts to him. Then he loved God, and in his daily life exemplified how a Christian could follow in His steps.

What a shepherd he was! The sheep loved to follow him, as he followed the Master. He had no vision of the near future when he wrote his last article, "Vacation Ended." No, his vacation was about to begin. He had learned all the lessons in the school of life, had endured the discipline that had prepared him for the real "life" in the Beyond. The books were closed and the Father had called him to the joys and glories in his home above. Now he is dwelling in that mansion prepared for him of the material he had sent on before.

Good-bye for awhile, dear, honored friend! Soon we of the "long ago" will be with you, for rapidly all our ships are crossing the bar, putting out to the sea which you have only crossed just before us. MRS. ROBERT KEMP.

MRS. LURA EVANS PYRON was born December 14, 1858, and died, July 21, 1920. She was thoroughly consecrated, loved her church, and was always in her place in the Sunday school and preaching services. She never became too tired to discharge her duties to her church and neighbors. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of fifteen, and lived a consistent Christian thereafter. She was married to Mr. H. A. Pyron, November 22, 1882. To this union was born one son who survives her, also her husband, H. A. Pyron; two brothers and one sister, Rev. C. A. Evans, of Fort Worth, Texas, S. W. Evans, of Amory, Miss., and Mrs. Holloman, of Houston, Miss. She will be greatly missed by her family, church, and community. While earth is poorer, Heaven is richer because of her going away. Her pastor,

T. J. HALFACRE.

MRS. MALINDA NEEL GOFF, daughter of the late Charles and Emmeline Neel, of Sharon, Miss., and widow of John K. Goff, was born in Claiborne County, Mississippi, January 12, 1831, and died at her home near Sharon, May 17, 1920. When quite a little child, her parents moved to Madison County, and settled near Sharon, and it was here, a few years later while attending a protracted meeting that she experienced a very bright conversion, and united with the Methodist Church, remaining a faithful member of the same during her long and useful life. For some years previous to her death, this dear mother and grandmother was very feeble in mind as well as in body, being unable to recognize the loved ones who ministered to her daily wants; but "Glory to God!" and "Hallelujah to the Lamb!" were exclamations that still continued to fall from her lips. Seemingly without any pain or suffering, she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. She leaves one sister, two sons, two daughters, two granddaughters, and many friends to mourn their loss.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

AN APPRECIATION OF DR. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Though I saw him only at Conference each of the three years I was a member of the Mississippi Conference, never shall I forget Dr. Holloman. He was to me a great inspiration. Never shall I forget the night I, together with twelve others, was admitted into the traveling connection. We were summoned to appear in the parlor of the parsonage at Hazlehurst before the following committee for the last time: Revs. G. H. Thompson, J. A. Moore, I. L. Peebles, W. L. Linfield, N. B. Harmon, and Dr. Holloman. As this was the first time Dr. Holloman had met the class for admission, the secretary read the age, date of conversion, educational advantages, etc., of each. As the president called their names, they would step forward that the entire committee might know them. When the writer's name was called and the secretary began to read, Dr. Holloman also stepped forward, put his hands on my shoulders, looked me in the eye, then from head to foot, till the secretary had finished reading, and then looked me in the face and said: "Just the right size exactly. There is lots of hard work in you; may the Lord bless you, is my prayer." I knew I had one vote for admission. I have never failed to read and get some lesson out of every piece he has written for the last eight years.

How appropriate his last piece, "Vacation Ended."

Farewell, Doctor, till we meet in Beulahland.

FROM NESHOBA CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I heard President McKinley say on one occasion that the happiest people were those who were best employed. I have often thought of that statement but never knew how true it was till this year. Six churches scattered over one-half of Neshoba County, and more than six hundred members to care for, have made this the busiest year of my life.

By Conference we shall have spent four hundred dollars on our parsonage for repairs, painting and furnishings. We are planning to build one new church and to repair and paint another one. We have had twenty-five accessions to the church, twenty-four on profession of faith. We expect to bring up our finances in full.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful (hot) (5 fl. oz.)	1.54 gr.
Green tea—1 glassful (cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)	2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)	.61 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

FROM THE HARPERVILLE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have held all of our meetings at Lena. Brother Oliver helped me, and the church was strengthened; no accessions however. At Harperville, we had some fine preaching, eight accessions and the church strengthened; W. J. Fergurson did the preaching. At Hillsboro, H. A. Wood did the preaching; we had seven accessions and more alter service and old-time shouting than I have heard in many days. At Cantrell, A. J. Davis did the preaching; we had eight accessions, the church was strengthened, three family altars were erected, and they are holding out, too. At Goodhope, we were under fine headway, best congregation durling our three years' pastorate, but rain started and rained us out the last two days; but we feel good was done. Rev. W. E. Dickens did the preaching. The other two places are small churches, but we did good work. At Oak Grove the people were greatly blessed, and there was one accession.

We held one meeting, and had the power of the Lord with us. There was one accession, many reclaimed, some promised to live differently, and ten family altars were erected.

It has been a pleasant and profitable year with us in the work of church. We consider this as good year as any of the three during our pastorate here.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

HENS LAY EVERY DAY

Egg Production Doubled —Read the Letter Below

"Every one of my hens are laying, and I find since I have been using TWO for ONE they have more than doubled what I was getting. In Nov., from 72 hens I got 356 eggs, an increase of 168 since last month. I think TWO for ONE is the most wonderful tonic I ever heard of and I will never be without it. I send in another $5 order." Mrs. A. E. Agnew, Kingston, Wash.

THOUSANDS of our customers tell us the same story. TWO for ONE has taken the country by storm. Authorities approve it and use it on their own hens. Scientists have analyzed it and tell us we have at last found the perfect tonic for hens.

The results our customers have been getting are simply astounding. Our files are full of reports giving records of egg production that surpass anything ever known. TWO for ONE is the talk of the country wherever there are chickens. It is destroying old records and helping to produce eggs at an unheard of rate.

Eggs at $1.25 a Dozen!

Don't you want more eggs from your hens? Eggs are going to bring $1.25 this season. Just think how much more money you will make at this price on an increase in your eggs.

And it is so easy to get these extra eggs. All you have to do is to give your hens a few cents' worth of TWO for ONE according to our simple directions and we positively guarantee a substantial increase in eggs. Why waste money on so-called tonics that have been proven worthless? Come to Poultry Headquarters, where you will get a Scientific Tonic, one that positively will give you an increase in eggs.

Just read some of the letters below. See what it has done for others, and then ask yourself if you can afford to delay longer in giving it a trial to convince yourself.

Hens Laying Full Capacity!

"I have used your TWO for ONE for the last 90 days, and it is a wonderful tonic to make hens lay. For January I received 192 eggs from 12 hens. Your TWO for ONE is the tonic for hens and at this writing they continue to lay to their full capacity."

T. W. Freeman, Register, Ga.

Never Saw Its Equal!

"Since I began the use of TWO for ONE egg tonic my chickens are all healthy and are now regular layers. I have never seen its equal for egg production. During January my 10 hens laid 205 eggs" (practically an egg per hen per day.)

Mrs. G. C. Morgan, Lewisville, Ark.

Why not start getting this extra egg money now? Every day you delay you are losing money. It costs so little and the results are so sure, you can't afford to be without TWO for ONE. Send in the coupon today.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Listen, pastors! Be careful to get the right figures in your Sunday school report to Conference. Fill in every item with correct information. Drop no school that has held part of the year. Report Cradle Roll and Home Department if you have them; if not, see to it that you have them. We have hundreds in our Methodist churches that are ready to be enrolled in these departments. Study the Sunday school report in last Minutes, and compare with this year to see that a correct report is made.

Sunday School Day offerings are coming fast—how about yours? Baton Rouge District leads the Conference, and Ruston is second.

ALONZO EARLY,

FROM SIDON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have recently closed a fine meeting at Sidon, with twenty additions to the church, eleven on profession of faith. We were assisted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, one of the general evangelists of our church, and R. L. Cooper, who had charge of the choir. Brother McIntosh is a great evangelist, any preacher will do well to secure his help.

J. J. GARNER, P. C.

A MESSAGE FROM MEMPHIS.

Dear Advocate: Your bright face and weekly visits cheer me much. I have been in Memphis nearly ten years, and have been pastor at Madison Heights Church 22 months. We have received 400 members during that time, and have a membership of 840. Our Sunday school has an enrollment of over 1200. We are building a $70,000 addition to take care of our big Sunday school. Our church supports two missionaries in the foreign field.

Brother H. S. Spragins has had a splendid pastorate at First Church, and his people regret his leaving. Dr. Coleman has done hard work at St. John. Our big million-dollar hospital will soon be ready to open its doors to the public, and it is easily the best building of its kind in the city. Memphis Methodism is making progress.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

When Run-Down

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"My mother has always relied on Dr. Pierce's medicines and kept them for use in her family. When I was a girl, through over-work I became in very poor health. I lost in flesh, became very weak and nervous, my limbs and back ached all the time. I suffered from functional irregularity and was a physical wreck when my mother had me take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and just a few bottles completely restored me to good health. I would advise all women or girls who suffer to give 'Favorite Prescription' a trial."—MRS. E. GIESLER, No. 710 Octavia Street.

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Subacute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from such forms of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long looked for means of getting rid of your rheumatism you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write today.

REVIVALS ON THE RED BANKS CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: During the season we have had revival meetings on the Red Banks Circuit as follows: At Mahon, assisted by Rev. E. M. Shaw; at Red Banks, assisted by Rev. J. H. Holder; at Victoria, assisted by Rev. R. I. Collins. All of them were good revivals, especially the ones at Red Banks and Victoria, resulting in seventeen accessions to the church on profession of faith at Red Banks, and seven at Victoria. At Mahon we had a fairly good revival in the church, but no accessions.

But the greatest revival, in several respects, that the writer has been connected with in twenty years, we held at Mack, a schoolhouse appointment six miles northwest of Holly Springs, Miss., with Rev. H. H. Wallace to assist. Mack is in a neighborhood somewhat isolated from the surrounding country by bad creek bottoms and bad roads. They had never had preaching there until this year, and the people of the community seldom attended church anywhere. But last year several Christians moved into the neighborhood, and, feeling the great need of God in the community life, they began praying and planning to this end. So, last spring they organized a Sunday school and invited this pastor over to preach to them on Sunday afternoon. After re-arranging his work, he has been able to give them a regular 11 o'clock service once a month.

For several weeks before our meeting, they met and prayed for a revival. And when we began, under the arbor which they had built for the occasion, we found that the revival was already on. The Spirit was present at every service, and we believe that every sinner that attended any of the services was convicted of sin, and there were very few of them who did not surrender to God. The new converts, with scarcely an exception, went out into the congregation and brought their loved ones and friends to the altar. At some of the services not an individual present failed to testify for Christ.

As results, we had twenty-two accessions to the church on profession of faith, organized a church with twenty-nine members, with the prospect of more soon to follow, and also provided for the erection of a church building.

Of these new converts, seven were married men and four were married women, and among them were several grandparents. We close by exclaiming, "Bless the Lord, O my soul! And all that is within me bless His Holy Name!

T. H. PORTER.

Victoria, Miss.

A FINE MEETING AT SENATOBIA, MISS.

Sunday night, September 12, 1920, brought to a close the revival services at the Methodist church, conducted by Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Amory, Miss. Brother Smoot came to us filled with the Spirit of God and with the burden of lost souls weighing heavily upon his heart. He preached a great gospel to large and attentive audiences. Notwithstanding the continued rain during the first few days, the crowds continued to increase until standing room was not available and many stood on the outside while others sat in the cars by the windows listening to the inspired words that fell from the lips of a consecrated man of God. Many have been the expressions of thankfulness and of gratitude that the Methodists of Senatobia had the rare privilege of listening to the beautiful and forceful interpretations of the Scriptures given by Brother Smoot.

His knowledge of the Scriptures, his vivid portrayal of the great truths of the Bible, the ability and skill with which he handles his large audiences make him a power in the pulpit of any church. The splendid gospel sermons he preached will long be remembered by the people of Senatobia. And the great spiritual truths that found lodgment in the hearts of the hundreds that heard him will continue to bear fruit for many a day. May the Lord continue to bless Brother Smoot in the great work to which he has been called.

Indigestion

DO YOU KNOW that indigestion can be cured, permanently cured, so that you can eat any kind of food that you crave? It has been done not only once, but in almost every case when Chamberlain's Tablets are used. An instance: Mr. J. Pominville, Stillwater, Minn., who had spent over $2,000.00 for medicine and treatment was permanently cured by these tablets.

Chamberlain's Tablets

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrup, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real cough power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GIRLS! USE LEMONS FOR SUNBURN, TAN

Try it! Make this lemon lotion to whiten your tanned or freckled skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion whitener, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands and see how quickly the freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

LETTER TO STATE PRESIDENTS.

I had planned to send you a letter long ago, but so many unusual things have claimed my attention that I have not carried out that plan.

I had the privilege during July of visiting, for the first time, the western Conferences and meeting in person the dear women of that distant section, who are banded together with us in our missionary work, but whom we seldom see face to face. My heart was greatly cheered by their zeal and efficiency in carrying forward the plans of the organization and I am very happy to have had the privilege of seeing them.

I have never reported to you the financial results of the first six months of the year, but you have doubtless seen a copy of Mrs. Ross' comparative statement as published in the Bulletin and know that we are $42,401.70 ahead of the first half of 1919. The remittance of one large Conference failed to arrive in time to be counted in this increase. Had it been received, we would have been able to report about $43,000 increase. This seems gratifying, but we must do more if we reach the financial goal that we have set for the year. I am sure that you will omit no effort to bring your Conference to its full part, and if I can help you in any way, do not fail to let me know.

The Stewardship Round Robin goes well and I believe it will bring enlarged spiritual life and increased gifts for the cause from those who participate in it. Mrs. Steele and I will send out material in a few days to be used in the October Rally for Mission Study and Membership. We are hoping that every woman of every congregation will get the benefit of this at a mass meeting or luncheon held during October and that this will be a "Bumper year" in Membership and Mission Study classes.

I am thinking of and praying for you, as you so faithfully bear the heavy responsibility of your Conference.

With much love, I am
Your sister,

34 Per Cent Increase.

A message from Mrs. Holt, Corresponding Secretary, Louisiana Conference, brings the good news of a 34 per cent increase in our Treasurer's report for the first half of 1920. Louisiana is $2507.91 ahead of the first half of last year. Mrs. Holt wishes to inform the women through this medium that for some reason the literature is delayed, but will be rushed out as soon as received. Auxiliaries not receiving literature notify Mrs. W. W. Duson, Crowley, La.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Conference Expense.

Often it is true that a lack of understanding of the basic business principles on which an organization is run creates an unusual situation. Such is the case in the Missionary Society during the current year, I am constrained to believe; the question to which reference is made is the shortage of the Conference Expense Fund. Although the bulk of the work done in this organization is purely voluntary service, yet there are a few items of expense that must necessarily be met. Stationery is furnished; the proceedings of the Annual Meeting are published; postage is refunded; the traveling expenses of the officers and visitors to the Annual Meeting are met; the Bulletin is printed; and literature is mailed out every month.

To provide for such matters as this, each auxiliary is instructed to include in its annual budget payment of the Conference Expense Fund for each member. Instructions to Treasurers in the back of the Treasurer's book gives the manner of dividing the membership funds. There is a typographical error in this, which instead of reading 20 per cent of one-fifth should be 20 per cent or one-fifth. This division is to be made by the auxiliary treasurer before remitting to the Conference Treasurer. Every quarter one-fifth of the membership should be computed; from this one-sixth of the amount found is taken. The smaller amount is to be sent as relief and retirement fund; the other as Conference Expense Fund. This prorating is an easy matter for each auxiliary. But think what a volume of work it would mean for Mrs. Wilburn, if she had it all to do! For the Young People and Children, our Conference set the amount as 5c per member.

When it became evident that there was a shortage of funds to meet our expenses, the first move your Executive Committee made was to send out an emergency call through the District Secretaries asking each auxiliary to pay toward this 25c per copy for the Minutes received; this amount was asked from the local treasuries. The printing of the Minutes is the largest item of expense we incur and is higher this year on account of prices of paper and printing. What the response to this appeal will be cannot be told until after this quarter's reports are received.

Inasmuch as it was so unusual an experience, I began to investigate to find the cause of the funds' running so low. The basis of this investigation was the statistical report of last year. Each of you may look through these same columns. The facts revealed were amazing. Out of the 261 contributing auxiliaries there were 148 who paid nothing toward the Conference Expense Fund—more than one-half; 62 were adult; 61, Juniors; and 25, Young People. Only 6 Juniors paid anything. Many of those that did pay did not divide in the correct percentage. I call your attention to this matter, because I believe if you understand you will make amends. The record of first half of this year is not available to me. But it is reasonable to suppose that practically the same conditions will exist that were so prevalent last year. Will you not see illiam R. Caraway was born in issippi, Feb. 7, 1838. He came exas in early life, and when just w days past 20 years old, was ily married to Miss N. E. McWil-, the date of marriage being uary 25, 1858. Soon after his iage he was converted at Sand and joined the Methodist Church ayne Chapel in Shelby County. ermining that his home should be a Christian home in every sense, he and his young wife agreed that they would have a family altar. This agreed on, they began that night. He told me the story something like 38 years ago, and it ran thus: "I found myself greatly embarrassed when I took the Bible to read the Scripture lesson. I began with the first chapter of St. John, and read five chapters before I could sum up courage to say let us pray. We knelt, us two, and I stumbled through my prayer of supplication and thanksgiving till God heard and changed it into the voice of praise." He was licensed to preach something over 59 years ago, and having shown his gifts of grace as an unordained local preacher, he was ordained as a local deacon at Palestine, Texas, by Bishop H. N. McTyeire, on the seventh day of December, 1879.

I became his pastor at the same Conference, and our acquaintance ripened quickly into the warmest friendship, and through the years mellowed into the sweetest brotherly love. Many years have passed since that first memorable year on Shelby circuit, but that friendship was never broken or ever allowed to grow cold, and it lingers with me yet as a precious memory.

I was pastor on Shelby circuit three years, and had besides Brother Caraway, seven other local preachers, but none who was more efficient, more ready to help, or more sought after than he. The protracted meeting season covered four months of each year, and he was my constant companion and helper through those campaigns in heat of summer and early fall. His preaching, exhortations, and prayers were full of fervor, and deeply spiritual. As an altar worker among penitents he had few equals. The people knew him to be a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost.

By occupation he was a farmer, and a good one. He owned without debt his farm, and had a neat, comfortable dwelling, and his family never knew want. In later years he moved to Logansport, La., and went into the mercantile business, and prospered. But all this was a means to an end, the service of God. He farmed and sold goods for a living, but his business was to serve God.

The end came to this good man on June 11, 1920, at his late home in Logansport, La., and the end was peace; at the end of 82 years 4 months and 4 days he quietly unbuckled his armour and layed it down at the feet of Jesus—exchanged the Cross for the Crown. During his illness he was often filled with ecstatic joy, and was on shouting ground, but nurse and friends restrained him. He fought a good fight and fought it bravely. He ran a good race to the last minute.

He leaves his widow, now 80 years of age, well provided for, but she is lonely without her William, yet not impatient for she knows where to find him. Also there remain behind six children, eighteen grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren. They too are well provided for, being known in the financial and business world as people of large means. My prayer for his widow is, that her heavenward way may grow brighter and brighter to the perfect day. And for his children, that they may be as rich in laying up treasure in heaven as they have been in laying up earthly store. Their now sainted father will be greatly disappointed in the last day if one of them should be missing from the blood-washed throng in that great day. If I can ever serve them, God knows I am willing. Faithfully,

J. T. SMITH.

A CENTURY OF SERVICE.

In 1820 a good old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an ointment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema and the many similar forms of skin eruption. It soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs and begins healing. If your druggist can not supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you.—Adv.

A NOTABLE SUNDAY SCHOOL ENTERPRISE.

The General Sunday School Board has conducted an Institute for Sunday school workers at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, annually from the beginning of the Southern Assembly in 1913. In 1917 the work was enlarged into the Junaluska Training School for the training of Sunday school leaders. A marvelous work has been accomplished in spite of inadequate classrooms, equipment, and hotel accommodations.

To meet this need, the General Sunday School Board has undertaken the erection of an Administration Building and three dormitories at a cost of $150,000. The Administration Building, 185 by 116 feet, with three stories, will contain a large auditorium, reception hall, library, ample classrooms, exhibit room, book store, and cafeteria. There will be ninety-three rooms and twelve baths in the three dormitories. Each room will be furnished with two single beds, dresser, table, and running water. Rooms in these dormitories will be available for Sunday school workers at the lowest possible cost.

This movement has been commended by the Sunday school leaders throughout the connection. Our generous-hearted Methodist people will not fail to furnish the money for buildings so urgently needed, in time for their use in July, 1921.

Rev. J. L. Neill, Executive Secretary of the Building Committee of the General Board, is directing this work with great skill and contagious enthusiasm, and will gladly give information to all persons interested in this notable enterprise. Address 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

HYOMEI

From Famous Eucalyptus Tree of Australia Comes Mr. Booth's Wonderful Discovery.

Some years ago, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, temperance orator and leader of international fame who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble while lecturing in London. Seeking to regain health, he went to inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests—especially the Eucalyptus trees.

This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment known to the medical science—Hyomei, which is formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air, absolutely harmless but wonderfully effective in the treatment of catarrh in all of its forms, cold in the head, spasmodic croup, hay fever, clergyman's sore throat and similar complaints.

The treatment is simple but most scientific. You breathe Hyomei. It is pronounced the only method of treatment that sends by direct inhalation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamic air that destroys all germs and bacilli of catarrh in the breathing organs, sooths and allays all irritation and enriches and purifies the blood with additional ozone.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment, $1.35, extra bottle inhalant 75c. Sold by druggists on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. If your druggist can not supply it, write

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors havo found by experience that no medicino for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nauseless colomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

MRS. J. W. CONGER.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH, AND ITS FUTURE.

By Rev. T. J. Halfacre.

The country church in its present condition seems to be a problem, inasmuch as the majority of them seem to be unorganized and unorganizable. We have one hundred and sixty-eight charges in the North Mississippi Conference, and a good per cent of them are country charges. Sixty-eight of these charges paid their pastors less than one thousand dollars last year (1919).

The majority of the country charges seem to hold to the idea of many years ago, that if the preacher comes around and stays a day or two with them, they have done their part toward his support, and many of them pride themselves in the fact that they have been members of the church for years and it has cost them but very little.

The first step I see necessary to solve this problem is to bring the people to a realization of duty. Human nature is very much the same everywhere, and it always has been. And very much the same process that brought the town church to life and a realization of duty will bring the country up also. This may be done by personal work as well as preaching. I don't mean talking about, and preaching about everything and nothing in particular, but I mean to have a definite aim, with the idea of rendering definite service.

The next is, to bring the people to a realization of the possibilities for every community. God has placed within the reach of every community sufficient material, if used and developed, to make that community an ideal community, and to bring it up to the required standard, regardless of where it may be.

The next is, to convince the people of the special responsibility that rests upon them for these communities, and the fact that each one of them has a special part in this work, and God intended for every man to be a blessing to the community in which he lives, and if he isn't a blessing, he is a traitor.

Next, comes organization. Any community that is taught the three facts mentioned above can be organized, with a world-wide vision for service. Organization is the one main thing our country churches need today. Automatically, system will be brought about, and our country churches will assess their membership as the town churches do, and be able to discover all the dead members, or members that haven't been doing their duty in the church.

By courageous service from the preachers and leaders, the country charge can be built up to the extent of an attractiveness that will not only put it on a self-sustaining basis in regard to the leaders it so badly needs to-day, but self-sustaining in regard to the support of the ministry.

I think the day is over, if it ever was in order, for tenderfooted service in the Kingdom of God. We have in the country just as good people as you will find anywhere, and just as intelligent. What they most need is more service, and better service, and more efficient service, that we may make the country church more attractive, and it will be no longer a thorn in the flesh for the people and the preachers as well.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A REMINDER OF GOD.

A woman who had seen much sorrow once said to a preacher who had ministered to her in her distress, "I have come to think more of God since I have known you." She said this simply, reverently, and the friend from whom we heard of the incident commented on the preacher's evident feeling of embarrassment and humility when this tribute was paid to his Christly service. It was a tribute that all of us might covet—a tribute growing out of our likeness to Him whom we try to serve. What a beautiful life it must be that makes people think of God!

THE NEGRO AND THE CHURCH.

We hope all our people will read carefully the article, on another page of this issue of the Advocate, by Dr. O. E. Goddard, Secretary of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, concerning the work being done by our church in behalf of the Negro race. It is a clear statement of a program which, if carried out, will go a long way toward settling the problem of proper racial adjustments in the South—and throughout the nation, for that matter. The church is peculiarly under obligation to minister to the needs of these people who have such strong claims upon us, and to do it in a spirit that will demonstrate its own sympathetic understanding of the situation and that will command the respect and appreciation of those who are helped.

A PLEA FOR CONTRIBUTIONS.

People are valuable to the world, not for what they get but for what they give. We make this commonplace comment without reference to money at all. The smallest compensation any man receives for what he does is the financial; and the largest contribution he makes to the age in which he lives cannot be measured in dollars and cents. The millionaire may be a pauper so far as real wealth is concerned, and he who gives away a fortune may actually be giving less than nothing. The real contributions to the welfare of the world are made by those who render helpful service to their fellow-men without thought of remuneration; and the richest people in the world are those who receive the love and respect of their neighbors because of their unselfish lives. Every good cause needs money—but it needs sympathetic, cordial, unremitting co-operation more. Even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many. The world needs love—not lucre; are you giving it?

"A SQUARE DEAL FOR THE CLERGY."

Under the above caption, Industry, a semi-monthly magazine devoted to an interpretation of industrial progress, devotes more than a page in its issue of October 1 to an editorial discussion of this urgent matter. It is significant as coming from a source that deals primarily with the economic well-being of the country. We quote as follows: "If ministers are lacking, how can the church prosper? If ministers are not receiving adequate support from the communities, how can they serve the church? This is a straight out and out proposition for men in industry to make their personal concern. Not delaying its consideration to some future time, but now, at once, taking steps in their various communities, business men should rally to the needs of the clergymen of all sections of the United States and should see to it that every clergyman is relieved of the worry of an insufficient support for his family. Ministers have given themselves to their work wholeheartedly and have built up a splendid bulwark of religious activity in America. In turn, business men should realize their debt of appreciation to the clergy and should hasten to put the matter of the clergyman's salary on a basis of equity and financial rating, worthy of the service which has been and is being rendered. * * * Business men who hold offices in the church should make every effort to speed such movements along. Men of finance are skilled in management and in organization of moneyed details. Why could they not turn these talents to good account within the church by suggesting ways and means for the church to manage funds so as to relieve the tension which every denomination is experiencing in apportioning church money to cover adequate salaries for their clergy?" We commend this statement to the earnest attention of our official boards and to the membership of the church generally.

MR. "KNOWS-IT-ALL."

Every organization is blessed (?) with the membership and active participation of the well-known Mr. "Knows-It-All." He may not attend all the meetings of the organization, but whenever there is an important assembly for the consideration of important measures, he is an early arrival, taking his place on the front seat. His strongest forte is not in proposing constructive plans, but in telling why the ideas worked out by others are not practicable. His vast experience, his wide range of information, his close observation, his intense concern that no mistakes be made, all conspire to render his opinions dogmatic, unanswerable, and final. Discussion is superfluous and a desire for calm consideration is an impertinence. Innovations are inexcusable and pleas for progress are preposterous. Advocates of advance are well-meaning but simple-minded persons whose presence is permissible but not particularly profitable. Mr. "Willing-To-Learn" and Mr. "Give-It-A-Trial" are patronizingly-patted on the back or scornfully squelched, as occasion may require. Oh well, it takes all sorts of people to make a world. If nobody threw monkey wrenches into the machinery, repair men would be out of a job.

BASEBALL AND THE GAMBLERS.

Gambling will ultimately ruin any sport in the world if it is allowed to flourish. One of the greatest sensations of recent days was produced by the revelation of crookedness in the playing of the world's championship series of baseball games last year. Players who stood on the highest pinnacle of fame in the baseball world confessed that they had deliberately thrown games for pay, and that this pay was given them by a clique of gamblers who made hundreds of thousands of dollars by betting on the result that was known to them in advance. Some of the greatest heroes of the world of sport have had the laurel torn from their brows—and many a heart has been made sad by their self-confessed treachery. There will be those who say that the game as a whole has been proved to be corrupt and that it is no longer to be patronized by good people; we cannot agree with this opinion. Thousands of men are engaged in professional baseball in the United States, and their characters should not be besmirched, even by implication, by the proved dishonesty of a very few. Many of these men are high-toned, clean-living gentlemen who work hard, walk straight, play fair, love their families, and are an honor to the communities in which they live. But the danger has been exposed and the warning is clear: the promoters of professional baseball must immediately take vigorous steps to protect their players and their patrons against the unscrupulous parasites of society who, without principle themselves, would debauch the morals of all whom they can influence for the promotion of their nefarious schemes. When baseball confesses its inability to divorce itself from gambling, it will bring upon itself the same obloquy that rests upon horse racing. We believe in clean sport—and we believe baseball can and will be kept clean.

MY LESSON.

You ask me how I learned to pray?
Long years ago, so troubled seemed the way,
So full of cloud and storm each passing day,
My life so full of needs, hope so astray,
A Friend I needed, one whom I could trust alway—
I could not help but pray.

You ask me how I learned to trust?
Of wisdom I had none; I could not judge aright.
I needed counsel, guidance, toward the light.
I longed to gird my weakness with a holy might.
He called me unto Him—the Way, the Truth, the Light.
And then—I learned to trust—the Christ.

You asked me how I learned to love?
Because He first loved me; His life He gave
And suffered on the tree for me—oh! sinful me.
He washed my sins away, from self He set me free.
His love enthralls, compels, enraptures me.
My Guide, my Friend, my Savior now is He.
How could I help but love?

THE DIM RELIGIOUS LIGHT

By H. G. Cairns

It was just a meeting of farmers, many of them clad in overalls and still grey with the dust of the day's work, but it enshrined a great spiritual presence—the spirit of the new age. There were no religious exercises, though the light that struggled through the dusty chimneys of the oil lamps on the walls of the hall, was dim enough to be religious. But the light of a shaping ideal in the minds of these horny-handed sons of toil was truly a "dim religious light."

Have we not been mistaken when we have scorned that mediaeval phrase? Is not a really religious light always connected with a certain mystic, alluring dimness? It is like the light lingering along the western horizon, with its suggestion of new day farther on. It is only the Pharisee and the Dogmatist who, in the pride of having arrived, talk of the "clear shining of the sun of Righteousness," as something actually seen by mortal eye. Others think of this as something assured, because of our faith in the power of truth and secured to our vision because of our immortality, but as yet only visible to mortal eye in a dim religious light.

The light in which this group of prairie farmers saw their problems and their way out, seemed as dim as that of the lamps; but, unlike these, it was visibly growing brighter.

With the immediate question they had met to discuss, we will not deal particularly. It was one of many meetings called to protest against the action of the government in doing away with the Grain Board, and throwing the marketing of wheat back into the "pit." Suffice it to say, that a certain consciousness of power and grim determination, with which the air was surcharged, unmistakably told that Canada's basic industry is not going to submit any longer to be just the foundation on which beaver-hat and silk-hose aristocracies are reared. But as this affects no pure selfish interest and the evolution of economic determinism.

Looking on and listening, we wondered if they were all, if this was just an exhibition of developing class consciousness and selfish pain. Two scenes were very evidently before the mind's eye. That of themselves, struggling with weeds, wind, drought, grasshoppers, rust, frost etc., paying high prices for implements, twine, help, and all the necessaries of the home, living in more or less isolation on the prairie, trying to get enough ahead to build homes with modern conveniences, and to send their children away for a higher education. And the other, of rows of palatial homes in Winnipeg, built by profits of the grain exchange, and lines of well-groomed men emerging from these homes, wending their way to the "wheat pit" to engineer new "rakeoffs" to provide the motive power to keep the limousines, balls, and banquets going.

Of course, both scenes were more or less extremely colored in their eyes, but the protest was most emphatic and fundamentally just against anyone who has made no contribution to the production or distribution of wheat, living off the wheat on its way to its final destination in the stomach of the world.

Ah! that last mention brings another scene—a great thronging, perspiring, hungry world reaching out for bread. A suggestion had been made that, with proper and not unduly expensive facilities for marketing, we might have three or even four-dollar wheat this year, and the question arose as to the real aim and end—the motive of all this work. Is it the monetary reward or the service rendered?

Then, in the dim religious light at the far side of the hall, I saw a prophet of the new age clad in denim, who had arrived in his Ford a few minutes before almost direct from the plough on the summer fallow arise and proceed to state the case as he saw it:

"We are workers together with God, answering the prayer of the world for daily bread; we want our own daily bread, that is a twentieth century living for our families, and we want everybody to have the same; but we want to see them all earn it by filling a useful place in the world's work, at least as useful a place as I have filled in the seat of the gang-plough to-day. We don't want anybody to get it by bailing it out of the stream as it flows from producer to consumer. If they are working to keep that stream flowing steadily, all right, but just dipping in—that's no good. We don't want any four-dollar wheat, for that means that many will not get their share of daily bread; but we will have to get that pretty soon, in order to get our share, if the cost of everything we have to buy keeps mounting up. Somebody is dipping into the stream flowing to us as well as that flowing from us. All we ask is, that as we are here to serve the people, by filling the world's bread basket, that the people pass around their own basket, and see to the proper distribution of it, so that everybody may get a fair chance to secure their share; but, when some just dip in and take, without rendering service, some others who do render service will have to go short. The main thing, at bottom, is not our profit on the year's operations, but the needed service we have rendered to humanity; but we want two things—first, that humanity gets the benefit of that service, and not the bulls and bears of the grain exchange, and, second, that we get our fair share in the distribution. We will do our best to solve the problem of production, and we want our Government to solve the problem of distribution—and, if they can't—or won't—why then we will tackle that, too, and see if we can't plough a clean, straight furrow right through to the Atlantic Ocean, and perhaps through that."

Riding the plough that day, to this grower of wheat on the Saskatchewan prairie, there had come a "dim religious light," such as came to the herdman of Tekoa long years ago telling of the beauty and blessing of life, not for profit, but for service; not of ruthless competition, but of brotherly co-operation. The "clear shining of the Sun of Righteousness" will surely sweep all that is [illegible] but [illegible] will [illegible] but keep in the [illegible] "dim religious light" full of promise and [illegible] faith they follow in the [illegible] it will be.—Christian Guardian.

SOME THINGS WE ARE DOING FOR OUR BROTHER IN BLACK.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard,
Home Secretary of the Board of Missions.

Inquiries frequently come to my office concerning what we as a church are doing for the Negro in the South. While we are not doing all that we should do, we are doing more than the average Methodist knows of. Prior to 1870 we had a colored membership—loyal Negroes who would not abandon the church that had ministered to them in the days of slavery. Up to that time they worshipped in our churchhouses in galleries, or some department of the churchhouse provided for them. Our leadership decided that the best plan for developing the Negro was to set him up in a church for himself. Our colored members were organized into the C. M. E. Church. Since that time we have maintained a paternal attitude toward them. Our bishops and connectional secretaries have always been helpful advisers of this fast-growing church. They were called "Democratic Niggers," "white men's Negroes," and many other odious epithets were applied to them by other colored people. In spite of this and all other hindrances, that church has had a marvelous growth. They are now nearly three hundred thousand strong. They are developing schools creditable to their race. They have leaders of whom no church need be ashamed. We have been maintaining Paine College for them since 1889. It is well known that nearly three quarters of a million dollars of our Centenary money will be applied to Negro education. Our last General Conference levied an assessment of $[illegible],000 for Negro work. Having no board for handling this fund, the Conference ordered that one-half of this amount be administered by the Board of Education and one-half by the Board of Missions. The half committed to the Board of Education was ordered by the Conference to be applied to Negro education. No direction was given to the Board of Missions as to the application of the half committed to it. At the last annual meeting of the Board of Missions a policy was outlined by the Secretaries of the Home Department and adopted by the Board. The policy assumes that the C. M. E. Church is the organism through which we shall minister to the Negro population of the South. We are fortunate to have this church, which they persistently assert is the child of the M. E. Church, South, as a medium for approaching the black race.

Our half of the first year's collections for Negro work was twenty-one thousand dollars. Three thousand of this had to be used to help take care of a large deficit in the current expenses of Paine College last year. Seven thousand was appropriated for holding summer schools or institutes for C. M. E. preachers.

We are offering every one of the twenty-five hundred preachers of the C. M. E. Church one of these institutes at the expense of our church. We pay all railroad fare and all board except such part of the board as the five dollars matriculation fee will pay. (Each preacher is required to pay this registration fee.) It costs each one that much—no more, no less—regardless of the distances traveled. The first of the institutes was held in Augusta, Ga., from the 14th to the 24th of September. We invited to this institute all the preachers of the C. M. E. Church in the States of Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Twenty-five presiding elders and about one hundred and seventy-five pastors were in attendance. Colored preachers were used as teachers for the undergraduates and for admission on trial. Courses in exposition, homiletics, doctrines of Methodism, Sunday school work, sociology, were taught consecutively during the forenoon. In the afternoon we had the "Open Forum." Here any questions could be raised, any subject discussed that men wanted to spring. At the suggestion of the leading men of the institute, one afternoon was devoted to the discussion of the question, "How can we translate the emotional religion of the Negro into an ethical type of Christianity?" In the evening we had addresses from bishops and other leaders, or stereopticon lectures.

Never did I see a more grateful people. I think this is the best money I have spent for the church since I have been in this office. Other institutes will be held until every one of the preachers shall have had an opportunity to attend one of these institutes at the expense of the M. E. Church, South.

Another and altogether new feature of the work is to support a goodly number of their preachers as our missionaries to their people. The Board of Missions appropriated ten thousand dollars for this purpose. The Missionary Secretary of the C. M. E. Church, their bishops and myself are now selecting these missionaries. Their names and addresses will be given later. We shall have, perhaps, more than fifty of these missionaries this year. When these men shall have been appointed and their addresses known, our people will take additional interest in them.

One of the leaders of the C. M. E. Church said publicly in Augusta, "If other churches would do what the M. E. Church, South, is now doing, in less than twenty-five years there would be no race problem in the South." From time to time I expect to make some report of the work we are doing among these people.

THE PERAMBULATOR GETS ABOARD.

After staying in Vancouver for a week because of the delay caused by our ship, the Monteagle, being held four days overtime at Hong Kong, and consequently a delay on this side of the Pacific for unloading and reloading, word was given us at the steamship office that passengers could come aboard Saturday and the ship would sail that night. This was good news to our crowd, for we had started to Japan, Korea and China and had visited all the places on the American Continent our itinerary called for as well as spent five more days in Vancouver than we had planned for, so we were ready to come aboard and settle down for our long voyage of sixteen days, not counting the one we lose in crossing.

On arrival at the pier, and meeting a goodly number of people whom we found to be delegates, it seemed to us that every one was like our party in that they wanted to get aboard and be off on the trip to the Orient. Getting on a vessel and leaving the wharf, however, are two separate questions. We got aboard and got settled, even had dinner, but still the ship remained at the dock and the freight kept coming abroad. We took on board, it seemed to those who watched, everything from everywhere, and in the meantime seven, eight, nine, ten and eleven o'clock struck before the signal to cast off was given, but finally it came, though the Perambulator did not wait for it, for having lived in New Orleans it was no novel sight to see an ocean-going vessel cast off and get under way, so he had gone to his couch for his early night beauty sleep.

The passengers number 130, and 110 of them are delegates to the World's Sunday School Association Convention at Tokio, Japan. They came from South America, British Isles, Canada, India and the United States. There are ten ministers among them. The oldest member of the ship's company of delegates is Brother L. K. Hyslup, a layman of 82 years from Virginia; the youngest, Theodora Bryce, age 16 months, on her way to India with her mother and father who are returning to their work in Indore, Central India. The rest of the delegates are men and women of all walks of life going out to get a glimpse of the Orient.

The distance from Vancouver to Yokohama is 4200 miles and when we arrive there we will then proceed as follows: Yokohama to Tokyo where we will be for eight days in the Convention of the World's Sunday School Association. This is just a short run of 18 miles, but after the convention our tour will be: Tokyo to Shemonaseki, 657 miles; Shemonoseki to Fusan (Korea), 119 miles; Fusan to Seoul (Korea), 275 miles; Seoul to Mukden, 479 miles; Mukden to Peking (China), 518 miles; Peking to Shanghai, 908 miles; Shanghai to Nagasaki (Japan), 409 miles; Nagasaki to Kobe, 321 miles; Kobe to Yokohama, 425 miles; Yokohama to Seattle, 4200 miles.

By taking a map any reader may very readily follow the itinerary and see how completely it covers Japan and Korea and the principal parts of Eastern China.

On waking, the passengers were informed, when they found the ship was tied up alongside a pier that in the night we had made a run up the coast to Union City in order that coal might be put aboard for our long voyage. All day Sunday, Sunday night, and Monday forenoon was given to this—and now once again we are under way. One stop more will be made before we get out to sea and that will be at Victoria, B. C., where passengers, mail and freight will be received. The stop will be made in the night, and when we awake in the morning we will be well out to sea. Of course, the mail will be put off at Victoria and all afternoon the passengers have been writing their last farewell to friends and loved ones.

Sunday was spent very pleasantly aboard. The preaching service at 11 o'clock was conducted by Rev. Mr. McGaw, of Iowa, while the sermon was given by Rev. William Butcher, of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, London, Eng. The Sunday school was in charge of Mr. J. H. Engle, General Secretary of the Kansas State Sunday School Association, who had as associates and teachers choice ministers and Sunday school workers from among the passengers. The Sunday school was in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and this was a little odd to the Perambulator, who was reared to go to Sunday school in the morning.

The night service was conducted by Rev. G. L. Lorenzo, of India, while the sermon was given by Rev. G. P. Howard, General Secretary of the Brazil Sunday School Association of South America. A committee has been appointed from among the delegates to plan for the entertainment and pleasure of the company during the voyage, and already we are beginning to hear of concert nights, lecture nights, stunt night, etc., as well as games, etc., in the daytime.

Our crowd seems to be content to sit and read and listen, for they say they have come to rest themselves and not to put forth any more effort than is necessary. So we are enjoying ourselves and are looking forward to a great voyage and a pleasant journey upon the other side.

THE PERAMBULATOR.

"PAY-UP" SUNDAY IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, NOVEMBER 7.

By Rev. Ben P. Jaco.

When Mark Twain undertook his trip around the world on foot, he used various means of conveyance to get to Switzerland, where he walked some, then sent his agent to complete the trip to save time and shoe leather. I appreciate both the humor and common sense. So, to save time and shoe leather in doing our most serious business of promoting Christ's Kingdom in our Conference, I propose that we set Sunday, November 7, for "Pay-Up" Sunday in North Mississippi, when the stewards, and all others charged with raising any church funds in the congregation for pastor's salary, benevolences, debts due, Centenary pledges, and all obligations in Sunday school, Epworth League, or Woman's Missionary Society, shall complete their work for this Conference year, and that all presiding elders and pastors plan for special services on that day in each church as well as to assist in organization of teams to do the collecting of money. This will put all of us to walking some and save many from walking too much when shoes are so costly. Then will come the conscious peace of mind and spiritual joy it will afford so many over having done the Lord's work well.

Then I may do my part in this great work, let each pastor audit the books of each of his Centenary Treasurers and report to me on blank sent. If that blank was lost, ask for another. Also, fill out that we question Card I sent each one and mail it to me. About November 1, another statement of amounts paid on Centenary Pledges by each church will be published. Be sure all money has been reported or sent to S. J. High, Treasurer, Tupelo, Miss. At the session of our Conference at Columbus, there will be displayed charts showing what each church has paid. Be sure each church has full credit for all paid, and that all pledges are paid. This is an eternally serious business. The stewardships are small matters. The souls of lost men are at stake. Your soul is liable. Will you decide your own soul? Which shall it be "Ye did not" or "Ye did it".

THE PRODIGAL FATHER.

A certain man had two sons. And the younger of them said to his father: "Father, give me the portion of thy time and thy attention and thy companionship and thy counsel which falleth to me." And he divided unto them his living, in that he paid the boys' bills and sent them to a select preparatory school, to dancing school, to college, and tried to believe that he was doing his full duty to his boy.

And not many days after the father gathered all his interests and aspirations and ambitions and took his journey into a far country, into a land of stocks, bonds, and securities, and other things that do not interest a boy. And there he wasted his precious opportunity of being a chum to his own son. And when he had spent the very best of his life and had gained money but had failed to find satisfaction, there arose a mighty famine in his heart, and he began to be in want of sympathy and real companionship.

And he went and joined himself to one of the clubs of that country, and they elected him chairman of the house committee and president of the club and sent him to Congress. And he would have satisfied himself with the husks that other men did eat and no man gave unto him any real friendship. But when he came to himself he said: "How many of my acquaintances have boys whom they understand and who understand them, who talk about them and associate with their boys and seem perfectly happy in the comradeship of their sons, and I perish here with heart hunger. I will arise and go to my son and will say unto him: 'Son, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight; I am no more worthy to be called thy father. Make me as one of thy acquaintances.'"

And he arose and came to his son. But while he was yet afar off his son saw him and was moved with astonishment and, instead of running and falling on his neck, drew back and was ill at ease.

And the father said unto him: "Son, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight; I am no more worthy to be called thy father. Forgive me now and let me be your friend." But the son said: "Not so. I wish it were possible, but it is too late." There was a time when I wanted to know things, when I wanted companionship and counsel, but you were too busy. I received the information and received the companionship, but I got the wrong kind; and now, alas, I am a wreck in soul and body, and there is nothing you can do!" It was too late.—The Continent.

We cannot afford to forget what God has planned for every willing and obedient child. His purpose reaches forward to remarking us in His own image. We are "guided through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." We are encouraged in our efforts by expectation of fulfillment through God's love and help. When our case seems most helpless we must remember that God Himself is at work, and turn amid discouragements to do our part. That is the thought that we most need for courage—that God is active through us for the work which He has given us to do. Each of us may look forward to God's remaking with good hope so long as we seek to do His will.—Isaac O. Rankin, D.D.

AN OPPORTUNITY IN THE OIL FIELDS.

My Dear Brother Carley: Conference is drawing near and with it the end of four years service in this charge. Some things that I had been working for have been accomplished, but there will be left plenty for my successor to keep him busy all the time. We are ended, owing to certain conditions in Homer, to meet with a little difficulty in taking in the work when it comes. The Sunday school is in good working order, and the other departments of the church work are going well. Recently we have come to be a home very like unto. The church has been reorganized and received some valuable additions. The mind is good.

Many very excellent people are to be found in Homer. Not a few of them are in the Methodist church. The finance committee of our Board of Stewards cannot be beat by any. We will hold our fourth quarterly meeting next Monday and they expect to have the entire budget in hand. The people of the church are responding to their efforts and are helping make this Conference possible.

During the present year sixty members have been received into the church. Some of these have been from among the people brought to the town by the new oil industry. Some of these were not here permanently and have already gone to other centers. The membership of the church is now nearly four hundred and forty.

The past year has been a very difficult year here. Many strangers have been in the town. Nearly every home has received strangers as roomers or boarders. In some instances two or three families have been living in one house. It has been hard to reach these people. Some of them have been reached, but many have not.

Conditions in the neighboring oil fields are simply crying out for something to be done in a religious way. The churches of the town have been unable to meet the situation. The pastors here have had their hands so full that they have been able to give but little attention to the multitudes in these fields. It is reported that there are several thousand people there. The derricks are up by the hundreds—one looking over the field would say by the thousands. People are gathered there from everywhere. Not only are to be found the oil field workers, but many of these men have their families there. The different companies are building small houses for their men to bring their families. A school opened there this morning with one hundred and fifty ready for work on the first day.

Along with this vast number of workers have come the usual hangers-on. The lewd woman is in evidence. Gamblers ply their trade. Dance halls are running regularly. Motion picture shows are at work seven days in the week. General merchandise stores, drug stores, and cold drink places everywhere are open for seven days in the week. Work never stops. Teams and loaded wagons with caterpillar tractors are on a constant move, Sunday and every other day. They do not stop for the heat of summer or the cold of winter. When it is dry and the dust is flying, when the mud is deep in the streets and the roads, things still move. Surging masses of humanity are here and are there in the fields. Where sage bushes and weeds covered sand hills, are now to be found teeming crowds of busy workers.

Into all this moving and laboring mass of human beings with all kinds of desires and with some terrible passions, your church and mine has not sent a single worker. Nor has any other church for that matter. The Y. M. C. A. is there. The presence of the Y. M. C. A. is made possible by the welfare committee of the oil companies. This committee is also supplying the building in which the public school is to operate. The work of the Y. M. C. A. is chiefly community work and welfare work. They have an excellent secretary and one who is making his presence count throughout the whole of the field. This field stretches over a radius of something like three or four miles in extent. The Y. M. C. A. is in the middle of the field.

There are many excellent people in the field. Some of these are good Methodist people. They need attention. Recently we secured a young married lady, whose husband is in the employ of one of the companies, to become a teacher in our Sunday school. She has taken hold of her work in the right spirit. But yesterday she came to say that she and her husband are going to the fields to live and she will have to give up her class. There are others like this young lady who are in the fields. They want so much to have some sort of religious service there. It is simply out of the question for it to be expected of the pastor of the Homer church that he do this work. As far as the Homer church is undertaking the financing of this work, they are now carrying all that it is possible for them to carry. Our budget this year amounts to about ten thousand dollars. We raised about that last year. Next year they are planning an addition to their building. The first year of my pastorate we raised about three thousand dollars and thought that we were doing fine. What will be the answer of Louisiana Methodism to this open door that is in our midst?

An effort has been made to do something for the people in the oil fields in a religious way. The preachers of the town have gotten behind a movement led by the Presbyterian pastor, because he had more time for it than the others, for building a church to be used by the different denominations of the town. The money was largely raised by Rev. S. P. Collins, pastor of the Homer Presbyterian Church. People in Homer, men in Shreveport interested in the oil business, and others have contributed. The building is under way. Cannot our Board of Missions get behind a man to work in these North Louisiana oil fields? He might give some time here and some time in other fields. He could preach in this church building. The work will have to be missionary because of the transient character of the population. Those who are here will help in the support while they are here. What shall we do? The thing is before us and cannot be left out of our calculations. The companies are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in establishing themselves here. They are taking out millions of dollars worth of oil.

Carley, I have been out to that Y. M. C. A. building on Sunday evening to preach to the people there. They are ready to receive the gospel. The Secretary is a Methodist. He told me to-day that they had nearly eighty in attendance at their oil field Y. M. C. A. Sunday school yesterday. The Sunday school is not in the Y. M. C. A. program. Is the Methodist Church in Louisiana going to turn her back on this opportunity and this responsibility? There is everything there to tear down and but little to uplift. It is in such soil as this that is left uncultivated by the church of Christ that Bolshevism and other undesirable things find a luxuriant growth.

The man who comes next year to Homer will find some most excellent people. He will find men and women who will stand by him. He will find demands that will take every ounce of his strength and energy. Yours faithfully,

W. L. DOSS, Jr.

"CENTENARY PAY-UP DAY," MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Pastors and Centenary Treasurers, Mississippi Conference.

My Dear Co-workers: At the Annual Conference in Brookhaven, I will have charts showing the record of each church in the Centenary—how much subscribed, how much paid, and the percentage to be based on what is due for the first and second year; in other words, 40 per cent of the whole amount subscribed. These charts will be arranged by Districts, and the figures will be large enough to be easily read. With this in view, I am sending you this letter so that you will see that your church makes 100 per cent.

In order that there may be a united campaign for the collection of pledges, November 7 has been designated as "Pay-Up Day" for the Conference, with the hope that each church will observe the day with a service that you think will be most helpful—but preceded by enough Prayer, Plan, and Push, to make the day a success. Get every one to pay what is due on their pledge for the first and second year (more if they will), either on or before this day.

Should there be any who did not pay then, observe the week from Nov. 8 to 14 as "Follow-Up Week," when your workers shall visit all those who did not pay, and collect from them.

November 15 is "Report Day." All Treasurers are urged to report to the Conference Centenary Treasurer (using regular Report Blank) on this day.

Final Report. Should you for any reason not get your report in on the 15th, you can get it to this office as late as November 20, and it will be included. Call your church cabinet together at once, and get everything ready to make the day a success. Make announcement of the day, and your plan before every service, so they will not forget it.

I would urgently request that every Treasurer who has not made his report to me for the month of September make it now, so that I may compare the figures shown in his report with my records, so if there is any difference, it may be worked out now, for I am anxious that each church shall have the correct amount shown on the chart.

How about getting every subscriber as much interested in the payment of his pledge as he was in making it, and making real our motto: "No Shrinkage, But An Increase"? Remember, that Ten Per Cent of all paid by Conference will be refunded to our Conference Board of Missions, to be used to help the mission charges.

Any assistance I can render will be gladly done.

Yours for Service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

WANTED! WANTED! WANTED! FIVE THOUSAND MEN AND WOMEN!

By Rev. R. H. Bennett, D.D.,
Secretary Department of Life Service, Christian Education Movement.

You may hear this call in every walk of life. It arrests you from the sandwich boards of the Army and Navy up and down the streets. Alluring advertisements sound it forth in circular and newspaper. Hodcarriers are invited to work for certain firms at high wages with space to park their automobiles also promised. Big business has agents going about the country hunting for men who can handle large responsibilities. The world has many crying needs, but its most acute need is for men and women.

This situation extends also to the Kingdom of God. Never did a broken-hearted world more sorely need guides, comforters, teachers, evangels. Never did the church behold more open doors or hear more world-wide calls for help. With such wealth of opportunity, with such bitter cries from those that die, with such blatant, jeering challenge from the hosts of darkness, what can the church do but send out far and wide her summons for volunteers?

Here are some of the "white" fields.

Every church is short of preachers. There are thousands of vacant pulpits in our land. Tens of thousands of trumpets lie idle for lack of trumpeters. Tens of thousands of forums are silent awaiting a voice. Israel cries aloud, "Come tell us what we ought to do." Though the need of our own church is less acute than that of many other churches, we could use immediately from 800 to 1000 new preachers without displacing or crowding a single man now at work in the ministry. Ask our bishops and presiding elders how hard it is properly to man the appointments. And there is to be added the ever multiplying openings for new work if we only had the men to fill them.

Our Mission Board is planning to send out 100 new missionaries a year for five years. The men charged with finding these new workers are sorely perplexed, though not in despair. We must have these Christian doctors, teachers, nurses, orphanage workers, business administrators, mechanical help, clerical force, etc. The Centenary has filled our treasury, but of what use is a full treasury without an army? The situation will but mock us unless on many lips, "Here's my check, send some one else," becomes, "Here am I, send me."

In fact, the Centenary waits on the Educational Campaign to help furnish and equip the new workers for the field. And it is not too much to say that the ultimate main object of the Christian Education Movement is so to properly equip our colleges that they shall furnish the workmen needed for the King's business.

Then there is opening a great new field of privilege and need in the realm of religious education. An increasing number of churches are calling for secretaries of religious education to supplement the pastor's work or release him from many calls on his time in order that he may give more efficient service in his loved employ. Our Sunday school work with its ever enlarging program is calling for an army of trained teachers and other workers.

In the face of such facts, the Christian Education Movement can do nothing less than fix its third great objective as follows:

"To lead at least 5000 young men and women to pledge themselves to devote their lives to the ministry, to missions or to some other form of Christian service, and to seek a Christian education as a preparation for effective life service."

The object of this note is to give the facts. The methods of the Life Service Campaign will follow later.

Hear the need. Heed it. Pray earnestly for a proper response. Preach on it. Preach on it again. Write this office for sermon material on it. Offer God your children. Offer Him yourself. Let great emphasis be placed on this subject at the Annual Conference. Let there go up from the shores of life, as the sound of many waters, the voice of thousands of Methodism's choicest and best, saying, "Here am I, send me."—You?

And thus shall the sacramental hosts with this slogan on their lips strike a mighty stride toward the victory of "that day."

Nashville, Tenn., October 1, 1920.

THE GLORY OF THE SECOND MILE.

The glory of the second mile is only to be seen in all its fullness as exemplified in Christ himself. His life, his teaching, his miracles of healing, his gentleness, the purity of the example which he left us, may be looked upon as the first mile to which the need of men compelled him. But love constrained him still further, and the second mile led him to Calvary! And still day by day does he manifest that same love in his response to our constraints. For if we invite him for one mile, and compel him by faith and prayer with that compulsion to which he always so readily yields, to come into fellowship with us, he always goes further and gives "exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask." And if we invite him for the first mile of life, we need have no fear but that he will come with us twain, even through death and beyond. It is Christ who has made the second mile beautiful, and beckons us on to share its glory.—J. Stuart Holden.

CHRIST OUR HOPE.

Mr. Spurgeon was once traveling in Italy and came to an open gate over which was written in Latin, "And there was a garden." He entered through the open gate and saw a finger board on which was written, "And in the garden was a new tomb." He followed the path pointed out and came to a tomb, over which was written, "A new tomb, wherein never man was laid." He looked in and saw on the steps leading down into the tomb these words: "And stooping down, he looked, yet entered he not in." But just beyond were these words: "Come, see the place where the Lord lay." He went in, and there carved in marble were the napkin and the linen clothes lying, and these words: "He is not here, for he is risen, as he said." Christ is our hope because he arose from the dead, because of his birth, life, death, and resurrection.—The Rev. Wiley K. Wright.

THE BROKEN INSTRUMENT.

There is a beautiful legend of the broken instrument. Its strings were gone; its parts were out of alignment; its exterior and interior were dust covered. It was thrown into a rubbish heap, till one day a musician came to the castle. He saw the neglected instrument and repaired it, for he was its builder. Then he played on it the most exquisite music. He drew from it harmony that pleased the most cultivated because he understood its laws. This is a parable of life. You and I are so unstrung and dissonant that no culture can attune us, no age-spirit can restore the lost chord. But the great Musician, the loving Maker of us all, can repair the ruin wrought by evil, can change the worldling and sinner into a saint, can restore the divine image and set us back among the approved of the Father. O, for the harmony that enables the soul to hold unbroken communion with the Lord!—J. Frank Smith.

If You Attended a Christian College.

If you attended one of the Christian Colleges or Academies of the M. E. Church, South, you are favored of fortune.

You are among the leaders of your community. You uphold the morality on which our social order must rest. You have faith in God and are thoughtful of the welfare of the Church.

The Christian College does that which no other college can do. It bases culture on spiritual development and preserves religion and learning in proper relation.

Alma Mater Calls You.

If you attended one of the institutions of the Church there is no love which can supplant your love for Alma Mater. Whether graduate or not you love the old school.

The halls and the campus, the old athletic field and the great trees, the parties in your room and the stunts which were "pulled off," the fellows you "ganged with" and the girl friends you made—what memories they evoke and what surges of affection come from your heart when you think of them!

Alma Mater calls you by a thousand voices which only she can utter.

Alma Mater Needs You

Have you been quite fair to the old School? Have you "written home" as a dutiful son or daughter should? Have you told her where you are, what you are doing? How you are getting on, how the world is serving you, how much you love her?

Perhaps the College does not even know who you are and where you are.

Let us all "write home" to Alma Mater. Let us all tell the old school about ourselves—past, present, and future—our hopes, achievements, and fears. Let us send her our address, and the names and addresses of all the "old fellows" and companions of our school days that that we know.

The Schools and Colleges want their rosters complete. They want no empty chairs in the family circle. They want to tell all the world who and what the former students are. For these are their greatest assets.

DO IT NOW!

THE SUPERANNUATES.

By Mrs. Lee Livscomb.

Help the old veterans
Who have stood for the right,
And now are too old
The battle to fight.

You who are young
And fresh in the strife,
Don't let them suffer
For the comforts of life.

Had they not been
To God's call ever true,
They might have had wealth
And a nice home, too.

Tho' they are feeble
And growing old,
Their faces are bright
And their hearts pure gold.

You owe them a debt
You never can pay,
It can only be known
At the Judgment Day.

They have stood by you
When the days were drear;
If your loved ones died,
They brought comfort and cheer.

They will not be here
Many more years;
Don't let their old age
Be haunted with fears.

But let them from want
And sorrow be free,
For their prayers ascend
For you and for me.

They may not possess
Either wealth or renown,
But waiting for each
Is a bright, starry crown.

AN APPEAL FOR POLAND.

To relieve the indescribable sufferings of the Polish people, as reported by its relief workers, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has launched a movement to dispatch several cargoes of clothing and other supplies to Poland immediately. The Methodist Polish Relief, under the direction of Miss Daisy Davies, has designated October 17 as the Sunday on which the women of the church will canvass for these supplies. This movement is backed by both the Centenary Commission and the Board of Missions and is official.

According to the reports received at the Centenary headquarters from our relief workers and missionaries in Poland, the people have absolutely no clothing of any kind and multiplied thousands will die during the winter unless garments are shipped immediately.

The reports also state that there is absolutely no soap in the entire country, and physicians declare that a typhus plague will result unless soap can be secured. The workers are clamoring for supplies with which to save the Polish people, especially the women and children.

According to the plans of the Methodist Polish Relief, the matter should be presented in all the churches on October 17, and on that day the women of the churches will canvass all the homes to secure supplies. Clothing of all kinds, soap, hospital supplies, blankets, and everything of a similar nature is desired.

All supplies should be shipped to Miss Daisy Davies, Methodist Polish Relief headquarters, Newport News, Virginia, at the earliest possible moment. A staff of workers there will pack the material and ship it to Poland. Transportation facilities have been provided by the Polish government.

Miss Davies has placed literature in the hands of each pastor, Sunday school superintendent, and president of missionary auxiliary. This literature gives full information concerning the need in Poland, the articles desired, and directions for shipping.

No money is asked; simply clothing and supplies. But if any money is given, it can be used to purchase bolts of flannels and similar cloth. Manufacturers and wholesalers should be urged to give their second-grade or shop-worn stockings, cloth, and similar supplies.

"CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT."

My Dear Brother Carley: I appreciate what you have to say in the Advocate, page 8, September 30, in regard to "Conference Entertainment." It seems to me the time is here, and has been for some time, for us to arrange to take care of ourselves. The people do not think less of the ministry, nor do they love less the cause, but conditions have changed, and we should change too. Lack of room in our towns, high cost of living, and the servant question, all conspire to make us see and feel that we must change our plan of entertainment.

I think for the past two or three years the North Mississippi Conference has had but one invitation, and was very thankful to get that. I do not now call to mind the time when a layman stood on his feet on the Confefrence floor and pleaded that the next session of the North Mississippi Conference meet in his town. They know the conditions, and I feel sure many more of them would attend if they could come and pay for their entertainment. You know that the colonel's big house is not often crowded, but the Widow Smith's is. I feel that the manly, self-respecting man wants to make new arrangements.

Brother J. E. Stephens, our pastor at New Albany, endeavored to pass a resolution at our last Conference to change the plan, but there were too many old-timers, and they snowed him under; but I think before some of them got home they were repenting, and ready to change the method of entertainment, and also the time of holding our Conference. I can't understand why we desire to continue to take our children out of school just as they are getting well under way, and take them to a new place along about the first of December, and start all over again. Old-timer says this is the way we have always done, and, therefore, we can't change the time. Of course I understand the bishop fixes the time, and the Conference the place, but I am sure that our bishops will be only too glad to co-operate with us in a matter so vital to the young life of our ministers. So I move that we fix on Grenada College as the place, and ask our bishop to hold our Conference about the first of September.

With our beautiful new administration building completed, we will now have ample room, and as the school will open almost immediately on our adjournment, the servants of the College will be available. All eating at the same time in the one big dining room, and all getting through about the same time, our association will be more to the liking of such assemblies, and our work, I am constrained to believe, will be done much quicker, and more satisfactorily.

Can I get a SECOND?

Cordially, I am your brother,

W. S. SHIPMAN.

Ruleville, Miss.

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," is not an idle, not an unfulfilled promise. He is not with us merely as a thought, but as a life. He gathers us up into His own being. He floods us with it. There is inspiration here, certainly, for any duty, for any endurance. The faith, Christ with me, can make the poorest and the hardest life luminous, joyous, glorious.—Wayland Hoyt.

The Home Circle

ON THE BACK OF THE NORTH WIND.

When on the North Wind's back I ride,
We scour the country far and wide;
For miles we canter up and down,
And race like madmen through the town.

We scale the purple mountains high
Whose treetops seem to brush the sky;
A-tiptoe on the top we stand
To look down o'er the wind-swept land.

Through meadows green we gaily prance,
To make the grass and flowers dance;
The birds all hide within the nest,
And sing, "To stay at home is best."

The dancing rivulets leap and run.
We chase them on—it is such fun,
Until outraced they're lost from view
"Good-by," we shout, "good-by to you."

On, on we push to some far shore
To hear the noisy ocean roar;
There we are tempted long to stay
And with the tossing whitecaps play.

Then through the forest glade we go,
And bend the knotted branches low;
And now the stormy night has come,
I think of mother dear at home.

I long for my snug little bed,
The friendly stars that blink o'erhead,
My picture-books, my warm fireside,
When on the North Wind's back I ride.

THE WALKING PLANTS.

Mary's face was dismal as she bent over the raspberry bushes, although the raspberries were a lovely sight. When her parents were suddenly called from home they were obliged to send her down to stay with her grandmother; but she did not like the country. Fields and gardens were stupid, she said; as for raspberry bushes—well, they were raspberry bushes, that was all.

She put down her tin pail and dropped beside it in the grass. "I wish I could go back to town!" she grumbled drowsily.

"When I feel that way," she heard a voice whisper, "I take a walk."

Mary half opened her eyes.

"Excuse me, what did you say?" she asked, mildly astonished.

"I said," answered the voice, "that when I get tired of looking at the same old things I go for a walk."

"Who are you, please?" said Mary.

A little laugh answered her. "I am the raspberry bush right at your side."

"Bushes can't walk!" exclaimed Mary. For some reason it did not seem strange that they could talk.

"Not many of them can walk," the bush agreed; "but I learned the trick from my parents, and they learned it from their parents. In fact," the bush went on, proudly, "for centuries all of our family have walked."

"How do you do it?" Mary asked curiously.

"It's really very simple," was the answer. "I bend one of my branches until it touches Mother Earth—so. Then with my little slim white fingers I take firm hold of her hand. After I have rested I send out another branch, and that branch, too, puts out its fingers. In that way," the bush added, with a touch of vanity, "I have walked half-way down this row."

"It's a slow way to walk," Mary observed.

Suddenly a big drop of rain on Mary's nose made her open her eyes. She picked up her pail and scampered into the house. "Grandmother," she asked, "do raspberry bushes walk?"

Grandmother smiled. "Well, in a way. I've known them to travel across the garden."

"How funny!" said Mary. "I always thought a plant stayed where it was put."

"Not all of them," said grandmother. "If you had been here in early spring you would have seen that the white clover reaches out a small, slender arm and digs its thin little fingers into the earth, then puts out another arm. It acts as if it were walking on its hands."

"The way our hired boy does!" cried Mary.

"Well, a little more slowly than that, I should say. I can show you some other plants, too, that walk." It had stopped raining and they went out together. "First of all," said grandmother, "I must make the verbena at the side of the porch walk in a more orderly way."

Mary laughed aloud. "You talk as if the verbenas would do just as you say."

"Perhaps they will," the old lady answered; "especially if I pin them down to it. Bring me a package of wire hairpins from my bureau drawer." When Mary had brought the hairpins, grandmother straightened the sprawling branches of verbena and pinned them to the earth in neat rows. "If you will look in a few days at the places where I fastened the branch to the ground, you will see tiny roots, or fingers, laying hold of the earth," she said.

Out in the corner of the yard a few tulips were growing. "These don't walk," said Mary.

Grandmother laughed. "Not where you can see them; they do their traveling underground. The bulbs from which those tulips grew were planted exactly where you see that lilac bush."

"But now the tulips are a little way from the lilac," Mary said.

"Your grandmother set out the lilac without knowing that I had planted tulips in the same spot," explained grandmother. "Tulips cannot live without sunshine, and so they sent long, white shoots underground and walked away from the shade of the lilac. Then little by little the life that was in the bulbs crept along the white shoots, and after a time there was a blossom here in the sunshine. The tulips simply couldn't endure having the lilac bush on top of them."

"Well, it sounds almost like a fairy tale," said Mary.

That summer Mary kept a diary; here are some of the entries that she made:

June 24.—The strawberry plants walk, too. They push and crowd each other just the way people do in the street.

August 1.—I helped Abner weed the garden this morning. The quack grass walks all over the garden and digs its fingers so tight down into the earth that I can't pry them loose.

August 12.—I never saw such walkers as the sweet-potato vines. Every morning grandmother picks up one that is trying to run away.

Augus 29.—I am going home to-morrow; but Abner says if I will come to the farm next March he will show me a plant that walks in the woods—the trailing arbutus. I'm coming, too. There is so much fun in the country!—Mabel Ansley Murphy, in The Youth's Companion.

TRIFLES.

Since trifles make the sum of human things,
And half our misery from our foibles springs;
Since life's best joys consist in peace and ease,
And though but few can serve, yet all may please,
O, let the ungentle spirit learn from hence
A small unkindness is a great offense.
To spread large bounties, though we wish in vain,
Yet all may shun the guilt of giving pain.
To bless mankind with tides of flowing wealth,
With rank to grace them, or to crown with health,
Our little lot denies; yet liberal still,—
God gives its counterpoise to every ill;
Nor let us murmur at our stinted powers,
When kindness, love, and concord may be ours.
The gift of ministring to others' ease,
To all our sons impartial heaven decrees;
The gentle offices of patient love
Beyond all flattery and all price above;
The mild forbearance at a brother's fault,
The angry word suppressed, the taunting thought;
Subduing and subdued the petty strife,
Which clouds the color of domestic life;
The sober comfort, all the peace which springs
From the large aggregate of little things;
On these small cares of daughter, wife, and friends,
The almost sacred joys of home depend.

——Hannah More.

CANINE SAGACITY.

"I had a bird-dog once," the old sportsman observed, "that was really noteworthy. He never failed on a point. One day I had him out for exercise in the park, when suddenly he pointed, rigid as a stone. I was puzzled. There was no possibility of game. The grass was close cropped. The dog had his nose straight on a man seated on a bench. I thought the man might have a live bird in his pocket, but no; the man was in his shirt-sleeves. Then I had an idea. 'Pardon me, sir,' I said, 'but would you mind telling me your name?' 'No, I don't mind,' he replied. 'It's Partridge.'"—New York Evening Post.

THE NECESSARY MONEY.

Everybody knows that it takes a great deal of money to meet the necessary expenses of a great church in carrying out an adequate program for the salvation of the world; and everybody knows, too, that the securing of this money is no easy matter. Especially at this season of the year, just preceding the Annual Conferences, are we forcibly reminded of the difficulties connected with bringing up all our assessments and collections in full.

One chief reason why these difficulties exist is the fact that, as a whole, our people have not yet learned the simple lesson that systematic, proportionate giving is a fundamental requirement of those who have taken upon themselves the obligations of church membership. And the reason why they have failed to learn this lesson is the fact that we, as a church, have not emphasized the doctrine of stewardship as we should have done.

As we have frequently had occasion to say, we believe that the widespread adoption of tithing would amply meet all the normal financial requirements of the church, that it would minister to the spiritual life of those who practice it, and that it would forever solve the problem of supplying the means for the maintenance and extension of the Kingdom of God on earth. This belief is not based merely upon the theory of the tithe as an equitable system of giving, but also upon the results that have followed its adoption in so many instances.

We should begin now to lay upon the consciences of our people the matter of giving in such way that, in due time, we shall produce a generation of Methodists who will be as religious with their money as they are with their feelings and sympathies and words. A propaganda in behalf of the tithe is in order.

"THE MAKINGS OF A GREAT SEMINARY."

Under the above caption, there appeared in the Christian Advocate (New York), sometime last spring, an editorial article dealing with the important subject of ministerial education and training. Because the conditions in our own church are so similar to those indicated in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and because it is becoming more and more urgent that we provide a ministry fully equipped for a work that is growing in complexity, importance, and difficulty with the passing of the days, we reproduce a part of the article in question with the hope that it may help us to realize the necessity of our insisting upon the best possible educational preparation on the part of our ministerial candidates. The suggestion contained in the last sentence of the quotation is partially carried out in such assemblies as the Seashore Divinity School; but it is a sad fact that so few of our preachers take advantage of the opportunities thus afforded them. Our Correspondence Schools are doing a great work, and their influence will increasingly be felt for good; but we have not yet reached the standard that we have a right to expect of the young men who are entering the service of the church. We place a thoroughly trained ministry among the greatest needs of our church to-day.

"In those boastful moods to which we Methodists are liable in the presence of men of other churches, our representatives sometime speak grandiosely of 'the largest theological seminary in the world,' having in mind the two or three thousand young preachers who are pursuing the Conference Course of Study while performing their pastoral duties. The old theory was that a log with a boy on one end and a Mark Hopkins on the other was a college. In years past this invisible Methodist theological seminary has too often been all boy and log—the indispensable Hopkins was lacking. In other words, the bishops named the books to be read and studied in each year, and the Annual Conference appointed a Board of Examiners, usually carefully selected men. The boy was left alone with his box of books for a year and then haled before an examining board, which made small pretensions to pedagogical skill.

"Every one who is solicitous that the church shall have a ministry intellectually capable of defending its doctrines and propagating its gospel must view with deep concern the fact that so few men of thorough schooling are entering the Annual Conferences. One half our ministerial candidates are without college training and one fifth have not completed the high school, yet we expect them to reach the young people of a generation which is intellectually alive. If we must take the material which offers, it is vitally important that we shall place within its reach facilities for supplementing the meager training for the exacting work of the ministry. The young preacher must be helped to prepare himself, even while he is in the first year of his pastorate, to think and write and speak with intelligence, illumination and force upon the great themes with which he is called to deal. It will not be enough to give him a five-foot book-shelf, however wisely selected. He must be taught how to study, how to weigh and compare statements, how to meet and overcome opposing views, how to express himself in writing and public discourse. This help should come to him not once a year, but constantly. So far as possible, it should be rendered by some one who understands him and his special problems, and if possible he should have the encouragement and inspiration, for a few days at least once a year, or being detacked from his narrowing round of parish duties, and brought into contact with his fellow students, and with men who can clear his difficulties and doubts, and if necessary 'hitch his wagon to a star.'"

APPROVAL OF THE "PAY-UP SUNDAY" IDEA.

The suggestion that we have a "pay-up Sunday" before Conference to provide promptly and fully for all the financial obligations of our pastoral charges, has met with approval from a good many sources, and definite requests have been made by Rev. Ben P. Jaco, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Mr. W. D. Hawkins, of the Mississippi Conference, that the idea be carried out with reference to the Centenary pledge, with the collection of which they are especially charged in their respective Conferences. In the Louisiana Conference a definite period of time had already been appointed for the presentation of the Centenary claims.

We hope there will be an immediate adoption of the plan in all those charges where it will help relieve the burden of preachers, official boards, and the membership generally in securing the amounts that will be necessary in order to go to Conference with a clean sheet. In most cases these assessments are going to be paid anyway—why not pay them at once and feel the glow of satisfaction that comes from a sense of duty well done? The sooner a thing is done, the better—provided the thing itself is worthy.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in regular annual session on Thursday of last week. Several of the members were unavoidably absent, but all three of the patronizing Conferences were capably represented and the meeting was full of interest. A full account of the proceedings will appear from the pen of the secretary; we hope it will be carefully read, especially by all our preachers and others who are interested in the circulation of the literature of the church. Much yet remains to be done before it can be said that we are making use of the great opportunity afforded by the church paper for doing good.

The members of the Committee present were: Rev. Jno. F. Foster, Dr. J. M. Henry, and Rev. S. J. Davies, of the Louisiana Conference; Rev. J. R. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference; Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of "Pelican Pines," delivered a series of addresses at First Church, Memphis, last week.

"Our charge will be ready for roll call when Conference convenes," writes Rev. W. A. Mangum, of Eunice, La.

Rev. H[illegible]y S. Westbrook, the pastor, reports two fine services at Louin, Miss., on the first Sunday in October. The congregations are growing in size and interest, and the work prospers.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, presiding elder of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference, writes in a business letter to the office, that the work of the district is moving along nicely, and that a good report will be made at Conference.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Summit, Miss., one of the Mississippi Conference evangelists, favored the Advocate office with a call on Wednesday of last week. He has been kept busy in revival meetings, and the Lord has greatly blessed his labors this year.

The pastor of the Baptist church at Yazoo City, Miss., pays a very high tribute to Rev. L. E. Alford, pastor of the Methodist church, in a recent number of the Bapptist Record, in connection with his work in helping to overthrow entrenched evil in that place.

Rev. H. J. Boltz, pastor of the Elmore charge, Louisiana Conference, reports a good year's work. Three good revivals have been held on the charge, and there have been fifty accessions to the membership of the church. The financial report will show an advance over last year.

Rev. M. A. Burns, of Potts Camp, Miss., reports that the revival services on his charge added twenty or more to the membership of the church, with prospects that others will be added later. He expects to be able to report everything in full at the Annual Conference.

Rev. R. I. Collins, of Shannon, Miss., writes that this has been a great year on his charge. The revival services during the summer were a gracious blessing to many people, old-time conversions at the altar being had. The present outlook indicates a good report at Conference.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Oakland, Miss., has recently held good meetings at Tillatoba, where he was assisted by Rev. W. D. Bennett, and at Antioch, where he was assisted by Rev. W. L. Storment. He began a meeting at Oakland last Sunday, in which the preaching is being done by Rev. W. A. Wilson.

Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, was recently called to Sherman, Texas, on the sad mission of attending the funeral of his sister, Mrs. C. F. Douglass. A graduate of Kidd-Key College and a teacher in that institution previous to her marriage. Mrs. Douglass was a widely known and greatly beloved woman. The funeral services were largely attended.

Rev. J. C. McElroy, our pastor at Chester, Miss., has been seriously ill in the Baptist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., for the past seven weeks. He was to undergo a very serious operation on Saturday of last week. We request that earnest prayer be made in behalf of Brother McElroy, and of his wife and children, whose hearts are very heavy in these anxious days.

In addition to other good things accomplished, a debt of $1200 on the parsonage at Coffeeville, Miss., has been paid this year, giving that charge a delightful preacher's home free of encumbrance. Rev. R. G. Lord is the pastor.

The death of Mr. F. B Catching at his home in Georgetown, Miss., on October 3, removed not only one of the prominent laymen of the Monticello charge, but of the Mississippi Conference. A note from Rev. W. F. Baggett, his pastor, pays high tribute to his memory.

Press dispatches last week announced the death of the daughter of Bishop Ainsworth. She had been ill for several months, and, for a time was thought to be on the way to recovery. The whole church will sympathize deeply with the Bishop and his family in their great sorrow.

Rev. L. P. Moreland, the pastor, reports the closing of a fine meeting at Peason, La., in which he was assisted by Rev. F. R. Power, of Shreveport, who did the preaching, and Mr. Morris Wynne, of Kinder, who led the singing. There were 41 additions to the Methodist church, and 21 to the Baptist church.

A note last week from Rev. W. H. Lewis, our pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., informed us of the serious illness of Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District. At the time the note was written his condition was critical. We rejoice to announce, however, that later information shows that his condition has greatly improved and that he is on the road to recovery.

Report has come to us of a great meeting at Springfield, La., during the month of September, in which the preaching was done by Rev. A. J. Coburn and Rev. L. L. McCain. There were definite conversions, with twenty-five or more accessions to the church. Immediately following the meeting, the presiding elder, Rev. A. S Lutz, held the quarterly conference, preaching a fine sermon in connection therewith.

We have received and enjoyed reading the first number of the "Big Brother," a small paper issued weekly under the auspices of the Big Brother Class of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss. Rev. E. S. Lewis, the pastor, is editor-in-chief, W. L. Solomon is "Big Brother" editor, and Miss Margaret Dunn is Sunday school editor. This interesting paper shows that Greenville Methodism is thoroughly alive.

We received the following note from Rev. Chas. E. Downer, of Seminary, Miss., just before going to press: "On Sunday, the 10th inst., Mrs. Lizzie Yeager, who died in Hattiesburg last Friday night, and who was stepmother of two of our pastors in this Conference, Brothers Dan and George Yeager, was buried from our church here at 11 a.m. A suitable memoir will follow later." We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family.

We greatly regret that we happened not to be in the office on Monday of last week when Brother W. J. Baker, of Pocahontas, Miss., and his daughter, Mrs. D. P. Coughlin, of Jackson, Miss., called. Brother Baker is a noble layman of our church who loves its doctrines and supports its Institutions. He and Mrs. Coughlin were returning from the Confederate Veterans' Reunion at Houston, Texas.

AN APPRECIATION OF A VALUABLE WORK.

Through the kindness of the publisher, there came into my hands a little book written by Rev. J. B. Cain, former pastor of the Washington charge. The title of this book is, "The Cradle of Mississippi Methodism."

As the territory and field occupied by the pioneers and founders of the Methodist church in the early days lies around the city of Natchez, on every side, and many of the most prominent families of those times were members of the Methodist church, and others closely associated with them, this little book should be of special interest to many citizens of Adams County, and the surrounding counties of Wilkinson, Jefferson, Warren and Amite. For a very nominal price this little book can be had at the office of the Natchez Printing and Stationery Company.

Rev. Mr. Cain has rendered a good service to Adams County and the surrounding counties by recording these historic facts in a small space in very readable style, and he has given the whole thing a literary touch of good English.

W. H. SAUNDERS,

THE PILGRIMS AND THE BIBLE.

By Rev. Charles Stelzle, D.D.

It was the purpose of the Pilgrims to set up the kingdom of God in whole communities, and this purpose was based upon the teachings of the Word of God.

They were not adventurers come to America to found a settlement which should bring them riches and power. Touch their history where one will, and the fact of their supreme desire to create a commonwealth in accordance with God's ordinances stands out clear and sharp. Nor did they desire merely freedom to worship God as their conscience might dictate. They already enjoyed such freedom in Holland, to which they fled to escape persecution in England.

According to the Pilgrims, it was man's duty to help in the establishment of God's reign on earth. This was not a comfortable doctrine for the political rulers in England. They saw very clearly that if the Pilgrims should secure the religious freedom which they sought, it was inevitable that greater political freedom would follow. And so the Pilgrims were opposed not only by the ecclesiastics of their times but by the kings and rulers of their day. They believed in the church, but they turned to the Bible for guidance in conducting its affairs. It was their conviction that every man stands before God as an individual, with all the rights and privileges of any other believer, no matter what his ecclesiastical position. With them democracy was synonymous with Christianity. They declared with fervor that every Christian had the right of privately and personally interpreting the Word of God This was counted an essential doctrine, because their whole philosophy and program depended upon the Bible. The Magna Charta of their life and liberty was too sacred a thing to be entrusted exclusively even to the "specialist" who might become arrogant and overbearing in his teaching of what God intended should become known to all the people—even the humblest of them.

Every question which arose among the Pilgrims was settled according to the teachings of the Bible. They had no judgments which went contrary to its teachings. It was contended by them that the Scriptures offered a perfect rule for the direction and government of all men, in all the duties which they are to perform to God and man, in the government of families and commonwealths, as well as in the affairs of the church. And so public officials and church officers were chosen according to its directions. Quarrels and differences of opinion regarding social, economic, and civic questions were settled according to its teachings. It was the Bible which showed them the inconsistencies of the Established Church. They saw that the ecclesiastical rulers were permitting practices which they believed were contrary to its direction.

Even the social life in Plymouth was based squarely upon the teachings of the Bible. This does not mean that their social life was not joyous—in spite of incidental references to the contrary—for this would invalidate the entire philosophy of the Word, in which is found constant exhortation to "rejoice." It has not been proved that they were not fully as happy as are the more "liberal" people of the twentieth century. The result of their loyalty to the teachings of the Bible can be determined only by their history, and judged upon this basis, one finds a complete vindication of the Pilgrims.

They were successful, economically and commercially, beyond their dreams. They suffered greatly during the first two or three years but during this period they found the supremest comfort in the Bible. Following this brief space, they were prospered to so large a degree that in a few years they paid all their debts to their creditors in England and established themselves upon a permanent basis.

Their political history and influence vindicates their faith. The government which they set up was founded upon the Bible—and it proved to be of an enduring character. The principles of this government have served as the model for governments throughout the world, and we in America have never ceased to acknowledge our debt to the Pilgrim Fathers for the contribution which they made toward our stability as a people.

But the chief contribution which they made to our nation was in the field of religious liberty. Here the Pilgrims stand unique. And it was in the Bible that they found the precepts which gave them this light and leading.

In celebrating the tercentenary anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims, it is peculiarly appropriate that the churches of America emphasize the importance of the Bible in this event and in subsequent American history. For here the churches can speak with authority and without hesitation or apology. Therefore, the American Bible Society has designated Sunday, November 28, as Universal Mayflower Bible Sunday, to be observed by all the churches and it has prepared some special, high-grade, printed matter for use on this occasion, which may be had by ministers and other church leaders upon application to its headquarters.—Zion's Herald.

"Brother and Sister Wm. M. Smith
This little will ever remember the first day of March 1920 as the day on which there came to their home a little stranger in the person of a sweet baby girl, a real gift of purest promise, a fair cause for which to live, to labor and to love it best be. A few brief years came and passed, and all went well until the opening days of January 1920, when a cloud of illness burst upon the home. Five months of intense suffering followed, and on July 17 dear little ELSIE MAUDE flitted away to heaven and to God. This, too, will be a day long to be remembered.

The grief parents, Uncle Jimmie Smith and his almost faithful and cheerful companion, bathed their home, sympathy and service without reins, while the parents gave themselves wholly unto the comforts of their suffering loved one, now stealing away from the home, but not from love's fond embrace. Every possible attention was given, including the most faithful and painstaking medical treatment, but the summons from on high was emphatic and must be obeyed.

Dear Elsie, some sweet day thy loved ones shall see thee again, for they, too, are on the way that leads to heaven and to God. May sustaining grace be theirs. Appropriate services were held at the church and the dear little body consigned to its resting place. HER PASTOR.

AN APPRECIATION.

"There is no Death! What seems so is transition,
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call Death."

Hence when our loved ones enter this portal and become more beautiful by the expansion of the soul we are able to bear the grief of the short separation.

As the darkness of night passes away when the first ray of light appears, so calmly and peacefully my precious mother, Mrs. E. J. Osmond, fell asleep August 27, in Meridian, Miss., to awaken to a new life where light alone holds sway.

The two realms in which she moved were the home and the church. Her nearest and dearest had enthroned her as queen of the home circle and would do her homage whenever her unselfishness would permit; we shall miss her watchful helpfulness and the sweet influence of her unselfish thought for others.

She was typical of the full blown rose revealing its heart of gold, and the fragrance of the message she brought will linger always with those who loved her.

Her life had been such that when the summons came "to join the innumerable caravan, which moves to that mysterious realm," she went sustained by an unfaltering trust.

She knew her Pilot's face before she crossed the bar." He was her daily guide. Her prayer that the mind that was in Christ Jesus might be in her, and reflected in her life of noble deeds. What a legacy she has left to her children!

May we follow in her footsteps, is my prayer. Although the days will be sad and lonely, the Everlasting Arms are ever around us.

"A KOREAN WANTING TO KNOW WHY."

Dear Brother Carley: We have three Koreans in school here. They are splendid young men, preparing for the ministry. One evening last week, with two of them I walked across the beautiful slope in the western side of the campus. There, at the foot of a large cedar tree, we three bowed together in communion with God. I could not understand a word of their prayers, but I felt the presence of God's Spirit.

One night since then, one of them was in my room and he asked my room mate if he were a Christian. He answered, no. The Korean looked at him very anxiously and said, "Why?" My roommate could not answer as to why he was not a Christian.

This instance put me to thinking: How true it is that a person in this Christ land has no reason for not being a Christian. W. P. BAILEY.

THE MINUTE MAN AND EDUCATION.

Our church is entering upon a period in which Christian Education is to be emphasized as never before. To meet the demand for trained leaders our church schools and colleges must have larger and better buildings, other necessary equipment, and endowments that will produce regular and adequate income.

The Methodist Minute Man carried the message of the Missionary Centenary to every nook and corner of the church. He is now expected to carry to every congregation an appeal in behalf of our schools and colleges. Great is the Methodist Minute Man! May his plea for an enlarged program of Christian Education be heard everywhere!—Missionary Voice.

MRS. MARY JANE ECKLES.

"Mrs. Mary J. Eckles, widow of the late Rev. W. H. Eckles of Pleasant Grove, Miss., died at the home of her son, Hon. A. K. Eckles, in Cleveland, on Wednesday night, August 19." This announcement of the passing of dear Sister Eckles brought sorrow to many hearts. While not unexpected, yet it came as a shock. She had not been well or strong for years, but was as well as usual. At 2 o'clock in the morning she asked for a drink of water. Her daughter arose and gave it to her. She quietly lay down and went to sleep and awoke in Heaven. Sister Eckles was a Miss Carter, of Como. She was born July 23, 1845. She lived to the ripe age of seventy-five years and twenty-six days. At fourteen years of age she was converted and joined the McGee Chapel church. For more than sixty years she lived a devout, loyal Christian and Methodist, a most beautiful, noble and exemplary character, one of God's noble women. When the Pleasant Grove Church was organized she became a charter member with her noble husband.

She was married to W. H. Eckles, December 10, 1861. During four years of horrible war experience this girl wife prayed for and waited anxiously his coming home. In 1865 when Walthall's brigade was paroled, Brother Eckles came back to a desolate country, but with love, faith, and vigor they soon had started the little home that soon grew to be a veritable oasis in this desert, a place of comfort, happiness, hospitality, worship and joy. Who that ever rested in this hospitable home could ever forget the real touch of Heaven!

God blessed this home with fourteen happy children. Three died early in life, three in mature years, eight still live to bless the memory of those who bore to them the most hallowed name next to that of Jesus—mother and father. From this home came one doctor, one lawyer and judge, one school man, one preacher, all highly respected, honored, successful Christian men and women, who delight to honor and bless the home of sanctified influence and the ones who first led their childish hearts to love and trust the Savior.

Sister Eckles was a most devout Christian. She read her Bible through thirty-nine times. To her it was a most sacred treasure. Although nearly blind she would read its sacred pages by the hour. She was gentle, kind, self-sacrificing, living in the spirit of Him who "came not to be ministered unto but to minister and give His life a ransom for many." Her life was spent largely in the home and the near home community where every life knew something of the goodness, the motherliness, the real greatness of this humble child of God, greatly beloved here, greatly beloved On High. We sorrow at the separation from her beautiful life, but we rejoice in the happy companionship and joy that are hers in the Father's House above. Her body rests with the sacred dust of those she loved and amid the scenes of a happy, long and useful life. Her glorified life rejoices with those she loved "but lost to earth the while."

Black-Draught As A Preventive

When You Begin Feeling Bad With Feverishness, Headache, Cold, or Constipation, Give Your Liver a Tonic—Take Black-Draught.

Candler, N. C.—"I don't believe there is a better medicine made than Black-Draught; I have used it and my mother's folks used it for colds, feverishness, headache and deranged liver." This statement recently was made by Mr. C. B. Trull, a well-known farmer on Route 3, this place.

"I have, before now, begun feeling dull, a headache would come on, and I would feel all full of cold, and take a few doses of Black-Draught and get all right," adds Mr. Trull.

"Last year my brother had measles, flu and pneumonia. They wired us; I went to Camp Jackson to look him up. Down there different ones were using preventatives. I stayed with him. The only thing I used was Black-Draught. It kept my system cleansed and I kept well and strong."

By keeping your liver and stomach in good order, you stand in little danger of catching serious ills that occasionally spread through town and country.

Get a package of Black-Draught and have it ready for the first symptom of a disordered liver.

Most druggist sell Black-Draught.—Adv.

Hard Colds—People whose blood is pure are not nearly so likely to take hard colds as are others. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure; and this great medicine recovers the system after a cold as no other medicine does. Take Hood's.—Adv.

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments.

Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGER, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 363 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Mr. M. W. Brabham will represent the General Sunday School Board at the session of our Conference to be held in Charleston. He will have a message for all who are concerned about religious education, but especially will be of interest to the men on the circuits.

Promotion day was observed with fine success in a number of schools the last Sunday in September, especially in Clarksdale, West Point, Greenville, Holly Springs, Grenada, Sardis, Batesville, and others. We are getting somewhere in the work of religious education.

As dear as the Sunday school is and as much as it has accomplished in giving a knowledge of the Bible, we are giving it up for something better and more effective. The Sunday school as we have known it is passing out and giving place to the church school. Instead of devoting a short hour each week to Indifferent Bible study, we are going to give several hours each week to definite religious education, and this training will be given by men and women who are prepared to do the work better than it has ever been done.

The O.K. record system has been introduced in several schools the past month. This system will stimulate church attendance, Bible reading, prayer, promptness, and other things we want done. Look into the matter, try it out for a year and note the results.

Institutes have been recently held at Ackerman, Kosciusko, and Durant. The teachers at these places agreed to organize a teacher training class to meet with the pastor or some other leader once a week until one book is completed. Miss Mansker was with me at these places mentioned and her work pleased the teachers very much.

It is not customary and as a rule not best to put the entire series of graded lessons in a school at once. But in the case of Kosciusko where the teachers have done good work with the uniform lessons and have before them clearly the idea of grading and correct teaching, I have no fear but that they will succeed better with the graded lessons than they could with the others. You may hear from Kosciusko as to the results of this experiment.

"The Big Brother" is the name of the weekly paper published under the auspices of the "Big Brother" Class of Greenville. The first issue is full of good news from the Greenville church. There were 243 present at Sunday school last Sunday and 164 one year ago. Brother Lewis is using more than one method of evangelizing the people. When we all learn that there is more than one way, we will make some headway against the world, the flesh, and the devil. There is a church working alongside of us with the same kind of people that is taking our crown from us. More leaders like Brother Lewis and others of our Conference is our need.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The fourth Sunday in October was spent at Yazoo City. Brother Alford is making a strong fight for Methodism. We had fine services Sunday and through the Institute Monday and Tuesday, resulting in much good. The Sunday school at Yazoo City, under the supervision of H. L. Clark, is in better condition than it has been in a long time.

The Sunday schools at Gulfport and Biloxi will have a Standard Training School beginning October 31 and running through November 5. They will have a course in Organization and Administration, course on Methods of Teaching, one on Primary Methods, and one on Junior Methods. All the Sunday schools adjacent to Gulfport are invited to come and participate in this school.

The first Sunday in October was spent on the Harperville and Lena charge. We had a fine day on this charge. We have no Sunday school at Hillsboro and so of course our time was spent in trying to get the people to see the need of a Methodist school. The Harperville school is doing good work. They have a perfectly beautiful church, with three Sunday school rooms and a large auditorium. They have a large class of young people composed of students of the Agricultural High School. These people are doing a fine work and I bespeak for them the prayers and interest of the Mississippi Conference.

Monday night was spent at Chunky, and Tuesday night we organized a Sunday school at Mehan. The conditions on the Chunky charge are encouraging.

The Sunday school at Forest, under the supervision of Prof. J. J. Weaver, has organized a Teacher Training Class. They have started well and if continued will produce great results in the future. They also had an unusually attractive Promotion Day.

The past two weeks have been busy ones and the Lord has been blessing us.

I ask that all of the brethren help the secretary and his helpers to get to every charge that has not been visited this year. While it will necessitate some inopportune appointments, yet, if you will help us, the work can be done.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Your friend and brother,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS.
Field Secretary.

THE VALUE OF A SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

Dear Brother Carley: I must write you about the Sunday School Institute which was held in the Methodist Church here on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Brother R. H. B. Gladney was here through Sunday and preached two splendid sermons for us on that day. The devotional services on Monday and Tuesday by Brother Gladney and the instruction by that perfectly wonderful Miss Jone Mansker proved a rare treat for all who were so fortunate as to be present. Of course, the "faithful few" were present, but I believe that an interest has been created which will work wonders for our Sunday school in the future. A class for the instruction and training of our teachers was organized, and it is the purpose to hold weekly meetings. It was also agreed that the missionary program would be carried out more regularly each month in the future. Resolutions were made by those attending this Institute that from now on they would endeavor to be more loyal to the church and its every Interest, render more faithful service, and above all to be more prayerful and strive to find out God's will in giving Christian instruction and education to the child-life of the Sunday school and the community. We feel fortunate, indeed, in having Brother Gladney and Miss Mansker with us for these two days, and feel that their work in our midst will prove permanently helpful, for we know it has been a means of inspiring us to be more zealous and faithful and desirous of being more efficient.

MRS. J. L. SEAWRIGHT.
Ackerman, Miss.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. FROM PINE GROVE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I feel that I might report some things that would be of interest to some of the readers of the Advocate from Pine Grove work. I have just closed our revival meetings and some of them are worthy of note, and all were helpful to our people.

We began at Killian Chapel, Aug. 21, with Brother H. C. Murphy, of Natalbany, to do the preaching; and it was well done. The weather was fine and the people came and were helped in their spiritual lives.

Our third quarterly meeting was held Sept. 11 and 12. Our efficient presiding elder was with us and gave us four masterful sermons. Then the writer filled in until Tuesday night, when our splendid Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. Alonzo Early, came, and with evangelistic sermons and Sunday school work, did us great good. We closed this, the best meeting held at Pipkin Chapel in 25 years (so said by members of the church) on Thursday night, with 12 accessions, and the church greatly revived.

Then on Sept. 18 we came to Pine Grove, and Brother C. A. Shultz, of Gallman Miss., came and mightily preached the Gospel, so that this large congregation was stirred as it had not been for a long time. As a result of this meeting, yesterday, Oct. 3, I received eleven into our church; and there are more to follow.

On Sept. 25, Brother S. S. Bogau, of Gonzales, came to us at Montpelier, where he did some splendid preaching to the edification of our people. Bogau is a Gospel preacher, with no uncertain ring to his message. The singing at this meeting, which was led by Prof. Spencer and Mrs. Percy Tilery, as organist, was of high class and deserves special notice.

Hoping to meet the brethren on Nov. 3, I am happy in His work,

R. V. FULTON.

FROM MARIETTA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our meetings are over. We have had some great meetings this year on the Marietta charge. The Lord has greatly blessed us. We have received 53 members this quarter, 50 by baptism, and the church has been strengthened and built up spiritually, and we feel that the people are getting on a higher plane of right living.

We are rounding out our third and best year here on the Marietta circuit. We feel confident that we will be able to go to Conference with a full financial report. Yours in Christ,

G. B. LOVE, P. C.

A LETTER FROM SONGDO, KOREA.

Dear Advocate: You have had all kinds of programs sent to you, but I doubt if you have ever received a program like the one which I am enclosing in this letter. It is a musical program which the choir of the North Ward Church of this city rendered some time since. I attend the South Ward Church. My choir had a part in this program. The feathered arrow points to the number given by my choir. The double pointed arrow points to Miss Laura Edwards' name. She is a missionary from Texas. The single arrow points to my name (I played an instrumental solo); but they did not know my name in Chinese, hence they wrote it in Korean, and since they did not know my Chinese name, they did not get my name correct in Korean. I have written my name both in Chinese and in Korean. I am not an expert hand at writing the Oriental languages: Chinese and Korean are beautiful when written well. The name which has a line by it, is the name of a Korean who graduated in music at the Imperial University in Tokyo, Japan. He plays beautifully. His surname is the character for gold, and his given name means "everlastingly bright, or brilliant." He played both piano and violin solos. The entire program was quite interesting. There were several numbers of real Korean music.

The ladies have received their appointments for the new year, and I am very, very happy over my new work. I have country evangelistic work (among the women, of course) in the Songdo District. The district will be divided between Miss Edwards and me. Miss Agnes Graham (also from Texas) has the evangelistic work in the city.

This is a wonderful country: I wish people from home could come out and see what is being done by the church in this country. No matter how enthusiastic a person may be about missions, he can not get much (in comparison to what there is to be learned) from books and other reading matter. There is nothing like seeing. Moreover, there is nothing like seeing with the help of a person who knows the situation.

If you receive many lengthy letters like this, I do not know how you ever finish reading them. But probably you are not troubled that way very often.

With best wishes for the Advocate,

Most sincerely,

PAULINE GLASS RANDLE.

The Best Advice
FOR MOTHERS

RIENZI, MISS.—"When I commenced taking Doctor Pierce's medicines I was all wrecked and run-down until I was not able to do anything, but now I am getting along fine and have a big, fine, healthy baby boy. Tongue could not tell how much better I feel since taking the medicines. I took both the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' also two vials of the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and had practically no suffering. I will always praise these wonderful medicines. I never would try to go through expectancy again without it."—MRS. MARY OWEN.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. Mr. Dodson Warns Against Use of Treacherous, Dangerous Calomel.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

The "Gleaners" At Shreveport.

My Dear Mrs. Snelling: I wonder if you and the women who read our "Page" know about the "Gleaners" in First Church, Shreveport. This society is composed of the young married women in our church, Mrs. C. H. Shaffer, President. They are doing a great work and are especially interested in work along educational lines. They support a Bible woman, also are educating and supporting a girl at Vashti, Thomasville, Ga. A local girl at the Training School is being looked after by them. They serve something hot to men in jail, and do various things of this kind. They have about 70 members. These young women are supporting nine Armenian children. I am inclosing a letter they received from their charge at Vasbti. This is one of the girls found by our city missionary and sent to Vashti to save. She has been converted and wrote the Gleaners that she wants to become a missionary. It is needless to say that this society is proud of her. My "Young people" here are also supporting a girl at Vashti. Our own happiness is real when it is divided with others.

With love,
MRS. B. F. KEY,
Conference Superintendent of Young People.

(Letter From Vashti)

My True Friends: I must write you and tell you of the fine times I had while in Florida. I wrote Mrs. Dugan a card while in Florida, thanking her for the nice box of clothes she sent me, but I just couldn't thank her enough on the card, so I will now try to express my thanks, for it was appreciated so much by me.

Now I must tell you that I could never get through thanking you for the money you sent me for this visit, and I will always remember you as sweet, true friends of mine. I just had a lovely time, talking, and enjoying the games with so many girls from Florida, South Carolina and Georgia. I also met so many nice people from different places.

While I was in Florida I visited St. Augustine and saw the oldest house in the United States, also the old Spanish Fort. As you know, St. Augustine is the oldest city in the United States, and it is just full of old, old, curious things, like the oldest house, Spanish Fort, Fountain of Youth and Slave Square, where they sold slaves years ago. I also saw my first alligators in a large river. I don't mean they were my first I ever saw, but the first in real water like that of the St. John River. Every day we went on a long hike and spent all the afternoon and went in swimming. While in Florida I learned so many interesting things about Y. W. C. A. and missionary work.

From my little room, where I sat in the evenings, I could see the boats go to and fro on the large river. My room, with the other two girls, was on the second floor and was about twenty-five or thirty-five yards from the river, and the banks of the river were lined with light blue lillies. It was just simply too pretty to look at.

On the fifth of July we went on a large steamer, large enough to accommodate fifty or sixty girls, and rode on the river a long way, to Middleburg, Florida and had dinner and then came back.

So you see I have had a fine time, and will never forget the ones who paid my way down there. I am going to repay this kindness some way. I am also going to study hard and make this year my best year. I am making up a year in seventh grade school this summer, so you see I have been very busy.

Write me often, for I get lonely when I can't get letters and papers from home. I am trying my best to

A GREAT DAY AT CLARKSDALE, MISS.

The eleven o'clock service in the Clarksdale Methodist Church, Sunday, was of a very unique and impressive nature. Following as it did, the Sunday School Promotion Day Exercises, the seriousness and dignity of the occasion were particulary noticeable.

The first part of the church service was devoted to the ceremony of the "Installation of Officers and Teachers" and each of the sixty-two members of this body of the Sunday school was present with regularly engraved certificates of proficiency in their particular office. The duties and responsibilities of the office each one was filling were dwelt upon in a splendid address made by Superintendent Fant, after which he called the names and assigned the places of each of his staff, the certificates being presented by Assistant Superintendent Taylor.

The pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, delivered an admonition as to the sacredness and seriousness of the part to be taken by the Sunday school officers and teachers. He spoke of the need for spiritual purity and consecration of self to God and His work. He told of the need of loyalty to the doctrines and principles of the church for which they teach, and the necessity of studying its history and the reading of God's Word.

Stressing the fact that the work of keeping and teaching the Sunday school is a most important matter, Dr. Broyles asked all of the sixty-two participants in the service to come forward and kneel in order, through prayer, to consecrate themselves to the service they were undertaking.

This was the most important and impressive part of the entirely beautiful program. At no other time in this church has such a service taken place. It served to impress the entire audience with the high calling of those who undertake the spiritual training of the youth of the land.

Dr. Broyles stated in one part of the service that a year ago the church membership was just 326 and within that time the accessions alone have reached 324, just two less than the entire membership at that time.

The Sunday school is the foundation of the church and the beautiful service of installing the officers and teachers will lead to an even more rapid growth in the church membership another year. The following received certificates conferring upon them their respective offices:

Scrofula Most Progressive Now.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none so than to the scrofulous and consumptive.

The progress of scrofula during a normal autumn is commonly great.

It is probable that few people ever think of scrofula—its hunches, eruptions, and wasting of the body—without thinking of the benefit many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose success in the treatment of this one disease alone would be enough to make it what it is, one of the most famous medicines in the world.

There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative—consumption.

Hood's Pills, the cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla, in cases where one is necessary, are gentle in action and thorough in effect.—Adv.

MISSION STUDY AND MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

October has been designated as Mission Study and Membership campaign month. Mrs. Steele and Mrs. Lipscomb have prepared an envelope of leaflets to be used in presenting the claims of Mission Study and membership in the Missionary Societies. I am making an extraordinary effort to get this literature into the right hands of local auxiliaries and trust this is going to be, as Mrs. Lipscomb has expressed it, a bumper year in Mission Study membership. I most earnestly urge your hearty co-operation in securing the use of this literature for the accomplishment of this end. This is a united effort and the president of each auxiliary should give all the assistance she can in helping to put it over. Had you ever thought that those who are to be the special workers in home and foreign fields to-morrow, are those who are in the mission Study classes of to-day? Those who cannot go themselves will find a great privilege and real service in pointing out the possibilities of such to those who can; especially to Junior societies and members of the Sunday school who have reached the Senior department and have begun to consider their life work. We say that the Christianizing of the world is the greatest task that we face—what are we doing about it? Are we giving our time, talent, money, and prayers to this the greatest work in the world, or are we sitting idly by and depending on the others to do the work? Let us get in dead earnest about this the greatest work and let the worth-while things come first. Instead of having fifty mission study classes in North Mississippi Conference, let's have two hundred and sixty-one and every woman who is a member of the church also a member of the Missionary Society.

DEPLETED RANKS MUST BE REINFORCED IMMEDIATELY OR MISSIONARY WORK SERIOUSLY INJURED.

By Rev. H. P. Jones.

RIGHT NOW we need a man and wife in Kure, a city of 130,000; splendid chance for him to push our church work there and at two places near-by. Only one lady missionary living in Kure at present.

RIGHT NOW we need a man and wife at Ubeshinkawa, a city of 60,000; no missionary living there; an evangelist goes twice a month; a rapidly growing city, great coal mines and iron factories.

RIGHT NOW we need an experienced man (which would mean one taken from our forces in Japan) for work among Japanese in Korea. Three large centers already established, and others should be opened.

RIGHT NOW we need a man back in the interior from Hiroshima, to open a center about thirty miles inland; towns adjoining by the dozens from 2000 up to 10,000 each.

RIGHT NOW we need a man for Onomichi—a town of 35,000—large business center for islands nearby, and dozens of towns. No resident missionary.

RIGHT NOW we need a man at Shimonoseki. He would add 80 per cent to the efficiency of our Methodist forces there. This is at the most westerly point of the mainland, and is becoming a very important business center, as it stands on the north shore of the strait that separates the mainland from Kyshu. The native church is very anxious that we put a missionary family there.

RIGHT NOW we need a missionary at Tadotsu, and at Takamatsu, and other places nearby. These are on the north shore of Shikoku, just across from Okayama. Brother Wilson cannot work the large circuit on the mainland and then work these places on Shikoku. The Christians at Tadotsu have sent in this request three times during the last two years.

These are the urgent needs of the Hiroshima District alone. I know of at least three places in the Matsuyama District, and two in the Kobe where men are needed at once.

Japan's influence in the Orient is growing every day. You cannot Christianize the Orient without Christianizing that aggressive people, the Japanese. They have been deeply stirred by the war. Their thought for the next fifty or one hundred years is being crystallized. Their course of action is being determined. If Christian purposes and ideals are to control, the missionary forces must be doubled in the next fifteen years. If there is such a thing as strategy in marshalling the forces of the Kingdom, and I believe there is, I should certainly say that during the next ten years the Boards should put five missionaries in Japan each year to where they put one in China or Korea. Send the best qualified men and women to be found—strong in character, well prepared, ready for a long, steady, hard fight to win a worthy people.

A LESSON ON LAY ORGANIZATION.

One of our wide-awake Conference Chairmen of Minute Men, who is also an active Lay Leader, tells a very interesting story concerning two pastors whose charges were in the same city and the membership and wealth of whose congregations were about as evenly divided as one could hope to find anywhere. At the beginning of their pastorates neither received more than sixteen hundred dollars as salary.

One pastor did not believe in lay organization and therefore gave no attention whatever to such matters. The other was an ardent believer in lay organization and gave a great deal of time and thought to organizing the members of his congregation and setting them to work. In a short while his church was fairly buzzing with activity. Interest rose to white heat and the church became a city set upon a hill. The official board raised the pastor's salary to $2,700.

The other congregation continued to move along in the old ruts, paying their pastor the same old salary and making little or no progress in the work of the Kingdom. But the pastor has already seen his mistake in ignoring the important matter of lay organization and has applied to the Lay Leader for help.—J. M. Way, in Missionary Voice.

The end of life is not to do good, although many of us think so. It is not to win souls, although I once thought so. The end of life is to do the will of God, whatever it may be.—Henry Dummond.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE OBLIGATION TO GIVE THE BEST.

The obligation to give his very best rests as heavily upon the preacher as upon anybody else in the world—if possible, more heavily. The preacher himself is undertaking to interpret in terms of human understanding the supreme message of an Infinite God; and he is declaring that message to men who are infinitely in need of the help that can come through it alone. For him, then, to stand in the pulpit at any service, morning or evening, with the consciousness that his preparation has been of the makeshift variety and that his message is merely perfunctory, is for him to realize that he has failed of his mission for that particular service at least, having to kill time by saying something instead of blessing his congregation by having something to say. Poor preaching and empty pews belong together.

THE HIGHER CRITICS AND "PEP."

The editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate has the right understanding of "pep," no matter what its etymology is. He says: "And now comes the higher critic who tells us that 'pep' has nothing to do with pepper, black, white or red or paprika. It comes from the word pepsin, that digestive fluid in the stomach that takes all sorts of nourishment and in that great melting pot converts them into flesh and blood, bone, nail and dentine, as the machine may demand. Perhaps the professor is right. Spiritual 'pep' is a fire in the soul that dissolves doubts, melts difficulties, grinds up opposition, and turns the most adverse conditions into means of power and victory. Intellectual 'pep' is a fire of enthusiasm for knowledge, that takes all forms of information into its crucible, skims the scum and drains the dregs, retaining only what reason and judgment approve. 'Pep' is but another word for enthusiasm."

THE MAIN BUSINESS IN COLLEGE.

We believe in college athletics, college social life, college literary societies, organized college religious activities, various kinds of movements that appeal to the interests of the students (all, of course, under propepr regulations); but, above all, we believe in the supreme importance of the course of study. Though he win all kinds of honors, and though he be voted the most popular man in school, and though he take the lead in all progressive movements, the student who neglects his class room work is a mighty poor specimen of the modern college man. Study is the main business at college.

AN UNSOPHISTICATED VISITOR'S VIEW.

We were very greatly interested in reading, not long ago, a selection in the Review of Reviews from a diary kept by the first Japanese ambassador, Muragaki-Awaji-mo-Kami, to the United States, during President Buchanan's administration. In connection with a dinner given the embassy by Secretary Cass, there was dancing, and it was the dancing that seemed to impress the ambassador more than anything else. At any rate, here is what he wrote in his diary: "After dinner, at which there were various kinds of wines, we were ushered into another very large room, the floor of which was of smooth board and had no carpet. Immediately after we were seated the music commenced and an officer in uniform, with one arm around a lady's waist and the other hand holding one of her hands, started moving around the room on his toes, many others following his example. Upon inquiring we were told that this was a 'dance.' As I watched the various movements of the dancers I could not help smiling at the way in which the very large skirts, called crinolines, which the ladies wore, increased in volume until they assumed enormous proportions when the dance attained the top speed. This continued until midnight. We had never seen or imagined anything like it. it was of course with no small wonder that we had witnessed this extraordinary sight of men and bare-shouldered women hopping around the floor arm in arm, and our wonder at the strange performance became so great that we began to doubt whether we were not on another planet. We are told that all, young and old, rich and poor, all classes of people in this country, are fond of this pastime of dancing. It seems very funny, indeed, to us, as dancing in our country is done only by professional girls and is not at all a man's pastime. And there are the arms in public around women's waists." We wonder what an unsophisticated visitor to our shores to-day would think of some of our social "pastimes!"

IF THERE WERE NO NEWSPAPERS!

We cannot really imagine what the present world would be like if there were no newspapers. We can, of course, hark back to the time when there were none and try to get our picture from the situation then; but that was a different world. Things are happening to-day, rapidly, tragically, portentously, and we want to know about them as quickly as possible. The newspaper brings us the information before breakfast. From the small happenings in our own communities to the significant movements on the other side of the world, we expect the newspaper to keep us informed; and it does. The news is sometimes inaccurate and sometimes too highly colored—but it is all the news we have. The newspapers keep us in touch with what people are thinking and doing everywhere, and they keep us informed of interesting happenings that otherwise we should never even hear about. How could we get along without the daily newspaper? The religious newspaper, too, is indispensable to the intelligent church member.

POOR LOGIC.

We sympathize as deeply as anybody with the agriculturalists of the nation who are facing heavy losses by reason of the decline in price of agricultural products. But we cannot understand by what process of reasoning anybody can reach the conclusion that the way to raise prices is to violate the law by intimidating peaceful citizens by anonymous warnings and by violently destroying property that has been accumulated through a long period of time. If the burning of a few gins would raise the price of cotton, it would mean that causes have given way to caprice, and sound reason to insane violence, in which case the foundations of government would be overthrown and sanguinary revolution would be our next step. If any considerable number of our people believe that the best way to attain their ends is by violence, our educational and religious training has been sadly inefficient and we need to look to our own shortcomings as much as to those of the misguided and ignorant threateners of violence.

ONE OTHER SUGGESTION.

A distinguished newspaper publisher is reported to have said recently in New Orleans: "The day of 'brute space' in advertising is near its end. The time has come when advertisers must depend on the clearness and cleverness of their appeal, rather than on huge allotments of space to carry their messages. News print is too costly to waste that way." We should like to add one other suggestion to those who take much space in the daily newspapers to advertise their wares: Leave off the words, "Worth more," after the price is given, or charge for the goods what they are actually worth. We have been buying things a good many years—but it is very seldom that we come across an article that is worth more than the price we have to pay for it. The first thing advertisers know, people won't believe all they say.

MUTUAL SELF-MANIFESTATION.

Only—but this is rare—
When a beloved hand is laid in ours,
When, jaded with the rush and glare
Of the interminable hours,
Our eyes can in another's eyes read clear,
When our world-deafened ear
Is by the tones of a loved voice caressed—
A bolt is shot back somewhere in our breast
And a lost pulse of feeling stirs again,
The eye sinks inward and the heart lies plain,
And what we mean, we say, and what we would, we know;
A man becomes aware of his life's flow,
And hears the winding murmur, and he sees
The meadows where it glides, the sun, the breeze.

THE CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE.

By Rev. Dr. James Percival Huget.

"So when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his coat about him, and cast himself into the sea."—John 21:7.

It is a fascinating chapter, this twenty-first of John. William Allen Knight calls it "the story that would not stay untold."

What a scene for a painter, whether with a brush, or voice, or pen! The breaking of the day, the silvery morning light across the calm waters of the peaceful lake, the little boat and the seven toiling fishermen, the One there upon the sandy beach—then His voice calling through the morning stillness, the murmured questions of the disciples, the recognition, and Peter's ardent act as he plunged into the sea that he might come at once to his Master's feet!

It was just like Peter! Eager, impulsive, a man of action; making blunders and failures, and yet winning because he dared. It was so that he won his faith, for Peter's faith was wrought out by living and striving and struggling, by trying and failing and trying again, by falling and rising, and for just that reason it was a real faith. For, after all, experience comes by experiment, confidence comes by commitment, trust from testing, assurance from adventure, life itself from living.

It is an adventure just to live to go through the mysterious years, to meet the tests and trials, the occasions and opportunities of our years. God pity all men who have lost the zest of life, or who have been ground down by its deadly routine. Like David Grayson, we need again and again to take to the road, the friendly and soul-quickening road; we need some new and unusual experience to shake us out of our stagnation. In a lofty sense and large meaning we need the pioneer spirit, the ongoing purpose, the eager seeking of new lands, new undertakings, new achievements. Doubtless society has need of both the conservative and the radical; the one rightly to value the past and to safeguard its accomplishments; the other to front the future and labor for new attainments. True radicalism, however, does not forsake old roads just for the sake of a change, or even "to get out of the rut," but follows the road to its end and then builds new roads beyond. And true conservatism does not refuse to advance, but it does insist, while building new roads, upon keeping the old ones in repair.

Six of the seven fishermen stayed in the boat and hung on to the fish—and that was a good thing to do. And Peter himself later helped to haul the fish to shore and eat them for breakfast. The radical is always ready to eat the conservative's fish!

I am glad that Peter forgot the fish for a little while, that he plunged into the sea because he heard the voice of Jesus and saw His loved form there upon the shore. Let us not always and too much withstand the daring of our souls. Inertia is not always conservatism; it is often just laziness. There are times when hesitation becomes a crime. Dante puts into a special Limbo all the doubting and the slothful, and Ironquill tells us:

"All glory comes from daring the unequal,
All honor from daring to begin!"

But what if a man ventures and fails? Peter had tried before and had made a miserable mess of it. Why make a fool of himself again? Yes, he who ventures may fail, but what of that? The highest success is rarely attained without failures along the way, but not failures which were accepted as final, but failures which were overcome. Which do you prefer, anyway, the honorable defeat of an honest attempt, or the miserable excuse of a cowardly refusal to try? Better the counsel of the familiar declamation of our school days, "Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, I give my heart and hand to this vote." And there is no final failure for the affirmative soul. So then,

"Let a man contend to the uttermost
For his life's set prize, be it what it will."

WANTED: PREACHERS TO CONNECT THE LEGIONAIRES WITH THE CHURCH.

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn.

There is gathering in the various communities of our Nation a mighty force composed of the best human material of this or any country. It is such material as the Germans were wont to call "cannon fodder," but many of us hope to see it moulded into far different forms and purposes. This force that is gathering is young American manhood and the medium used to get it together is the American Legion. It may be that the reader is not familiar with the purposes and ideals of this organization of World War Veterans. Allow me to quote the Preamble to the Constitution, which I heard the Governor of a great State recently say was the best expression of Americanism he had ever seen in print; here it is:

"For God and Country we associate ourselves together for the following purpose: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, State and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, Freedom and Democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

The above quotation has within it the ring of vital manhood connected with the call of high idealism. Church people will readily see that any such preamble could not have been created otherwise than as the fruitage of inspiration which has its roots in the principles of the church of God as set forth in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. Church people, I repeat, realize that this is true, but many others, among them even some of the leaders of this great patriotic movement, are not aware to what and whom they are indebted for the ideals they so loudly proclaim.

It is our business, fellow-ministers, to see to it that the men who preach these principles as Legionaires are brought to see from whence they come. In the address above referred to, the Governor also said, "Soon after I was inaugurated I faced a grave crisis. The integrity of the State was involved. A few men had taken upon themselves the right to clog the wheels of commerce. The deepest principles of government were at stake. I am about to say what I have never told any one before. It was my purpose, had the crisis been precipitated, to call upon the members of the American Legion in my State to uphold the principles of law and order. I believe that I should not have called in vain." A great statesman made that speech, a humanitarian of high degree, a man who has the best interests of his country at heart.

I want to call attention to the fact that if the Preamble to our Constitution is such that it gives the Governor of a great State the right to call upon us to defend its integrity, it is such as to enable the ministers and church members to call upon us to defend the integrity and uphold the principles of the church of God. Is it not true that behind the State and its laws, behind the principles that furnish the foundation of every State and every Nation worthy the name, there stands the church of God? If the State and the Nation should fail, it is possible that we could build other and more enduring institutions to uphold our ideas of righteousness and justice; but if the church of God should fail, no power under the stars, American Legion, statesmanship, organization, or what not, could possibly suffice to meet the needs of man and avoid the destruction of every earthly institution.

There is a word that is much in use just now because we recognize a need for the thing it represents; it is "stabilization." Before State and National Convention of the American Legion, speakers are saying: "We expect this organization to stabilize the governments of the world." As a humble minister of Jesus Christ it seems to me that the church needs at least a little of that tonic. Maybe it is because I see through glasses darkly, but to me it appears that some stabilization would be a benefit to us in the various undertakings with which we are busying ourselves.

Is there not some way that we can so connect this great body of patriotic citizens with the work of the church of God as to expect this stabilization? It is not altogether because of what they might do for us as church workers, but rather because of what we can do for them as Legionaires. They need us! It has been my good fortune to be flung with these men in various ways during the last twelve months. I have never mixed with a finer body of citizens, but they need the church of God and its mighty influence at every point of their make-up. Let's carry the church to them where they live! Let's bring them to the church! The future of America rests with these men. It is largely for you and the people of the church of God to say whether that future shall be directed through the channels of church influence. I believe you are willing to do your part. Look up the Legionaires in your community. See that the church takes its place on their programs and in their souls. Show them that the institution which backed them up so gloriously while they were in the camps and fields and trenches has no idea of turning them loose now in the midst of the humdrum things of home life. "Service"—that's the watch-word of the church. "I serve" is the motto of the American Legion. Shall we not lead the two to clasp hands on the mountain top of service in the presence of One who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for all?"

Rayne, La.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT AND THE LARGER MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings,
Foreign Secretary of the Board of Missions.

The old workers in the Centenary have their coats off still and are ready to lend a good hand in the Educational Movement, not only because it is the order of the General Conference, and any workers of the church would be rankly disloyal not to fall in and help, but because it is the same work they have been doing all along in the Centenary. I mean that the objectives of the two are so closely related that if the work of education is not definitely strengthened, we had just as well not do the Centenary—indeed, if our educational institutions are not strengthened in a new educational crusade, the things proposed in the Centenary will not be done.

And here lies the connection. We must send out in the Centenary five hundred new missionaries to our foreign fields in the next five years. This says nothing about home missionaries and the special workers we need in the church at home, nor does it take account of the scores of workers that must go into our European fields. So that we must more than double, within five years, the personal force we have built up in foreign lands in the past seventy years of our history.

But significant as are these numbers, more vital far to the progress of our work, is the quality these workers must show; and for the production of that quality we are dependent upon our educational institutions. The difference between a missionary that fails in by chance without fitting and the other who fits and fulfills his mission is a difference not of arithmetical, but of geometrical progression. If our missionaries must be weighed as well as counted in times like these, as they certainly must, then culture more than anything else brings down the scale in the measurements of manhood. Only, the culture that counts in character is the culture that can be gotten in Christian institutions, which should mean, if it means anything, our own church schools.

If we get the large number of workers we are needing in the Centenary, the men we send out to find them must range in fields wide and wide open to our search. And that wide open field is our church schools. A few of our men may come from State and independent institutions, but the bulk of our workers we must get from our denominational schools.

The missionary, if prepared to do his work, must be trained, not in a corner and shut off while training from the rest of the world. We do not want a missionary training school for segregating our workers in the period of their training, and would not have it if it were given to us as a gracious compliment. We want our workers trained as other men are trained, strong men, human men, men who know how to mix and work with other men, practical men, wise men, men who know how to do and to get things done, and that means training in the drifts where strong men are found and the world's leaders at home are made. Nevertheless in these drifts must mingle invisible influences that make for truth and righteousness and the strength of strong character. The arms of the church must be thrown around our men, even in the drifts, so that they may not be swept by strong worldly tides from their footing, but held steady and true to the best in character and service. The drifts of life and progress, with strong tides of aspiration and service, will be found in the universities, but best found, and maybe found alone, in those universities that are Christian.

Our missionaries must take special courses before they go out and during furlough when in this country, and these courses can be gotten, as we need them, only in our own great schools. Our plans are not yet definite, but we are hoping to have homes or hostels in which missionaries in this country on furlough can get the training they need in an atmosphere congenial with their kind, and that at the same time recreates by the tonic of high-thinking which does not tear down, but builds up while the workers rest. And that is why the Centenary was willing to co-operate with the Educational Movement in a plan to build up great missionary departments in our two universities. We do not want our workers to go off outside of our own territory, into communities of alien thought, in order to get the intellectual stimulus or technical training they need.

I am not talking of higher criticism or what is known as modern "liberal thought." As far as I have had time and the brain, I have occasionally done some of that on my own account. Nor am I any more thinking of the man who sticks his ears in the sand and refuses to hear the intellectual voices of his time. I have in mind, rather, the man who thinks, thinks honestly, thinks bravely and freely, but with the Spirit to guide, thinks all the way through and back to the vital and dynamic in the Gospel of our Christ. We have our differences of viewpoint and method abroad as well as at home, and sometimes they mean irritation and near schism. What we need abroad as at home is not schisms and parties on the one hand, or the spirit of proscription on the other, but a composition of the old with the new which, when a man has freely run the entire gamut of modern theological and philosophical thinking, brings him back, whatever the mode and terms of his thinking, to hold the Bible as the one only Word of God. Jesus Christ as the Divine Son of God, and the Holy Spirit as the great personal force through which his work must be effective for the world—a world lost in sin and whose civilization and races can be redeemed only through the power of His grace effective in the hearts of individual men and women. That composition of the old with the new we have not always gotten in other great schools of the country, just as we have not always gotten it in our own schools, or our churches indeed, and, if gotten abroad as well as at home, must be instilled into the thinking of our workers in the very atmosphere of the schools in which they are trained and that, therefore, we mean more and more to make Christian.

Herein I sincerely believe lies the Providence of the Educational Movement as a movement apart from the Centenary. Many loyal friends of both Movements thought we should have gotten together as did our Baptist friends, and made one drive do for both. I did not think so, certainly not in my second and better thought. The General Conference was right when it ordered a second campaign. If we had gone in together, the presence of the educational interest would have spoiled, or at least split the missionary emphasis our church was able to make in the greatest missionary situation that has come in a hundred years and will not come in another hundred.

And now our educational workers, uncomplicated by the presence of any other great interest, may go forth to lay their emphasis not upon education, but upon that for which we stand, a definitely Christian education. Into schools, churches, homes, they will go with this other emphasis. Our people will be awakened anew to its importance and will send their children to their own Christian schools. We shall bring forth and burnish into new brightness our old Christian educational standards. Our educational administrators will get a new vision of obligation, and a new baptism for their high service, and our workers at home and abroad, going from such surroundings with all the tonic and energy of such an atmosphere, will go prepared in form and spirit to do the work of world redemption pressing so hardly to their hands.

ADEQUATE PAY FOR TEACHERS.

By P. P. Claxton

(An abridgement of an address read before the National Education Association.)

Teachers worthy of places in the schools in which American children are prepared for life, for making a living, for the duties and responsibilities of democratic citizenship, and for eternal destiny can never be fully paid in money. Men and women worthy of this highest of all callings will not think first of pay in money or in any other form. For teachers, as for all other workers, Ruskin's saying holds: "If they think first of pay and only second of work, they are servants of him who is the lord of pay, the most unerect fiend that fell. If they think first of the work and its results and only second of their pay, however important that may be, then they are servants of Him who is the Lord of work. Then they belong to the great guild of workers and builders and saviors of the world together with Him for whom to do the will of Him that sent Him and finish His work was both meat and drink."

Workers Paid Largely in Kind.

It has ever been and probably must always be that workers of whatever sort received the largest part of their pay in kind, as millers take toll of the grist they grind. Those that work with material things that have easily-measured cash values receive their pay chiefly in money or in things whose values are most easily measured in money. Other rewards will be less in proportion and in importance. Those who work largely for other than the material results that can be measured by money must continue to be content to receive a large part of their pay in the consciousness of work well done for a worthy cause, and in participation, by faith at least, in the results, both near and far away in time and in space.

The Teachers' Spiritual Rewards.

Teachers who do their work well and who, either in fact or by faith, see the world made better as a result; individuals made healthier, wiser, happier; sin and suffering made less; the common wealth made more; social purity and civic righteousness increased; public laws made more just; patriotism broadened and purified; State and Nation made stronger and safer against attack from without and decay from within; and the world lifted on to a higher plane and into a brighter sunshine and a purer atmosphere, are possessed of wealth unseen and for most unseeable.

All true teachers will think on these things and many of the best will be attracted to and held in the profession by them. It will be all the worse for the profession and the world when it is not so.

But this should not be made an excuse for putting public or private education on a charity basis, nor for paying teachers the miserably low wages they are now paid. It should not be made an excuse for paying such wages as will not permit school boards and superintendents to fix reasonable minimum standards of qualifications for teachers because young men and women who expect to teach can not afford to incur the expenses necessary to prepare themselves to meet the requirements of such standards. It should not be made an excuse for failing to increase the pay of teachers, as the pay in other professions is increased, in recognition of proved merit and in proportion to increasing ability gained through experience, continued study, and constant devotion to duty.

Improved Salaries Benefit the Schools and the Nation.

Not for the sake of the teachers primarily, but that the schools may be made fully efficient; that children may be well taught; that the material wealth of State and Nation may be increased so that we may have the means of paying our debts, building our highways, caring for our unfortunates, and meeting other public expenses and at the same time have enough for all the people to live in comfort; that our democracy may be preserved, purified, and made more effective; that scientific discovery, useful invention, and artistic expression may be promoted; that we may act well our part in the commonwealth of the world, we must pay such salaries as will bring into the schools as teachers men and women of the best native ability, men and women strong and well-organized physically, mentally, and spiritually; men and women of the finest culture and the most thorough and comprehensive education, academic and professional, and so adjust their salaries as to enable them to hold all those who show themselves most capable and best fitted for the work. In this most important of all our enterprises we can not afford to pay less.

Many Able Men Have Taught.

Our traditional policy of paying to young and inexperienced men and women with little or no question as to their professional preparation salaries almost as large as we pay to those who have had many years of successful experience had at least one merit. It brought into the schools large numbers of young men and women of unusual native ability and of strong character and sometimes such men and women having also good scholarship and fine culture, willing and eager to do the best they could while saving from their comparatively good wages money to start them in business or some calling, or to enable them to prepare themselves for those professions for which adequate preparation is required and demanded. Many of the ablest men and women in all walks of life have been school teachers. A good-sized ex-teachers' association could be formed of members of any recent Congress of the United States. We have just nominated two ex-teachers as candidates for the Presidency. Unfortunately, however, most of these have remained as teachers in the schools only till they had begun to gain some little comprehension of their task and some little skill in executing it. But despite their lack of preparation and experience it was good for boys and girls to come in contact with them. From this contact many gained inspiration and purpose.

Other Occupations Pay Better.

The time has now come when men and women of unusual native ability and strength of character can make more money in any of hundreds of occupations than they can in teaching. A few of them will teach while waiting to find themselves, or to make money for a start in business, or for paying for preparation for other work. They will accept employment which is at the same time more attractive and more remunerative. From now on schools will be taught (1) by unprepared and inexperienced young men and women of mediocre ability and ideas, while waiting for the maturity which is required for employment in the minor and more common occupations; (2) by the leftovers of such men and women who have failed to find more attractive and remunerative employment elsewhere, but have not wholly failed as teachers; or (3) by men and women of better native ability, stronger character, more thorough education, and the professional preparation which will enable them to succeed to such an extent that they may be induced by the payment of adequate wages to continue to serve their country in a high and valuable way as teachers.

This is the Real Crisis in Education.

We have come to the parting of the ways. Which shall we accept? Makeshift teachers of the first two classes we may continue to get in sufficient numbers by paying salaries relatively as large as those paid in 1914. To have the same relative value and purchasing power as salaries paid in 1913-14, the present salaries and salaries for some years to come must be approximately twice as large as they were then.

We Must Have Strong Teachers.

For teachers of the third class—and we should be satisfied with no other—we must pay salaries larger relatively than we have paid at any time in the past, and must adopt a policy which will give such recognition to teachers of unusual ability as will hold them in the service of the schools against the temptation of better pay elsewhere. Temporary increase in pay of teachers will not be sufficient. There must be such guaranty of good wages in the years to come as will induce young men and women of such native ability and character as good teachers can be made of to accept teaching as a profession and take the time and spend the money necessary to prepare themselves for it. The demand for professional preparation and continued service, coupled with inadequate pay, can only result in supplying the schools with teachers of small caliber, unfit to become the inspirers and guides and educators of those who are to make up the citizenry of the great democratic Republic, solve the problems, and do the work of the new era. Such teachers are not fit seed corn for the new harvest to which we should and do look forward.

For such teachers as we would have in our schools, what may be considered adequate pay? The answer is very easy and short: Such pay as may be necessary to get and keep them. In a conference of leaders of national civic and patriotic societies which met recently at my request in Washington it was agreed that to be considered adequate the wages of teachers should be as much as men and women of equal native ability, education, special preparation, and experience receive for other work requiring as much time, energy, and devotion, and involving approximately as much responsibility.

Just how much this will mean in dollars and cents in any community I do not know. To determine the amount in any State, city or country district will require a careful and comprehensive study. But it can quite easily be arrived at approximately, at least, for the country at large.

Average Salary Should Be $2,500.

The average wealth production of the adult worker of the United States is not far from $1,250 a year—probably somewhat more. The average for men and women of ability, preparation, and industry of such teachers as we are talking about can not be less than $2,500; it is probably nearer three or four or five thousand dollars. But in view of the fact that teaching is by its very nature an altruistic calling, and also because it may reasonably be supposed that the purchasing power of the dollar will increase considerably within the next few years and the cost of living as measured in dollars relatively decrease, let us agree on $2,000 as an average salary for teachers in the elementary and secondary schools of the United States. This is three times as much as the average for the year 1917-18 and more than 150 per cent above the average for the year 1919-20.

If the pay to beginners is so fixed that the average for all teachers in the first year in urban and rural elementary schools and high schools is $1,200, this will allow other salaries of $2,500, $3,000, $3,500, and $4,000. Salaries of $5,000 or more may be held out as rare prizes for those who have gained experience and have proven their worth and who are willing and able to pay the price of such great and fine service as is recognized by unusual rewards in other professions.

The Money Can Be Raised.

Can we pay such salaries? With such proper and useful economies, as may be easily brought about, including consolidation of small rural schools and the adoption of a well-arranged work-study-play plan in the city schools; the total number of teachers in the public elementary and secondary schools of the United States need not exceed 750,000 within the next 5 or 10 years. At an average wage of $2,000, it will take a billion and a half dollars to pay 750,000 teachers. Increase this by 50 per cent—a liberal amount—to pay for administration, supervision, buildings, equipment, and supplies, and we have a total of two and a quarter billions—a quarter of a billion short of Spaulding's two and a half billions and only $140,000,000 more than the amount the Department of Labor reports that we paid last year for tobacco in its various forms. Our part in the World War in which we fought for freedom and democracy, cost us not less than fifty billions of dollars all told. At 5 per cent the annual interest on this amount is two and a half billions dollars. Without education there can be neither freedom nor democracy. Unless we educate all the people in such way as to enable them to possess these in fullest measure we shall have spent our money for naught and the men who sleep in France and Belgium shall have died in vain.

Can we pay the debt and pay in like proportion for education? The answer is we can not well do the one without the other. Our power to produce and to pay will and must depend on the health, knowledge skill, purpose, and will of the people; that is, on their education.

How much can we afford to pay for education? Since education is a factor which can not be eliminated from the wealth-producing power of the people and since all wealth depends on education, we can as a people afford to increase our appropriations for education until the increase in cost becomes greater than the increase in the productive power which comes through education. No people have ever yet found the limit.

Will the people pay? The wealth is theirs, the children are theirs, the schools are their agents, owned and supported by them for the education of their children and for the attainment of all that this means and can be made to mean for their own happiness, for the individual welfare of their children, for the production of material wealth, for the individual and common good, for the public welfare, for civic righteousness and social purity, for strength and safety of State and Nation, and for all that patriotism means and all that supports life and makes life worth living. I have faith to believe that when the people are made to understand this they will respond. They have never failed. They will not fail now.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Back in the Pelican Pines after a delightful week with Dr. Sprague in the great First Church, Memphis. I privately feel that this church is in a sense my monument, for while I did not actually build it, I cleared the way, and laid the foundation for another to build thereon. It took me my whole four years to preach the old church down. Every brick in the old structure was sacred to somebody, and held together by a conservatism as solid as the cement that the masons used. I pounded away at it and backed by such active and progressive young men as they were then, as John R. Pepper, W. F. Taylor, and others, finally breached the walls, secured the plans, purchased the land on which the church stands, and committed the church to the enterprise so that they could not back out; then I had to go. The plan was chosen after a committee had visited the large cities in the North and examined the newest churches, and it embodied the most up-to-date facilities then. While the character of the work has changed in many ways since the church was built, and many new features have been added, I do not know where there is a church building that in all respects is as well adapted to its purpose as the First Methodist Church in Memphis. It looks like a church outside, and I like that. It is a great pity that we have so many architectural monstrosities in our church buildings, edifices that one cannot tell whether they are intended for banks, or school-houses, or bastard mosques. The interior is as impressive as the exterior.

They have a great vested choir, and I like that, too. The fact is we have had so much slim-jam looseness in worship, a sort of tent-style of conducting divine service, that reverence is a lost virtue and it has almost made a Methodist ritualist out of me. When the doors are opened, and fifty singers, wearing black robes with white cassocks, come marching up the aisle singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers", and the whole congregation rise and join in the song, the feeling I experience is very different from the feeling that comes to me when the service is begun by a preacher who starts off like he was at a show: "Everybody get a book and sing; if you can't sing, howl!" I am sure Wesley would approve the solemn and beautiful service of song by the great vested choir of the First Church. And they can sing, too! I swung loose Sunday morning with an audience that overflowed the great building, the power came down, and I called for a song they did not have in the book; but the organist caught it, the huge instrument rolled out in jubilant tones, and such singing as they gave us was enough to swing an angel out of his path to listen!

The Sunday school that for forty years has had the skillful leadership of that master workman, Mr. John R. Pepper, is about as complete in its organization and work as a school can be made. It is a group of schools, ranging from little dots of the Cradle Roll up to Adult Bible Classes. When I was elected chaplain of the University of Virginia, being very young and inexperienced, I borrowed money and went to New York City, and went to see Dr. Deems, at that time pastor of the Church of the Strangers. I told him I wanted him to "coach" me for my task. He smiled, and said he was too busy to add the duties of a theological professor to his job, but if I would hang around and watch him do his work, I might get some helpful ideas. I hung around a few days, and what I learned was worth a vast deal to me in my work afterward. It would pay any Sunday school to send the superintendent to visit Mr. Pepper's school, and observe his methods, and get the microbe of religious enthusiasm in his blood. If there is anything to him, he will get it by contagion.

They gave me a fine hearing with my messages on the great characters of the Bible, and I had the pleasure of addressing the young doctors of the Medical School and the young teachers of the West Tennessee Normal. The president suggested a limit of 30 minutes for my talk to the Normal, but when I quit he led the encore, and I had to go on! Considering that I am a "superannuate," or worn-out preacher, I suppose that does fairly well. Dr. Spragins is closing his quadrennium. He has wrought well and is greatly beloved. I heard his praise on every hand. Our Mississippi boys are at the top. The old First Church has a great history and holds a most important place in the moral and spiritual agencies in the city. I think it seats about 1800, and it has about 2000 members. If they should all take a notion to go to church at once, the church would not hold them. They are planning to build an Annex and enlarge. Hurrah for the grand old "First Church!"

I enjoyed a visit to Bishop Murrah's home. Now, a "worn-out" preacher who lives in the pines don't get a chance to put his feet under the table of an episcopos often; but this Bishop, who was a Mississippi boy, has always treated me nicely. I enjoyed an evening in his hospitable home, with Dr. Spragins and Mr. Fitzhugh as companion guests. When we sat down at the table, I whispered to Mrs. Murrah that Maggie was not the only one who had trouble with non-conformity to the conventions, and asked her to gently press my foot if I made a blunder; but she said everybody did as they please in that home. I immediately pushed away the salad with its mayonnaise dressing. None of your mayonnaise for me. There are three things I cannot bear: mayonnaise sauce, bananas and olives!

It is hard to realize that the Memphis of to-day is the Memphis of my boyhood. In many ways it is not. I have had my wagon to mire down on Main Street. I was driving a four-ox team once, and was stopped just as I got opposite the Gayoso Hotel by a Federal officer, and forced to drive my team up on the sidewalk. As I stood there, a whole brigade of Union soldiers marched past, and as they passed, saluted. I did not know exactly what I had done to receive such honor, but I always accept a good thing when it is handed to me, and so I made no kick. My conceit vanished into air when I subsequently found out that General Grant was standing on a balcony above me! When the band broke loose with "Rally Round the Flag" my off lead steer, old Buck, who had never been out of the canebrake before, bellowed an accompaniment. Whether the cheer of the soldiers was for Grant or Buck, I never knew.

And Tom Holloman has gone home! He was a knightly gentleman and a most lovable friend. How rich heaven is in the goodly company already gathered there. When this good man got home, I am sure there was rapture among the redeemed, for he wrought well for the Master, and turned many to righteousness. I feel lonesome when I think of jolly, noble, dear old Tom.

"JUBILEE DAY" AT WASHINGTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The fourth Sunday in this month, October 24, has been set as "Jubilee Day" for our church hero at Washington. We have been looking forward for some time to the completion of some much-needed repairs on the old historic church at Washington, "the oldest Methodist building in three adjoining States." The work is now nearing completion and we are looking forward to a day when those who have assisted in making this work a reality are invited to come and see what great things the Lord hath done for us.

The church, a large, splendidly constructed brick building erected in 1826, has been recovered, replastered, repainted inside and also painted outside, including the roof, with a nice concrete walk around the front leading to the yard entrance; altogether we believe now one of the nicest and most valuable country church buildings to be found anywhere.

Rev. J. B. Cain, my predecessor, had gotten the subscriptions for this work well on the way when the present pastor took charge at the beginning of this Conference year. Brother Cain had gotten the ball rolling and with loyal supporters in the building committee and others the subscriptions for the work were about doubled during this year and we believe the work, which will cost about two thousand dollars, will all be paid for when it is finished.

Beside the mention of Brother Cain, there were others, among the laymen, who were outstanding in liberality and helpfulness—giving as though it was a genuine pleasure.

The fourth Sunday in this month, October 24, as stated above, has been set as "Jubilee Day" for us. Brother Cain has accepted an invitation to be with us and preach for us in the morning. There will be dinner on the ground, and Rev. J. R. Jones, our presiding elder, will have charge of the afternoon service in connection with our fourth quarterly conference.

Beside the two brethren mentioned, we also hope to have other ministers who have had a part in this work, to be with us upon this occasion.

An invitation is extended to all those our friends, who are near enough, to come and worship with us the fourth Sunday in this month.

Some work which is in progress on one of our other churches, the one at Kingston, I feel is also worthy of mention. This is a beautiful brick structure, erected in 1857, having the high pulpit common to those days, as well as the balcony in the rear for the slaves, a link joining the present with the past. The repairs which are in progress on it will put this church in good condition, preserving it for many years to come. Brother W. H. Swayze, whose forebearers have been identified with the church and community for generations past, is responsible for this work.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-workers: I wish to express my appreciation of your co-operation given me during the month of September, and the effort put forth, which enabled our Conference to climb from the twelfth to the eleventh place in the Centenary Record, which shows the status of each Conference in Centenary Collections. Let's keep on climbing until we get to the top!

Get your Church Cabinet together and plan to observe "Pay-Up Day," November 7, in order that all your pledges for the first and second year may be paid on or before that time. Some of the pastors have already arranged for a special program to be rendered in each of their churches on that day, and are working already through the Cabinet and Committees to collect all the subscriptions that are due for the first two years.

May the enthusiasm spread until every church in the Conference will have the same interest in the payment of the pledges that obtained in making them! Can I count on you and your church to "Go Over the Top?" If I can help you, call on me.

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

TO THE PASTORS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: I would suggest the following program to be used in your church for observing "Pay-Up Day," November 7, with any changes you might wish to make, or the substitution of an entirely new program. Just use your judgment as to what is the thing to do in order to accomplish the collection of the first and second year pledges on or before that day. Also as to the best way to conduct the "Follow-Up" campaign.

Please have the books of your Treasurer audited, but do not ask the Treasurer to audit his own books.

BABE RUTH AT THE BAT.

Babe Ruth was at the bat, 30,000 frenzied baseball fans cheering him on to make one of his famous home runs. The opposing pitcher was wily, and Ruth, after swinging once at a "bad one," was compelled to stake his hopes on one only less wide of the plate. He drew back his well-knit body, grasped his bat still tighter, then with eye, brain and body all co-operating, he caught the ball squarely, swung the bat with all his body's force behind it—and the ball went over the fence.

A minister sat among the frenzied 30,000. "Fine work!" he cried. "But, oh, wouldn't I love to see a man work as hard at teaching a Sunday school class as Babe Ruth worked to hit that home run!"

Again Ruth came to bat, at a time when a home run would have meant that the home team would lose the game to the Yankees. Now the throng was almost as eager to see Ruth prevented from hitting even a single as before it had been to see him knock the ball over the fence. Tenseness hung over the grandstands. When the call was three balls and two strikes, with the bases full, absolute silence showed how anxious was the crowd. The next pitch was wide, but Ruth swung at it—and missed! Then what a cheer went up from the fans! The game was won.

Again the minister spoke to himself: "Wouldn't I love to see a congregation as intense over the success of Christianity as this crowd was over winning this game?"

Well, why not? Why not work with all our might for Christ?—Paul P. Faris in the Continent.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF THE CHURCH IN THE SMALL COLLEGE.

By Rev. A. C. Millar, D.D.,
Editor of the Arkansas Methodist.

The American university, an overgrown college with graduate and professional departments, is the result of an evolutionary process of the last fifty years. Originally all of the older universities were simply colleges, and while we think of them as institutions of cultural training, they were in reality institutions for the preparation of men for the ministry, the law, medicine, and teaching. As these professions became more definite and exacting in their requirements, professional schools or departments were created; and the department of liberal arts for a time stood out in some of the universities as the biggest and most important of the departments; but now in many institutions it is overshadowed by the professional and graduate departments, and is looked upon almost as was the preparatory department of the college of fifty years ago.

During this transition period, leaders of thought began to appreciate the purely cultural training, and the small colleges which had no design to develop into universities, were established and flourished. Then the high school expanded and seemed destined to displace the small college by bridging the gap between the common school and the professional department of the universities. Consequently, during the last quarter of a century the small college, with endowment and equipment, struggling for a place between high school and university, has had a precarious existence and its ultimate extinction has been predicted.

However, during very recent years, there has been a reaction in favor of the small college, and there is a rapidly growing sentiment in behalf of maintaining and strengthening the real college as separate and distinct from the liberal arts department of the great university. For this there are substantial and compelling reasons.

The modern high school can prepare the diligent student so that at fifteen or sixteen he may enter the Freshman class of the university; but such a youth is immature, and if he enters the university which adapts its discipline to men, as practically all now do, he lacks the moral restraint and culture requisite to the best development.

The average youth at sixteen is not prepared to choose wisely his life work. If he enters the university, he is almost from the start expected to specialize in a manner which implies that his choice has been made.

By going at sixteen into technical or professional departments in the university the youth is graduated in some specialty at twenty or twenty-one and is deprived of that large vision and the longer period of development which are desirable for leadership in church and State.

It is freely granted that of many of our youth these things cannot be predicted, and that, with all precautions and restraints, a large number of youth, driven by poverty or drawn by the lure of gain, will insist upon the shorter and easier course and will pass from high school direct to the university. However, that does not alter the fact that a body of our best youths, if proper facilities are offered, will pass through the small college on their way to their professional and graduate studies and training. Many should be urged to pursue this more deliberate course, as society needs the type of men thus produced, and yet the State does not feel under obligation to establish the small college, as it does not seem to be a necessity in a technically organized system of education. Here then is left an open field which the Christian denominations may properly cultivate. Indeed, it is believed by many that the Christian church can best provide for this important factor in the educational process, and the reasons are not far to seek.

The Christianization of society begins in the home, and when formal intellectual training is in progress in the common school, the child is still in the home and the church is co-operating in the Sunday school; but at sixteen, when the youth enters college, he leaves the shelter of the home, perhaps well trained, but still immature and needing the close personal oversight and contact of a Christian teacher. The State, being without denominational bias and preference, cannot adequately supply the needed spiritual element, and, during the critical period of rapidly expanding youth, the distinctively religious influence may be lacking and the potential choices of life may be made without the most desirable Christian environment and incitements. The denominational college, maintained to provide not simply intellectual but spiritual training, is under no embarrassment, but with the full sanction of parents and with the conscious consent of the students it may function as a religious factor in the life process of the youth. After the character is formed in the denominational college the mature student may without spiritual injury pursue his professional or graduate courses in the university, and come out, not merely a skilled professional or technically trained man, but a well rounded religious character properly related to both church and State.

In America, where the State merely tolerates and protects denominational activities and does not promote them, each denomination with self-respect and purpose to perpetuate itself must maintain colleges in order that its youth in the most critical period may learn to love and support these religious institutions, and in order that in the choice of life careers, the youth may choose the ministry and missionary fields of their own faith. Without these feeders there would be relatively few youths brought sufficiently under distinctively denominational influences to provide recruits for the necessary denominational activities, because few youths are ready in high school to decide for the Christian ministry and missions and in the university the call either does not come or it is too late to be heeded.

Thus we discover in the small college a field which the church may best cultivate, and unless it is adequately covered the spiritual interests of society may seriously suffer. Our church leaders now fully recognize this situation, and are resolved that the small denominational college, the genuinely Christian cultural institution, shall not perish from the land.

But times have changed, and the requirements of the college have so increased that the plants of a former generation are now wholly inadequate. Once a faculty of six, with buildings valued at $100,000 and endowment of $200,000, could care for 200 students. Now, students coming from two-hundred-thousand-dollar high schools would despise the little plant of the old college. Now, however consecrated and loyal they may be, college professors cannot exist on salaries of $1,000 to $1,500. The modern college, without in any sense aping the university, must have its library, laboratory, gymnasium, and dormitories costing from $500,000 to $1,000,000. Its faculty must number from twenty to fifty and their salaries must range from $2,000 to $5,000. This requires an endowment of one or two millions; and then helping funds are needed for worthy students. It has become practically impossible to have a respectable college with less than a million dollar investment, and even five millions would not be misspent on a first class institution.

Incidentally it may be demonstrated that, if all students who now go to denominational colleges were forced to enter the academic departments of the universities, the latter would, with the vast mass of immature students, suffer distinct deterioration and the additional cost would become burdensome. As it is much cheaper to educate a youth in the small college than in the big university, the State is gainer by having this work done where the cost is least and the moral quality the highest. Consequently both church and State may get the best results by the proper maintenance of the small college under denominational auspices.

If this argument is cogent, then there is no conflict between the small college and the genuine university. A university may, for local or historical reasons, maintain its undergraduate department of liberal arts, but it will expect to draw its best students for professional and graduate work from the small colleges, and will be interested in their success. Then the State can well afford to encourage the colleges and exempt their property and funds from taxation because these colleges relieve the State of a task that would otherwise demand much revenue. Society as a whole is benefited because of the better type of leadership obtained.

"THE THINGS THAT ACCOMPANY SALVATION."

By Frederick Brown Harris.

Jesus talked little about weakness and sickness and badness, but much about strength and health and goodness.

That is, He stressed the things that accompany salvation rather than the things that accompany damnation. When we think of the time theologians have spent in discussing sin as a theory and a problem and in talking about the origin of evil, is it not significant that Jesus never mentions the "fall" and never refers to the "sin of our first parents!" This was not because He minimized sin, for to Him sin was a cancer, not a growing pain. But it was because the great thing with Him was not the fall of man but the rise of man, not the sin of Adam but the salvation of Peter and James and John and of you and me. He specialized not in spiritual disease but in spiritual health, not in the things which accompany being lost, but in the things which accompany being saved. The lost coin is restored. The lost sheep is found. The lost boy is welcomed back. In each case the being lost is but the background for the being saved.

Over the failures and failings of "Thou art" Christ was always writing the glowing prophecy, "Thou shalt be." John Wesley was right when he dwelt more on Christian perfection than on total depravity. The bishops were right when at the recent General Conference they declared in unmistakable tones that if as a church "we only denounce and prohibit, we stop far short of duty and wisdom. What we forbid is important but not half so important as what we provide. The young people will blister you with scorn if your action is only negative and if you pride yourself only on what you forbid." That means that the church has not settled the amusement question when it nails a quarantine contagion sign on tabooed doors. No question is settled until it is solved.

A certain well-known institution surrounded by spacious grounds has also broad and attractive paths. The familiar "Keep off the Grass" signs are conspicuous by their absence. Instead the admonition which greets the eye here and there is "Keep on the walk." The same psychology is as good in grace as in grass. We must hear this quadrennium infinitely more about keeping on defined paths than of keeping off forbidden fields. Programs and proposals are better than protests and prohibitions. A winsome presentation of the radiant things which accompany being saved is a more excellent way than wailful prophecies concerning the morbid things which accompany being lost.—Christian Advocate (N. Y).

"THE POETRY OF THE HEART."

Thus Joubert defined religion, because religion, at its best, is an open door into the Infinite. This is why worship rests us; it opens the doors and windows of the heart. This is part of the beatitude of prayer; it puts wings on the soul clogged and cluttered by commonplace things. This is one great ministry of music; it detaches us; lets us forget; makes us feel the Immensities. Here also is one chief ministry of friendship; it offers sanctuary to the storm-driven, and room for the soul to breathe. Think, then, of the iniquity of making religion a grind. Religion is set to keep the axles from grinding. It is not imprisonment but release. It is the fine, musical way of doing things; the lover's way. It gives "bread for a stone." It is the poetry of the heart.—George Clarke Peck.

HOW TO WIN SUCCESS.

"How shall I win success in life?" the young man asked, whereat,
"Have push," replied the Button, "and a purr-puss," said the Cat.
"Find out the work you're sooted for," the Chimney Sweeper said,
Just as the Match and Pin remarked, "And never lose your head."

"Aspire to greater, finer things," the Nutmeg cried; the Hoe
Said, "Don't fly off the handle;" and the Snail remarked, "Go slow."
"Be deaf to all that's told you," said the Adder. "'Mid the strife, I've found it best," remarked the Heart, "to beat my way through life."

"Select some proper task and then stick to it," said the Glue.
"Look pleasant," said the Camera, "and tied-y," said the Shoe.
"Have nerve," exclaimed the Tooth; the Hill remarked, "Put up a bluff."
"And keep cool," said the Ice, whereat the young man cried: "Enough."

THE ACORN BROTHERS.

One bright autumn day two acorns lay on a bed of leaves under a big tree and stared out at the world. There was a great deal to see, and they agreed that it was good to be alive, seeing it.

The thing they enjoyed most was watching the wind play with the leaves, which were all dressed in lovely colors—clear yellow, gay red, and crisp brown—and were romping gaily through the woods and across the field.

If the leaves stopped for a minute to catch their breath, the wind came racing after them whistling and whooping, and away they would go scampering in every direction. Sometimes fifty leaves or more leaped into the air and waltzed round in a whirlwind. Then the two little acorns would chuckle out loud.

But though the wind was such a rough playfellow during the day, toward evening he generally calmed down and sang the leaves to sleep. It made the acorns drowsy to hear him. At other times he was mischievous and chased the leaves all night long.

The two acorns made friends with the birds, the bees, and the beetles. They liked to lie and watch the puffy white clouds moving in the sea-blue sky above them like small ships under full sail; and they never failed to watch the sun take off his pink nightcap every morning shortly after dawn.

The moon and the stars kept guard over them during the darkness, and once in a while the rain came through the woods and gave them a drink of cool, sweet water. On the whole the two brothers were very well content, but they could not help wondering sometimes what their future would be.

"Can you make out what the oak tree is saying above us?" one of them asked the other on a clear October day. "She seems to be calling us."

They both listened. The oak tree was calling them, sure enough.

"Look at me," they heard her say, after a while, "and see what you may become some day."

The larger acorn laughed at that. "Surely she's making fun of us," he said.

But the smaller acorn gazed upward and was struck anew with the beauty of the great oak tree.

"She must be able to see all over the world," he said to himself. "Her lowest branch is higher than the maple that stands near. How the birds love her! How the leaves cling to her! Many of the other trees are bare, now, but she is still dressed in russet brown."

Then all at once he heard the tree speak again.

"Look at me, little acorn," she said, "and see what you may become in time."

"I don't believe," thought the little acorn, "that a noble tree would try to deceive anything so small as I am." He listened again.

At that moment a voice spoke somewhere close at hand. "I am ready at any moment to help you climb," it said.

"We'll help, too!" cried other voices in a chorus; and the acorn was sure, though he did not know why, that it was the sun and the clouds and the winds that spoke. He began to feel very much excited.

His brother only laughed at his hopes. "The idea of your becoming an oak!" he said. "Much you look like one!"

"Here comes Autumn Wind," said the little acorn. "I will ask him."

The wind halted for a moment to hear his question.

"Can acorns become oaks?" he repeated. "Well, some think so." Then he was off again after the scurrying leaves.

There was silence for a short while. Then the little acorn said clearly:

"I believe that I can become an oak. Help me, everybody!"

An hour or two later a little boy came whistling through the woods, with his hands in his pockets. Under the big oak he stooped and picked up the acorn.

"Let me see how far I can throw you," he said, and he gave him a far fling. The little acorn had begun his journey!

He fell to earth some distance from his old home, and settled down into a little cranny and fell fast asleep.

It was a long, long sleep, and as he slept the air grew colder and colder. The wind came and covered him with a warm quilt of snow, but the acorn did not even turn in his sleep.

When at last he waked, he did not know himself. "What has happened?" he cried. "Am I punished for daring to think of being an oak?"

Then he remembered what the oak tree had told him long ago, and his heart grew braver.

"How fat I feel!" he said.

A little later he noticed that his jacket was splitting. He decided to take a long breath and see what would happen. So he did, and rip! went the old coat that had fitted him perfectly before he fell asleep.

"That is strange," the acorn thought. "But everything is strange now."

He stretched himself and began to push upward. Somehow it did not seem hard to push. Day after day he climbed, always cheery, always hopeful. At last, one never-to-be-forgotten morning, he pushed his head up into the sunlight. There was the world again!

"Hello, little oak!" a voice said, and he felt a tag on his arm. It was his old friend, the wind, hurrying by. The clouds and the rain, too, spoke to him, and the big oak he used to know waved to him from the distance.

And so the little oak grew and grew and before he had finished growing he shaded half a field.

His brother, the acorn that laughed at the idea of his being an oak, had made a good meal for a hungry squirrel and had been forgotten long ago.—Elizabeth Carrington Young, in The Youth's Companion.

CURIOUS FISH IN AFRICAN WATERS.

A remarkable species of fish from eastern African was recently added to the collection of a New York aquarium. It is known as the African lungfish, on account of its unusual ability to live out of water for several months at a time. The African lungfish makes its home in mud or clay, and when it was transported to this country, instead of being placed in the customary tank of water, it was embedded in a large block of dry earth, in which a hole was made so that the fish could breathe.

The lungfish breathes by means of gills when in water; but during the summer when the rivers are dry, air is inhaled and exhaled by means of lungs, the same as any land-living animal.

Scientifically, the lungfish is of unusual interest, as it represents a species thought to have been extinct thousands of years ago. Further, it illustrates the amphibious stage in the development of animals in their change from the water to the land-living state.

In appearance, the lungfish resembles a salamander; it is long and eel-like, and its fins are used as legs in traveling over dry land. This is supposed to be the first living specimen of a lungfish to be brought to this continent and is, therefore, of great interest.—Girlhood Days.

Editorial

THE PREACHER'S BUSINESS.

The preacher's business is, as a recent writer has suggested, to do business with folks; and, presumably, the more folks he does business with, the bigger his business is. But that depends.

The preacher must do business with people, but he does business for God. In accepting his commission, he must accept the standards of the Commissioner and be bound by the terms of his commission. He has no authority to lower those standards or change those terms, no matter how many people such procedure would enable him to do business with.

It may be that we have gone just about far enough in "taking the gospel to the people" in forms that we imagine will appeal strongly to them; perhaps it is time for us to lay emphasis upon the idea of "bringing the people to the gospel," whether its stern requirements seem necessary to them or not. Nobody, of course, can possibly misunderstand the meaning of this suggestion. We so ardently believe in the validity of the injunction to "preach the gospel to every creature" that we gladly concede the propriety of any method that is not of itself wrong. We are concerned only lest we forget what the gospel is, and forever must be, in our eagerness to do "big business."

CHURCH OFFICIALS FOR NEXT YEAR.

One of the most important functions of the pastor is to nominate at the fourth quarterly conference the members of the board of stewards for the ensuing year. It is an important function because more and more the success of a given church is coming to be dependent upon the men and women who estimate its budget, organize its financial system, and carry on its business affairs during the year. A good board of stewards means a progressive, prosperous church at least in material things; a poor board means an uncertain, unsatisfactory and aggravating situation. The material for a good board may not be of the highest quality; but the preacher who fails to select the best that is available has done an injustice to himself if he remains, and to his successor if there is a change, and to the congregation as a whole.

Since women now are eligible to all the offices that may be held by the laity, it is altogether probable that many of our boards of stewards will be composed of men and women both; in fact, we know that some boards have already been thus constituted for the new year. We presume there will be no objection to such action in any case, and in many instances its propriety will be self-evident. We merely venture the suggestion that the appointment of women as stewards should be made wholly on the ground of their qualifications for the work—not merely because they may now legally be stewards. The women certainly are not demanding any such action; and our personal observation is that they are inclined to feel that the men may very properly be expected to discharge the duties that involve so much that is of a purely business nature. The composition of the board should be determined, of course, by the local situation.

In every case, the preacher in charge should consider seriously and prayerfully the nominations he will make to the fourth quarterly conference for his official board.

THE ART OF CONDENSING.

Long speeches, long sermons long articles in the newspapers—even long editorials—are not very much in favor to-day. Maybe they ought to be, but they are not. People will listen a little while—and lose interest in what is being said; they will read a few lines—and begin to think about something else. Not everybody is guilty, of course; the faithful few will listen to the end—read the last line. But the average citizen has affairs of his own in which he is intensely interested and the speaker or writer who would win his active attention to an outside proposition must state it clearly, forcibly—and briefly; that is to say, his chances of success are greatly increased by so doing. Too many of us still seem to think we shall be—or ought to be—heard for our "much speaking." The following story, taken from an exchange, has a point:

A bronze statue of William T. Stead, the great editor, was recently unveiled in London. At the unveiling, Wickham Steed, editor of the Times, told a story of his first interview with Stead. "You want to be a journalist?" exclaimed the veteran. "How can I know whether you are fit to be a journalist? There is only one way to find out. Try. If you have anything to say that you feel you must say, why, say it and send it to some editor. Don't waste time over mere phrases. Sail right into the heart of your subject. When you have written your masterpiece, imagine you have to telegraph it to Australia at your own expense, and cut out every superfluous word—above all, the adjectives."

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME."

Recent press dispatches announce that thousands of the Negroes who went North and East soon after the opening of the war, lured there by the high wages offered them in industrial plants, are returning to the South with the feeling that, after all, this is the section in which they can be most prosperous and live most happily. The high wages they received in the industrial centers to which they went were offset by the high cost of living, while they enjoyed none of the freedom and privileges they were accustomed to on the farms and plantations of the South. Having learned by experience that "there's no place like home," the Negroes will, we believe, settle down to the work they are most familiar with, in surroundings that are most congenial, and be better citizens because of their sojourn in other sections.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Of the twenty-four churches in the St. Louis District, ten of them have new pastors this year.

It has been estimated that the Salvation Army preaches to 18,000,000 people yearly in its street meetings.

Dr. Henry A. Buttz, president emeritus of Drew Theological Seminary, died last week. He was eighty-five years old.

Rev. H. J. Moore, the pastor, is being assisted in a meeting at Ellisville, Miss., this week, by Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Hattiesburg.

John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, was elected president of the World's Sunday School Association, at the recent convention in Tokio.

Dr. Clovis G. Chappell and Dr. Forest J. Prettyman will give a series of lectures, six each, to the Washington City Preachers' Meeting this fall and winter. Their general theme will be, "Sermons."

Rev. B. L. Sutherland, who was transferred to the Pacific Conference last year, will return to the Mississippi Conference. He is now at Philadelphia, Miss., where he will be until the meeting of Conference.

The Sunday school of First Church, Gulfport, Miss., reported an attendance of 451 Sunday before last—probably the largest attendance in the history of the school. The goal has been set at 500 by Conference.

Rev. R. M. Papasan reports that everything is moving along well on the Toccapola charge, North Mississippi Conference. Good revivals were held during the summer, and there have been seventy accessions to the church.

Work on the new church at West Point Miss., is going ahead in spite of "hard times." This has been a good year in that charge—70 additions to the church, and all departments in good shape. Rev. Carroll Varner is the pastor.

Announcement has been made that Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs, who has been dean of the Theological Department of Southern Methodist University, will re-enter the pastorate this fall. He is one of the most highly gifted men in the church.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. McKee, of Homewood, Miss., are happy over the arrival in their home of a little daughter, Martha Elizabeth, on October 12. The Advocate extends congratulations and prays that blessings may be upon the little one.

Rev. Isaac D. Borders, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, was appointed Conference Missionary Secretary at the recent session of the Southwest Missouri Conference. He has entered upon his work with energy and enthusiasm.

The great temporary tabernacle erected in Tokio, Japan, to accommodate the World's Sunday School Convention, was completely destroyed by fire on the day before the Convention assembled. Defective wiring was given as the cause of the fire.

Dr. P. L. Cobb, pastor of our church at Morristown Tenn., has been elected head of the Department of Spiritual Resources, recently created by the Christian Education Movement. This Department will serve both the Christian Education Movement and the Centenary.

Mr. Gilbert Darlington has been appointed treasurer of the American Bible Society to fill the vacancy made by the death of William Foulke, who for more than 34 years had filled this position. Mr. Darlington is the son of Bishop James Henry Darlington, of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Press dispatches last week from Birmingham, England, announced the death of Rev. Chas. M.

Alexander, the widely known evangelist, at his home in that city. He was associated for several years with Rev. R. A. Torrey, making an evangelistic tour of the world with him from 1902 to 1906.

The young son of Rev. J. A. McCormack, our pastor at Dubach, La., was seriously ill recently with diphtheria. We rejoice to know that he is now on the road to recovery.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, our pastor at Houma, La., was operated on for appendicitis, at Touro Infirmary, on Monday of this week. He stood the operation well and was expected to make rapid recovery.

Many of our readers know Rev. C. F. Smith—a gifted son of Mississippi who is serving the church efficiently in Texas. He is now pastor at Lufkin, one of the leading appointments of the Texas Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Magnolia charge, Mississippi Conference, adopted highly complimentary resolutions in connection with the close of a four-year term of service by the presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Rev. J. T. Leggett. This was a worthy tribute to a worthy man.

Moore Memorial Methodist Church, at Winona, Miss., is thoroughly organized and active in every good work. The Sunday school has nearly 500 members. The Volunteer Bible Class of men has an average attendance of more than one hundred. Rev. J. B. Randolph is the pastor of this great church.

We learn from the Lincoln County Times that a splendid revival meeting was in progress at the Methodist church in Brookhaven, Miss., last week, in which the pastor, Rev. W. H. Lewis, was being assisted by Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, of Vicksburg. Special mention was made in our exchange both of the preaching and the music.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Cleveland charge, North Mississippi Conference, adopted ringing resolutions of appreciation of their pastor, Rev. T. M. Bradley, and his wife, and of their presiding elder, Rev. V. C. Curtis, both of whom are completing a four-year term of service. One of the compensations of life is the generous recognition of proved merit.

Rosedale, in the North Mississippi Conference, has made remarkable progress this year. It has grown from a $1500 circuit to a $2400 station, the Sunday school has trebled in membership and attendance, all other departments of the work are in fine shape, and the congregations are good every Sunday, especially at the evening service. Rev. Jno. W. Robertson is the happy pastor.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Seminary charge, Mississippi Conference, held at Seminary on October 13, was well attended. The reports were good, indicating that everything will be in good shape for the meeting of the Annual Conference. Some needed repairs have recently been made on the parsonage of this charge, which is now a comfortable and attractive dwelling. Rev. C. E. Downer is the pastor.

Students of Millsaps College of the early days will be glad to hear that Harris Allen Jones, of the class of 1899, is back in the United States, after having been engaged in the service of the Weather Bureau in the Philippine Islands and other far-away places. He is now located at Elkins, W. Va., where he is in charge of the Bureau work in that section. He is visiting friends and relatives in Mississippi this week.

The Anniston (Alabama) Star, in announcing the fourth quarterly conference of the Oxanna Methodist Church, makes special mention of the fine record of that church during the year just closing. We are sure this item of news will be of interest to many of our readers, since the pastor, Rev. A. H. Williams, was a member of the North Mississippi Conference previous to his transfer to the North Alabama Conference.

Just before going to press this week, we received the following sad news from Rev. John W. Chisholm, our pastor at Brandon, Miss.: "On October 6, the sweet and saintly spirit of Mrs. C. McDonald widow of the Rev. C. McDonald, went to be with the saints in Heaven. The end came after a long period of suffering, but she was patient to the last and prayed that she might be released from the flesh and go to rest. She died in Pelahatchee at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Effie Pennington." A noble woman has gone to her well-deserved reward. We extend sincere sympathy to the family in their great sorrow.

HELPING THE STRONG.

We do not need to be exhorted very strongly to help the weak, as every instinct joins with reason to insist upon this duty; but it is not so clear to some of us that we also have imposed upon us the duty of helping the strong in their need. And yet this duty also seems very clear if only we take the trouble to investigate the matter. To some of us it may seem rather a ridiculous thing to tell a weak man that be should help his stronger brother, and yet not only is it not ridiculous, but it is also an imperative duty which we do well to fulfill.

The truth is that strong men need help just as weak ones do, although not quite in the way nor to the same extent. This truth was brought home to us very forcibly the other day when reading part of Paul's letter to the Philippians. In the latter part of his letter he tells a little of his experience. He says: "I know how to be abased, and I know also how to abound; in everything and in all things have I learned the secret both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want." But Paul had learned also the secret of divine strength, and he triumphantly declares, "I can do all things in Him that strengtheneth me."

Surely here, if anywhere, we have a typical strong man, a man who smiles at privation, faces loss without fear, and looks into the threatening face of danger with unshaken serenity. Here is a Christian who has climbed the heights of faith until he feels equal to any fate. And yet Paul, able to "do all things," tells the Philippians in the very next sentence, "Howbeit ye did well, that ye had fellowship with my affliction." There was no question of that affliction crushing him; it could not do it. There was no question of his fainting under his load; for he never dreamed of that. And yet the very man whose Christian boast is that he could "do all things in Him who strengtheneth me," writes feelingly that the Philippians had "done well" when they sent help to him. Whether it was food or clothing or money, Paul was helped by it.

Our orators like to paint vivid pictures of men being saved by a kindly deed, but in reference to strong men we need not fear that they cannot hold out; they are not going to fail even if we don't help them, but our help will still be help indeed. Help need not be absolutely necessary in order to be very welcome and exceedingly comforting. When the preacher gets into "the dumps;" when "blue Monday" is bluer than ever; when he feels as though he had scarcely a friend in the world; you need not imagine that he is going to "jump his job," for he isn't. Even if he dies he will not die a "quitter." But a word of appreciation or some little kindly action may change the whole atmosphere and transform "blue Monday" into a day of brilliant sunshine.

And that mother who is nearly worn out with the care of the family is not going to quit because she is nearly worn out, for mothers are not built that way. Whether she gets a word of appreciation, or a well-earned holiday, or some little present for which she has longed for years, or whether she has to struggle on till the end of the journey with a desperate feeling of failure, of one thing we may be sure, and that is that the mother heart will never desert her task. And yet the husband and children may cheer that mother's heart in a wonderful way if only they will show her in a tangible fashion their warm-hearted appreciation.

It isn't the fellow at the rear end of the line who needs all the help. He may drop out if he isn't helped, and of course we ought to help him. But the fellow at the other end of the line, the virile leader, the officer commanding, the man who never seems to grow weary, who always has a smile and a word of cheer; don't imagine that he never grows weary; don't think for a moment that he never finds it hard to bear his share of the burden! We all feel sorry for the man who complains, but it is well to remember that the man who never complains is sometimes the greater sufferer. It is perhaps natural to think that a man has no trouble if he never complains of any, but probably the world's heaviest burdens are those which are carried by men and women who are too strong, or too proud, or too good, to talk about them. Even a weak man may help a strong man to be strong. Even the Christ needed human help, the help of weaker men.—The Christian Guardian.

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

By Mildred Wright.

Why are the magazines of to-day demanding personal biographies of noted people? To show others the road to success, many say. Think success, act, and you will succeed, they urge. Set your goal, work, and you will reach it. Seize every opportunity, put it to some use, and it will count for you. Don't worry, think only that the good will come to you, and you will be fortunate. In brief, have pluck, and success will be yours. Such are the ideas set forth in the present-day philosophy of success.

Is nothing more needed? By following these maxims will we make the most of life? Can the wheels of machinery keep on running after the belt has been removed? Yes, for a short time, but they will finally stop. So it is with our lives when no need of God is felt. We rely upon ourselves and obtain what we call success, but are we truly great or happy? No, because we lack the Spirit of God to show us life in the true light. Only when our lives are dominated by the Holy Spirit will we be able to use our powers for the utmost good. Only under the guidance of the Holy Spirit will we travel along the road to true success. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."—Selected.

EUGENE BROOKS BATEMAN, youngest son of Rev. S. W. and Susan Bateman, was born in Calhoun County, Mississippi, October 11, 1874. His paternal father was an honored and useful member of the North Mississippi Annual Conference for fifty-five years. Brooks was converted and joined the Methodist Church in Kosciusko, Miss., in 1892, under the ministry of Rev. J. A. Brewer. Later he moved with the family to Winona, Miss., where he has been a member of the Methodist Church since January, 1895. On March 31, 1898, he was married to Miss Annie Wiley, of Winona, Miss. He was serving as court stenographer at Louisville, Miss., when he was taken ill. He was brought to Winona for an operation, and on last Sunday, October 5, at 1 p. m., his spirit passed gently away. He leaves his companion, three daughters, Elizabeth, Ethel and Sue, one sister, Miss Lela, three brothers, Sam, Walter and Reginald, besides a number of relatives and friends to mourn his going. He was a devoted husband and a kind and indulgent father. Funeral services were held at the residence on Monday afternoon, October 6, conducted by his pastor, Rev. T. B. Randolph, assisted by Revs. S. L. Pope, J. P. Jarl and John Ritchey. Interment in Oakwood Cemetery, Winona, Miss. We sympathize with the bereaved ones and commend them to Him who is "Too good to do wrong and too wise to make a mistake."

JOSEPH B. RANDOLPH.

SAMUEL J. RICHARDSON was born in Amite County, Miss., April 11, 1856, and died at his home near Ethel, La., on July 19, 1930. These dates declare it to be that great physical vitality was his; and those who knew him well learned that the strength and vitality of eternal things entered into his character and energized his spirit. He joined the church many years ago, and was true to it to the end. He married Miss Fannie Golden on January 1, 1880. Two sons were born to them. He was married the second time to Miss Susan A. White, March 1, 1891. Four children were born to them, two of whom died in infancy. Deafness bothered him for a good many years, and for the last few years his eyesight was bad. He made friends, and held them. He lived in the same house for 43 or 44 years. But he has passed beyond these old things now, to where all things are new, and his eyes unhindered behold the King in His beauty, and he hears and joins in the song of the redeemed.

MARY ELIZABETH HOUSTON, last Benty, relict of Rev. A. A. Houston, was born in Spartanburg, S. C., November 24, 1826; moved to Mississippi in 1836, was married to A. A. Houston, September 6, 1843; professed religion and joined the church at a camp meeting near old Cambridge church in Lafayette County, Mississippi, in 1844; giving to the Lord a long, faithful life of service and falling on sleep at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Hall, at New Albany, Miss., June 16, 1930.

The writer had the honor to assist Rev. J. E. Stephens, her pastor, in the services held both at the church and cemetery in Abbeville, Miss., where she lived so long and where her body awaits the resurrection. She reared a large family and they not only call her blessed, but their noble and useful lives continue to publish the virtues and influence of her life. I did not know her until as the wife of a superannuate preacher of the North Mississippi Conference I met her when I went to my second charge and lived near her home. I shall always remember her as "Mother Houston." In our joys she came to our home; in our problems, she came; in our sickness she came; in every time of need she came. She came to help with her hands, her counsel, and her prayers. She was a woman of unusual intelligence, sound judgment, and decision of character. These elements gave her a most forceful personality, which was felt in whatever circle she moved. Her church and local religious interests were never neglected but faithfully attended to. She loved the sanctuary of the Lord and was there not only in days of strength but in old age and decrepitude. To hear her in public prayer was a spiritual feast, and made your faith stronger. I liked to hear her praise God, for her Christian experience was so clear that all could know it. I never talked to her but my heart felt that she was a child of God. She kept up with the work of the church through its periodicals. She knew of its doctrine, ethics and practice. She knew and taught its fundamentals doctrines. It is poorer because of her going. Thank God for such a life.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be very well described as "a carbonated fruit-flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffein contained in each:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.) ..... 1.54 gr.
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (5 fl. oz., exclusive of ice) ..... 2.02 gr.
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 5 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup) ..... .51 gr.

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity, and also explains, in part, the wide popularity of Coca-Cola, whose refreshing principle is derived from the tea leaf.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment —Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Subacute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from such forms of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write to-day.

FROM COLDWATER, MISS.

Dear Advocate: We have just closed a most successful evangelistic campaign in the bounds of this charge. At Love and Brook's Chapel our people rallied to the support of the pastor and with the leadership of the Holy Spirit we held two very helpful meetings. Our church at both places was revived and sinners were converted. There were sixteen additions and a Sunday school organized at each place. Brother Dodson, our Sunday school superintendent at Brook's Chapel, is faithful and the work prospers. Brother Glover Wheeler, a young man still in his teens, is serving the church as steward and Sunday school superintendent at Love. He looks after the interests of his church in a business way and prays for and with his people and the Lord is blessing him in his efforts.

During our revival services here, Rev. Jno. Tillery Lewis, of Charleston, Miss, did the preaching for us. It was a great meeting. It was good to be here. The Spirit of God was manifest and great good accomplished. The result was a genuine revival, sinners born into the Kingdom of God and twenty additions to our church. Brother Lewis is an excellent preacher and pastor-evangelist. He preaches the truth, the whole truth, and in such a way that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein. Long will he be remembered here for his geniality, brotherly kindness and work's sake.

We have some very live organizations among our adult and junior membership. Miss Jessie Smith, a consecrated young woman, leads our young people. Mrs. Graham, the president of our Woman's Work, with the assistance of the good women is doing a very gratifying work for the church and the people hereabout. This year they have repaired, repainted and repapered the parsonage, which adds to its comfort and attractiveness. They have purchased art squares, rugs, and suites of furniture for the living room and dining room. They have also had electric lights, with attractive fixtures, installed in the parsonage as well as in the church.

We will go to our Conference next month with a full report, and appreciation of our people and our heart full of love for our Lord and Master, from whom all blessing flow.

STANDIFER RAPER, Pastor.

We should pray with as much earnestness as those who expect everything from God; we should act with as much energy as those who expect everything from themselves.—Colton.

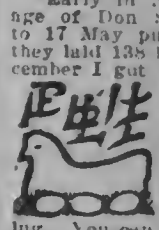
13 Eggs A Day From 17 Young Pullets

Mrs. Niles Starts 6-months Old Pullets Laying. Tells How.

"Early in November, I bought a package of Don Sung and started giving it to 17 May pullets. In the first 30 days they laid 138 lovely eggs. All through December I got 11 to 13 eggs a day."—Mrs. E. S. Niles, R. F. D. 2, Lucerne, Ind.



Mrs. Niles found how to start young pullets laying and keep them laying all winter. The same method helps hens through the moult, and starts them laying. You can test this at our risk.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, the 10th, was spent at South Magnolia. This is purely a missionary appointment. It is a union church, and while Brother Simpson is the pastor in charge, the Sunday school is a union school and of course Brother Simpson is not free in what he does and has to be guided by the wishes of the folks. I trust that the way will be opened for the Conference to keep the work and minister to these people. It would be a pity for them to have no services from an organized church. They promised to put in a cradle roll and I think will put in graded literature.

Sunday night we had the privilege of preaching to the Osyka church. This is a loyal band and deserves much credit for their work, for there are many good features about it. They are talking of a new building and under the leadership of Brother Oliver I feel sure that they will build in keeping with the work of the church.

Monday was spent with Brother Castles on the Topisaw charge. He is doing a great work and also deserves much credit. His people are loyal, and while the Sunday school work is not as well advanced as it might be, we feel that it is growing.

Tuesday was spent with Brother Barrett at Hawkins Memorial. He is closing out his second year in good shape. His people are loyal to him and are standing by him.

Meadville charge is in good shape. We had the pleasure of speaking to them Wednesday. Brother Grice is trying to pay the debt on the Bude church and is meeting with encouragement.

We had the privilege of speaking to the Summit High School and the McCalls Consolidated School on this trip.

It is not too late for the Sunday schools that have not observed Sunday School Day to take an offering and send in the money.

We shall be pleased to help you in any way possible.

If you have not received a copy of the "Centenary Special," let me know and I will be glad to send you one.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Your brother in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The new superintendent of the Sunday school will do well to order "Organization and Administration" of Smith & Lamar and read it with care and put into practice such things as will help his school. Do not be afraid to do the work different from the way it has been done in the past. Dr. Shackford has recently mailed to each superintendent literature that is well worth reading.

Next week I shall mail to each pastor a duplex post card for him to make his report of his Sunday school work to the Sunday School Board as the Discipline requires. Last year about sixty per cent of the men did as the Discipline directs. Why not every man do this simple but important piece of work? The object is to help each man do the work assigned him.

The West Point Sunday school has 122 babies on the two cradle rolls; one of the cradle rolls is composed of the little ones at the cotton factory community. They have 30 in the beginners department, 58 in the primary department, 62 in the junior department. There were 13 children who did their memory work; ten made a perfect record for the year. This department was awarded a pennant for doing the best work of any department in the school. The children in the primary department received six weeks' instruction in missions, three weeks in temperance, and contributed $25 to the Centenary fund. Mrs. B. M. Howorth is doing a wonderful work in this really great school.

Mrs. Belk has charge of teacher-training—four of her class have the incomplete diploma and four have three units each. For forty years Brother Sid White has put his big heart into the life of the Methodists at West Point—surely he shall have many a star in his crown.

Rev. E. R. Stanford, superintendent of Intermediate-Senior work, did some most excellent teaching in an institute held at Potts Camp. This is his first visit to our Conference. There are several organized intermediate departments in the Conference doing most excellent work. We are doing less for young people than we are doing for the little children. We need to do ten times more for these boys and girls if we are to hold them for the church. We have no room for them in our church buildings. Some day we shall not be reproached for this criminal neglect.

A SUGGESTION CONCERNING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Dear Brother Carley: In reading one of your recent editorials, some thoughts passed through my mind in regard to the fruits of different trees. Now, I am a farmer, and am supposed to raise food for man and beast—that is my fruit. Now the people who get up our Sunday school quarterlies—how do they get them up? You take one up and the first thing you see is a quotation or a question, with a note telling you where to find same in the Bible; and so on, through all questions, but no answers. Now, I am growing the food for their physical bodies, since they are not in position to do it; why can't these writers put the answers along with the questions? In other words, why can't they analyze the lesson without the reader's having to do most of the work? Are they not better fitted to ask and answer those questions than the farmer is? Would it not make an interesting Sunday school where there is no interest at present?

When I was a boy, we had a plainer quarterly: It was questions and answers, so we could study the lesson and learn it; now we read, but don't understand. We need the lesson explained. That is the talent of the lesson writers—the fruit they are supposed to bear. A great many of our Sunday schools are in the country, and we need as much help from the teacher as we do from the preacher. The farmer might as well do the preaching as the Sunday school teaching—he would come as near being a success.

J. R. STORMENT.
Tillman, Miss.

This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedoom, and government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.—Abraham Lincoln.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

Good For Him and His Wife.

Hurley L. Watkins, 238 Lytle St., Louisville, Ky., writes: "I found Foley's Honey and Tar just what I wanted for my wife's and my colds." This famous old cough medicine is just as good for children as for adults. It checks coughs, colds, croup, bronchial coughs, and stops that "tickling" throat that keeps one coughing at night. It contains no opiates nor habit-forming drugs. Prompt and sure in action.—Adv.

THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tone," Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it can not salivate or make you sick.

YOU NEEDN'T keep on feeling distressed after eating, nor belching, nor experiencing nausea between meals. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures dyspepsia—it strengthens the stomach and other digestive organs for the proper performance of their functions. Take Hood's.—Adv.

Prominent Man Testifies

GROVEOAK, ALA.—"In the early spring of 1900 I suffered from a severe attack of La Grippe—nasal catarrh of the most severe type, nervous indigestion, backache, constant headache, palpitation of the heart—an almost total breakdown being the result.

As a drowning man grabs at a straw I began trying this remedy and that. As a last resort, though greatly discouraged, I made up my mind to try Dr. Pierce's medicines and procured Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, which I used regularly with an occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to keep the bowels regular. The effects were at first slow, but with continued use of these medicines the disagreeable symptoms disappeared and the relief was permanent. I most heartily recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all suffering humanity."—REV. GEORGE R. WOMACK, Route 1.

It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. A LETTER FROM SISTER T. S. RANDLE.

Dear Brother Carley: Brother A. S. J. Neill, pastor at Bastrop, La., has done some good work, for when the evangelist came with his singer, we had a good meeting. About 30 joined our church, and we think others will come into all the churches.

This is my old home. Forty-three years ago, 22 of us sat down to a Christmas dinner with father and mother, children and grandchildren; now, my brother and I are here. We have two sisters in other States—but it is so lonely!

I want to drop a flower on Cousin T. B. Holloman's grave. I was on my way to visit them in his old home. How we shall miss his letters in the dear old Advocate! God bless his loved ones and the loved ones of dear Brother Wynn. I do wish his mantle would fall on me, for I do love to write; but I am afraid I would become tiresome. Some say I pray too long; for forty years I could not even say the Lord's Prayer aloud; but thirty years ago, with dear Brother and Sister Wynn kneeling by me and praying for me, my husband said my "mouth flew open and it has not been closed since." I hope and pray that I shall never have that lump in my throat and not be able to pray or testify until God says, "Come." God bless all the Advocate family. Yours for others,

SISTER T. S. RANDLE.

Bastrop, La.

FROM OAKDALE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We are closing one of the best years of our ministerial life. We are serving a kind and considerate people. Oakdale is among the best sawmill towns in the State. Our church is "cocked and primed" for the coming Conference at De Ridder. Considering the numerical strength of the church, we think our record is a good one. The total membership is 222; Sunday school enrollment is 130, that is, if I am not mistaken; however, I do know that there were 128 there last Sunday. The pastor's salary was raised from $1500 to $1800, and the preacher receives his check every month. The assessments for the district, conference and general work are provided for already. Our orphanage offering for Easter was $400, and Work Day $200, and there was not a contribution over $10 from any one person. The pastor has the privilege of teaching a men's Bible class that has had an average attendance of ten, and they have paid through the Sunday school $350. Last but not least, we have received into the church up to date twenty-four—fourteen of these on profession of faith. For all of this we give thanks to our Master. Cordially yours,

J. LAMBUTH EVANS.

GET AN EDUCATION.

"First and last, our advice to scouts is to get the best obtainable education, both general and technical," says a vocational article which appears in the September number of Boys' Life, the Boy Scout Magazine. "The educated man, as Carlyle tells us, works with a strength borrowed from all past ages. The 'University of hard knocks and practical experience' has its advantages as a training school, but its courses need to be generously supplemented by other more specialized means of education. Skill in the use of the hands only will never make more than a good workman. Men rise only in proportion as their brains are alert, active and trained.

"To learn more is to earn more, and not only that; to learn more is to be more, to count for more, to yourself and the community—no small consideration for a scout.

"The necessity for education has increased and will continue to increase with the advance in the complexity of the processes of civilization. Because of the unparalleled progress in the arts and sciences during the past fifty years, the need for education has in a generation multiplied many fold. For example, a century ago a transportation system was little more than a wagon and a driver who knew the road. Now, in handling a problem of transportation, experts in traffic must first determine whether a road in that place will be worth while, and what kind of road will be most economical and efficient; experts in finance must provide the tremendous sums needed to build the road; civil engineers must lay it out; bridge engineers plan the bridges; chemical engineers test the materials; mills and factories with scores of chemical and physical experts make the rails, build the locomotives and steel cars; and a host of traffic experts, auditors, accountants, and specially trained managers and clerks, telegraphers, engineers, conductors, and others keep the trains moving with safety and with profit."

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Strict Purgative With Calomel. The Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Painless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that to combine the grip and influenza that is now epidemic, the first step in the treatment is to get the bowels thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the use of purely vegetable calomel tablets, such as Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver must go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

Use Calotabs on the night or bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest inconvenience with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your bowels active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delighted.—Adv.)

WORK—MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Young People's Department.

We have all had a pleasant summer vacation. Now we are ready for the home stretch in our year's work. Keep our goal in mind: 40 auxiliaries, 500 members, 1000 pledges and 10 volunteers.

The second quarter, North Mississippi led all the Conferences in number of new Y. P. auxiliaries. North Georgia came second. At the end of the first six months our gifts were double what they were last year. Let these facts encourage us to renewed effort during the six remaining months.

Mr. Chairman, if you have already the book for your new study beginning in October, "Money and Men" has been chosen by the auxiliary I know. They plan to try the "Belay Brigade" described in the book some time ago, spending the day with a member who lives in the country. Of course each member will carry lunch.

Lest you have forgotten, I give again the names of books suggested for Young People: A Better World (75c), Serving the Neighborhood (50c), Money the Acid Test (50c), The New Christian (50c). MRS. T. W. BAKER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

"Tithing and Stewardship."

A Paper Read by Mrs. Walker, of Magee, at the Hattiesburg District Meeting.

In dealing with this subject I feel that stewardship should first be stressed than tithing, for we know that money is the easiest thing for Christians to give. "Tithing is but a minimum cash basis of Christian giving—the key to Heaven's blessings—and the cure for covetousness."

Stewardship not only embraces money, but time, talents, influence and life.

The question to be decided about money is not how much of my money shall I give to the Lord, but how much of the Lord's money shall I keep for myself? Not that the Lord needs it, for "the gold and silver are mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills," but that we need the blessing that comes from paying the tithe. When we realize that we are the custodians—not the owners—of money, time, talents, yea, life, we then should rightly settle the question. When rightly settled we find our life and endeavor transformed, great victories won and God's hand surely leading onward.

Then by His leading and presence we know we are just stewards—how easy to pay our debt! Some one has said: "First convert the heart—then the pocket-book."

Mr. Whitcomb says: "There are three things that are important to be kept in mind or tithing will degenerate into a mere financial transaction or matter of figures. First, God's absolute ownership—"The tithe is the Lord's;" second, the sacred character of the tithe—"It is holy unto the Lord;" third, the tithe must be brought into the store-house—"the place the Lord shall choose."

He who commanded, "Thou shalt not steal," is the same Just One who said, "The tithe is the Lord's," and we must pay or keep back that which does not belong to us.

Yes, we pay tithes and give gifts and offerings, for we cannot think of giving until the debt is paid.

When we remember that "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich," we can scarcely realize what a privilege, what a blessing comes to us when we bring all the tithes into the store-house.

Never in the history of our work was there a greater need of tithers than there is to-day; and may I plead with you, if you are not one, begin now. Pay your tithe, then have the joy of giving until your hearts have flooded with love—love for Him and for mankind.

"Not in far off ages
Does Jesus manifest the fullness of the Spirit, the finest in the vision
And still he begs His own with yearnest pleadings to lay
Their highest hopes and fairest treasures at His feet.
He will not spurn the humblest service, feeblest love.
He only asks that of our store we give to Him the best we have."

PRAYER REMINDERS.

Pray for the newly emancipated womanhood of America, that they may reverently, gratefully enter upon this new responsibility that is theirs to contribute a larger share toward the making of a better order, finer democracy; that they may study to show themselves approved unto God, citizens that need not to be ashamed, handling aright their privilege of suffrage, courageous and unafraid.

Pray for the new Union Methodist Training School to open in Shanghai on October 1 and for the new school for girls that opened in Havana on September 7.

Pray for the deaconesses and missionaries and teachers who are entering upon the autumn's work in the settlements and other home mission institutions.

TWO-MINUTE SPEECH FOR OCTOBER MEETING.

During the three months of the fourth quarter we are to attempt by a short speech at each meeting to bring home to the hearts of our missionary women the great importance of family altars in our homes. The leaders of our churches have been keeping this duty before us as a part of the Conservation Program of the Centenary Movement, and the Woman's Missionary Council is appealing during these three months directly to the membership of the Missionary Society. We who are carrying on the work of the auxiliary should be women of deeply spiritual lives and should be surrounding our homes with the truly religious atmosphere. It is very inconsistent that we should have such interest in the salvation of those across the seas as to give our physical strength, time, and money for that purpose, as we are doing in our society, and at the same time omit the opportunity that is nearest us and the work for which we are primarily responsible. Not that we are doing wrong in giving ourselves to missionary work—God is calling us to it, and no truly Christian woman can omit her part, but we cannot at the peril of the religious training of our own leave the other duty undone. A young Chinese girl recently spoke to a body of missionary women in one of our most prominent churches in Southern Methodism. As she told of her life in her father's (a Chinese minister) family she said: "We have always had family prayer in our home, as you do in yours." An oppressive silence followed her words, for of that particular group of women not one presided over a home where there was a family altar. How far is this true at our own society? Each of us may be able to give many seemingly good reasons why there is no altar in our homes, but the question for special consideration to-day is how nearly can I as a Christian woman, with God's help, overcome these difficulties and solve these problems and make the family altar in some form a blessed reality in my home. I am leaving this question for us to consider and pray over and, as far as possible, to answer. When we come together again we shall have an opportunity to discuss other phases of the question: in the meantime, may God's Spirit lead us into such nearness with himself that we shall each have wisdom and strength to do his will. (This speech should be followed with a short season of silent prayer.—Council Bulletin.

SPECIAL RELIEF FEATURE FOR POLAND.

Not only will the need for food in Poland be widespread and intense, but very many women and children, as well as men, will be not only without adequate clothing but virtually without anything to wear during the intense winter season.

While in Warsaw we visited the clothes depot of the Lutheran Church—clothes which had been furnished by the Lutheran Church in America, having been collected through the local churches all over the denomination and forwarded to Warsaw for distribution. We were convinced after seeing this special phase of relief work that it was a contribution not only to bring comfort to the under-clothed people but in many cases to save lives by giving them something to preserve the warmth of the body. We are convinced that many of our people in local churches throughout all the Conferences of our connection would be glad to co-operate in a special relief program which would take the form of furnishing unused clothes that have been discarded, suitable for men, women and children. We are convinced that through our office in Nashville a plan could be set up following the methods used by other organizations which have effectively done this work whereby many thousands of dollars worth of clothes would be distributed, could be transported and then distributed from our headquarters in Warsaw.

We, therefore, request the Board to authorize the Secretary for Europe to undertake this special form of relief and to set up at once such organization that will secure the co-operation of our constituency throughout the church to make effective this specific plan for relief work in Poland.

The above preamble and resolution was offered at the called meeting of the Board of Missions, September 15, in Nashville, Tenn. It was referred to a special committee of seven, which committee unanimously reported in favor of the resolution and statement and it was unanimously passed by the Board of Missions. On the following day the Secretary for Europe took up with the executive committee of the Woman's Council the entire proposition. By unanimous vote they agreed to become the active organization through which this special relief for Poland should be carried through.

Miss Daisy Davies, whose name and work give assurance of the accomplishment of this very vital enterprise, has accepted the directorship of the whole program. Headquarters are being set up in Nashville and a local committee of the Woman's Council selected to carry on the plan. General arrangements for transportation to Europe have been made with the assurance that through the Polish Chamber of Commerce in New York the transportation from New York or the point selected to Warsaw will be without expense to the Methodist Mission. All expenses necessary to the accomplishment of the Special Polish Relief will be cared for out of funds in hand for Poland. Detail information will go to the local organization of the Woman's Council and Woman's Missionary Society through the director, Miss Davies.

The supplies will be distributed from the headquarters of our Mission in Warsaw.

No more valuable piece of relief work can be done for Poland than is involved in helping to clothe this suffering people through the severe winter before them. Let us, in this genuine Christian service involved in this program, remember the words of the Lord Jesus, "I was hungry and ye fed me; I was naked and ye clothed me; I was in prison and ye visited me."

Secretary for Europe.

LITERATURE ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Commission has issued several publications. The first and the most important one is the Educational Survey. This book presents the case of our schools, colleges and universities, for the consideration of the people of the church.

One of the finest of the publications is the beautiful little pamphlet, just off the press, containing Bishop Mouzon's address, "The Duty of the Church to Educate." This is the keynote address of the Movement. It was delivered by Bishop Mouzon at the set-up meetings at Blue Ridge and Little Rock.

Other splendid pamphlets already issued are, "What the Baptists and Methodists Are About to Do," by Bishop W. A. Candler; "Why an Aid Fund for Ministers," by Dr. R. H. Bennett; "Settle With the World on Your Own Terms," and "Some Facts For the People Called Methodists," by Dr. H. T. Clark.

There are in course of preparation two interesting and valuable little books, one "A Handbook on Christian Stewardship;" the other, "Talking Points on Christian Education, for Speakers."—Bulletin.

Hyomei
THE BREATH of the FOREST

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the Blue Ribbon movement, temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to inland Australia, where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment,—Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating cold in the head, spasmodic croup, clergyman's sore throat, hay fever and all forms of bronchial catarrh. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

THE ONE DESIRE.

When it is the one ruling, never-ceasing desire of our hearts, that God may be the beginning and end, the reason and motive, the rule and measure, of our doing or not doing, from morning to night; then everywhere, whether speaking or silent, whether inwardly or outwardly employed, we are equally offered up to the eternal Spirit, have our life in Him and from Him, and are united to Him by that Spirit of Prayer which is the comfort, the support, the strength and security of the soul, traveling by the help of God, through the vanity of time into the riches of eternity. Let us have no thought or care, but how to be wholly His devoted instruments; everywhere, and in everything, His adoring, joyful, and thankful servants.—Wm. Law.

Carrollton, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. If I swept the floor or did any kind of work it would bring my sickness on. I was weak and languid, had no energy, and life was a misery to me. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. A LETTER OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST AND THE REPLY.

The following correspondence is of vital Interest to every telephone user, present and prospective:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., OCTOBER 12, 1920.

Mr. J. Epps Brown, President,
Bell Telephone Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—

I have read the advertisements of your Company, but I do not understand why you must raise your rates, now, when the prices of everything else are falling.

Will you please explain this?

Yours truly,

.....

Atlanta, Ga., October 16, 1920.

Mr. .....
New Orleans, La.

Dear Sir—

Your letter of October 12th asks a very natural question and one which demands a full and frank reply, which I am glad to make.

While the prices of a great many things have, apparently, been reduced, these reductions in prices do not apply to articles used by the telephone company, or affect the expenditures necessary in the construction, maintenance and operation of the telephone plant.

The following classes of expenses constitute more than ninety-five per cent of the cost of furnishing telephone service:

LABOR

More than fifty-five per cent of the total expenditures of the Company in rendering service are for wages and salaries; less than one-tenth of one per cent of this being for executive and general salaries.

The wages paid to our employes cannot, and should not, be reduced. On the contrary, they must be increased, in many cases, to bring our wage scale on a level with wages paid by unregulated businesses, so that we may retain our skilled employes necessary to give you efficient service.

MATERIALS AND APPARATUS

Many items of material and apparatus are involved in the current maintenance of the property, entirely apart from the enormous quantities involved in the construction of new property, and this represents a large item of expense. There has been no reduction, nor any indication of reduction, in the price of these essential articles, in practically all of which the labor, freight and hauling cost is by far the largest proportion of the total cost.

We know that the manufacturers of telephone equipment and material have orders booked for two years in advance, with a constantly increasing demand, and which, in turn, makes a reduction in price in the near future most improbable.

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER COSTS

Our annual expense for the transportation of freight and passengers is more than one million dollars. No one expects the railroads to reduce their charges under the level of costs in rendering their service.

RENT

Except in the larger centers our central offices and stocks of material are housed in rented buildings, and even in the larger centers we rent varying amounts of properties.

Like every one else, our rents have been greatly increased, with no prospect of any reduction. Even in pre-war days all leases for property occupied by us were renewed only at higher charges than for the previous rental period.

HOTELS

The board and lodging bill for our men, who must travel in connection with the operation and maintenance of the property, costs many thousands of dollars every year, and we can see no prospect of the hotels lowering their charges. Until they do we must pay the present high charges.

ELECTRIC POWER AND LIGHT—STREET CAR FARE

We spend many thousands of dollars every year for these services rendered to employes engaged in the maintenance of the property. Practically every year the rates charged by these companies have been substantially increased, and there is no thought of any reduction. The Telephone Company, like all others, must pay these increased rates.

PAPER, PRINTING AND STATIONERY

We consume tons of paper for bookkeeping, correspondence and directory purposes, and pay many thousands of dollars for printing annually. This item of expense has increased in percentage more than the others, and no one has suggested that any reduction in these costs is probable.

COAL BILL

The Telephone Company purchases coal in large quantities to heat the buildings occupied by its employes in rendering the service.

We, of course, must pay whatever price is necessary to secure the coal for this purpose.

INSURANCE

Even where the actual rate per one thousand dollars has not been increased, we are compelled to carry a larger amount of insurance than in pre-war days in order to protect ourselves in the reproduction of any property which may be destroyed by fire, and this is reflected in a very large increase in the total insurance bill.

TAXES

This expense, both Federal, State, County and City, has increased every year we have been in business; the increase this year being unusually high. There is no probability of this expense being reduced.

We do not pay any excess profit tax because we have never earned enough to be subject to that tax.

BUILDINGS

It is common knowledge that the cost of erecting any kind of building now, as well as making alterations and repairs, which constantly confront the Telephone Company and which involve material, labor, freight and hauling, is on an enormously higher plane than ever before. In so far as the cost of materials may be reduced will this total cost be reduced.

The only way we can furnish adequate facilities for your use from year to year is by constructing the buildings in which to house the central office apparatus in the larger centers; as well as enlarging existing buildings to serve the increased needs, and this work must be carried on from year to year without delay. This involves hundreds of thousands of dollars in expense to the Company.

There are, of course, many other items of expense, all of which are now at the highest level in prices, and none of which show any sign of reduction for fundamental reasons.

Until these necessary costs of operation are materially reduced we cannot reduce the COSTS of furnishing telephone service.

We have carefully studied and analyzed the advertised reduction in prices and find that they are upon articles of which we make but little, if any, use. Applied to the telephone business all known reductions in prices would not reduce the cost of furnishing telephone service one-twentieth of one per cent.

This is many times offset by the increase in wages which, in many places, we must make during the current year.

Our present operating revenues are practically equaled by our operating expenses. If the present let down in general business continues for any appreciable time we will lose a material part of the gross revenue now received, which will make a still higher rate necessary if a deficit is avoided.

We are not asking higher rates for the SAME SERVICE we furnished one, two or five years ago; but for a much GREATER SERVICE which we now furnish, consisting of facilities to add many additional telephones to our system during the past one, two and five years.

This fact should be considered when comparing the increase in rates we ask with the increase in the charges of railroad, express and other public utilities for the same quantity of service.

We hope, as every one does, that in the relatively near future prices and the costs of operation, except labor, will be lower, but we see no immediate prospects of this result as far as the Telephone Company is concerned.

The increased rates we are now asking are based, in a measure, upon this hope. If the present level of costs of operation go higher, through causes beyond our control, the proposed rates will not yield a fair profit.

It is important to remember that no rate for a public utility is permanent. If conditions and prices so change in the future as to make the rates we are now asking yield too high a return, and if the Telephone Company should not reduce the rates voluntarily, the Public Service Commission would.

Conditions as they are must be met, not as they may or should be.

The highest and best interest of the public is conserved in having the Telephone Company in position to supply facilities adequate to the demand for telephones and service, and in this way be prepared to render at all times an adequate service. No community can expand and grow without adequate telephone service, which, in turn, means adequate plant facilities.

With inadequate returns upon the bare cost of the physical property already in service—the Company's credit has disappeared.

With no credit the Company cannot secure the millions of dollars required to provide the additions and extensions of its plant, which must be provided if the public demand for telephones is supplied.

Respectfully yours,

J. EPPS BROWN, President.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WE NEVER KNOW.

This little incident came to our knowledge the other day: A young boy whose mother had died, went to live temporarily in the home of a Christian family. The son of the family, near the age of the boy and with whom he roomed, had the beautiful habit of reading his Bible every night before going to bed. The visiting boy saw this and began to do likewise, altogether of his own motion. Several years passed, and the boy, grown to young manhood and prosperous in business, made application for membership in the church. In explanation, he said to the pastor of the church that he had formed the habit of Bible reading, and through it he had come to desire to be identified officially with the people who accept the Bible as their guide in life. What a great result to grow from so small a thing! Probably the son of that family does not know to this day that his young friend learned Bible reading from him and has come into the church indirectly through his influence. Though we may never know the definite results, we may be perfectly sure that good thoughts, good words, good habits, good characters will help somebody sometime to a better life.

GETTING IT DOWN TOO FINE.

We suppose it is all right to carry the analytical process to the point where nothing remains to be made plain, but we cannot escape the feeling now and then that some of our analytical friends carry the thing a little too far. For example, here comes a big executive of one of our great corporations and tells us that salesmen are to be judged by the color of their hair—at least, that is the report we read in a daily newspaper. Unfortunately, as is so frequently the case, we are not informed as to the process of reasoning by which the executive or anybody else under the sun could determine the connection between the color of the hair and the ability to sell goods—but we have the conclusion definitely stated. We fear, though we hesitate to say so, that a good many people nowadays are wasting valuable energy in working out hypotheses, plans and programs that do not, and never will, amount to anything. Some of them would be more profitably employed calling doodle-bugs.

SIMPLE ENOUGH.

The secret of success, so eagerly sought by so many, is simple enough for those who really want to learn it. It is work—just plain, downright, commonplace, hard work. It is much easier to learn the secret, however, than it is to make use of it.

BURDENS ARE BLESSINGS.

Mr. F. W. Boreham, the distinguished Tasmanian essayist, has quaintly and beautifully expressed a great truth in these striking words: "Man often loves without knowing that he loves; and, little as he suspects it, he is deeply in love with his load. He groans beneath it, as a man grumbles at the wife of his bosom, but, if it were taken from him, he would be almost as disconsolate as if she were taken from him. * * * Our load is as essential to us as our lunch. Very few people have been actually crushed in this old world of many burdens. And those who have were not the most miserable of men. It will not be at all astonishing if the naturalists of to-morrow assure us that the animal world knows no transport comparable to the fierce and delirious ecstasy of the worm beneath the heel. It would only be a natural, and perfectly logical, advance upon our knowledge of Livingstone's sensations beneath the paw of the lion. At any rate, it is clear that man owes as much to his luggage as a ship owes to her keel. It seems absurd to build her delicately, and then burden her dreadfully. But the sailor loves the heavy keel and the full freight. It is the light keel and the empty hold that have most reason to dread the storm. Blessed be ballast! is a beatitude of the forecastle." When a man has learned that burdens are blessings, the load of life is lifted.

PROHIBITION AND THE HOTEL BUSINESS.

After having been told so many times that prohibition would well-night ruin the hotel business, and after having had to listen to the lugubrious wails of those who have predicted the direst calamity for the purveyors of comforts and conveniences to the traveling public when the "dry" era came in, it is refreshing to read the statement of the manager of a world-famous hotel in New Orleans, as given in a daily newspaper of very recent date. In answer to the claim that prohibition would mean ruin to the hotel business in general, this competent witness says: "Aside from all the myriad benefits the prohibition of the liquor traffic has worked, it undoubtedly has had a beneficial effect on the hotel business throughout the country, despite statements of representatives of the liquor interests to the contrary. In the year or more since prohibition went into effect, hotel proprietors and managers have found the benefits so material that of all the scores with whom I have talked not one would go back to the old days of unrestricted liquor selling. Very few would care to see even the lightest of wine and beer come back, and even the most rabid proponents of liquor admit that their business is much more easily conducted since John Barleycorn was laid to rest." There are two items in this statement that are especially significant—the one which attributes the supposed protests of the hotel owners to the representatives of the liquor interests, and the other which declares that very few hotel managers would care to see the sale of even the lightest of beer and wine come back. Another argument of the "wets" has gone by the board.

GOD CARES.

A sure comfort to every burdened but faithful heart is the thought that God cares. Even if we are tempted sometimes to feel that we have been left alone, that our sorrows are all our own with none to share them, we have only to think back over our own lives, or the lives of our friends with whom we have been intimately associated, to become assured that a beneficent providence has always intervened in the time of extreme need. God cares—but we have a right to depend upon his care only when we care. Even the Son would not presume on the protection of the Father in a foolhardy venture.

TRACING THE SIGN.

By Chester L. Saxby.

The blush of the August apple,
A sunset aglow in the west,
The sumach leaves and the woodbine
And the oriole's hidden nest,
The oak tree sprung from the acorn,
The maple grown from the pod;
Give it the name of Nature,
Then trace above it, "God."

The vengeance that stalked with the savage,
The unwritten code of the tribe,
The primitive chivalric customs,
The laws that the ancients describe,
A criminal facing the judgment,
A soul lifted up from the sod:
Give it the name of Order,
Then trace above it, "God."

The incense fire on the altar,
The martyr's firm reply,
The Huguenots and the Roundheads
And a chant that is borne to the sky,
The hermit alone in the desert,
The Pilgrims on shores untrod:
Call it, who will, Religion,
Then breathe the name of God.

The flutter of wings o'er the nestlings,
The life breathed out to the young,
Innocence shielding the guilty,
The Christ with nailed arms wide flung,
The starving grief of a mother
For a still form beneath the sod:
Call it the gift of loving;
Give it the name of God!

THE PERMANENCE OF COLLEGE ENDOWMENTS.

By Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

The stability and permanence of college endowments arrest the attention of all who are familiar with the history of Christian colleges. The venerable colleges of Oxford and Cambridge were founded by gifts of real estate, for the most part, as was the famous Charter House School which John Wesley attended in his youth. Noble foundations made possible the splendid educational opportunities of the sons of the senior Wesley because they were found possessed of the necessary qualifications and reflected great honor upon the founders. Fellowships awarded to more than one of the Wesley sons greatly comforted the father in his poverty, who, bemoaning his meager resources, cried, "But thank God, my Jack is a Fellow of Lincoln."

England has enriched the pages of her history by a long list of worthy names which owed their scholastic training to some of the endowed foundations which are still sacredly guarded. Some of these foundations were royal gifts, as with the Tudor Dynasty, which vests them as royal or crown appointments. These endowments are more permanent than thrones. Dynasties may pass away, but these endowed professorships or fellowships survive. Not even the varied forms of government itself affect the stability of titles, whether under the Commonwealth or the Monarchy. The mighty upheaval of prolonged wars has not disturbed the permanent value which underlies these foundations. The substantial citizens safeguard these sacred and solemn trusts which exist for posterity. Even in the trying days of Reconstruction in our own land, the lawless regime under the misrule of William Mahone knew that they dare not waste or pervert the sacred funds long consecrated to the sacred uses of education in the State of Virginia.

Speaking with the ex-president of Harvard, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, concerning Harvard's large and growing trust funds which can be depended on to increase with great regularity from year to year, he said: "The different views of the strong men who have been the treasurers have been one of the safeguards of our endowed funds. One treasurer, serving also as treasurer of some great life insurance company, is satisfied that a most desirable method of investment is in carefully selected railroad bonds in which so much of the capital of our country is invested." The laws in certain States set aside given funds as "trust funds," in which legacies or bequests may be invested for the sake of widows and orphans or of funds belonging to college endowments. The college authorities are thus held responsible for reckless investments and are saved from the undue ambition to increase rapidly their funds.

Dr. Eliot reported that certain wise treasurers believed so strongly in real estate investments in choice property that they were watchful to turn their endowments in that direction. Moreover donors would often make their gifts in the shape of real estate to be held and administered in that form. Endowments of college located in a stable and prosperous city may thus become an important and trustworthy part of the city's prosperity and so underwrite the financial success of the college management.

After being tested for centuries, experience invites larger endowments than ever. More has been given to college endowments during and since the great World War than ever before, as large blocks of endowment, ranging from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000, have been given by wise capitalists to our leading colleges. Manifestly the men who have made these large sums deem such use the wisest and most permanent investment.

WHEN DO WE DO OUR BEST WORK?

By Rev. Carroll Varner.

My attention was called to the above question by the publication in this paper in 1910 of an address delivered by Congressman Sheppard before the lower House of Congress. The statements and figures given in that speech by Mr. Sheppard were so arresting that I not only preserved it in my notebook, but began to make observations and gather some figures myself on that same question as I went along. And I venture to suggest that the Advocate would render a real service by republishing sometime in its columns that speech. It is almost startling in its facts and certainly eloquent in style. In it Mr. Sheppard makes the assertion that the world owes infinitely more to men above the age of 50 than to men below it. He then goes on to give some of the results of an investigation made by a Mr. Dorland of the lives and achievements of the 400 foremost characters of human history. It was found that sixty-four per cent of the great things of the world have been accomplished by men who had passed their 60th year; twenty-three per cent between the ages of 70 and 80; while only one per cent in the period below the age of 40!

What a refutation is the above to the Osler theory which attracted undue notoriety a few years ago. When Dr. Osler died only a short while back it was significantly pointed out by the New York World that he himself performed his crowning works of usefulness between 60 and 70 odd, and that his father was still preaching at 90! It was recently brought to our attention that of the fifty foremost financial, industrial, and mercantile giants of America the average age was 61, while twenty-five were over 60; ten over 70; and not one was under 40. Also that the heads of the two largest industrial employers of America, the steel corporation and the Bell telephone, were 71 and 73. E. H. Harriman was an obscure stock-exchange broker till near 50; afterwards switched to railroad interests and later became the biggest and most successful railroad man on the continent. Commodore Vanderbilt, another eminently successful builder and owner in the same work, never knew anything about railroads until he was a grandfather. Jacob Kaniac, a successful Pole, lost everything he had, came to the United States at 50, and by the time he was 90 had built up another fortune. John Burroughs said when he was 77 he was more able to do his work than when he was 47 or 57, and that he had produced more manuscripts the last three years of his life than in any other three years. Amelia E. Barr was writing eight or nine hours daily at 74, and ten years later, at 84, was still actively engaged. Margaret Sangster was doing perhaps her greatest literary work around 70, while Fanny Crosby we find writing her biography at 86. Speaking of women, we behold Sarah Bernhardt, the "Divine Sarah," appearing in a new role at 78! Frank Bacon, another actor, has been for sometime attracting more attention in New York City than any other player, yet he was unknown and a failure till beyond 50.

Turning to military achievements, that realm in which we would naturally think the dash and courage of youth would predominate, we find that the leading generals in the World War averaged 60 years of age (English), and from 65 to 70 (French and German). The German army had only one under 65. General Petain, the heroic defender of Verdun, was hardly known until around 65; while Foch was made commander-in-chief of the Allied forces at 67. Count Zepplin never perfected his airship until after he was 75, and Admiral Sims was past 70 when placed in charge of all our naval operations in the War zone. Had Von Moltke gone into retirement at 65 the world would never have known him as the mighty military genius he proved to be. In the realm of statesmanship we saw Clemenceau called to the premiership of France at 75, and Von Hertling to the responsible post of chancellorship of the German Empire at the same age. Arthur Balfour at 70 is called upon by the British Government to represent it in the councils of the Nations at the close of the War, and Elihu Root has rendered his most distinguished service to this country since he passed his 70th milestone. The Speaker of our lower House of Congress, Mr. Gillett, was 67 when elected to this high office; while in the Senate, Mr. Lodge has come into his greatest power around the age of 70. Gladstone was 75 before he took up his great fight for Home Rule.

And we might go on and add other names to this galaxy and give ages just as great, but this is enough to be convincing. We are prepared to believe the following statement from a life-long student of busy men: "A man should be his best up to 70. If a man disappears at 55, he is inefficient, no matter what he has done before that time—inefficient because he has thrown away the ripe fruit of all his life."

It would be well to ponder the foregoing facts and figures with reference to the ministry and Christian work. Somehow there seems to be a sort of unwritten opinion that a preacher has done his best work by the time he is 60 or 60 odd and ought to be "shelved" thereafter. Now, if there is any work above another that would require years of experience to bring it into ripened fruition, it would seem that the ministry is that work. Long years of living and preaching should count with the preacher more than with any other man. Not till he is along in years can he bring to the pulpit a ripened Christian experience and a wisdom that no university can give him. It is just possible that the present disposition of many churches to insist that they be given a young preacher is a reflection on both their judgment and their taste for the things of the Spirit—and I say this in spite of the fact that I am a young man. Let the church be exceedingly careful not to be in too big a hurry.

THE CHURCH AS A BUSINESS.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

The Master thought of His mission in the world as a business. "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" he said to Mary when he was but a child of twelve. And what was His business? He set it forth in no uncertain language: "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost;" and again, "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many;" and he linked this business of His with the Father's purpose in that wonderful, unapproaching condensation of the Father's true attitude and relation to a lost world: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved." His business, He declared in clear, emphatic, unmistakable language, was to save the world.

What is the Business of the Church?

It is "to seek and to save that which is lost;" it is "not to be ministered unto but to minister," and to give its very life to carry the message of the love of the Father and of His Son Jesus Christ, our Lord, to every man, woman and child in every country of the world.

How is this business to be carried on successfully? How is the work given to the church to be done? The development of a business into a great world corporation depends very greatly upon the thoroughness with which it carries the message of the real value of what it has to sell to the people to whom it desires to sell it, and this depends in the long run upon three things: the intrinsic value of the article offered for sale; the availability of sufficient capital to carry on and develop the business; and the efficiency and loyalty of the working force.

The Master's Advice.

The Master Himself has told the church to study the methods of commonsense business men and to apply them to its own business. He declares "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. And I say unto you, make unto yourselves friends (by means of a proper use) of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into everlasting habitations."

It is not only illogical, unreasonable, and absurd, it is disobedient, and to that extent sinful, for the business men of the church to ignore, or positively to discard, in carrying on the business of the church the commonsense principles which they have found to be absolutely essential for success in their own business. But that is just what the church has done in the past, and what she is doing in many places to-day.

The Centenary and the Church's Business.

The Centenary Movement has emphasized the great importance of the teaching of our Master quoted above. The Managing Directors of the Church's Business in the World Field; the men whom the church had selected to carry on its operations in that field, the Missionary Secretaries and the Board of Missions, issued a statement that the business of the church—to take the message of its Master to every creature—could not be carried on successfully with the present equipment and working force; that the plans must be enlarged and improved, and that the number of trained efficient workers must be greatly increased. Carefully prepared estimates were made of the additional equipment and workers needed on every field of operation. These estimates were submitted to great conferences of leaders, and were approved with enthusiastic unanimity by those leaders. These estimates were then submitted to all the Annual Conferences. The Annual Conferences also agreed with similar enthusiasm to the estimates submitted. Then after this general statement of needs had been discussed, the members of the church were asked to subscribe to such an increase of its capital stock as had been shown to be necessary to carry on the business of the church successfully. The result was a subscription to its capital stock of approximately $50,000,000.

Up to this point the operations of the Centenary have been carried on by approved commonsense business methods such as are used by every great, reliable business corporation. It is proper to emphasize one difference, namely—that the increase of capital stock to enlarge the business of the church could not have been secured but for the conviction of the truth of the church's message, and of the duty of the church to carry it to the ends of the earth. But with this basal fact understood, it is clear that to the adoption of the commonsense methods of the world, commended by our Lord, must be credited very largely the success of the Centenary subscription. The members of the church were made to realize the absolute necessity for better equipment and more workers, if the business of the church was not to fail.

What Now?

Having been taught the value of commonsense methods in securing subscriptions, shall we discard those methods or continue to follow them? It is a very common thing in taking stock subscriptions to business enterprises to permit payment to be made in several installments and that plan also was adopted by the Centenary Commission. But it would be destructive of all the plans of a business corporation if after having made its plans, ordered its equipment and supplies and engaged its workers on the faith of stock subscriptions, the subscribers did not pay the installments on subscriptions as they fell due. The managers of the company would be utterly unable to make plans and sign contracts if there was no assurance that the money would come in promptly to pay the bills incurred.

Shall we be as business-like, in paying promptly our stock subscriptions to carry on the business of the church, as we are in paying subscriptions to stock in banks and other business corporations? The record of the Treasurer of the Centenary Fund shows that we are not. The amount received up to this date is several millions less than it should be at the same time. Some great charges and conferences have paid little more than one-half of the amount due to date. In many such cases the writer knows that there is not the slightest intention to repudiate any part of the subscription, but the charge has not adopted or carried out business-like methods of collection. It would not only be exceedingly difficult but also undesirable for the central office at Nashville to enter into the field of local collections. This work must be done under the direct supervision of the Conference Missionary Secretary, the presiding elders, pastors, lay leaders and church treasurers. The collection of these subscriptions should be made as systematically as subscriptions or notes for any other business enterprise. The fact that the subscriptions were made to carry on the business of the church is not the slightest justification for unbusiness-like methods in handling them.

"Delays Are Dangerous."

When I was a boy at school, my copy-book insisted that "delays are dangerous." Delay in making these payments greatly embarrasses those in charge of our missionary operations in their efforts to carry out the plans projected. Delay will chill enthusiasm and result in disparaging criticism of the Centenary. Methodism stirred Christendom by her Centenary offering and inspired our sister denominations to attempt things they had not dreamed possible before. Let us press steadily forward, using the same good commonsense business-like methods in collecting the subscriptions that were used in obtaining them. Do not wait until the end of the year. If every church editor, every presiding elder, every pastor, every lay leader, every treasurer, every subscriber will join in a great effort to clinch the nails which have already been driven, the missing millions will come pouring into the Lord's Treasury, the business of the church will be carried on as the Master commanded, and when we fail and leave the world we will be received into everlasting habitations by the friends we have made by a proper use of the mammon of unrighteousness.

THE GAMBLER VS. THE WORKER.

By George Zabriskie Collier.

Present day conditions tempt many to think that they can obtain much for little. Some who in the past have been underpaid now use their larger earnings by seeking short-cuts to wealth. The habit is one of many forms of relaxation from the tension of the war-period. For not a few, moral sanctions of all kinds seem less compelling. Young children, less under the restraining power of home religion, church and Sunday school, in many instances earning more than they know how to care for properly, become an easy prey to professional sharpers, who lure them on by visions of wealth for which they need neither toil nor spin. "Come with us," say they, "we shall find all precious substance; we shall fill our houses with spoil; thou shalt cast thy lot among us; we will all have one purse." * * * The merchant who casts a stumbling-block in the path of the boy, thinking to draw trade, places the dollar above the boy, and "crucifies our young manhood upon a cross of gold" more certainly than by the way suggested by the honored coiner of that phrase.

The increase of the habit is almost world wide. A correspondent of the Times recently cabled from Ostend a description of the "gambling-mad" habits of the European war profiteers, stating that some of their fortunes had "changed hands with a rapidity greater than that with which they were made." There was mention of a Frenchman who had made a great fortune in the manufacture of munitions who had lost 1,000,000 francs at a sitting, and of a young Cuban who, the next evening, lost a larger sum. The uncertainty of life and death during the anxious war-period may have begotten a kindred recklessness to monetary losses and gains.

The evil does not lie in the appeal to chance. There is nothing immoral in breaking a tie vote by drawing lots, or in the methods of a selective draft, or in determining the function of the two goats on the Day of Atonement. No one is robbed of anything which he formerly possessed in the way by which the holder of a winning lottery ticket robs the other ticket holders. So, too, guessing contests, e. g., estimating the number of beans in a jar from the number in plain sight, may be puerile, but are not gambling. The buyer pays for and receives the privilege of exercising his skill. Still the element of excitement makes the practice one to be avoided by those who can see no difference, who might be led from the one practice to the other. The collar of uncertain cleanliness we had better send to the laundry.

It is denied that gambling, sociologically considered, is theft, because the loser had agreed to pay his "debts of honor" in sportmanslike spirit. This would apply equally well to duelling, when one agrees to be shot by another if he cannot first kill his antagonist.

The gambler, unlike the worker whose arch-foe he is, seeks something for nothing. His winnings are not gifts, for he receives them against the expectation of one who had hoped that chance would have determined otherwise. It is neither earned nor given. "The objectionableness of lotteries lies in the fact that, instead of working and humbly waiting for the gifts which Providence may bestow, a wheel of fortune is ingeniously prepared for the possible gain of individuals, and the certain loss of the many" (Martensen). "It takes another man's property, not as a gift, for it is accounted won, and not with any recompense which leaves him the better" (Cleland McAfee). "A man who gambles, whether by play or betting, puts into his pocket money for which he has done no honest work; and by the very act he robs the man from whom he receives it, and violates the law of love" (Campbell Morgan).

The winner is in greater moral peril than the loser; for the latter sometimes learns his lesson—though none too often; the latter seldom does. Jerry MacAuley, founder of the Water Street Mission, is quoted as saying that "he had seen many a confirmed drunkard saved, many a libertine purified, many a thief made honest, but of all the gamblers who had come into his great mission, from men in their dishonest profession to men who were addicted to gambling in its petty forms, of all the gamblers he had known, he could count upon his fingers the number that had been saved."

Many years ago Chauncey M. Depew, then president of the New York Central R. R. said, "It is the one vice which seems to destroy at once, immediately, the moral sense, and to obliterate that absolutely essential quality in employer and employee, in the custodian and his cash, in the trustee and his estate, in the son and his mother's or his sister's property, fidelity to the trust, the violation of which destroys the violator and ruins the people who confide in him."

Friends of honest labor, parents, educators, pastors, are up against a moral problem that may not be trifled with in a good-natured way. The foundations of commercial integrity are involved. Like intemperance, it is "habit-forming." It becomes stronger the greater the success attained. Like mystic Babylon, the lottery has caused many to wax rich through the abundance of her dainties. By her sorceries have all nations been deceived.—The Intelligencer.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Ezekiel was a wonderful prophet. He had a vision of wheels. It was evidently a very intricate piece of machinery he saw—wheels within wheels. He also says that "the spirits of living creatures were in the wheels," and whither the living creatures went the wheels also went. I sometimes wonder if he looked down the coming ages and saw a wheeling world. Other men may have moved the nations, but Henry Ford and his kind keep them in motion. By day and night, summer and winter, in rain or sunshine, these whirring, grinding, flashing creatures of gas, grease, and rubber honk in the streets, and roar in the highways. Every driver is tremendously, strenuously, and fearfully in a hurry to get somewhere from his present local surroundings. And with many of them it matters but little whether they are here, there, or yonder.

Of course, the preachers who are the pioneers in all this running and roving must have cars. This may be well, only I say prepare your sermon better before leaving home. For this is not Old Dobbin you are driving. This creature requires all your time and attention. You can't lie back on the seat and dream dreams or make sermons. Meditation and motion are not handmaids. We may gain something in time, but I fear all of nature's beauties are spread out before the motorist in vain. Who cares for the coloring of a daisy field, or the glory of an autumnal forest when his mind is centered on gears, guages, grit and gravel? But we will never go back to the old way. But who can tell whether we are wiser or better in mind and morals? Can you? It's the riddle of the age.

When does Conference meet? There is only one Conference with the people. There may be general, district, quarterly or church conferences, but overshadowing all is Conference which meets once a year and sends back our preacher or gives us a new one. We like our preacher because he can preach; we like ours, he is a pastor; ours is a mixer; ours is a hustler; ours is a scholar; ours is a business man. So it goes, ad interim—mark the interim—a change is coming. "Are there going to be many changes this year?" Plenty of them, you may be well assured. Never a year but brings its changes. Father Time sweeps the lute of the years and the music ever changes, some notes of joy, some of sadness.

I tell you there is only one Conference. It may meet in Louisiana or in Virginia, Mississippi or Texas, it's the gathering of the clan. And the clan bond is stronger than any other tie, it is the blood token. The torch dipped in blood was the signal sent over Scotland's hills and dales to summon the clansmen. It was a symbol of life and light. It meant also fealty to all the kith and kin of the clan, even unto death. A spiritual bond unites the brethren of the Conference. It is strengthened and confirmed by years of sacrifice and service. The greatest reports will be heard in the groups that meet in the rooms and aisles of the church, and not those made to the bishop and body during the regular sittings. May we all have a gracious time. Conference is coming—is here.

MRS. C. McDONALD—IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Rachel Rebecca McDonald, of Pelahatchie, Miss., widow of Rev. C. McDonald of precious memory, died October 6, 1920, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Effie Pennington, in Pelahatchie, in her seventieth year. She had been a member of the Methodist Church for fifty-six years. On February 21, 1873, she was happily married to Rev. C. McDonald of the Mississippi Conference. Nine children were born to this union, eight of whom are living.

For more than half a century she walked with God and was not, for God took her. She spent her life in the service of God and her family and friends. During her long life she was a liberal contributor to her church, and was always a ministering angel to others. Whenever she could, she filled her place at the church and was a prayerful listener. God blessed the evening of her life with the devotion and tender care of her children.

The funeral services were held in the Pelahatchie Methodist Church, conducted by the writer and her pastor, Rev. John W. Chisholm. We buried her beside the husband with whom she had labored as an itinerant's wife for many years. Surrounded by loved ones and friends, we laid her body to rest to await His coming. J. M. MORSE.

CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

Mr. Editor: We have read with interest the editorial in your issue of September 30, on "Conference Entertainment," and the article on the same subject in your issue of October 14, by our good friend, Rev. W. S. Shipman. As this is a matter that probably will be brought before the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference for action, we think it should be discussed freely that we may act wisely.

We readily agree that a change in our custom should be made. We have been of that opinion for years and have been ready to vote for the right kind of a change if an opportunity had been afforded.

We do not doubt that Brother Shipman's plan would add to the pleasure of the occasion, when all would be "eating in one big dining room and getting through about the same time," with the servants of the College on duty, but since it involves the change of the time of meeting to the first of September, we believe that it would be nothing short of disastrous to the finances, including both the salaries of the preachers and the benevolences. In this Conference our money supply in the main is from the cotton crop, which is marketed in the late fall, and a large percentage of our people have but little money any other season of the year. For this reason in many places not more than one-half the preachers' salaries are paid till the last quarter, and the same may be said of the Conference collections. We are familiar with the argument that the people can pay before that time if they will. But some of them cannot, and others will not. We do not believe one-half the stations, to say nothing of the circuits, would be able to meet the conditions of this proposed change in time. We should not sacrifice the financial interest of the church merely to add to the pleasure of a week's entertainment.

The change of schools for the children is not so serious as to have them "to start all over again," as Brother Shipman would have us believe. We have a system of grading according to certain standards and when a child goes from one school to another it carries its report card or certificate to the new teacher and she knows where to place it. There should be no trouble in this, but, of course, there are some exceptions.

An Annual Conference session is a great occasion for Methodism in the town in which the Conference meets. The local congregation, as well as those in adjacent charges, have the opportunity of hearing our leaders, a privilege they could not have otherwise. People go through the country, as well as on the train, long distances to hear the Bishop and attend the other services on Sunday.

The Conference should levy an assessment on the pastoral charges equal to one per cent of the preachers' salaries, or more if necessary, and put this money into the hands of a committee to take care of the meal tickets while the Conference is in session. A local committee could make arrangements with hotels and cafes for rates, or a temporary eating house could be provided by some of the organizations of the local church. If this plan should be adopted, leaving the people to furnish lodging only, we are sure we will have more invitations than we can accept. Many of the towns would like to have the Conference if the housekeepers could be relieved of the extra expense of feeding and the drudgery of cooking. The money for this plan can be provided as easily as it can be for the other plan.

BEGINNING AGAIN.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

In a few weeks at most the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be beginning again. To them December rather than January is the beginning of a new year. Teachers begin their new year in September. In the Methodist Church in England the first Sunday in September begins a new year. In the wide world around, too, animate nature tells now its story of new life, for nearly all the trees are beginning to develop their autumn buds and colors. Animals get new coats and birds new feathers. It is strange that this fight between the dying and the coming into life goes on simultaneously. Preachers who are so fortunate as to have a vacation, come back with renewed health and vigor to begin a new year.

My English correspondence tells me that with the new year in the Wesleyan Methodist churches the minister reads the Conference Message for the new year. It was not a very hopeful one, for church authorities see a great change passing over the habits of people with regard to church-life and worship. They fear a generation of non-church-going people, a new thing. For many years now this prospect has been before them, and there seem to be very few rays of light coming through the darkness. The aftermath of the war is not what was expected.

We are told that the coming autumn and winter will see such a craze for dancing as has never before been witnessed in England. It is a big stride from church to ballroom. But hosts are taking that stride. Never before has the world been so eagerly running after all kinds of entertainment. Why is it? Life, no doubt, is full of experiences that overload the soul with sadness and care. The pendulum, therefore, swings to the other extreme. We do well to be merry. Laughter is as divine as tears. But the merriment and laughter that is simply the price paid for life's labor and struggle does not satisfy, nor go very far to satisfy, soul-hunger. That sort of thing is always demanding a fresh drink. Some one has well said that the great task of life is to call men back to the simplicities they have learned to ignore. That is the great work of the church. It is the great work of all education. We have done little either as teachers or preachers unless we have cleared the way for human feet to tread the road of life without forever resorting to the stimulant of amusement and gaiety.

Who will lift the boredom from life? Jesus Christ can. The water that He gives us is a well of water continually springing up into everlasting life. "Give me a drink," he said to the anonymous woman at the well. Such a small act of service, but the key to the happiest life! Men's lives are a vicious round of work-to-day, followed by exciting pleasure. Some of us who never drink drams are just as much slaves to other forms of intoxication. Some take their "nip" of whiskey, to give dull care the kick. Some of us take "nips" of other things that are just as ineffective. The dose has to be repeated and increased, and so we stagger along the journey of life. Some of us are simply "drunks;" others "drunk and incapable;" others "drunk and disturbers of the peace." It is said that in our day there is less drinking in public and more secret drinking. Well, that, anyhow, is true of other diversions. We cannot possess our souls in peace. We say, "One crowded hour of glorious life is worth an age without a name." That depends on what the hour is crowded with.

I conclude with some timely words of Dr. A. W. Guttery in the Primitive Methodist Church, whom I met for the first time in Switzerland. "Be not afraid. The great need of the hour is courage which refuses all alarm and is confident in all conditions. If in convocation, conference, synod, sincere men declare themselves to be loyal to lost causes, and confess failure with an exaggeration that is morbid, what is required is not a philosophy that is accurate, but a faith that is daring, and gives its challenge to any age. Our faith has come through the fires. Our Methodism has survived disruption, and is finding the joy of reunion. Our fathers faced many a dreary disappointment and cruel crisis, but they have left us a wealthy heritage. The soul of mankind is not dead. It may for a time be drugged and confused, but the hour of awakening draws nigh. Be not afraid."

DE RIDDER TO ENTERTAIN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

De Ridder opens her doors for the Louisiana Annual Conference. The sons of Wesley will receive a welcome in the town of De Ridder. It is the best town in Southwest Louisiana, with the exception of Lake Charles. Her citizens are thoroughly awake and prosperity is much in evidence in our little city.

Our church is among the best church buildings of the State. The debt has recently been paid; so our people are rejoicing over this fact. Pews, pulpit chairs, and other furniture have been ordered, but, much to our regret, will not arrive in sufficient time for the Conference. We will be forced to use chairs largely for the Conference sessions.

We anticipate having our church dedicated during the Conference. We will doubtless have all former pastors with us, as well as the Bishop.

The church life and spirit is much in evidence in our community. Considerable interest is shown in the preaching services, prayer meeting, W. M. S., and the Epworth League. Our people are hopeful for the future of our church and are thoroughly missionary.

We feel greatly honored in having the Conference with us. Our people will do the very best they can for the brethren and sisters who come. If any of the preachers should get into trouble while here in De Ridder, I can assure them that we have one of the prettiest jails in the South. Let us come praying for a great Conference and for the continued success of our great Methodism

THE ONE ESSENTIAL.

A remarkable thing about Jesus' ministry was his power to compassionate. So delicately poised was he, so sensitive and pure of soul, that he could no more stand in the presence of suffering, sorrow, or gladness without reciprocating the emotion than could a musical string fail to vibrate in the presence of a second string tuned to the same key. Having in mind the spiritual reclamation of every individual, he approached situations and men in the attitude of a benefactor or savior. His nature compelled this correspondence in emotion. "Rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep" was not only enjoined upon his disciples, but was a principle of his own life.

A study of the ministry reveals the fact that success is invariably based upon the power of one to easily enter into the very heart experiences of those with whom he comes in contact, and failure follows the absence of that power. Education is valuable, courteous manners much to be admired, administrative faculty no mean asset; but unless the preacher has the spirit of compassion, a spirit of compassion that immediately enters into the inner heart of those he confronts, lives their emotions within his own breast and for the time is part of their life, he has not the equipment prepared for his use by the Lord himself.

We have seen this truth demonstrated so often, we are not a little surprised that so few, comparatively speaking, are to-day the true exponents of this divine method of approach. This spirit of compassion is so unique, so rare, it can no more be passed by or mistaken than can a diamond be ignored amid ashes.

Congregations soon discover whether their pastor has a compassionate soul. If such he has, they will forgive many mistakes; they will overlook shortcomings; indeed, they will stand most any ordinary defect if his heart is right. Many a mediocre preacher has been rated in Grade A because folks believed in him and knew he believed in them. Many a brilliant preacher has been fearfully discounted because his hearers detected behind his words an unholy ambition and realized that his heart failed to accompany his words. Compassion covers a multitude of ministerial shortcomings.

If a pastor regards not the suffering, the sorrow and even the joy of his least member above his claims for personal advancement, he has not the full power of God and will ultimately fail, we care not the size of the salary he may draw, or the height of the spire under which he preaches. Compassion is all.—Northwestern Christian Advocate

READ—AND HEED.

Brother Ingram and I called on Brother McElroy at the Baptist Hospital last Monday. Brother McElroy has been in the hospital eight weeks. He does not know how long he will have to remain there. He is getting well slowly. If our men knew what I know, they would cheerfully send a word of cheer to this noble man and at the same time a little cash to help pay for things a man must have when he is flat of his back. His address is J. C. McElroy, care of Baptist Hospital, Room 509, Memphis, Tenn. Men, believe me, this brother needs your practical sympathy.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HOSPITAL.

Any treasurers or pastors who have in their keeping cards of subscription to the Mississippi Conference Hospital Fund, are requested to mail same to the undersigned. Also send promptly to the undersigned any amounts that have been paid on the subscriptions, making the checks payable to F. W. Foote, Treasurer. We expect to furnish each pastor before the Annual Conference session the exact amount paid from his charge, and will be able to report fully as to amounts of subscriptions from every church. H. G. TO THE PREACHERS AND LAYMEN OF THE DURANT DISTRICT.

No doubt you are aware that Sunday, November 7, is pay-up day for all assessments, namely salaries, Conference collections, Centenary pledges, and other obligations. I sincerely hope that every pastor and layman in the Durant District will cooperate to make this a record day in our district. This does not mean for you to change your plans or to wait for that day or date, but only means that before or by that day to have everything in hand. Will we do it? Let's try—what say you? Be sure to get all reports to me by November 10, so I can compile my reports.

A GALLANT DOG.

Ninety-two persons, passengers and crew of the coastal steamer, Ethie, owe their lives to a Newfoundland dog, when that vessel was wrecked on Martin's Point, off the coast of Newfoundland. All attempts to reach the ship failed, owing to the distance from shore and the high sea, until the officers of the ship bethought themselves of the Newfoundland dog on board.

Directed by officers of the Ethie, the dog succeeded in releasing the life line which had been caught, and, holding it tightly in his teeth, fought his way through the breakers to the shore. A life-saving device was then rigged up and one by one 91 of the 92 persons were brought ashore. A baby two months old was pulled ashore in a mail bag.—The Intelligencer.

A LETTER TO AN UNCONVERTED FRIEND.

My Friend: In thinking of you today the qualities which make you my friend made me wish you were, in addition, a follower of Jesus Christ. In these days of unsettled life and disturbed conditions, with Kaisers dethroned and Czars annihilated and Democracy threatened by excesses of lawlessness, the world needs a Ruler who will draw all men unto Himself not by force of arms but by the power of love. Jesus the Christ is the only one who can still the troubled waters and bring the world peace by making men love as brothers.

What is your personal attitude and relation to this Savior? Have you shown your gratitude for what He has done for the world and for you by giving Him your heart? Have you dedicated your life to His way of living so as to help Him save His lost world? Have you brought your sins to the sinner's Savior for forgiveness and found them washed away and a new life imparted to your nature by the Spirit whom Christ sends into every penitent and trustful heart?

The church, meeting the needs of the world after the war, asked for millions of dollars to reconstruct the fallen walls of Christian civilization. The people gave the money. The church now calls for an equally earnest response to the appeals for souls, won to Jesus through the personal prayers and entreaties of our members, that spiritual results may keep on a par with material gifts. This is not to swell the membership of the church, but to atone for our lack of zeal in telling the good news of our personal experience to our friends.

I want you to know that Christ means everything to me and that I long to see you know Him, love Him and serve Him too. The best day's work of my life was the one in which I grew sorry for my sins against Him and apologized in deep repentance, believed His promises of help and forgiveness and trusted Him to save me; found Him to be my Savior from the love of sin, its guilt and power and received through His blessed Spirit the assurance that my many sins were forgiven, that my nature was changed so that I could love God and the things He loved and hate everything that was displeasing to Him.

What a difference that day has made in my life! Old things passed away and all things became new. I have Him with me today. His love and help make me long to have you share it with me. The world needs Christlike Christians. Won't you be one? Won't you begin now? Won't you let our church know and help you? Won't you make such an open profession of this decision that your influence will count from this day forth on our Lord's side? "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." "Come thou and go with us, and we will do thee good, for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel."—Selected.

THE LAW OF UNIVERSAL NATURE.

By Rev. H. B. Urquhart.

"To deter humankind from its allurements, society should make sin as hideous as possible"—a Methodist preacher.

Kindly indulge this dissenting pen.

Sin is not an act, it is a life, as righteousness is not an act, but a life; else righteousness were by the deeds of the law. An act may be regulated by human decree; a life is beyond the power of human intervention.

All life is generated with a fixed and unalterable nature. That nature has its law, and that law is a supreme, inexorable principle. Whatever the life, there is its corresponding nature and determinate law; and no amount of veneering, or circumvention, can alter so much as one iota this law in its operation.

Nature is unity with life, they are one. The destruction of one is the destruction of the other; the fixedness of nature is the enrichment of life, whilst the law of nature, being a fixed and unalterable principle, moves forward with determinate precision in every circumstance.

The non-voidable province of life is, through the unalterableness of its nature functioning in harmonious conformity to its inexorable law, fruitage. It cannot desist from fruitage, because it is the law of its nature for it to bear fruit. If there be no fruit, it is only when there is no life and fundamental nature has been destroyed. The active, responsible agency is life; its fruitage nothing more than the outward, visible, concrete expression of the hidden, potent, and responsible life beyond, inactive and irresponsible.

This concept of universal life and its corresponding nature finds apt illustration in the tree bearing fruit. By compelling nature, operating through its inexorable law moving forward in determinate precision, it bears, not intermittently, but ever and always, regardless of circumstance, in season its fruit. As respects the fruitage it were as impossible for it to issue otherwise as for truth to become a lie, a self-declaratory contradiction. Fruitage is the non-voidable province of the life of the tree. That life could not eventuate otherwise, because it is natural for it to bring forth fruit. It must act in conformity to the inexorable law of its nature. The active, responsible agency here is the life of the tree; its fruitage nothing more than the outward, visible, concrete expression of the hidden, potent, and responsible life beyond, inactive and irresponsible.

But is it objected, the illustration is not felicitous because there are seasons when no fruit appears? The answer is, the objection is not valid, for the absence of fruit is only in the appearing. For as, when pendent in season's golden ripeness some eager hand plucks the luscious harvest, so, non-appearing at harvest time, some ruthless foe, it may chance of tempest dire, or tropic sun, or arctic blast, or other, breathes its blight and out of season's fullness garners an incipient though no less true a fruitage. Though no fruit appears at harvest it remains the life issued in unfailing fruitage in conformity to its unalterable and compelling nature.

If it appears in universal life that the outward, visible, concrete fruitage, the act of the life, is but the mere irresponsible declaration of a hidden, but active and responsible life, then it follows that all human acts involving morals are, shown themselves of responsibility, but the visible fruitage of a positive, active, and responsible hidden life; and since from like proceeds like, they, being moral, proceed from a source of moral life, the character of that life, whether good, or evil, being determined by the character of the fruitage.

If then there be moral life, whether good, or evil, it follows that its generation, like all other life, is accompanied by its corresponding, unalterable nature and inexorable law; and this life, like universal life, must and will proceed, according to the law of universal nature, to function in its non-voidable province of fruitage, and that in every circumstance, irrespective of let, or hindrance, veneer, or circumvention. Its province is non-voidable; it can do no otherwise than act out in fullest measure, according to its inexorable law, the behests of its nature. If the life be good, like it, the fruitage will be inherently good, essentially so. And that fruit is all-consuming, all-embracing, all-exulting love, whose very breathings go out in humble, reverent, sweet adoration to God; embraces all mankind, and in particular them who know not God in this love; it exulteth in the peace of God which passeth all understanding, a peace like the brooding stillness of silent night. But if the life be evil, ah! what imagination short of the Holy One's may paint the dreadful picture of hatred, the antithesis of love, the fruit of the evil life, whose very essence is enmity against God, whose very heart is murder of God, and whose very breath is anathema? The active, responsible agency in either is the life; the fruitage but the outward, visible, concrete expression of the hidden, potent, and responsible life beyond, inactive and irresponsible. Sin is not an act; it is a life.

Shall the conventionalities of society circumvent the inexorable operations of the law of universal nature and deter humankind from sin? Ere 'tis done that generated life, that unalterable nature, that inexorable law, which shall go ever onward unchanging and unchangable, must die and be renewed. God alone can regenerate.

WHEN THE WHISTLE BLOWS.

By C. H. Carter.

The custom of blowing factory whistles long and loud has been deprecated by the public and in some places even prohibited as a useless noise. In reality this is, after all, the signal that is offered those who labor under the direction of certain industries and has its legitimate time and place. Happy is the man who awakens and rises when his clarion is sounded. Should he fail to heed that clarion, the blowing of the whistle, he would be, generally speaking, most unhappy. He alone is not affected, but many others, yea, all other men indirectly.

To remain unmoved when life's cue is given is a weakness—a failing that points to human disaster. "All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players," each waiting his cue. Should one character fail to follow his cue, the whole company is held up.

We are all under orders. Though for us no factory whistles blow, yet we must all meet certain appointments and follow certain commands. Without it life cannot go on with a song. One break in the line and all the rest of the family is held up somewhere; "just for the want of a nail the battle was lost," just for the delay of a man the happiness of life is lacking. Not long ago at a wedding the guests were all assembled, the bride and groom were anxious, because the flowers ordered had not arrived! Who could imagine a floweriess bride! But the florist had failed in his great moment. He alone of all concerned had not heeded the blowing of the whistle, and the curtain was rung up on a flowerless wedding and a trembling bride.

All over the whole world hearts are aching, distress is seen on every hand—because materialistic ideals have failed—again failed. They have failed to supply man, who is a spirit, with the requisites of the soul life. To meet the needs of this sin-sick world all classes acknowledge that Christ alone has the remedy—the only remedy. All over Methodism, the whistles are blowing, calling upon the witnesses of Christ to tell the world that "He is mighty to save." Preachers and laymen, this is our cue to take up the great part, that which Andrew played when he sought out Philip and brought him to Jesus. How we suffered when the coal miners failed to heed the blowing of the whistle! So will the world continue to suffer if the people who call themselves by His name fail God in His appointed hour: for now all over the earth the whistles are blowing. To the work!—Selected.

A SIMPLE REMEDY FOR INSOMNIA.

By Mrs. Ida Starin.

When I cannot sleep I have been helped so much by repeating hymns. I have in memory twenty-one. They soothe and comfort by bringing one in touch with the spiritual and turning the current of one's mind when so full of worrying thoughts which excite and keep one awake. We cannot think of two things at once so when we turn to a hymn full of God's promises, there is power in it to help and keep one from thinking of earthly things. As Dr. Lyman Abbott has said, "Insomnia has lost its dread for me when I can say with the Psalmist, 'My mouth shall praise Thee with joyful lips when I remember Thee upon my bed and meditate on Thee in the night watches.'" (Psalm 63:5-6). Sometimes I can only say two or three hymns before I am asleep. When thoughts will crowd into my mind while I am repeating a hymn, I stop and commence over again from the first verse. "Safe in the arms of Jesus" and "Jesus, the very thought of Thee," seem to come first to me. I am glad to pass on this simple remedy, hoping it will help those that suffer from insomnia that so affects the health.—Exchange.

HOW TO HELP.

Our lives are songs;
God writes the words,
And we set them to music at leisure;
And the song is sad, or the song is glad,
As we choose to fashion the measure.

POLLY'S TANGLES.

"I wish my hair wasn't curly," complained Polly.

Mother made no answer, but went on brushing Polly's curly locks.

"I wish there wasn't such a lot of it," fretted Polly. "I'd like to have it all cut off. It's terrible bother."

Still mother said nothing. She was trying very hard to straighten out a tangle without hurting her cross little girl.

"And I do wish it wasn't red!" snapped Polly. "I hate red hair!"

"So do I," exclaimed Brother Jimmy. "If your hair wasn't red, maybe you wouldn't have such a terrible temper." And Jimmy hurried from the room before mother could reprove him for teasing Polly.

"Oh, mother!" cried Polly, with a sudden jerk, "that hurts. I wish you'd stop pulling so!"

Mother laid down the comb and brush. Polly had fretted and cried all through the brushing and curling. It was not the tangles that hurt her, for mother was very careful, but the foolish fear of being hurt. Polly made a great deal of trouble in this way every morning. This morning she had been unusually trying.

"Very well, Polly," answered mother. "I won't bother you any more. We'll leave your hair just as it is." Then she left the room.

Polly went to the mirror. She saw there a little girl with one side of her hair in smooth, shining curls and the other side a bright, tangled mass. How queer and one-sided she looked!

Then Jimmy came into the room. "Hello!" he cried. "What's the matter? You make me think of 'Diddle, Dumpling, My Son John.'"

Polly's lip began to quiver. There were worse things, it seemed, than having your hair brushed and curled. Polly never could take teasing good-naturedly.

It was very trying to appear before people with her hair only half curled. And how ashamed she was when a neighbor came in! She went to her room and tried to curl her own hair, but her little fingers were so short and her hair so long that she failed entirely.

Pretty soon auntie drove up and called her to come out for a ride. Then Polly's head went down on the window sill, and she began to sob.

Mother came into the room. "Is my little girl ready to stand still and have her hair curled?" she asked.

Polly jumped up and ran eagerly to her. She kept very quiet while mother gently brushed and curled the neglected hair. "Why, there wasn't a single tangle!" she cried when mother had finished.

"Of course not," answered mother. "It isn't the tangles in the hair that hurt you, Polly; it is the tangles in a little temper. They are the serious matter. The tangles in the hair come out very easily. I'll attend to them and see that they do not hurt you. Do you think you can straighten out the tangles in the temper?"

Polly felt very much ashamed and told her mother that she certainly meant to try.—Emilie Henderson, in The Christian Observer.

HOW A TOWN WAS SAVED BY A CLOCK.

In the old days when every city had to be well guarded the ancient town of Basel, in Switzerland, was surrounded by a high wall. There was only one gate. Beside it stood a tower with a clock in it, and at the foot of the tower lived the old man who was the keeper of the gate. It was his business always to be on the watch, that no enemy might get into the town.

The old man did his duty so well that for years no harm came to the city; but inside of it were traitors who had long planned to turn it over to its enemies. The old guardian suspected that evil was hanging over the city, but there were no soldiers to help him, so he could do nothing but watch and listen.

One night, when all the lights of the town had been put out, the old man's keen eyes caught sight of shadows skulking near the tower. He knew it was the traitors, and that they were there for no good purpose.

It was then nearly midnight, and his sharp ears caught the whisper, "When the clock strikes twelve." That meant, of course, that the stroke of twelve had been agreed upon as the signal for the traitors to fling open the gate and deliver the town into the hands of its enemies.

The old man, listening in his little room, wondered what he should do. He had little strength himself, and there was no time to get help.

At last, when it lacked only five minutes of midnight, he thought of a plan. Climbing the stairs of the tower as fast as he could, he groped his way to the clock and opened its case with trembling hands.

A little later one long, clear note struck from the top of the tower. Only one, then silence. The old man, leaning from the window, heard excited whispers below.

"Why doesn't it go on striking?"

"Could we have slept while we waited?"

The sharpness of that one solemn stroke on the silent air frightened the traitors. They crept away, sulky and fearful, in the darkness. Outside the gate the waiting enemy also heard the stroke, and after a time went away bewildered.

The next morning the mayor sent to the gatekeeper to ask why the clock was an hour fast. When he heard what had happened, he ordered a great celebration in honor of the old man who had saved the town. Later on, the people set up a figure over the gate of the city to make them remember their deliverance: a curious figure that once in so often stuck out its tongue, as if to mock the memory of the traitors whose plans the quick wit of the old man had spoiled.—Selected.

MATTIE LOU'S QUEER DOLLIES.

Aren't you proud of your pretty dollies and don't you have a lot of fun with them?

Well, Mattie Lou loved hers, too; but I wonder if you would not turn up your nose at the dolls Mattie Lou had to play with?

You see she lived way up in the mountains far from a store of any kind, and anyway Mattie Lou's papa didn't have the money for dolls; it took all he had for cornbread and molasses for Mattie Lou and all her little brothers and sisters.

But Mattie Lou didn't cry and fret over this; no, indeed, not a bit of it! She just made her own dolls— now wait till you hear what she did.

She dressed up bottles, yes, big bottles and little bottles, so you see she had dolls of all sizes, and they made the finest kind of dollies, too. For she raveled out some old stockings, which made a fringe, and she stuck it in the bottle, then put the cork in tight and this fringe hung down and made hair for the doll.

Why, do you know, Mattie Lou could even braid this hair as if it were real!

Then she would tie a little scrap of a skirt around the neck of the bottle, and, bless you, play with it, and enjoy it, too, just as you do your store-dolly.

And, do you know, she gave these dolls such queer names, the names of what had been in the bottle, sometimes—"Castoria" was the name of one. She thought that was a beautiful name.

But Mattie Lou longed for a great big dolly, and what do you think she made one out of?

Why, there was a tree stump by the side of her log cabin, and she would dress this up in her own aprons and sunbonnet, and she called it "Susie Ann."

Susie Ann had hair, too, for Mattie Lou cut up a piece of black cloth in strips, and tacked this to the stump, so Mattie Lou had a good time braiding this hair of Susie Ann's.

There was only one trouble with her stump-doll, she couldn't take it in her arms; but then, Mattie Lou never troubled over something that could not be helped.

Now, when you tire of your own pretty store-dollies, and maybe fret for a new one, just think of Mattie Lou, with her bottle and stump-dolls, and be glad you've your real dollies, even if they are old. Apples of Gold.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in annual session, pursuant to call, in the Advocate offices, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, on Thursday, October 7, at 10 o'clock. The attendance was the smallest in years, Rev. J. T. Leggett and Rev. J. W. Dorman being seriously ill and others unavoidably detained. The following were present: Louisiana Conference—J. F. Foster, J. M. Henry, and S. J. Davies; Mississippi Conference—J. R. Jones; North Mississippi Conference—T. H. Lipscomb.

After prayer, J. F. Foster was, on motion, re-elected Chairman, T. H. Lipscomb, Secretary, and J. R. Jones, Treasurer.

Reports were received from the Chairman of the Publishing Committee, the Editor, Rev. H. T. Carley, and the Business Manager, Mr. C. O. Chalmers. While a balance was found of receipts over expenditures for the year of $207.59, outstanding bills for paper amounting to $1625, and a deficit on the Manager's salary of $600 were found, with no funds available for same.

In order to relieve this shortage, and to put the Advocate on a better business basis, a CASH IN ADVANCE policy was unanimously agreed upon, in line with the prevailing tendency in all business to-day. It was recognized that the old policy of pay when you please is suicidal, with the demands for cash payment coming upon the paper constantly from every source. The cost of paper alone was found to be now over three times what it was even a year or two ago, and the cost of labor and all material has more than doubled. The Publishing Committee feels sure that the wisdom and necessity for this CASH IN ADVANCE policy will be recognized at once; and urges all pastors and subscribers to assist in relieving the present shortage by all arrearages being paid up promptly.

The circulation, it was found, amounted this spring to somewhat over 10,000, and at present is 9666. Had the $2 rate been in operation throughout the year, all obligations would have been covered without deficit; but it was found that over 3000 paid at the $1 special rate, and as many more at the $1.50 rate, neither of which amounts covers the actual cost of issuing the paper. A sister Advocate, it was found, is paying for printing by contract for the paper alone (not including salary of Editor, etc.) 4.6 cents per copy each week; and the Committee found that the Editor and Manager had kept the cost of the Advocate within remarkably low figures in view of the prevailing high prices and excessive cost of paper. It may be added that print paper is one article which shows no sign of going down, as the cost is still rising. Congratulations were extended to the Business Manager, Mr. Chalmers, for his handling of the business affairs of the paper, and appreciation expressed of his patience in accepting a deficit on his salary until it can be met through the prompt returns of a cash $2 a year in advance policy.

Resolutions were adopted as follows:

(1) That we set as our goal—THE ADVOCATE IN EVERY HOME.

(2) That as an immediate objective we fix a quota of one subscriber for every ten members in every charge.

(3) That the presiding elders of the several districts be requested at the Annual Conferences publicly to accept this quota for their respective districts, and that reports in full on all charges be conditioned on the accomplishment of this end.

(4) That this action be presented to the Conferences through the Board of Christian Literature of each Conference and that they be requested to present the matter to their respective Conferences for action.

Members of the Publishing Committee, J. M. Henry, J. R. Jones, and T. H. Lipscomb, were designated to go, with the Editor, before the Boards of Christian Literature of their Conferences to state fully the condition of the Advocate, and the plan proposed by the Editor and Business Manager (but not acted upon by the Committee), for the payment of the Editor's salary. T. H. Lipscomb was requested to report the proceedings of the Committee.

As impressing the importance and value of the Christian Advocate, in the service it may render to the church, we quote in conclusion a highly commended paragraph from the Editor's Suggestions:

"When we get it upon our hearts and our minds that we are facing a wonderful opportunity; when we realize that the mission of the Advocate is not to support two or three families, but to minister in a helpful religious way to tens of thousands of Methodist men, women, and children; when we come to see that it is a great business enterprise, a great medium for informing, inspiring, and arousing the religious zeal of our people, a great agency for the extension of the Kingdom of God, we will get out of the ruts in which we have been for so many years, we will enlarge our conceptions of our possibilities and our duty, we will get away from methods and plans that have not expanded with the new age in which we live, and we will lay our hands to the task that confronts us in such fashion as will measuredly meet the obligations resting upon us. A little program for a great cause invites only failure in times like these."

T. H. LIPSCOMB, Secretary.

WELCOME TO BISHOP McMURRY.

Bishop W. F. McMurry, who will preside over the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences this year, comes to us not as a stranger but as a well-known and efficient servant of the church in high positions. This, however, is the first time he has met with our Conferences in his episcopal capacity. We can assure him that he will be cordially received, both for his own and his work's sake; he will find the people called Methodist in these parts loyal and energetic and ready to join with him in forwarding the great work of the church. We are glad to have him with us, and we pray for the marks of divine favor upon his administration.

THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Before another issue of the Advocate is in the hands of its readers, the Louisiana Conference will have convened in annual session in the enterprising and growing little city of De Ridder. The pastor of our church there, Rev. C. E. Fike, the entire membership of the church, and the citizens of the community generally have made generous provision for the entertainment of their guests, and a warm welcome and cordial hospitality are assured the visitors. While this is the first time De Ridder has undertaken to entertain the Conference, there is every assurance that it will measure up to the high standard that has been maintained by the other communities that have been hosts to this great gathering.

While the preachers and lay delegates to the Conference will be recipients of many kindnesses, it is only fair to assume that they, in turn, will be a blessing to the community in which they will spend nearly a week. The personal influence of some scores of devout men and women cannot fail to make itself felt in the homes where they sojourn; and, unconsciously, the combined force of the godly lives of these representatives of the church will inevitably leave its impress upon the community as a whole.

More and more the local churches and towns which entertain these ecclesiastical gatherings are feeling the responsibility which rests upon them with reference to proper provision for the material comfort of their guests; these guests, as representatives of the only religion which is able to save the world, should not be less sensible of the obligation that rests upon them to confer a blessing by their presence and work. We earnestly pray that the meeting of the Louisiana Annual Conference, as well as of all our Conferences, may be a gracious occasion for all concerned.

YOUR ALMA MATER CALLS YOU.

There appeared recently in this paper an appeal or request addressed to the alumni and former students of our church schools. We call attention to this to urge every man and woman who at any time was a student of one of our church schools to read that statement and send at once the information requested. During the present month, every school of our church is making an effort to secure a complete list of all former students. Give to your own school the information requested. Do not delay this matter. And along with your own report write and give to your Alma Mater a list of all former students of your community.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We are closing up a profitable year at Trout and Good Pine," writes Rev. A. M. Shaw, the pastor, from Trout, La.

Bob Jones, the well-known evangelist, has been holding a meeting at Starkville, Miss. Reports that have come to us indicate the accomplishment of great good.

The October number of the Missionary Voice presents a varied and interesting table of contents. Sample copies will be sent on applicaion to Box 509, Nashville, Tenn.

The Murrah Bible Class of our Sunday school at Clarksdale, Miss., recently suffered a great loss in the death of Miss Gertrude Calhoun, one of its faithful and active members.

A good meeting has just closed at Pine Hill, on the Greensburg charge, Louisiana Conference. The pastor, Rev. L. E. Crooks, was assisted by Rev. B. D. Watson, of Baker.

We learn from the Lincoln County Times, of Brookhaven, Miss., that Rev. J. T. Leggett, who was recently so seriously ill, has greatly improved in health and is at Cooper's Wells for recuperation. This is good news.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine has had a good year on the Eunice charge, Louisina Conference. At Basile, where there was no work before this year, there is now a church building, a flourishing Sunday school, and a Woman's Missionary Society.

The Woman's Missionary Society at Clarksdale, Miss., is splendidly organized and active in its work. We learn from the Clarksdale Daily Register that there were forty-one present at a recent meeting.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, of Montrose, Miss., writes appreciatively of two sermons preached on the first Sunday of this month by Rev. E. L. Alford, president of the Mississippi Conference Training School, located at Montrose. Brother Westbrook says that his charge will have a good report at Conference unless some unforeseen misfortune prevents.

The Advocate has been honored with an announcement of the marriage of Miss Clara Doris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGregor, to Mr. Leo R. Goodman, on Tuesday evening, Septomber 28. We extend best wishes to the young couple, who will make their home at Barham, La.

The Auditorium Hotel, at Lake Junaluska, N. C., was completely destroyed by fire on Sunday, October 17. The loss was partially covered by insurance. Mr. A. L. Dietrich, the manager, has announced that the building will be replaced immediately.

The wife and daughter of Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, are spending the winter at Biloxi, Miss. The daughter's health, somewhat impaired by a recent operation, is improving on the coast.

Rev. J. H. Stafford, a local deacon, of this city preached at Pearl River, La., last Sunday. In spite of an all-day rain, the congregation at the evening service was unusually good—better than is customary in some city churches under similar circumsances.

Dr. W. R. Bourne, president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., spent last Sunday in New Orleans, preaching at Rayne Memorial in the morning, and at Carrollton Avenue in the evening. He gave these congregations two inspiring discourses.

Rev. R. T. Pickett, of Collins, Miss., reports a good meeting at Santee Church, held in a new building, in which the preaching was done by Rev. G. G. Yeager. There were 24 accessions to the church. On Sunday afternoon, Brother Jno. A. McLeod, of Hattiesburg, conducted a service at this, his old "home church." It was a soul-stirring service—"the Lord was with us," writes Brother Pickett.

An "Old Folks' Day" service was held at the Lake Charles Methodist church on Sunday, October 17. There was a great congregation, and the pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, preached an exceedingly appropriate and suggestive sermon, as we judge from the full account given by the Lake Charles American-Press. Following the sermon, beautiful bouquets of roses were given to the oldest members of the church and the oldest married couples present.

Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, the popular and efficient pastor at Indianola, Miss., has been transferred to the St. Louis Conference, under the presidency of Bishop W. B. Murrah, and appointed to Fredericktown, Mo. Brother McGehee has had a most successful ministry in Mississippi, and he will be greatly missed by a host of friends and parishioners who have been blessed by his preaching. We commend him to the love of the brethren in Missouri.

West Monroe Methodist Church, West Monroe, La., has had a prosperous year, as shown by the reports at the fourth quarterly conference recently held. The amount raised in cash this year for all purposes is $18,493.32. Fifty-one members have been received into the church on profession of faith, and forty-eight by certificate, and there are others to be received before Conference. It is not surprising that the quarterly conference unanimously asked for the return of the pastor, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter.

A note from President Watkins informs us that the matriculations in Millsaps College have already exceeded the entire number of matriculations of last session. It is certain that all attendance records will be broken this year. Every room in the new dormitory was taken before the session opened. Mississippi Methodism has a great opportunity to make this great educational institution second to none in the land by providing the facilities and resources it needs for the work it is expected to do.

The fourth quarterly conference at Hernando, Miss., held on October 21, adopted a resolution asking Bishop W. F. McMurry to postpone the session of the North Mississippi Conference to a date not earlier than December 8. This action was taken in view of the present state of the cotton market, the collection of the church assessments being largely dependent upon the sale of cotton. That the action might have full publicity, the secretary was instructed to forward the resolution not only to Bishop McMurry, but also to the Advocate and the Commercial-Appeal.

His many friends will regret to learn that the faithful and efficient Business Manager of the Advocate, Brother Chas. O. Chalmers, will be compelled to undergo an operation for removal of the appendix this week. He is at Hotel Dieu, though the operation had not been performed at the time the Advocate went to press. There is every reason to believe that the operation will be entirely successful and that Brother Chalmers will soon be restored to health. We are sure the readers of the Advocate will offer a prayer in his behalf in this time of anxiety.

At the Rally Day service of the Sunday school at Holly Springs, Miss., the attendance went over the 500 mark. The goal had been set at 400, and the result shows that the attendance committee, under Professor E. F. Puckett, did splendid work. The exercises were conducted by the superintendent, Mr. L. G. Fant, the address being delivered by Mr. J. H. Ledyard, superintendent of the Sunday school at Tupelo. A touching feature of the service was the "farewell" to the old organ, delivered by Rev. W. R. Lott, the new organ being ready for installation.

This inspiring communication has just been received from Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference: "I am wondering if the report of Drew church, at its fourth quarterly meeting, is unusual, exceptional, extraordinary, as churches go in these tight times in money matters. Anyway, here it is: Conference collections, pastor's salary, presiding elder's salary and absolutely every claim against this church WAS PAID IN CASH. This church pays its pastor $3000, too. The Winona District is just now enthusiastically engaged in the 'pay-up campaign' for November 7. Many of our charges will report everything in full." If that isn't fine, we don't know what is.

The work of our church at Tupelo, Miss., has shown great progress this year. In the spring of the year there was a great union meeting, in which there were many conversions. The interest developed during that meeting has been conserved in a remarkable way. At that time the ladies of the community formed eighteen prayer circles, which met at 9:30 o'clock every morning during the meeting; since then, a meeting has been held every Tuesday morning at the same hour. The attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting runs from 50 to 150, and the Sunday school attendance has gone to 600 a few times. There have been 130 additions to the church. Rev. J. A. Hall is the pastor of this vigorous Church.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. Harry W. Rickey, Lafayette, La., 23; B. F. Goza, Magnolia, Miss., 4; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Biloxi, Miss., 5; Rev. W. E. Akin, Clinton, La., 2.

MRS. GILES WILLIAMS—AN APPRECIATION.

In his vision of fair women Solomon again demonstrates his wisdom to us when he creates the Ideal Woman as the housekeeper and homemaker. He describes her as the one who "looketh well to the ways of her household and eateth not her bread of idleness; who seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands;" a woman who riseth early in the morning "while it is yet night" and giveth meat to her household; and in whom her husband can safely trust, for "she will do him good and not evil all the days of her life:" a kind-hearted woman whose interest and love go beyond her own hearth-stone, for "she stretcheth out her hand to the poor and needy:" a prudent, discreet woman, who "openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness." As we study the wonderful word picture we are constrained to ask, "Are there any who attain to its worth and beauty to-day?" Then the face and character of one I have loved and lost floats before me, and I say: Well, if Solomon was right in his estimate, my friend Mrs. Jennie Pankey Williams was an ideal woman, for her character was made up of these same beautiful attributes and virtues.

Jennie Pankey was born and reared near Durant, Miss. After her marriage to Mr. Giles Williams, they moved to Macon where they lived for a number of years. From here they moved to Winona, where they lived very happily until Mr. Williams retired from business. They then returned to Durant where they remained during the closing years of Mrs. Williams life. She was an ideal housekeeper. Everything was in order, perfect system obtained throughout. She was a homemaker. Her husband trusted her in business, in pleasure, in joy or in sorrow; she was his safe adviser and counsellor. She had no children, but three orphan children shared her bounty, and grew to maturity in the sunshine of her love, and to-day "rise up and call her blessed." "Aunt Jennie" was the sweetest name their lips ever learned to lisp.

She was an ideal woman in her church relations. She joined the Methodist Church, South, when a mere girl and always lived up to its high standards. No better worker or more faithful member could be found. Her pastor found her always ready to do more than her part in every enterprise.

If to be an ideal woman and make a success in life means to work hard, live well, do good, enjoy the respect of men and women and the love of little children; to leave the world better because of having lived in it; to look for the best in others and give the best to them—then Mrs. Williams' life was pre-eminently a successful one. On November 11, 1919, God called her apart to rest awhile. But she is not dead—for she is not forgotten. She will live in the hearts of those she loved and blessed while time shall last. Her influence is not dead; it will bless unborn generations. And we are all nobler and better because her ideal life touched ours. We miss her, but we know that she is waiting for us in the City "whose maker and builder is God."

Let us all so live the ideal life that when the summons comes to join the "innumerable caravan," we too may "wrap the draperies of our couch about us and lie down to pleasant dreams."

MISSIONARY RALLIES AT LULA AND DUNDEE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Cariey: These two fine spirited Delta towns have long been on the geographical map of North Mississippi; and now their enterprising, consecrated women are writing these names on the missionary map in capital letters.

It was our pleasure, on the 5th of October, in response to an invitation from Rev. S. A. Brown, pastor of the Lula charge, and his good wife, to be guests in their parsonage home, and attend missionary rallies at both these places. The Aid Society at Dundee kept "open house" with Mrs. Earnest Owen, the occasion being in the nature of a Harvest Home ingathering of the proceeds of twenty-five dimes, given out, one to each member, in the beginning of the year.

Clever and interesting, indeed, were the reports of these missionary dimes, relating their labors and experiences as they had busied themselves during the year, enlisting other dimes in the service of the great King. There had not been a shirker, a slacker or a drone among those Dundee dimes. Not one worker had hidden her dime away as did the one-talented man in our Lord's parable. But all had returned them at accounting time to their President, Mrs. Campbell, increased some sixty, some an hundred fold; while two had multiplied three hundred and seventy-five times! These fine Christian women are overflowing with zeal and enthusiasm in the work of their society. And what they have already accomplished by their splendid team work is but an earnest of what they will yet accomplish in a larger way, when they become connectional, and form themselves into a Standard Missionary Society.

At the request of the pastor this writer gave the missionary address of the meeting, and it was indeed a joy to speak of the larger aspects of missions to this responsive audience of intelligent women.

Beautiful decorations and delectable refreshments, in two courses, gave added demonstration to the fact that the Dundee ladies give of their best in the Master's service, and may He continue to bless and speed them in their labors for his cause.

At Lula the program, which had outgrown the limitations of space inseparable from meeting in a private home, was staged in the large Masonic hall in the evening. Invitations had been extended to the friends in all the other churches of the town. A fine spirit of Christian co-operation was manifest.

This, too, was an annual ingathering of missionary funds accruing from the investment of a quarter of a dollar by each member, in the early spring. A free-will offering for the Orphanage at Jackson was also a financial feature of the meeting. The net proceeds amounted to more than one hundred and eighty dollars; thanks to the labors of these faithful Christian women, and the generosity of the big-hearted men of Lula, who were in attendance. A finer lot of people it would be difficult to find. They deserve better and more inspirational things than this writer was able to give in her address of the evening. But they proved as generous in appreciation and interest as they had been in their financial offerings.

Brother Brown merits good things, and he has them on this growing charge. When he gets the up-to-date parsonage which those enterprising women are planning and working for, he had better beware of inviting his itinerant friends to visit him. For I fear a number of us "preacher folk" might then be tempted to break the command, "Thou shalt not covet." But Brother Brown is secure in the confidence and esteem of his parishioners. He seems as easily master of the situation in his charge, as he was the master of ceremonies at this missionary function. The program went smoothly and entertainingly without hitch or hindrance. The delights of Christian fellowship and good will were unconfined throughout the evening. Community spirit of the highest order characterized the occasion. The purest and best always flourish under the divine aegis of Christianity.

M-m-m! Mr. Editor, what a sumptuous spread those Lula missionary workers did serve! I have not seen so much that is good to eat since—well, since "old H. C. L." became price dictator.

I observe from an editorial note or two, Brother Cariey, that you are fond both of fish and fishing. Take my advice and angle for an invitation from this prince of anglers, Brother Brown. He is both a successful "fisher of men" and of the finny tribe. On the occasion of our visit he had been trolling for trout in Moon Lake, and was rewarded with his finest "catch" of the season. Mrs. Brown did the rest in cooking and serving them "to the queen's taste." But 'tis heartless further to tantalize a pent-up city editor; hence I desist.

With every good wish,

MRS. J. M. WYATT.

Shelby, Miss.

He will easily be content whose conscience is pure. Thou art not the more holy, though thou art praised; nor the more abject, though thou art dispraised. What thou art, thou art. Neither canst thou be said to be greater than thou art in the sight of God. If thou considerest what thou art within, thou wilt not care what men say of thee. Man seeth the face, but God looketh into the heart. Man considereth the deeds, but God weigheth the intention. To do always well, and to disesteem himself, is a sign of a humble soul.—Thomas a Kempis.

DIDN'T KNOW 'TWAS SO GOOD

Texas Lady Storekeeper, Who Carries Black-Draught in Stock, Has Found It "Best Liver Medicine" Obtainable.

Barker, Texas.—Relating her experience with Thedford's Black-Draught, Mrs. A. L. Fromme, of this place, says: "I had for some time used * * * and other liver medicines, which would nauseate and make me feel bad. We have a store, and our customers called for Black-Draught so often I decided it must be good, so thought I would try it myself.

"I began its use and found it just fitted my case. It neither griped nor nauseated me, was an easy laxative and not hard to take.

"I had had headaches a great deal, no doubt from torpid liver. The Black-Draught would cure them. The best way I find to take Black-Draught is to take one or two good sized doses until the liver begins to act, then taper the doses to just a pinch after meals.

"It will insure good digestion, do away with the gas or bad taste in the mouth, and is without doubt the best liver medicine in the market. I have found it so. I can recommend it to my friends, for I believe it will do them good."

Is Your Blood Starving For Want of Iron?

Without Plenty of Iron In Your Blood You Don't Get the Strength and Nourishment Out of the Food You Eat

When over-work, lack of sleep, improper food and impure air sap the iron from your blood and make you feel weak, nervous, irritable and out-of-sorts, it is important that you should at once put more iron into your blood. Without iron the blood loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing that you eat does you the proper amount of good because you don't get the full strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. Because of this steady starvation of the blood and nerves people often become weakened, tired-out, nervous and rundown and frequently develop all sorts of symptoms. But the moment organic iron—Nuxated Iron—is supplied a multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear in most cases, the flesh becomes firmer, the muscles get back their strength and the roses of health bloom in cheeks that were pale and sickly looking.

No matter what other so-called remedies you may have tried, if you are not strong, vigorous, hearty and well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. You can obtain Nuxated Iron from your druggist on the distinct understanding that if you are not fully satisfied your money will be refunded.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. G. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Meridian District, recently held a meeting here at the Port Gibson Female College and at the Methodist Church. As is always the case with us, daily work was done among the girls for their spiritual welfare in advance of the meeting. We do not solicit students of demoralizing character, nor do we encourage such to remain when they come. The consequence is that an exceptionally large per cent of our students are generally church members. Before the meeting began we had six girls who were not members of any church. During the meeting three of these united with the Methodist Church and two with the Baptists, leaving only one girl in the College who is not now a member of some church. That one is serious-minded.

At one of our recent chapel services I asked our girls to tell us how they are being led about their life work. Two said they had been convinced that they should become missionaries; one said she had felt that she should prepare to become a great Sunday school teacher and worker; three said they felt they should become teachers. These were not merely expressions of what one might choose as a profession, but of what these young people felt God was calling them to do.

Back to the meeting, I need not say that Brother Thompson's preaching was of superior order.

ROLFE HUNT.

FROM CALHOUN, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Please let me say a few things about our work to the readers of the Advocate.

This is my fourth year on this charge and in some respects it has been the best. We have had two good revivals. Brother J. C. Price, of Coushatta, helped us at Willhite. Price is fine help in a meeting. He preached with wonderful power at every service. He impressed his audience with the fact that the man behind the sermon believed and practiced what he preached. He captured the young people, and of course, that meant the parents. The church was greatly blessed and twenty-five were received by profession and baptism.

At Calhoun, Brother H. W. Cudd, of Queensboro, did the preaching. Brother R. T. Ware, of Mooringsport, led the singing. I have known for ten years that Cudd was a good revivalist. God is with him. He preaches well, reaches the people, and gets results. Brother Ware is—what every pastor ought to be—thoroughly consecrated, a good preacher, a good singer, a good mixer, and a good hustler. The church was greatly revived with 34 accessions, nearly all on profession and baptism.

By the able assistance of Sister C. D. Atkinson, of Monroe; Sister Holt, of Crowley, and Miss Hess, Calhoun, is blessed with a Woman's Missionary Society.

We have organized an Epworth League at Calhoun and at Willhite.

Brother C. D. Atkinson is a fine elder. He is like the river we read about in the Bible—he gets bigger and bigger.

J. L. LAY.

FROM SEVENTH AVENUE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Our work has been running well all of the year. The attendance at the services is good, we have increased our pastor's salary, the Epworth League was reorganized some months ago and is doing very active work, our Sunday school has been growing all of the year in attendance and in other ways and doing a fine work.

We closed a great revival not long since, the most of the preaching being done by Rev. J. M. Smith, of Union, Miss. Some of the tangible results were a number reclaimed for a better life and twenty-eight received into the church; fifty-eight have been received during the year.

I. J. SMITH.

THE CHURCH COMMITTEE OF WOMEN IN THE METHODIST CHURCH AT TUPELO.

A unique feature in the work of the Methodist Church at Tupelo, Miss., which is under the pastorate of Rev. J. A. Hall, is a church committee of women, 40 in number, which stands over against the boards of stewards and trustees, and does the work that is usually done in our city churches by a pastor's assistant. The executive committee in this body is composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Victoria Hoyle, Mrs. Jno. M. Allen, and Mrs. J. H. Green. This committee had charge of the prayer meeting in this church, Wednesday evening, October 13, and a feature of the program was the rendering of reports to the church at large of the work accomplished during the past three months. These reports were given by the ladies who are at the head of the work in the six districts into which the town is divided, namely: Mrs. W. W. Trice, Mrs. R. O. Perkins, Mrs. C. W. Hall, Mrs. F. L. Splght, Mrs. Lena Ford, and Mrs. L. Q. Stone. These reports, among other things, showed the following items: 825 visits to strangers, the shut-ins, the sick, the poor and needy; 382 trays sent to the sick; 10 bouquets sent to the sick; $17.50 given to charitable purposes; 2 bundles of clothing to a widow; a number of garments made for the poor; 50 new members enrolled in the church.

At the close of the program for the evening a get-together meeting was held in the Sunday school auditorium of the church, in honor of the new church members. The church had been tastefully decorated for the occasion; dainty refreshments were served during the social hour, and music was rendered on the pipe organ by the faithful and efficient organist, Mrs. C. W. Troy.

A large and enthusiastic crowd attended this meeting, and much credit is due the various committees, who worked untiringly for the success of the occasion. * * *

THE BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting is several weeks past history, but so great a meeting as was held there in 1920 should not pass into history without special mention in the Advocate. There were more people tenting than have done so for several years. The regular program was: Brother Alonzo Early delivering a strong Sunday school address at 9 a. m.; Brother R. Bozeman preaching the old-time gospel at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., and Bother A. S. Lutz doing likewise at 3 p. m. This program was usually carried out, excepting that Brother N. E. Joyner and Brother L. E. Crooks each preached one sermon and Mrs. T. D. Lipscomb conducted one service. Regular prayer meetings here held early each morning, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Brother Early conducted a model Sunday school each Sunday. Other visiting preachers were Brothers W. E. Akin, H. C. Murphy, B. H. Andrews, B. D. Watson, and this writer. Mrs. E. W. Chaney presided at the organ, and Mr. Paul Templeton, a well-trained singer, led the singing.

Almost 1200 tickets were sold and children under ten years passed in free. There were twelve accessions to our church. Seventy-five or more professed conversion, and more than one hundred embraced the sanctified life as their standard. Brother Bozeman preaches the Methodist doctrines as Mr. Wesley preached them, and therefore according to the Bible. God blesses his labors and honors his work.

T. D. LIPSCOMB.

Our Lord hath ascended into heaven, ever to make intercession for us; and He who hath been taken up shall come again. There is much comfort for us who are left to think that He who bore our sins and carried our sorrows is to be our judge, one who understands our weakness, one who loves us.—Selected.

419 Eggs From 20 Hens In 30 Days

Mr. Dougherty Got This Result In October. Plan is Easily Tried.

"I tried Don Sung and the results were far past any expectations. I got 419 eggs in 30 days from 20 hens while moulting. I think this is wonderful, as they hardly laid at all before."—Frank Dougherty, 5940 E. 11th St., Indianapolis.

Mr. Dougherty bought $1 worth of Don Sung in October and wrote this letter in November. Figure his profit on 85 dozen eggs from hens that formerly laid little or nothing.

This may sound too good to be true, but it costs nothing to find out. We'll make you the same offer we made him.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg-laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The third Sunday in this month was spent with Brother Winstead at Carthage. We had a fine day. Brother Winstead has projected work there that will tell in the years to come. The work seems to be on an up-grade all around. The parsonage and church have been repaired and painted. They are fixing three Sunday school rooms and are talking other improvements. Brother Winstead organized an Epworth League Sunday afternoon and I feel that it will have a large and useful field. The work is growing in every respect and I feel that Methodism is on the up-grade.

We are having some fine reports from our larger Sunday schools. The Galloway Memorial is having an attendance of over 500, as is Central, Meridian. Central, Meridian, is our largest school in point of attendance unless some school is having a large attendance and not reporting it.

Capitol Street Sunday School is maintaining an attendance of over 500 now, last Sunday being 506. They have their goal at 550 for the next Sunday. This is considerable increase in the last three years. I heard a steward say that in spite of the fact that they had expended $800 more than their budget called for, the finances were in sight with considerable more than enough to meet all claims.

Please send us in your good news.

Speaking of finance, now is the time to keep up the courage of the people. Do not let the devil get the victory of any sort of slump in anything. It is all God's and may we see that he gets the glory,

Pray for the work and the workers.

Announcement.

By the time you read this notice we will have moved our office from Room 3, Bule Building, to 214½ West Capitol Street, in the Berberovich Building. Please take due notice.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. Sardis, Miss.

Do you need a new church building, do you want to add to the old one? Organize every class in your school above the juniors with that for your aim and let them do the work. What if it does take two or three years to accomplish your aim? Better do the work in that time than never do it.

The organized Bible class comes as near meeting every need of the Christian as anything I know of. If you simply organize for the sake of organization, it will amount to nothing, but if you organize for a purpose, you will accomplish ten times as much with the organization as you would without it.

We ought to have five hundred such classes in this Conference. With that number doing definite and intelligent work we would make things happen in these parts. Talk, think, pray federation until we get a host of men and women together in a great federation of our organized classes. Begin now and keep working and when you have all the classes in your own school at work go out and help somebody else do the same thing.

Many of the teachers who attended the Training School at Grenada in August are giving the teachers who did not attend the benefit of what they learned: Miss Louise Mitchell, of Olive Branch, meets with the teachers before the Sunday school hour to give them junior methods. Spread the good work in every way possible.

We spent Saturday and Sunday in Benton County. Miss Mansker held services at Ashland all day Saturday while Brother Holder and I did some preaching and organizing at Liberty. I spent Sunday at Ashland and Miss Mansker spent the day at Liberty. Both these schools are using graded lessons, O. K. records, etc. No finer young people can be found anywhere than those that live in and near Ashland.

One year ago the Clarksdale school had an enrollment of 200. This year there is an enrollment of 538, managed by 60 officers and teachers. The Clarksdale Methodist school is stimulating every church and is wielding an uplifting influence on a large portion of this delta city. It gives one hope and joy to witness the growth in grace of a number of the teachers in this school. Another remarkable experience this school is having—they find it easier to secure teachers to help do the work as it ought to be done than in the past when they had no definite aim. Brother Broyles is doing a great piece of work in this school in making Christians of the highest type. We have a dozen schools in the Conference that are doing similar work in establishing the kingdom of God.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Just another week and all our Sunday schools will have their reports ready for Conference.

Make sure that you report all that goes into a good report. Report the Sunday school that met all through the year with the exception of a few weeks. Put in the Cradle Roll and Home Department enrollment; make sure you have Sunday School Day offering and see me if you have any question in your mind about it.

If the Conference Sunday School Board has helped you any this year, it was because we tried to do so. Our plan is to help you more and more every year.

Field Secretary.

FROM ARTESIA, MISS.—A STATION

Dear Brother: Here are a few lines to let you know how we are getting along on the Artesia charge. Artesia is a station charge, although the compiler of the Annual Conference Minutes persists in listing this charge as a "circuit." When he made the slip two years ago, we thought it was possibly an oversight, but when he came right back last year and made the same entry in the Minutes we thought ??, !!, (), @. In no mistaken language the compiler of the Conference Minutes will be told at the approching Annual Conference that Artesia is a station charge, with the word "station" violently stressed. And we are doing a work here commendable of any "First Church" in Methodism.

We have a very small membership here—eighty-five all told—but for all purposes this charge will raise this year no less than four thousand dollars. (Now, now, don't get restless over there, brother). With the assistance of Brother Gladney we have just reorganized our Sunday school, and filled it brimming full with enthusiasm and definite ideals. There are two adult classes which we think can't be beat in the Conference. And our Sunday school is more than a "big noise;" it is functioning properly and ideally. Big things are planned for the charge next year: an indebtedness on the parsonage is to be liquidated and Sunday school rooms are to be built. Also, we expect to install a new piano.

In its characteristic way this church will send up to Conference "everything in full." We have a Centenary assessment of $7,500, and in collection we stand in the rank of "honorable mention." There are few boards of stewards just like the one we have. The board here takes care of all finances whatsoever, so that the pastor has not had to mention money this year. Blessed is the pastor who does not have to use the "Big Stick" method to raise money!

It is a happy preacher who goes up to Conference this year from the Artesia charge. Everything will be in hand, which, with his Conference course finished for the year, will make him feel like telling them that Artesia is a "shore nuff" station, with much emphasis on "station."

Very truly yours,
S. CURTIS YATES.

THE LONG TO-MORROW.

Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Gal. 6:7.

The life above, when this is past,

Sow peace, and reap its harvest bright;
Sow sunbeams on the rock and moor,
And find a harvest-home of light.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. DON'T DISREGARD A COLD.

The influenza and pneumonia that swept the country a year ago were proceeded by an epidemic of colds. Foley's Honey and Tar will check a cold if taken in time, and will also stop a cough of long standing. It promptly gives relief, soothes and heals. Mrs. Geneva Robinson, 88 N. Swan St., Albany, N. Y., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best cough medicine I ever used. Two bottles broke a most stubborn lingering cough." It loosens phlegm and mucus, clears air passages, eases hoarseness, stops tickling.—Adv.

UNIMPEACHABLE—If you were to see the unequalled volume of unimpeachable testimony in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, you would upbraid yourself for so long delaying to take this effective medicine for that blood, disease from which you are suffering.—Adv.

Ex-Soldier Has a Good Stomach.

"If a man spends six years in the army he surely would have to have a good stomach. I have a good one now and Foley Cathartic Tablets made it that way. If any one does not believe this, let him write to Arthur L. Lyons, 454 Cincinnati St., Dayton, Ohio." That is a sample of the hundreds of letters received by Foley & Co. You can relieve biliousness, bloating, constipation or other condition arising from indigestion with Foley Cathartic Tablets.—Adv.

WHEN A WOMAN IS NERVOUS—WORRIED

Most women neglect their health, and for this they pay the penalty. Any woman will find that neglect does not pay. A little more attention to health would brighten up her life. If she asks her neighbors she finds that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription benefits a woman's whole system. It not only acts upon the troubles and weaknesses peculiar to women, but is an all-round tonic that braces the entire body, overcoming nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, dizziness and a run-down condition.

SELMA, ALA.—"For about six months I have been going down in health. I would have pains thru the back of my neck and shoulders, and suffered with backache all the time, also pains in my side. My appetite left me, I became very weak and extremely nervous. I tried different medicines but did not get better. Then my mother advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did. I am now on my third bottle and the results have been very satisfactory. I am stronger, my appetite has returned, and I am feeling so much better in every way. Other women who suffer will not regret having given it a trial."—MRS. N. W. GRAHAM, 2301 E. Alabama Ave.

FROM COLUMBIA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I have always had an aversion for gas or gassing; but it seems that time has brought about a change, for I found upon my return from my last appointment, that during the trip I had used fourteen gallons of gasoline. While it may seem a little gassy, I thought I would give the doings of one day, the 10th instant. I traveled three miles in automobiles, two on horseback, walked two, and crossed a river twice, using two cars, two horses, two saddles, and two boats; I visited seven homes, eating in three of them; I attended two Sunday schools and a prayer meeting, preached three times, conducted one baptismal, and two membership services, and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

I have baptized this year twenty-seven, and received fifty-one members.

REVIVALS AT GOODMAN AND PICKENS.

We have just closed two great meetings at Goodman and Pickens with Brother W. M. McIntosh and his singer, Brother R. L. Cooper. In Goodman, we had some 25 or 30 converts, 14 joining the Methodist Church and several joining the other churches. In Pickens, some 15 or 20 conversions, 17 joining the Methodist Church, several joining the other churches. There was a great spiritual awakening. All the people felt the uplift. Scores of people pledged themselves to tithe and to family prayer. The good effect abides.

I have had Brother McIntosh with me in meetings several times, the first about 25 years ago. He has "grown in grace and in knowledge," all these years. He is a great preacher, a consecrated Christian, and skilled in revival work. Brother Cooper, his singer, is a true, consecrated Christian who enjoys serving God in song, he is a master in his science. He has a voice clear and strong, tender and mellow, that can play on every key of the human heart. Any church is fortunate to secure these two men of God to help in revival work.

We were fortunate, also, in having Sister McIntosh with us most of the time. She is splendid help in the general services, and in special services with the women and children—her very presence is an inspiration.

These faithful servants of God will long be remembered in the towns of Goodman and Pickens.

Yours in word and work for souls,

J. H. SMITH, Pastor.

FROM INDIAN BAYOU, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I would like to say a few words from this charge. We have almost completed our parsonage, with the exception of some inside work, which will have attention soon. One new church and a parsonage this year, together with about 25 accessions to the work, is the main item in our report this year. The financial condition is most deplorable. All of our money comes through the rice industry, and the rice proposition is a complete failure this year as to prices.

However, I pray that things will be better than we contemplate. God bless you.

Fraternally,

C. B. POWELL.

FROM TEXAS AVENUE, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: On last Wednesday evening we closed one of the most successful meetings at Texas Avenue I have ever seen in any of my pastoral charges.

The meeting was in progress for seventeen days, with Rev. Leon I McCain doing the preaching. Rev. H. Wade Cudd led the singing, and Brother Paul Germany, of the Nazarene Church, was at the piano.

We had some forty people saved or reclaimed and some Christians were filled with the Holy Ghost. There were thirty-four accessions to the church, about half of them coming by church certificate. And there will be more to follow.

We are going to report everything paid in full at Conference, unless it is our Centenary subscriptions; and we are working on that.

Oh, I was about to close without telling you that those who were saved or reclaimed came to the altar and wept over sins committed and prayed through to victory!

Brother Carley, we need a revival of the mourner's bench in the Methodist Church. Let's have it—what do you say?

I feel sure we are going to get at least two preachers as a result of the meeting; and we have in our church four girls who, I think, are called to the mission work.

Pray for us.

Yours in Christian love.

F. R. POWER, Pastor.

A LOOK AT GOD.

Nothing doth so much establish the mind amidst the roilings and turbulency of present things, as both a look above them, and a look beyond them; above them to the good and steady Hand by which they are ruled, and beyond them to the sweet and beautiful end to which, by that Hand, they shall be brought. Study pure and holy walking, if you would have your confidence firm, and have boldness and joy in God. You will find that a little sin will shave your trust and disturb your peace more than the greatest suffering: yea, in those sufferings, your assurance and joy in God will grow and abound most if sin be kept out. So much sin as gets in, so much peace will go out.—R. Leighton.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

News From Natchitoches Auxiliary.

The year 1920 has been designated as a year for stressing Bible study in the auxiliaries of this Conference; therefore it may be of interest to others to know how Natchitoches auxiliary has attempted to emphasize the study of God's Word.

Apart from the Bible lessons given at each meeting, one of the four monthly meetings has been set apart entirely for Bible instruction. Because this meeting only comes once each month there is lengthy preparation made throughout the four weeks previous, by the help of outlines and plans, for a splendid Bible recitation. The auxiliary has been very fortunate in securing as their teacher Mrs. Z. T. Galllon, Jr., who is willing to spend hours daily in the study and planning of the lesson which she presents in a most interesting and compelling way. Both teacher and students use Scofield's Reference Bibles, thereby getting the excellent help that is given in this especial edition—Genesis and Exodus, which heretofore have seemed tedious and tiresome to some, have through these studies, become wonderful heart-messages from the Heavenly Father.

Many of the members consider this Bible lesson hour the most helpful of all four meetings of the auxiliary.

An Appeal For Bible Study.

Dear Presidents of our 125 Auxiliaries:

For some time there has been a message in my heart for you. And as I have held it back, it has grown in intensity of desire for realization! It is this: Why can not every one of the auxiliaries in this State devote one of its monthly meetings entirely to the promulgation of Bible study? Perhaps there are some societies having only one or two monthly meetings which are already taken up with other work—then put in this special extra meeting, just exclusively for God's Word and have the joy that will surely come from so honoring the Book of Books!

In the brilliant Rainbow campaign which is sweeping the State this October, I am just so glad to find among the Rainbow leaflets the yellow and orange sheats telling us so convincingly about the "How and Why of Bible Study." Now let me tell you why I'm glad they are there. If you will pardon a little personal confession, there was a time when my own heart was cold toward foreign missions and it was reading the Bible that brought light to me, and desire and enthusiasm for the salvation of the whole wide world. Why I found that Jesus was a missionary! And St. Paul and all the others. "Come over into Macedonia and help us" and the wonderful "Go ye into all the world" were too insistent and compelling for any heart loving Jesus to ponder over and then "refuse." So to me, the call to Bible study was the loudest note struck in the present drive for converting hearts to an appreciation and desire for the work.

Then—isn't it true that our missionary societies are trying to meet the great needs of life? Is there a more crying need to-day than the need of the "Brand of Life?" Now let us be honest, isn't the ignorance of God's Word, even among church members, just something appalling? Some have said, "This especial work is for the Sunday school." And so it is, but not altogether. When at war with Germany, in face of the pressing need, did our citizens sit back and say, "Let the regular army do all the fighting, it is their special work?" Rather the passwords were, "Let everybody help!" Uncle Sam never needed soldiers then, any worse than God needs organizations and individuals now, to carry the life-saving messages of His Book to the minds and heart of men.

Now the little Rainbow leaflet says, "Study" God's Word. And I'm just wondering if any of our auxiliaries reporting "Organized Bible classes" are doing like the Natchitoches society has done all these years up to a few short months ago: that is, we tried by superficial methods to ease our conscience when we met the glaring headlines of this question on the report blanks, "Have you an organized Bible Class?" It worried us every now and then—we wanted to say "yes" to our report interrogations. We did try most strenuously to find some book from which to snatch a ten-minutes Bible talk to be given at each meeting and call that "Bible study." Our pastor, who is not afraid to meet issues, even with women, challenged us on that score, charging that we were not doing real Bible study. We contended we were, but he withstood our arguments, and deep down in our hearts we felt he was right.

Friends, why should we quibble about the "Wonderful Words of Life?" Why indeed should we try ever to do as little as possible in learning more of God's Word and helping others to do so? Why not let's give God's blessed Word the big place it should have in all our auxiliaries? Why relegate the "Words of Eternal Life" to a little ten-minutes corner in some of our other meetings? If it's a big throbbing need, let's meet that need, and meet it now. Set each auxiliary have at least one monthly meeting devoted entirely to real Bible instruction. You will find that women will be reached who never go to Sunday school, and many hearts will be drawn into a deeper love and understanding of Christianity. I make the charge again: we do not know God's Word! Hundreds and thousands of us, even professing Christians, are in appalling ignorance of the Bible. If any doubt this, get your minister to conduct an impromptu examination of the church membership.

I appeal to each president of each auxiliary to make a great effort to accomplish this for the Master before 1920 ends. It will be one of the finest things you have ever done for Him during this or any other year. Make some plan by which you shall have real Bible study in your auxiliary, by which you shall lead hearts and minds into a deeper knowledge of "The Truth and the Way."

"Sing them over again to me,
Wonderful Words of Life,
Let me more of their beauty see,
Wonderful Words of Life,
Words of life and beauty,
Teach me faith and duty;
Beautiful words, wonderful words,
Wonderful Words of Life."

Yours prayerfully,
MRS. V. G. HYAMS,
Publicity Superintendent.

OPPORTUNITY.

Ask Him to increase your powers of sympathy: to give you more quickness and depth of sympathy, in little things as well as great. Opportunities of doing a kindness are often lost from mere want of thought. Half a dozen lines of kindness may bring sunshine into the whole day of some sick person. Think of the pleasure you might give to some one who is much shut up, and who has fewer pleasures than you have. by sharing with her some little comfort or enjoyment that you have learned to look upon as a necessary of life—the pleasant drive, the new book, flowers from the country, etc. Try to put yourself in another's place. Ask "What should I like myself, if I were hard-worked, or sick, or lonely?" Cultivate the habit of sympathy.—Wilkinson.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE CONFERENCE.

Here's to the preachers of the Conference,
So loyal and so true;
May they be paid their dollars and cents,
And whatever else is due.

They're all so tired of fried chicken and pie,
What a shame it won't last forever!
But summer is over and alas—a sigh!
They're working harder than ever.

"Those Conference collections have got to be paid
Before the end of the year;
Just give a little that you have made
And leave the old road clear."

This call is heard from them everywhere;
May we not fail short with our part,
But make them feel good afar and near,
By giving them all a new start.

Preachers! we're expecting some jolly times,
At the Conference this year,
So fill your grips with jokes and smiles,
And we'll give you a hearty cheer.

A WHITWORTH STUDENT.

SHORT-TIME CHRISTIANS.

Dear Mr. Editor: Did you ever hear about a half-day or one-hour Christians? Well, Brother Saunders, of Natchez, has a great many to contend with. His morning audiences outnumber more than three to one his Sunday evening crowd. Why is this? Do they get enough religion to last the balance of the week? Or is Brother Saunders such a good and impressive preacher that they do not need any more spiritual uplift? Or is the world going backward along religious lines? Now Brother Saunders does not give them dry, long-winded theology or meaningless platitudes. He is one of the very best preachers I ever heard. All his sermons are different and give you something to think about, if you listen and follow him. I am not a member of his church, though I attend it regularly both morning and evening. We see some of them at the morning service, a few at evening, and a very few at prayer meeting.

The church has no trouble in its finances, and all will almost swear allegiance to Brother Saunders; then why do they not come to church? I have asked many, but have received no satisfactory answer. How can a man be a Christian all the week when he comes in contact with the devil's flesh-nots and the sin-holes with which a city, even the size of Natchez, abounds, with only one hour's religion? Is it possible? I do not think so. When you ask them to come out to prayer meeting or church, they say, "Oh, well, I cannot come to the church so many times—it gets tiresome." One told me he went to Sunday school and church in the morning and that was enough for one week. Wonder how that statement would get by St. Peter?

Has the war, or have the times, played havoc with our religion, or are we getting beyond the old-fashioned, hell-fire-and-brimstone preaching that used to make the hair stand on end when we were boys? The how and why of this indifference? I give it up, and leave it to some one who can fathom the great lack of fealty to the religion of our fathers.

Maybe, sometime, we will come back to the better way of living and a higher estimation of the good of the church and the honest and conscientious preacher who dares to speak out the truth. May God bring this about, is the prayer of all honest and upright men who try to live as God intended them to.

Very truly,
E. B. QUISENBERRY.

Natchez, Miss.

LOUISIANA STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE CABINET MEETING.

The Louisiana State Epworth League Cabinet met for its annual fall meeting in New Orleans, October 1st and 2d, 1920, at the First Methodist Church. Twenty members of the Cabinet were present, besides several visitors from out of the city.

The work of the various League departments was discussed, and plans were laid for the following year. The Louisiana State Epworthians' Loyalty Legion Commander, Rev. Leland Clegg, reported $777 collected on Conference Collections. The Superintendent of the Fourth Department, Miss Julia Reid, reported that $2000 had been pledged on the League "Africa Special." The other departments have outlined their programs for 1921, and are prepared to present their work to the local chapters of the State.

The Third Annual Epworth League Assembly will be held at Mansfield, La., from June 7th to the 14th, inclusive, 1921. A capacity attendance is expected, as all local chapters of the League are requsted to send delegates, and others interested in the work of the League are invited to attend. There will be a faculty of at least fifteen men and women who are vitally interested in the formation of Christian life and character. If you are interested in the Mansfield Assembly, come; if you cannot come, help send some one.

STANDARD AND OLLA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Kindly allow me space to report some of the things that have been accomplished on the Standard and Olla charge during the present year. Brother May placed me in charge in December. There had been no preacher in charge of our church at Standard for nine months, and Olla had been without regular preaching in our church for several years. But I found the leading Methodist people ready to co-operate with the pastor in church work from the first service I held.

There has been advance all through the year at both places. We held a fine meeting in the spring at Standard, resulting in 22 additions to our church on profession of faith, and the organization of an Epworth League of 55 members, and they are developing rapidly in church work.

At Olla, we have recently held a four days' meeting, reorganizing the membership and organizing an Epworth League of 36 members. We have also repaired the church at Olla at a cost of $325, installing electric lights, putting brick pillars under the church, and shingles are on hand to put a new roof on the church-house.

Much is due to the fine class of leaders we have at both places. At Standard, we have Mr. W. G. Banks, bookkeeper and cashier, of the mill-plant here, and his wife, both fine young people, enthusiastic Sunday school and League workers. They have the esteem and confidence of old and young people at Olla. We have Mrs. R. E. Blake and Miss Barber, both capable and efficient League workers, who are leading the young people in Sunday school and League work. And I must not forget Mrs. A. J. Blake and husband, who during the time Standard has had no preacher, have conducted Sunday work in the Methodist Church, and in this way made it possible to revive the church work.

Brother May was with us at Standard last Sunday and preached an inspiring sermon. In the afternoon he held our fourth quarterly conference, at which time the officials made a forward move and pledged $1500 for salary of the pastor next year.

Our finances are much in advance of former years. The preacher who may be read out for Standard for the coming year may feel that he has much to encourage him. To God be all the praise for these blessings.

IS THE CENTENARY TOO LATE?

By Rev. S. A. Neblett.

I have before me four letters which were brought to me to-day by a lady. One was from the Secretary of Public Instruction and Fine Arts in the Cabinet of President Menocal; another was from the Sub-Secretary of the same Department; the third was written by the General Auditor of the Republic of Cuba; and the fourth by the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the Province of Habana. Why these letters from high officials? Simply requesting my influence with the principals of our girls' schools to secure the admission of the daughter of the bearer as a pay boarding pupil in any one of the schools. Here is what the Secretary of Public Instruction and Fine Arts says: "I would appreciate it very greatly if, as a special favor, you would admit to one of your schools the daughter of Senora Electa Fe de la Pena, the bearer of this letter, a person I esteem and distinguish, and whom I am anxious to serve." Six weeks before the day for the fall opening of our schools, every bed in the boarding department is taken, and applications for admission by people willing to pay any price are still coming in. Sometime ago this lady wrote Miss Toland at Matanzas, but was informed that there was no room. The new school here in the suburbs of Habana had to give the same answer. Senora Electra Fe de la Pena taught English in the government Normal at Matanzas and is now teaching in a school in Habana. Besides she is engaged during spare hours in charitable and humane work. In substance, she said, "I must have my daughter in one of your schools. I am willing to pay extra over and above the regular prices, and they can put her on a cot in the hall, if necessary. Your girls not only get instruction, but are developed in character. I know, because I have come in contact with them in the Normal School. I am giving my life for Cuba, and you must get a place for my daughter in one of your schools."

During the four years prior to the Centenary I constantly pleaded for the enlargement of our schools so that we could take care of an increasing number of boarding pupils, but the missionary revenues of the Board and Woman's Council were so small that little could be done. To-day we are face to face with a great opportunity, people begging us to let them pay us all kinds of prices to educate their boys and girls, getting Cabinet officers to bring pressure to bear on us to admit them. Our answer is: NO ROOM.

The Centenary comes too late to enable us to do much more than hold our own. With present building conditions we should have during the next twelve months, in addition to our appropriations for school and college buildings and equipment, at least ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, over and above and outside of the Centenary, in order to enable us to do what we had in mind three years ago when the Centenary budget was prepared. Must the church always be behind and unprepared when her opportunities come?

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE UNLOADED GUN.

According to newspaper reports, there seems to have been more than the usual number of deplorable tragedies recently on account of "unloaded" guns. It is a strange thing that supposedly sensible people will be criminally careless with a dangerous weapon and then make the excuse that they "didn't know it was loaded." Some people are equally careless in saying or doing things that hurt, not the body but the spirit of those with whom they are associated; and their excuse is that they "didn't intend to do it." Oh carelessness, how many crimes are committed in thy name!

TOO MUCH SMOKE.

A dispatch from Paris states that the Treasury Departments of four nations are greatly disturbed over the question as to who is to pay a cigar bill of 80,000 francs piled up by the premiers of the Allied Powers at a conference at the Spa. The bill was presented to the Belgian Government, which refused to pay it; it was then presented in turn to Great Britain, France, and Italy, all of whom refused to pay it. We can sympathize with the tobacconist, who wants his money, but we are glad that tobacco is not yet looked upon by these governments as a necessity for its representatives. There is too much smoking in the world anyway.

FINISH THE JOB.

We saw a picture the other day of a magnificent building begun ten years ago which is still unfinished. Part of it is completed and in use, but the great central portion has never received the finishing touches. This building is a figure of many men's plans and of not a few lives. The beginning was fair enough, and the future was radiant with promise. But for some reason or other, the hope was never fulfilled, the plan was never carried out, the life never attained its goal. It may be that misfortune intervened to make impossible the achievement of all that had been intended; but in many cases the failure is due to intermittent activity or lapsed interest. It is still a question for debate as to whether "It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all;" and it is possible to maintain vigorously the thesis that it is better to begin a great undertaking, though it is never finished, than to leave it unattempted. But we can all agree that there is an element of pathos in the incomplete structure, the unfinished job. Sometimes we fail to do what we started out to do because it is easier to stop than it is to go on.

GROWTH IN POPULATION—BUT HOW ABOUT GRACE?

The Census Bureau has announced that the recent enumeration shows that the United States has a population of 105,683,108—an increase of 13,710,842 since 1910. While the increase in the preceding decade was larger, both in percentage and in absolute numbers, the figures show that our population is steadily—and apparently irresistibly—growing. The increase in twenty years has amounted, in round numbers, to 30,000,000 people. Interesting as this is, and as important in determining our national policy in many directions, it does not approach in significance the question of the moral character of this vast number of men and women who are shaping the destiny of the nation. We have not the figures at hand to make a study of religious growth in relation to the increase of population, but there are not lacking indications that the church has not kept pace with the development of the country in many phases of its life. A growth in population without a corresponding growth in grace brings us face to face with an ominous situation. If the principles of the Christian religion are to dominate this land, it is high time for the church to put into effective operation a program that will arrest the attention and enlist the support of the great masses of people who are not identified with it either in fact or in theory. It would be the supreme tragedy of history if this nation, after having been largely instrumental in evangelizing the heathen races of earth, should itself become a castaway.

MAKING IT WORTH WHILE.

We have considerable respect for the man who is not satisfied to remain forever upon the "dead level of mediocrity," or in the deeply-worn ruts that thousands of feet have trod, even though departure from the ordinary may involve the throwing up of hands in amazement and the raising of startled voices at the temerity of one who dares to do the unusual. According to a news item in a local newspaper a few days ago, two men stole a street car from one of the largest barns in the city. They might have taken a drayman's cart, or a banker's automobile—but that would have been a commonplace affair; a street car is unusual spoil. We are not commending wrong-doing, of course, but we do admire the daring of these unconventional thieves. More originality in legitimate endeavor would probably make our activities more worth while.

MIND AND BODY.

A recent story is to the effect that a London charwoman—an ordinary household servant—reads a book a day and collaborates with her employer, who is a book reviewer. In speaking of her services, this gentleman says: "It is my lot to review a certain number of books. I find that I cannot do better than to hand them to her. Her judgment is always sound and is swayed by no weight of name or popularity." The point to which we wish to call attention is the fact that this woman engaged in the most menial tasks physically, lives in an altogether different world intellectually. In spite of limitations and hindrances that would make the ordinary person hopeless of high achievement, she has made for herself a recognized place among those who minister to the esthetic needs of humanity. Her humble position has not kept her from attaining high honor in the field of literary activity. It is simply another illustration of the old truth that outward circumstances are purely incidental in the real development of the life. The plain plowman may become a profound philosopher—if he will.

A JAIL DELIVERY.

We can very well imagine that the prisoner is a happy man whose strong friends on the outside tear away the bars of the windows or break down the doors of the jail and open the way for him to freedom. It may be that he has longed for liberty, and dreamed of the day when he would be delivered from his bondage—but with little hope of realizing his dream. His friends have done for him what he could not do for himself. But how about the man who is his own jailer—who has entered the cell of his own free will, and remains there by his own choice? He has surrendered to evil desires and is chained by bad habits. His friends cannot save him, because there are no bars that they can break down—his barriers are invisible ones, erected with his own consent, subject to his own will. And yet he remains a prisoner. Why? Because it is easier for him to wear the chains of a pitiful bondage than it is for him boldly and firmly to declare his own emancipation. When the imperial will has to yield to the dictates of a bad habit, man has surrendered that which of all his possessions is most precious—the right to do as he pleases—and he is as truly a prisoner as the criminal surrounded by stone walls and guards. He can be free—but he must break jail himself.

CREDO.

Not what, but whom I do believe,
That in my darkest hour of need,
Hath comfort that no mortal creed
To moral man may give—
Not what, but whom!
For Christ is more than all the creeds,
And His full life of gentle deeds
Shall all the creeds outlive.
Not what I do believe, but whom!
Who walks beside me in the gloom?
Who shares the burden wearisome?
Who all the dim way doth illume,
And bids us look beyond the tomb,
The larger life to live?—
Not what I do believe,
But whom!
Not what,
But whom!

CHARACTER IN THE KINGDOM.

By William Black.

It seems probable that the discourse recorded in Matthew and commonly called the Sermon on the Mount, was delivered toward the middle of Jesus' ministry. From what He says in it we might judge that the message of the Kingdom had been widely delivered at the time it was spoken, that some had believed in it and others had rejected it, and that considerable persecution had arisen. This situation would involve that the sermon had not been preached until well on in Jesus' ministry. It is doubtful, however, if the sermon as Matthew gives it was all delivered at the one time. He probably gathered together into one the substance of several addresses, though it is not at all necessary to stress this point.

Our study of this sermon in the series of lessons of which it forms a part concerns itself in a general way with three themes. First, the character and quality of those who are members in Christ's great Kingdom; second, the privileges and advantages that come to them because of that relationship; third, the duties and obligations that, as a result, are theirs.

Under the first heading the very first thing that strikes us is that the virtues and qualities that are supposed to mark those who are worthy of membership in Christ's Kingdom, do not make, at first blush, a very attractive list. But it is only at first blush and before we have taken the trouble to understand what these virtues really are that we get that impression. When once we have taken that trouble and really do understand we admit the virtue and the utter attractiveness of it. For instance, meekness, in our first surface thought, hardly looks like a virtue at all, and certainly isn't very attractive. But that is because we have the careless habit of thinking of it as weakness and the lack of manly spirit and self-assertion. When we think of it as it really is, as self-controlled gentleness and strength, we have an altogether different feeling about it. In the same way poverty of spirit is not abjectness or a want of self-respect, but the opposite of that mean and shallow vice of self-conceit. Yes, these are real virtues that mark the character and lives of the men and women who are members in this great Kingdom, and, even in spite of ourselves, we would be compelled to take off our hats in their presence.

Under the second heading, we think of the privileges and advantages that come to those who are qualified for membership in the Kingdom. Our passage stresses the idea that there are tremendous, wonderful privileges and advantages. And we need to stress that idea. We forget the great truth that the Christian religion is a glorious opportunity, and the Christian life crowded with blessings. The word "blessed" as here used is a word pregnant with meaning, a big word that has crowded into it all that is best and most worth while from the highest human point of view.

We really ought to think of the Christian life more than we do, in terms of privilege. We emphasize duty and obligation and denial so much that we give the impression that these are all that our faith has for us. It has these, it is true, and must always have them, but it has the other as well. We ought to try to write this big word "Blessed" that the Master uses just as big as we can, and to fill it with all the meaning that He tried to put into it.

Of course our lesson keeps us to this idea that the blessedness of Christian living is not so much a gift as a result. It all grows out of character, depends upon what we are, has its root in our own life. In a way, therefore, God does not give us blessedness; we are not His favored ones; we are living according to the great laws and principles of His universe, and the fruit of that living is ours.

We are hardly to think of the characteristics as here enumerated as covering the whole range of Christian life. There are many other blesseds that Jesus might have mentioned, and many other qualities and graces that He might have glorified, even though these do seem to be very fundamental. Indeed, we might ourselves amplify the Master's list and say that every grace and every virtue has its own peculiar blessedness.

Of course, Jesus does not close His sermon without reminding His hearers that Christian living has its obligations as well as its opportunities. And He does not minify or make too easy any one of those obligations. He sets them forth big, unyielding, insistent, and does not have any way around our duty of taking up and carrying them. And do you know, that was one reason why He was so attractve as a Teacher and great religious Leader. He made His demands so tremendous that He made His programme for life attractive for every real man and woman. And the church of to-day has no other way of getting on but His way.—The Christian Guardian.

WORLD-WIDE METHODISM IN 1910-19.

By H. K. Carroll, LL.D.

Several inquiries have come to me recently, one from another country than our own, as to the numerical strength of Methodism in all countries, and it may be useful, as well as interesting, to give the table I have prepared publicity. The time is appropriate, for we have been lamenting for the past two years the decreases reported by our own and other evangelical denominations. Last year where there was any increase at all in any evangelical church, it was small.

It is a well-known fact that denominations do not make steady advances in membership. Their net gains vary from year to year, now large, now small, and the variations are often unexplainable. But in the last nine years, since the Fourth Ecumenical Conference brought out an official statistical statement of the Methodist bodies of the world, we have had the greatest and most destructive war in the history of the world, and war, quite naturally, always has an injurious effect upon the churches. Men may and do go into war as Christian soldiers, and come out of it Christian; but war is wicked and contrary to the spirit of Christ, and turns men into ravening beasts, set on the destruction of the enemy, whether they be Christian or heathen. It is the song of hate they sing and not the song of love.

Four years we had of this suspension of humanity and brotherhood, while millions of men were killed and millions more were maimed and crippled. Then God brought us peace, and "except the Lord had shortened these days," destruction had come upon mankind. All the arts and activities of peace suffered, and the church of Christ suffered with them. Ministers and members went to the battlefield, and many churches were without leaders. Our own church, due largely to the war condition, reported in 1918 and 1919 net losses of over 19,000 and nearly 70,000 members respectively within the bounds of the United States.

But we were not in the war as long by two years as the Canadians, the British and the Australasians. They bore the brunt of war when the Germanic forces were at their best, and poured out their blood like water. Great numbers of Methodist ministers and members went to the field of conflict and the losses were fearful.

We might reasonably, therefore, expect decreases in all these churches during the decade ending with the present year. But the accompanying tables show that only a few of the smaller Methodist bodies of England and her colonies had less members at the end of 1919 than at the end of 1910. Only the Primitives of England suffered a loss in the period of 5,600, the Wesleyan Church reporting a gain, notwithstanding its annual losses in England.

It is encouraging to note that the total net gain for the Methodism of the world in the nine years is 1,063,491, which is only 46,000 less than the net gain for the previous ten years, 1,109,357. The prospect is that the increase for the full decade, including the present year, will surpass that of 1900-1910 by from two hundred to three hundred thousand. This will be cheering news for the Fifth Ecumenical Methodist Conference when it assembles in London in September, 1921.

Some of the decreases in the United States are more apparent than real. The two African Episcopal bodies have been readjusting their statistics, and the Methodist Protestant Church has not given any definite figures for several years. Doubtless President Lewis will look after that matter. Three bodies with a total membership of only 1,837 have disappeared, and two small colored branches have suffered considerable reduction. The net gain of the bodies of the United States is not a large percentage, but it is a large aggregate, nearly 900,000. The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, contributed an increase of 974,851—685,806 by the former, and 289,045 by the latter; but the decreases of two of the colored bodies amounted to nearly 143,000. Less than two per cent a year increase does not indicate a very vigorous growth. The two larger Methodist bodies show over eighteen per cent gain in the past nine years. It is not nearly as large as it ought to be, even with the adverse conditions of the war, but the present year promises to bring up the average for the decade very considerably.

The Methodist population of the world, on the accepted basis of four adherents to each member in the Eastern Section, and of two and one-half in the United States and Canada, has reached highly satisfactory figures, though it is only an estimate difficult to verify, at least so far as the United States is concerned. It is probably the largest population of any Protestant communion except the Lutheran.

IS THE TIDE COMING IN?

By C. H. McCrea

Is there a tide in the affairs of the church, as well as the affairs of men, which taken at the flood leads on to fortune? Are there ebbs and flows in religious interest and enthusiasm? Are there periods in which the word of the Lord has free course and is glorified, and again barren wastes when men say, "All things continue as they were from the creation"? Emerson makes this answer: "Heats and genial periods arrive in history, or shall we say, plenitudes of the Divine Presence, by which high tides are caused in the human spirit, and great talents and virtues appear, as in the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and again in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, when the nation was full of genius and piety." Did it occur to the sage of Concord that it was the resurgence of evangelical faith in an incarnated, crucified, and risen Christ that made these tides—"too full for sound or foam?"—Exchange.

THOMAS BASCOM HOLLOMAN

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D.

"The voice at midnight came;
He started up to hear;
A mortal arrow pierced his frame:
He fell; but felt no fear."

When the message at midnight flashed across the wire from Yazoo City that Brother Holloman had just passed away, the listener heard with a startled cry of pain and sorrow; but the words of James Montgomery's immortal hymn came with a sense of comfort to his heart; for he knew that it was well with the servant of God.

Thomas Bascom Holloman was born in Yazoo County, Mississippi, January 18, 1851, the son of T. B. Holloman and Rebecca (Cook) Holloman. His early life was spent in his father's home near Phoenix, and here he received his earlier education in the local schools and from tutors living in the home.

That his childhood and youth were happy no one who knew him in his later life can doubt. His mind was alert and his heart friendly. The charm of the great out-of-doors, the lure of the farm and its varied activities, the droll sayings and the homely wisdom of the negroes in the quarters caught his eye and won his heart and explained the knowledge of the stock and crops, his love of nature and the friendly interest that in later years attracted all who knew him.

Of his early religious experience, we know nothing. He probably joined the church in his childhood and was converted in his youth, for, as a young man, he was a devoted Christian, and throughout his long and useful life he adorned the gospel that he preached.

In 1869 he entered Emory and Henry College, Va., and was graduated from that institution in the summer of 1873. In December, 1873, he was received on trial in the Mississippi Conference and entered upon that genial and fruitful service that lengthened out with unvarying popularity and success to nearly fifty years. The passing years found him serving his people in every grade of appointment open to a member of the Conference: first as junior preacher, then as preacher in charge upon the humbler circuits, then pastor in those delightful charges furnished by the smaller towns, then in the best stations in the Conference, then as presiding elder of the strongest district in the State; ever loving his people and loved by them, ever intent upon doing them good, ever attentive to the young, ever maintaining before men his manly integrity, and ever walking as becometh a Christian gentleman.

Two years he served in the Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, the cradle of Methodism and Protestantism in the Southwest. Two years were given to the Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, where he enterprised the building of the new church and began the construction of the beautiful edifice that is the pride of that loyal people. Three years were spent in Crystal Springs; four years in Port Gibson; four in Yazoo City; four in Canton. Eight years were the limit of his service to the Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, where he paid the debt left by his predecessor upon the handsome new church, and where he used to say with worthy pride he had more friends than anywhere else in the world. Four years were given to the presiding eldership of the Jackson District. Three years were devoted to the cause of education as the president of our East Mississippi Female College at Meridian.

In 1874 he was happily married to Miss Mollie Holliday, of Canton, Miss. Mrs. Holloman died in 1883 in the parsonage in Yazoo City, leaving seven little children. In 1885 Brother Holloman was married to Miss Matilda Jones, the daughter of the Rev. John G. Jones, the historian of Methodism in Mississippi and the Southwest. This noble woman, who survives her husband, was a blessing in his home, as a helpful wife and a devoted mother to his children.

In 1918 Brother Holloman was given the superannuate relation; but, while accepting the action of his brethren as to his relation to the Conference, he did not feel that his work was done and he continued to write and preach as opportunity served, and in the spring of 1920 he was placed in charge of the Lake City Circuit in his native county. This was to him like the renewing of his youth and he rejoiced as he went in and out among his people.

At Lake City, September 5, he preached in the evening and during the service was taken sick. The night was spent in the home of a friend, and early the next morning in great pain he made the trip to Yazoo City, where, after three days, surrounded by his family, the recipient of the most tender ministrations of his friends, he quietly passed away. His death, which took place Thursday night, September 9, 1920, was as gentle as his life had been; at peace with God and man, the wearied servant of God fell asleep.

Friday afternoon in the Methodist Church in Yazoo City, in the presence of a great concourse of sorrowing friends, the funeral services were held. Short talks were made by Rev. E. L. Alford, Rev. N. B. Harmon, and the writer of these lines, and the body was taken by train to Itta Bena and consigned to the grave to await the resurrection of those who sleep in Jesus. Six children mourn the father's death: four sons and two daughters. One daughter, Hattie, had died in early womanhood. Surviving him also is one sister, Mrs. Summerfield Brown, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Ward, of Booneville.

In person Brother Holloman was of medium height, slender in build, with dark eyes and dark hair. He was graceful in movement and gracious in manner. In his later years his hair, which had defied the passing of the years and remained dark and abundant, was distinguished by a broad white lock that waved like a white plume above his well-shaped head.

Brother Holloman was a fluent and animated preacher, given to homely illustrations; but always characterized by the dignity and reverence of one who realizes that the words he speaks are the words of eternal life.

He was a frequent and attractive contributor to the church papers, and hundreds of devout readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate turned with eager interest to his articles. His last contribution to this paper appeared in the issue that announced his death, and those who read "Vacation Ended," thought with a sense of loneliness of the friend who had gone home.

In 1902 Brother Holloman received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity, conferred by the faculty and trustees of Emory and Henry College, a worthy testimonial from his Alma Mater to her honored son.

Possibly the most striking characteristic of Brother Holloman was his friendliness. He had a veritable genius for friendship with all that the word involves of kindliness and unselfish service; and he who showed himself thus friendly received in return a wealth of friendship that few men have possessed.

Such a man could not have been other than open-handed and generous, and no worthy cause appealed to him in vain. The numerous occasions at the Conference sessions when opportunity was given to cultivate the grace of liberality always found him ready to respond.

Twenty years Dr. Holloman was a devoted and useful member of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College. He attended its meetings regularly and was always ready in counsel and in service. One of the duties that by common consent was always imposed upon him was that of delivering the medals and other prizes on Commencement day. This he did gracefully and appropriately and to the delight of the audience. Those assembled upon such occasions in the coming years will miss this gracious ministry at his hands, a ministry in which he took pleasure because it gave pleasure to others.

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ.
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

"SISTER BROOKS."

By Rev. S. L. Pope

The town of Dublin was shocked and greatly bereaved on Sunday morning, September 5, when the news passed over the town, like a dark cloud, that "Sister Brooks," wife of our pastor, Rev. J. J. Brooks, was dead. No one was expecting such a sorrow, not even her immediate household, and I have wondered if Sister Brooks herself knew that God had chosen Sunday morning, His holy day, as the day of her translation. She had risen early that morning that she might be in readiness for her loved Sunday-school work; prepared the morning meal, had joined her family around the breakfast table in the morning meal, and was sitting at the table with the Sunday School Magazine in her hand looking over the lesson for the day; Miss Moorman, her daughter, saw a change come over her sweet face, her head fell gently forward, and lo, God had taken His child to be forever with Him!

There were two striking things to me about this "translation" of our sister: first, she went as she had lived—quietly, gently, without display, with reserve and unobtrusiveness. I verily believe this would have been her wish, had she been given the choice. Her life was one of those quiet, cultured, deeply pious souls who live their lives gladly, joyously, for others; second, she loved the work of the Sunday school, almost as she loved her life. It was her consuming thought, the object of a great deal of her planning, and consumed much of her time and talent; for her to close her eyes here on earth on a Sunday School Magazine and open them in heaven is surpassingly beautiful.

No one can know how deeply our sister impressed herself on the life of the community of Dublin, unless one had been there to see the marks of sorrow and expressions of grief on every hand. I personally never saw such a scene—the whole town seemd to turn its face toward the parsonage and weep. One said to me amid tears, "It was raining last night, but she came over to my house to offer her help with our sick child." I simply cannot begin to tell how good and really great our sister was. I know she "loved God with all her mind, soul and strength, and her neighbor as herself." And I know God was enabled to work in and through her to many and mighty deeds of Christliness.

Sister Brooks was born September 24, 1855, joined the church in 1870, at Salem, was married December 27, 1875, to Rev. J. J. Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference. Six children blessed this union; three died in infancy, three survive—Charles, Moorman, and Howard, the last our gifted pastor at Okolona, Miss. Sister Brooks spent forty-five years in Methodist parsonages, always full of zeal and love for her Lord and Master, and now she is to spend Eternity up where the spirits of just men are made perfect forever and forever.

THE METHODIST HOSPITAL.

The Methodist Hospital Commission of the Mississippi Conference has bought the King's Daughters Hospital, situated at the south end of Bay Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., and will take posession as soon as title can be transferred. Rev. H. G. Hawkins has been elected superintendent until the next session of the Annual Conference, with Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, and Dr. L. B. Hudson representing the Commission as business managers. This is a very valuable property, including, as it does, a city block of four acres of land and several serviceable buildings. It is well located for a great hospital plant, such as the Methodist Church proposes to build. It occupies a commanding position at the head of the main street of the city, having gas and sewer connections, and is easily reached by street cars on paved streets, with excellent railroad facilities, and good roads leading to it from all sections of the State.

The present buildings and equipment, while well adapted to the needs of the smaller field served at present, are utterly inadequate to meet the demands of the Methodists of Mississippi for a larger service. It is the purpose of the Commission, therefore acting under instructions from the Conference, to begin construction of a great Hospital as soon as building conditions will justify and sufficient money can be gotten together to guarantee success and to secure the church against financial embarrassment.

It is contemplated to keep an active representative in the field to press collections on subscriptions to this great enterprise. We realize that immediate success and early realization of our plans depend upon the prompt, active and substantial co-operation of the Methodist people and other friends in building this larger hospital. However, we have a right to expect and receive this support. For surely we, as a church, have delayed all too long the important work of caring for the sick and healing the bodies of men and women.

We wish to take this means of assuring the public of our purpose of giving the same considerate and efficient service under the new management as that rendered by the King's Daughters in the past. Our present resources in buildings and equipment are not sufficient to meet the demands of the future. At best such restricted service is but temporary. The Methodist Church in Mississippi needs and is going to build a great hospital on the King's Daughters property in keeping with the dignity and demands upon it for the ministry of healing.

We are not in the business of ministering to the sick to make money, but to re-make broken and diseased men and women and to bring to them the touch and sympathetic healing of the Christ whom we serve.

Yours fraternally,
CHAS. W. CRISLER, Sec'y,
J. M. MORSE.

CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT AGAIN.

Dear Mr. Editor: I, too, have read with interest what has been said recently on the subject of Conference entertainment. As is well known, I am guilty of starting the scrap at Aberdeen last Conference. I have a paper ready to submit to the first session of the Conference at Charleston.

I want a few words in answer to Brothers Lewis and Curtis. I am glad to see that they agree to the plan of the "Pay as you go" idea. Many good Methodist homes are not able financially to entertain two or four guests for a week at a time. These are found in every town in North Mississippi. It is not fair to ask them to do it. I am surprised at these brethren making the statement that not half of the stations, much less the circuits, could be able to meet their obligations if the Conference should meet in September. Will we not have the same twelve months to do our work in whether we meet in December or in March? Won't we have the advantage of the cotton season in which to make a great start for the year? Where is the congregation that has the habit of paying its Conference collections in the early part of the year that would be willing to do anything else? Look at the fellows who are in a great push right now trying to get ready for Conference with the money market as it is. It would have been an easy task to have done this work early in the year. My experience is that it is easy to be religious after your obligations have been met, or, at least, it is easier to be religious.

Brother Curtis, in particular, should be willing to give us a good chance to practice what he preaches so well. The two years he was my elder (bless his heart, he is a good one) he kept saying, "Boys, get your collections in the early part of the year." I thought he meant it and so I got the habit. I don't aim to break this habit, either. Now here he comes saying, "Some can't and some won't. Not half the stations could."

Say, have you fellows ever known a man who tried, really tried, to get his collections in the early part of the year and failed? I am going to say this; some won't like it but I think it is the truth: Our membership is ready if they have the proper leadership.

I try to keep in close touch with the schools, and allow me to say that I think Brother Shipman is nearer the facts than are Brothers Lewis and Curtis. Yes, we have a system of grading, but don't you know the standards vary? The same books may be taught in the same grades, but in one school they have physiology, say, before Christmas, and geography after awhile; in another school the order is reversed. Practically every school in this Conference is closing the first half of the session with examinations about the time the preacher's children get in. He left the other school in the middle of the term and his report card is incomplete. It means something for a boy or girl to lose a grade. A year oftentimes determines the future of a boy or girl. You can't brush this matter aside with the mere statement, "There should be no trouble in this."

These brethren are older than I am, and they know we have lost more preachers than one from exposure to winter weather in moving. I, for one, am not willing to move my wife and children in any kind of weather that a mere custom might live. I saw a preacher move his wife and children from this town of New Albany when it meant the risk of the lives of some of them. He had it to do for custom's sake. Yes, move in the dead of winter—no fuel, a house unfurnished, wife and little children. Brethren, are these facts? What will the fuel situation be this time for those of us who have to move? If we were moving in September, we could meet the situation.

Finally, that idea of a temporary eating house is not going to fit with a lot of fellows. We are willing for some arrangements to be temporary, but when it comes to the "eats," a Methodist preacher wants to be on a permanent foundation. I do not know of a town in North Mississippi where the hotels could accommodate the Conference along with its regular trade. How many preachers want to eat at a cafe for a week? Getting beds for 250 to 300 people is some task, too, with the housing situation as it is. Ask Brother J. T. Lewis.

Brother Lewis and Brother Curtis are my good friends, but they need a better speech than this letter to the Advocate.

J. E. STEPHENS.

New Albany, Miss.

GRENADA NOTES.

Dear Brother Carley: The Advocate will be interested to know how the work is progressing here at Grenada. We have had a prosperous year. I have received into the church 109 members since Conference, 34 of them on profession of faith. This gives us a net gain of 76, and I am expecting to have about 10 more by Conference. Our Sunday school has grown largely and our facilities for accommodating the classes are nothing like adequate for our needs. We are planning to use the old parsonage for class roooms until we get ready to build the new church. This we would have commenced this fall but for economic conditions. The Christian Advocate goes into every home of the church.

We have just closed at the College a most successful revival meeting. Dr. S. S. McKinney, of our First Church at Galveston, did the preaching and he did it well. He was with us eight days, preaching twice a day and doing personal work among the girls between times. The revival was satisfactory in every respect. The College dormitories are all full and of the 250 girls only two are not now professing Christians. A large number, 76, made a full surrender of their lives for some definite form of Christian work. Eight have chosen the work of foreign missionaries, and are fitting themselves for the foreign field. One hundred and three pledged themselves to tithe their income for the Lord. A more happy, purposeful, hard-working body of choice young women is not to be found. Brother Countiss and his faculty are making a great contribution in cultured Christian womanhood to the coming generation of Mississippi.

You ought to see the new college building. The president of one of our State colleges said, "It is the last word in college architecture." And it is. I doubt if there is on the continent a better appointed or a more beautiful structure. Our Conference has every right to be proud of it. The work which Brother Brownlee has done in canvassing for and collecting funds for its erection merits the appreciation and gratitude of every Methodist. He has been a great success as Commissioner for the College, and his energy and tact, together with the good name the College is making for itself, have more than filled all the dormitories to overflowing. Brother Countiss was compelled to decline to take some late applicants.

If Brother Brownlee did not have his heart set on going back into the pastorate, he would make a great Secretary for the Educatioal Movement. He knows how to put such an enterprise over. But he insists that he has been out of the pastorate long enough and wants to get back to his chosen life-work. Somehow I can not find it in my beart to blame him, but rather do I find much to commend his purpose.

It is currently reported that Bishop McMurry is disposed to cut down the number of districts, making the districts larger. Of course I am not one of the elders to advise him, and doubtless this note will never fall under his eye. But if I had a word to say, it would be, "Go it, Bishop, you are on the right line." We are needing more men in the pastorate, especially to take the place of some of the many secretaries various special causes are calling for. I would cut down the number of districts to at least six. This is no new doctrine with me. I have stood for it all along. It will be interesting to watch the outcome. Fraternally,

WM. W. WOOLLARD.

THE TIME, PLACE AND MANNER OF ENTERTAINING THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Several years ago our sainted Brother J. S. Oakley offered a resolution to change the time of meeting, which resolution was lost. Last fall, at Aberdeen, Brother J. E. Stephens introduced a resolution to change the time of meeting; this, too, was defeated. Now, in spite of these defeats, it seems that somebody thinks that somebody is going to introduce a similar resolution at our Conference soon to meet in Charleston, and this, too, in the face of the fact that our Discipline—page 22, paragraph 49— states clearly that the bishop shall fix the time of meeting of an Annual Conference.

I have listened to arguments for the Conference to meet in the fall and some in the spring of the year. Each time proposed has its advantages and its disadvantages. What we would gain in one time, we would lose in another. Even now some think it would be well to put off our Conference until sometime in December.

In addition to the time of meeting, some propose two other radical changes: first, to put the entertainment on the self-sustaining plan—that is, to let each preacher and delegate pay his own way, or add another collection on the home churches to pay for the entertainment.

Has Christian hospitality gone?

And there is a sentiment to fix Grenada College as a permanent place of meeting. This would bar every other town in our bounds from the benefits and pleasure of an Annual Conference session.

And all this for the reason that sometimes we have only one place inviting the Conference; while often we have several contending for the privilege of entertaining the Conference, and often the place of the meeting would ask for the Conference the next time did the bishop not rule it out of order.

I think we could give our people more preaching to feed their hungry souls while they feed and house our bodies. Could we not arrange some way to give them two great preaching services a day, without any hurt to our Conference business, even if we had to stay a day or two longer?

Surely, if, when we minister to them spiritual things, we have a right to their carnal things, when they minister to us carnal things, they have a right to our spiritual things. If we say, "we must attend to the business of the church," it is the same sentiment we, as preachers, have been troubled with from some of our worldly-minded members, when so often they give as an excuse for not attending to some church service, "I was busy," "I have to attend to business."

For my part, I am willing for the bishop to fix the dates of our Conferences without any suggestions from us. Fraternally,

J. H. SMITH.

How to Reach Charleston, Miss.

All who must be in Charleston Tuesday morning to meet the classes, either as classmen or as members of the examining committees, will have to reach Charleston on Monday.

No trains will be met in Oakland on Monday, therefore all who must be here Tuesday morning will have to reach Charleston either through Grenada, Greenwood, Tutwiler, or Clarksdale, thence to Philip, thence into Charleston. Those who travel over the I. C. north of Grenada will go from Grenada to Greenwood, thence on into Charleston. Either this, or run the risk of getting enough service autos at Oakland to put one across to Charleston. By leaving Memphis, Tenn., Holly Springs, Greenville or Columbus on the morning trains, one can make connection in Grenada and Greenwood and get into Charleston at 4:45 p. m.

On Tuesday, November 16, the 11:18 a. m. and the 2:30 p. m. Memphis and Grenada Accommodations will be met in Oakland with autos from Charleston. No other trains will be met by committee from Charleston in Oakland. Oakland is on the main line of I. C. R. R., between Memphis and Grenada, and is 11 miles from Charleston.

All who can do so will render a favor to the reception committee hy coming to Charleston over the Y. & M. V. R. R. through Greenwood, Clarksdale, or Tutwiler, thence to Philip, thence on into Charleston. Those who come this route can leave home on morning trains and get into Charleston at 4:45 p. m. Cordially and fraternally,

J. TILLERY LEWIS,
For the Committee.

A SUGGESTION CONCERNING THE SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

Dear Brother Carley: Would you allow a layman a small space in the Advocate to speak of a matter that should be of interest to our Conference?

I attended the camp meeting at the Seashore Camp Ground this summer and in looking over the property, I believe there is a great opportunity for Methodism. It would he a shame to the church to let this property fall into the hands of the Roman Catholics and I understand that they are watching for an opportunity to get hold of it.

I believe in the Divinity School. It is doing a great work for our young preachers and Christian workers. But why can we not have something at the Camp Ground like the Junaluska proposition, with adequate buildings and accommodations for the training of Christian workers? With Alabama, Louisiana, and the Mississippi Conferences we can make the Seashore Camp Ground an ideal place and an asset to our great church.

Our people cannot go to Lake Junaluska—it is too far from home and it will cost too much. In the forty-two years that I have been Sunday school superintendent the greatest difficulty that I have found is in getting competent teachers. We cannot send them to North Carolina for training, and why should we? The Seashore Camp Ground is a central place and a delightful place, accessible to three great States. With a little money we can fix it up. The laymen should take hold of this matter and make it go. "We can if we will." I for one am ready to do all that I can.

I would like to hear from some of the laymen and preachers about this matter. Fraternally.

Write Home to Alma Mater

In every State of the Union and in every land are the former students of the schools and colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. What a company of men and women are these who have carried to every land the ideals of Methodist schools. If all should come together there would be a mighty conclave—larger than any international convention—more influential than any legislative assembly—more intellectual than any parliament—representing more unselfishness, service, and spirituality than any gathering anywhere to be found. They are the contributions of Methodist schools to the world; they are upholding the social order, and in life and service are helping the coming of the Kingdom of God. They are the supreme argument for Christian Education.

What Do You Owe Your School

You have carried out of the old school some things you value as the choicest possessions of life—the memories of associations with students and faculty members, the ideals for which your school stood, the intellectual and spiritual quickening that came to you there. Perhaps you have not thought much of late of what you owe to Alma Mater. Think on these things as memory calls back the experiences of other days, and give again your pledge to the old school.

Have You Written to the Old College?

For a time you kept in close touch with Alma Mater, for you were interested in all the activities there. But in the struggle to make your way in the world, to attain success in your profession or business, or with the burden of home responsibilities and cares, you have failed to keep in touch with the old school.

Does Alma Mater know who, where, and what you are? Whether success or failure, as the world measures these, has been yours, Alma Mater keeps you in remembrance. She would share with you both the glories of your achievements and the pains of your disappointments. Let her know that you have not forgotten, that you still acknowledge your debt to her service of the years gone.

Do not delay for a more convenient season, but send to your school or college the information suggested in the form here given. Use that form or write one of your own. Do it now!

WHO WILLIAM IS.

When William clears the table
And carries out each plate,
And piles the cups and saucers,
He says his name is Kate!

And when he dons his overcoat
And mits and leggings trim,
And sallies forth to carry wood,
Why, then, his name is Jim!

But when he dresses in his best,
With collar stiff and white,
To promenade upon the street,
He's William Horace Dwight!

MOSS ROSES.

This is the story of the first moss rose. One day the little daughter of the Wise Chief fell very ill. No one knew how to make her well again, for that was hundreds of moons ago, before wise men had found so many ways to heal the sick.

All the people were sad, for they loved the beautiful little girl.

After they had held a council, the grandmother of the Wise Chief said, "I will go far away into the fields and woods and search until I find healing herbs that will make the child well again."

So, just as the Moon Mother put the stars to sleep under the fleecy clouds, the old woman set forth on her journey.

She went first into the big, cool, friendly woods. There all day long she searched, first beside a singing brook, where the little fishes played in the sunshine and shadow, then at the foot of the tall forest trees, among the bright red berries and dark glossy leaves. But she did not find the healing herbs.

After that she went into the fields. On the slope of a hill in the distance stood three little pine trees, side by side. They looked as if they were marching up the hill; their long top branches, like fingers touched the sky.

"I, too will climb the hill," the old woman said to herself.

While she searched the slope of the hill the moon came up, big and round and beautiful, behind the tall pine trees. One long silver beam pierced the dark pine boughs and seemed to point to a bush a few yards away.

The old woman went over to the bush and found it covered with clusters of little roses, smooth and pink. She parted the branches and peered in. Lo, the ground was covered with soft green velvet moss, and, rooted in the moss, safe and flourishing, were the healing herbs!

The grandmother was very happy. She said to the rosebush, "Because you have guarded so well the healing herbs for the little sick daughter of the Wise Chief I will make you more beautiful than any other rose."

Then she wrapped each smooth pink rosebud in a little piece of the moss and went away.

She carried the healing herbs to the Wise Chief's lodge and steeped them in water in the sun and gave them to the daughter of the chief. Then the child got well.

Soon afterwards the same little girl went hunting for wild flowers on a certain hill. And in the slope of that hill she found, blooming shy and lovely in the shadow of three slim pines, the very first moss roses in the world.—Ellen Miller Doualdson, in The Youth's Companion.

HOW NURSERY RIMES GREW.

In the days when the grandfathers and grandmothers of our grandfathers and grandmothers were children, there lived a little boy whose name was Tommy. Tommy had one of the dearest grandmothers in the world, and this story is mainly about her.

In the eighteenth century there were not many storybooks for children. Most of the stories were told to the child and when he grew up were retold to his children and in this way the stories were kept alive through the generations until we come to Tommy—but that is the end of the story and must not be told here.

Tommy's grandmother was not very well off in worldly things, that is, she did not have much with which to buy food and clothing for them, so she took in washing and in this way earned money to get along.

The washing kept her quite busy, so that there was little time in which to entertain Tommy, and when the boy tired of playing alone, and the small tasks that fell to him were done, he would sit beside grandmother's tub while she sang or chanted little rimes to him.

One day, when it was nearing supper time, and grandmother had nearly finished her work, Tommy was very hungry and was inclined to be cross and impatient about it. Grandmother chided him very gently and bid him to be patient and cheerful and in this way help grandmother finish her work. While he waited and tried hard to do her bidding, she sang a little rime and soon he was laughing.

"Little Tommy Tucker sang for his supper,
What shall he eat, white bread and butter?
How shall he cut it without any knife?
How shall he marry without any wife?"

There—now you have guessed who Tommy's grandmother was, and you are saying:

"Yes, we know her and we love her, too."

She was Mrs. Elizabeth Goose, and she lived in Boston in those long-ago years when people wrote "seventeen hundred and nineteen" at the head of their letters instead of "nineteen hundred and twenty."

When Tommy grew up and people called him Mr. Thomas Fleet, he became a publishing man in Boston. It was then that he got all of grandmother's rimes together and printed them in a book which he called "Mother Goose Melodies." He wanted all other children to know and to love the songs that his grandmother had sung to him.

It is very nice to know that our beloved Mother Goose isn't just make-believe, and that it is a little over a hundred years since Thomas Fleet published the "Mother Goose Melodies."—Betty Benham, in the Sunday School Advocate.

A DOG THAT WON THE VICTORIA CROSS.

One of the most famous regimental pets that ever lived was "Jack," who was found when a poor little puppy by a sentry outside St. James' Palace. Snow was on the ground at the time, and the dog had evidently been ill-treated, so the kind-hearted sentry picked it up and fed it.

The dog eventually became very much attached to the sentry, whose regiment, the Scots Guards, adopted the animal as a pet.

Jack went all through the Crimean War, fighting tooth and nail by the side of his master, and once going so far as to save his life; one of the enemy came at the soldier with his gun clubbed, but Jack went for him! Sad to relate, however, Jack's master was killed at Inkermann.

When the regiment came home, Queen Victoria was so touched by the story that she had a miniature Victoria Cross made, which she presented to the gallant little animal, together with the Crimean medals.—The Young Soldier.

UPON ITS KNEES

A vivid battle photograph of the great war shows a company of our Allies advancing upon their knees across "no man's land," for a surprise attack. Faces set and eyes ablaze, and scarcely a sound save the commands, whispered from man to man. A little later they would rise from their knees, set their bayonets, and charge, with a great cry. For the present they are preparing, on their knees. Any soldier who was too proud to do good knee work that early morning would best confess judgment and stay behind. He might defeat the whole plan. So with our church in its preparation for any great drive. That preparation must be made in the attitude of supplication and communion. No such world program as our church has set before itself can be carried out except in the spirit and might of prayer. Failing as a praying church, we shall fail dismally. "More's wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." I do not mean that God needs to be teased; but He does need to be asked intelligently, urgently, expectantly, before He can bestow His greatest gifts. Let us recover to ourselves what is, for some, the lost art of prayer. To use a classic old phrase, the church must "advance," can advance only, "upon its knees." George Clarke Peck.

Editorial

"LET'S GO!"

A frequent cry of the leaders on the athletic field, as they seek to encourage their teams, is the exhortation used as the caption of these lines—"Let's go!" It is a summons to renewed effort and supreme endeavor.

It is time for us to say, "Let's go!" in the work which lies before us, preachers and laymen, in the church. We have been planning, discussing, devising, long enough for us to know pretty well what we want to do and how we ought to do it. Certainly we know what our objectives are in many of our fields of labor, and the means at our command for the accomplishment of our purposes. After having wisely spent much time in arriving at our conclusions and determining our program—"Let's go!"

With great causes calling us, and magnificent opportunities opening out before us, there was never a time that challenged the best in us as we are being challenged now. The whole world is apparently entering an era of creative activity that will mean colossal achievement in every field of human endeavor; the church, too, is on the eve of stupendous undertakings and staggering possibilities. It is a time for zeal, energy and enthusiasm. "Let's go!"

WHAT IS EDUCATION?

The inauguration of the Christian Education Movement in our own church, and the widespread interest in education generally, both religious and secular, are directing attention to the subject of education in a degree never known before. More and more our people are coming to believe in education—and more and more they are beginning to wonder if our schools as at present constituted are supplying it.

Back of religious education as it is generally understood, back of higher education that we hear so much about, back of the whole system of institutions of college and university grade, lies the supremely important matter of primary education—the education our boys and girls labor to acquire before they are ready to enter high school. There are some of us who believe that we are trying to erect an impossible structure upon an impossible foundation, and that our whole educational system needs to be re-organized from the ground up. It is a common complaint on the part of college authorities that students coming to them are so poorly prepared, as a rule, to do the work that is normally expected of them in advanced classes as to constitute a serious indictment both of subject matter and methods of teaching in our primary schools.

That there is good reason for this feeling is demonstrated by some facts brought to public attention in a recent magazine article by a writer who discusses the subject under the title, "Foolish Questions Asked In School." This writer makes use of the investigation conducted by Leonard P. Ayres, director of the Educational Division of the Russell Sage Foundation, using as a basis examination questions on history, geography, arithmetic, and spelling in the fifth, sixth, and seventh grades of the public schools in a certain Illinois city. Eleven of the leading citizens of that city agreed to take these examinations one evening, in order to discover whether the children were being taught things actually used by men of affairs. These men were: a State senator, a former lieutenant governor, the president of a manufacturing concern, a former superintendent of parks, a banker, a physician, a merchant, a lawyer, a newspaper editor, an efficiency engineer, a clergyman. The result of this examination showed that not a single one of these men made a passing grade in any subject. This is scarcely to be wondered at when we consider the questions submitted. For example, here are the words for spelling, taken from the lists used in the seventh grade: Abutilon, Bergamot, Deutzia, Daguerreotype, Paradigm, Reconnoissance, Erysipelas, Mnemonics, Trichinae, Weigela. How many of our readers could score 100 per cent on these words? So far as we are concerned, we do not even know what some of them mean.

Or take this in geography, five questions selected from the list used to test the knowledge of sixth-grade pupils: 1. What is the distance in degrees from Portugal to the Ural Mountains? 2. How many miles long is South America? 3. Name the capital of Montenegro. 4. Locate the desert of Atacama. 5. Where is the Pamir Plateau? Our own grade on this particular section of the examination is exactly zero. There is a little comfort in the fact that of the eleven leading citizens who took the test, one was able to answer the third question, while the others failed on all five.

Perhaps, though, our readers are strong in arithmetic. Here are the five questions on that subject, taken from the sixth and seventh grades: 1. Italy uses the time of 15 degrees east and Illinois that of 90 degrees west. When it is noon in Italy, what time is it in Illinois? 2. How much pressure will you have to exert on the handles of a pair of shears 3 inches from the fulcrum in order to exert a pressure of 5 pounds at a point 5 inches from the fulcrum? 3. What is the area of the base of a cylindrical gallon can 10 inches high? 4. Express 150 degrees Centigrade in terms of Fahrenheit. 5. If a liter of alcohol weighs 1.58 kilograms, what is the specific gravity of alcohol? Personally, we have never cared for the study of arithmetic.

The questions in other subjects were of the same general character. It may be that the school system of this particular Illinois city is altogether different from the system of any other city—but we have very good grounds for believing that it is not the only one of its kind. Our observation has been (and that observation is being confirmed by our experience with a little daughter in the sixth grade) that there is a radical defect somewhere in our educational process. We are not sure that we know where it is, but we are inclined to believe that it is to be found in a conception that arbitrarily assumes that certain subjects must be taught in a certain way by teachers who themselves are nothing but cogs in a machine, that has arbitrarily established certain educational "standards" that must be maintained at any cost, and that has failed, in spite of long-continued effort and dogmatic assertion to the contrary, to establish a connection between education and life. Some of these days we are going to take time enough to find out what education really is; and then we are going to spend energy enough and money enough to make it possible for our children to begin to get an education before they are too old to learn. If it is a mark of education to be able to tell off-hand how far it is in degrees from Portugal to the Ural Mountains, it is not education that we are so much in need of, after all.

NO CHANGE IN DATES OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES.

We have just received the following communication from Bishop W. F. McMurry, which is self-explanatory. We are sure the brethren of the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences will meet at the time originally appointed with highly creditable reports in spite of the financial stringency that developed so suddenly and so unexpectedly.

"My Dear Brother Carley: Please say to the brethren of the two Mississippi Conferences that there will be no change in dates. Communications reaching my desk on the subject of change are about ten to one against any change.

"Yours sincerely,

"W. F. McMURRY."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop Darlington postponed the meeting of the Upper South Carolina Conference one day in order that its members might have the opportunity of voting on November 2.

Oklahoma Methodism is planning to establish a great school at Tulsa. The city has pledged $1,000,000 to the school, and the two Conferences of the State will raise another million.

Dr. E. B. Craighead, at one time president of Tulane University, died at Missoula, Montana, on October 22. At different times he was connected with Emory and Henry College and Wofford College. He was a graduate of Central College.

Mrs. Dora Summers, of Walnut Grove, Miss., has been taking the New Orleans Christian Advocate for about twenty years. We appreciate her kindly expressions in a letter renewing her subscription for another year.

Dr. M. N. Waldrip, pastor of McKendree Church, Nasbville, Tenn., has relinquisbed his pastoral duties for several weeks in order that he may regain his health. During his absence, Dr. Thomas Carter will occupy his pulpit.

Rev. J. A. Goad, of Noxapater, Miss., has had a good year on his charge. Tbere have been 62 additions to the cburch, 38 of them on profession of faith, and everytbing is shaping up for a good report at Conference. He serves a fine peoplo.

Mrs. G. B. Wilson, of Georgetown, Miss., daughter of the late Rev. J. N. Ware, of the Mississippi Conference, takes occasion, in a business note to the office, to say some exceedingly kind things about the Advocate. We thank her sincerely.

Rev. Robert Selby, a cousin of the bride, came to New Orleans from Jackson, Miss., on Monday of this week, to officiate at the marriage of Miss Josephine Kendall to Mr. James H. Richardson, of Los Angeles, Calif. While in the city he honored the Advocate office with a call.

It will be gratifying to the readers of the Advocate to know that Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, Business Manager of the Advocate, whose illness was reported last week, underwent an operation successfully and is now recuperating as rapidly as could be expected.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker, Dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, was in New Orleans on Monday of this week en route to the Louisiana Conference, at De Ridder, of which he is a member. He honored the Advocate office witb a call while in the city.

Rev. R. P. Fikes, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, was returned to Biltmore station at the recent session of the Western North Carolina Conference, to which he now belongs. Substantial progress has been made during his pastorate, and great things are being planned for next year.

Dr. J. A. Baylor, Architectural Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, was in New Orleans on Friday of last week. He was here to consult with Rev. C. C. Wier, the pastor, concerning the new church to be built in Algiers.

Dr. W. B. Ricks, of the Tennessee Conference, has been elected Associate Secretary for Collections by the Centenary Commission, and has entered actively upon his task. Dr. Ricks has been very successful in this work in his own Conference, and is especially adapted to this important activity.

Dr. S. A. Steel spent last week at Laurel, Miss., delivering his great series of lectures on the Bible to large and interested congregations at First Church. The pastor, Rev. L. L. Roberts, writes in very high terms of the service Dr. Steel has rendered his people.

Rev. A. T. Mellwain is closing his third year as pastor at Senatobia, Miss., and every indication points to a fine report at Conference. October 21 was observed as Rally Day. The program was fine and, in spite of a downpour of rain, there was a large congregation present.

Rev. Payton A. Sowell, in whom Louisiana Methodism claims an interest, delivered a semicentennial address at the Tennessee Conference at Shelbyville on October 9. Just forty-nine years ago he was pastor at Shelbyville—making this an especially appropriate place for the celebration of his fiftieth year in the itinerancy.

Rev. Julian S. Duncan, our popular and successful young pastor at Robinsonville, Miss., will enter Emory University on November 10—the beginning of the second half of the fall term. He will be greatly missed from the work, but we cannot but feel that he is taking the wisest possible step in preparation for larger usefulness.

The following Alumni Directors have recently been appointed for service in the Christian Education Movement: Dr. W. Winans Drake, Shreveport, La., for Centenary College; Albert S. Lewis, Jr., Dallas, Tex., for Southern Methodist University; Bishop Warren A. Candler, Atlanta, Ga., for Emory University.

Last Sunday, October 31, Rev. C. C. Wier, our pastor at Algiers, celebrated the close of bis twenty-fifth year as a member of the Louisiana Conference. After an appropriate sermon at the morning hour, a communion service was held. Brother Wier is one of the most useful and greatly beloved pastors in tbe city.

The Conference Entertainment Committee of the North Georgia Conference, which meets in Atlanta this year, bas decided to pay the expenses of delegates at hotels, instead of entertaining them in private homes. A maximum of $4.50 a day will be allowed for the actual number of days in attendance on the Conference.

Felicity Church of this city, of which Rev. A. Inman Townsley is pastor, observed last week as "Harvest Home Week." All departments of the church made reports of their activities during the year, and planned for future development. Felicity has made substantial progress this year. All financial claims have been met in full, and already the officials have decided to increase the pastor's salary next year.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Ellisville charge, Mississippi Conference, passed highly commendatory resolutions in connection with the closing of a four-year term of service of Rev. W. B. Jones as presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District. Brother Jones has won the esteem and confidence of his entire district by his pulpit ability and his efficient administration of his high office.

Rev. W. N. Thomas, a member of the Mississippi Conference who is a a chaplain in the U. S. Navy, stationed at Fort Lyon, Colorado, lost most of his library in tbe many shifts during the war. If there is some retired preacher or widow of a preacher who has a complete library to sell, Brother Thomas would like to get into touch with same. He may be addressed as above.

At the fourth quarterly conference of our church at Homer, La., the total amount reported raised for all purposes was $12,500. All claims have been paid, and there is no debt of any kind. In addition, there will be two or three thousand dollars to report tbat were not in sight when the quarterly conference met. Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., the pastor, who is completing his fourth year at Homer, has had a most successful administration.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, our pastor at Eunice, La., favored the Advocate office with a call on Thursday of last week. He was returning home after a visit to relatives and friends at Pocahontas, Miss. Brother Fontaine is chairman of the Board of Christian Literature of the Louisiana Conference, in which position he is rendering splendid service to the church.

After careful consideration of all propositions submitted, the Mississippi Conference Hospital Commission has closed a deal for the hospital hitherto operated by tbe King's Daughters in Hattiesburg. The Conference thus comes into possession of an institution already in operation, and with plans tbat will, in due time, make it one of the most completely equipped and efficient in the State.

In connection with the suggestion that the time of meeting of the North Mississippi Conference be changed to a later date, the fourtb quarterly conference of the Moore Memorial Church, Winona, Miss., passed resolutions requesting Bishop McMurry not to make such charge, holding that there is no assurance that conditions will be more favorable later on than at the time appointed. These resolutions were sent to the Advocate and to the Commercial-Appeal, of Memphis, for publicity.

Rev. N. E. Alford, of Holmesville, Miss., the father of Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor of our Second Church, this city, paid a highly appreciated call to the Advocate office on Wednesday of last week. Brother Alford is a local preacher who has rendered eminent service to Methodism, not only by his own ministry but also through the ministry of several of his sons who are in the itinerant work. For fifty years he has been a subscriber to the Advocate.

Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe has been elected editor and general manager of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, to succeed Drs. L. S. Massey and H. M. Blair, who had previously announced their intention of retiring from the editorship. The North Carolina is one of tbe best of the exchanges that come to our table—a tribute to the ability of the good men who have conducted it so ably. We welcome Dr. Rowe to a goodly fellowship.

Dr. W. C. Kirkland, the able editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, having announced sometime ago his intention to retire from the editorship, has been succeeded by Dr. R. E. Stackhouse, presiding elder of the Columbia District. The change becomes effective after the meeting of the South Carolina Conference on November 24. Rev. J. Hubert Noland has been elected business manager. Dr. Kirkland has rendered distinguished service to the church during the six years he has served as editor and manager. We welcome his successors to the brotherhood of the tripod.

The Alabama Christian Advocate, which already has a circulation of 25,000, is asking for 5000 additional subscribers next year. The Texas Christian Advocate is asking its patronizing Conferences for an additional 20,000. The St. Louis Christian Advocate has placed its goal at 15,000. The Central Methodist is asking for 15,000. Practically all the other Conference organs are calling for an increased subscription list as one means of offsetting the tremendously increased cost of production.

At the recent session of the Pacific (California) Conference Bishop Du Bose returned Rev. J. Loyd Decell to St. Paul's, Fresno. They have recently raised $100,000 in subscriptions for a new church building, have increased the pastor's salary for the new Conference year to $3600, and furnish the pastor a car also. A year of spiritual progress has been realized by this growing church in the far West.

JULIAN WILMER TAYLOR, infant son of J. W. and Emma Bush Taylor, was born December 11, 1916, at Woolmarket, Miss., and died September 11, 1920, at Wortham, Miss. God did not allow this bright and interesting little boy to remain here long with fond parents and a loving little sister, but we should try not to think of him as dead, but gone to a bright, beautiful world where there is no more sickness and suffering. We cannot understand why God would take little Wilmer from us, but "sometime we'll understand," so let us put our trust in Him who "doeth all things well" and strive to meet him in Heaven. We laid his little body away in the beautiful little cemetery at Coalville on the afternoon of September 12, to "wait until Jesus comes." May God comfort the loved ones as He alone can comfort.

E. J. COKER, Pastor.

MRS. ANNA PAINE GUNN, wife of G. W. Gunn, was born July 27, 1860, and died June 28, 1920, at her home in Pope, Miss. Sister Gunn was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. B. B. Brown, the former a well-known and highly esteemed member of the North Mississippi Conference. In her parsonage home she early in life received the truths which made for righteousness, and under the gracious influence of Christian parents she gave her heart and life to Jesus Christ and united with the Methodist Church, in which she spent a life of usefulness. She was recognized as a competent teacher, having given twelve years of her life to teaching in the public schools of Panola County, Miss. On the 7th of August, 1898, at the Methodist church at Eureka, she was married to Mr. G. W. Gunn, Rev. L. D. Worsham officiating. They afterwards made Pope their home. Sister Gunn was always interested in the children and young people of the community and especially the salvation of each member of her Sunday school class. When she saw them converted and join the church, her face would beam with joy. Especially was Sister Gunn talented in training the children for the Children's Day services. Just a few days before she fell on sleep, she asked the privilege of attending Children's Day service at her church, and was carried by tender hands and loving hearts to the house of God where she enjoyed the service, joining in the singing with the congregation. The last few years of her life she was an invalid, but bore her affliction with patience and fortitude. She was a devoted reader of the Word of Life, taking it as her daily food. "She hath done what she could." A good neighbor, a devoted wife and faithful Christian from earth has gone. She leaves a husband, two sisters, Mrs. Oliver and Mrs. Simpson, both of Memphis, Tenn., and a host of friends to mourn her going.

R. I. COLLINS.

Mrs. ELIZABETH JANE SAWYER YEAGER, wife of the late D. W. Yeager, was born in Lauderdale County, May 12, 1852, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. C. Yates, in Hattlesburg, Miss., October 8, 1920, after a brief illness. Mrs. Yeager joined the Methodist Church just after her marriage, December 14, 1884, and was a consistent member until her spirit answered the Heavenly Father's call. To the second union were born six children, all of whom are living, four boys and two girls: H. L. Yeager, of Richton, A. U., of Hattiesburg, F. L., of New Orleans, G. H., of Lumberton, Mrs. R. C. Yates and Mrs. J. E. Dabbs, of Hattiesburg. The older set of children are Rev. D. P. Yeager, of Monticello, V. N., of Bond, Rev. G. G., of Vaughan, J. A., of Lumberton and Mrs. G. E. Null, of Hattiesburg. Of the immediate family that survive, there are eleven children, thirty grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren.

A large number of grief-stricken relatives and friends accompanied the remains from Hattesburg to Seminary, Sunday morning, 10th inst., where the funeral services were conducted from the Methodist church by the writer, assisted by Revs. G. R. Ellis and Rufus Beckett. The esteem and appreciation of this sweet-spirited soul, were evidenced by the large concourse of friends in attendance. Interment was made in Seminary cemetery, by the side of her husband. There were beautiful floral offerings. The sons and daughters, with the other family connection, have the sincere sympathy of their friends in this earthly separation, but who can rejoice that mother was prepared to go and now awaits their coming. CHARLES E. DOWNER.

RESOLUTIONS.

In the sudden death of Miss Kate Bedingfield on August 21, 1920, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Vivian Methodist Church has lost one of its most devoted, earnest members. It is with sorrowing hearts that we record the death of this valued member of our organization, as she has been so intimately associated with this society from its beginning, serving most of the time as treasurer, and at all times one of our most faithful workers. We desire to express our love and esteem for a friend whom we shall hold in affectionate remembrance: therefore, be it resolved,

That in her death our society and church have lost one of our most loyal and consecrated members: that our town has lost a friend whose life was a real inspiration. She was truly a quiet, refined woman for whose life the home and community are better. Her devotion to her mother and loved ones was most beautiful.

Resolved also, That we extend our sympathy to her mother and her brothers and their families, trusting that they may find comfort in the assurance that "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Resolved also, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society, a copy sent to our town paper, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by: Mrs. Olivia Browning, Mrs. Emma McDuff, Mrs. I. W. Bussa.

FROM THE EUREKA CHARGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: If you will give us a little space, we will report some of the good things from the Eureka charge. We began our revival campaign at Love Joy, the third Sunday in July. Brother Hunt, of Crowder, came to us on Monday, and preached until Friday evening. The Holy Spirit was leading and the church was greatly revived and four were received into the church. Our next meeting was at Mt. Pisgah. Rev. J. H. Ingram did the preaching and did it well; we had a good meeting with one addition to the church. On the first Sunday in August, Brother J. A. George came to Mt. Olivet, his home church, and assisted the pastor in the meeting. We had a great meeting—church members revived, the entire community blessed, twenty-four accesslons. We visited, and prayed in most of the homes. The church gave the visiting preacher a nice purse and also the pastor received a nice purse, so you can see the people really got religion. Our last meeting was at Iuka, with Rev. H. G. Roberts to do the preaching. He gave us some old Methodist doctrine in his sermons, which put the people to reading the Bible and praying. There was one addition to the church.

Since we closed our meetings we have married three couples, sold the old parsonage, and bought a nice house and forty-six acres of land, and hope to get possession in time for the new preacher to move in. This, our third year on the charge, has been a pleasant one. We hope to report everything paid in full.

J. A. BIFFLE, P. C.

IN NIGHT AND DAY.

God is with me in my troubles, to be an infinitely greater joy. He is with me in my losses, to be a gain beyond all calculation. He is with me in my longings for good and for peace, for large measures of truth and love, to answer them; for he has inspired me with these longings. He is with us when we go wrong to show us the error of our ways, when we go right to give us the satisfaction and the reward, to visit with encouragement and to show still larger openings in the same direction. * * * God is with his own when they sleep, to be ready in due time to stir in them their waking, working powers. Nothing can happen to man so bad, come to him when he wakes or when he sleeps, in a way to leave him otherwise than on the bosom of the Father.—W. M. Bicknell.

FROM RIENZI, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As it has been some time since I have written anything to the Advocate, I suppose it is time I am letting you know how we are doing things on the Rienzi charge. The first thing is not so pleasant for me—I am on the cripple list, caused by a stick of stove wood hitting me while I was splitting it, on the right leg just below the knee. I have had to use a stick or a crutch one, to walk for more than two weeks. I fear it is going to abscess, but I hope that I will soon be going again.

We have had a good year at Rienzi. We have some very fine people all over the charge. We haven't everything in full yet, in a financial way, but we are working to have a good report from that viewpoint at the Annual Conference. In a spiritual way, we think our work is great. The Lord has been with us. I have had good revivals at all of my churches. The work has been very much revived. The results of my meetings have been good—fifty-two accessions to the church, forty-six on profession of faith. My meeting at Pisgah was the greatest revival on the charge—more than forty conversions and twenty-nine accessions. We thank the Lord and give Him all the praise for all the good meetings we have had.

Now relative to the meeting of the Annual Conference, as one brother asked what others thought about meeting the first of September at Grenada: The place is all right, but the time, I think, will not do at all for the rural charges. We are not through with our revival work by that time. Some may say we could commence earlier; but that would not suit the farming people. We begin our meetings when it suits the masses of the people, and that is as soon as we can begin. We cannot have a meeting without the people. Then it is the hardest time of the year on the country people in a financial way. Then again many of us have to have a corn patch and other kinds of patches to help us to live, and to change at this time of year would mean to swap patches, and the other fellow may not have, or did not work his patch.

We—some of us—try to raise a pig or two (if not, we can't buy meat, it is too high) and it is too hot to move a pig, so away would go our pig. Then we would get our chickens all smothered and you know I have struck the "key-note" to hurt the feelings of a Methodist preacher, for that is one of the qualifications of the preachers—his love for fried chicken.

To the city preacher this may sound silly (and I meant to have a little fun), but if you will get out on a country charge you will say "No." You say, "I have been there?" Yes, but it has been so long you have forgot how to sympathize. For my part, I'd rather say December 1 than September 1. So let it stand as it is, as near the first week in November as possible. R. G. A. CARLISLE.

Rienzi, Miss.

A SLIP OF THE KNIFE

resulting in an injured finger, a stubbed toe, a splinter or any other of the numberless petty injuries that are likely to happen any day, may not seem serious at first but when neglected and aided by the careless touch of a dirty hand may become infected and develop into an ugly sore and blood poison. Don't play with fate. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately and freely in all skin injuries. It gives immediate relief, soothes the pain, wards off blood poison and immediately begins its healing effect. Its constant use for ninety-nine years has made it a family word in every household. Ask your druggist or write W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., for sample.—Adv.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

HOW CENTENARY MONEY IS BEING SPENT IN BRAZIL.

By Bishop John M. Moore.

Our Central Church in Sao Paulo is a made-over residence in which the people have worshiped for several years. The Sunday school uses all its space. The same is true of the congregation. We are breaking dirt this week for their new church, which is greatly needed. We have splendid plans. The Sunday school accommodations will be far better than those of the majority of our churches at home. I hope to have it completed within a year. The other new church in Sao Paulo, known as the "Braz," is completed. This is one of the first of our Centenary churches to be finished. The church at Pocos de Caldas, where Mr. Belcher is pastor, is also completed. The church at the People's Institute, to which St. John's contributes $8,000, will be finished next month. This latter church will cost fully $15,000. The Centenary gift is $8,000, and the poor people have in some way found the rest.

I have just closed negotiations for large grounds for Granbery College. The cost will be $50,000. This will mean a new and greatly enlarged Granbery. We expect to begin the erection of the building for the Passo Fundo Institute when Mr. W. T. Clay and I go there the last week in September. We will also start work on the new church in Santa Anna. The work on the church at Alegrete has been done. Part of the work in Union College has been done. The remainder will be done in January and February during their vacation. I will probably inaugurate the work at Santa Maria while I am down there. The same is true of the work on the parsonage at Cachoeira. All this is in South Brazil Conference, except Granbery College. We will not build Porte Alegre College this year, as we have not the teachers to start the school. You will be interested to know that the Publishing House is almost finished. The plant will be moved from Juiz de Fera by September 10. Mr. Clay has wrought wonders in the erection of the building. He had done for $10,000 what the Brazilian contractors asked $20,000 to do. He has a fine double parsonage for $13,000, which they asked $25,000 to build. We have made much money by sending down our own builder.

I spent a week in Mr. Dawsey's district. It was a very hard trip, but we mapped our plan thoroughly. He will build churches at Birlguy, Pennapolis, Aracatuba, and Albuquerque Lins, and put up small chapels at Glycerie and Hector Legru within the next year. He and his men are stirring the people to make contributions speedily and liberally.

Here in Rio we are finishing the plant in Cascadura and will soon build at Realenge. I went to Caba Frie, on the east coast, last week, and bought a good house which can be used for a time as parsonage, church and parochial school, and with it an additioni lot. They had one lot. This gives them plenty of land for the future and accommodations for the present. They are happy. I spent four days.

I have been very busy. The work goes well. The religious movement is splendid. The evangelistic spirit is manifest everywhere. The Lord is leading and blessing us here.

FRUIT.

The disposition, affections, inclinations of soul, which shall issue hereafter in perfection, must be trained and nurtured in us throughout the whole course of this earthly life. When shall we bear in mind this plain truth, that the future perfection of the saints is not a translation from one state or disposition of soul into another, diverse from the former; but the carrying out, and, as it were, the blossom and the fruitage of one and the same principle of spiritual life, which, through their whole career on earth, has been growing with an even strength, putting itself forth in the beginnings and promise of perfection, reaching upward with steadfast aspirations after perfect holiness?—H. Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday, the 24th, was spent at State Line, on the Bucatunna charge. We were able to hold one service, but it rained us out the rest of the day. They have a small, active Sunday school at State Line and Brother Nobies is a loyal, consecrated worker. While the school is small, they are doing some fine work. Brother Ramsey says the charge gives promise of having the best report in years. He and his officials are proud of it.

Monday was spent on the Matherville charge. Brother Railey is closing out a very active year. He has two churches under construction and two being repaired. He reaches a large body of young people, and there is a great future hoped for this charge.

Let every preacher turn to Paragraph 327 in the Discipline and let each and every one make out a correct and accurate report. It is due the Conference Board as well as the work that this should be done.

I hope that every preacher will make an effort to hear Brother Brabham at Annual Conference. His message will be worth your time and will repay you for your effort.

Mrs. Sue Stuart Brame, Elementary Superintendent, has visited the following schools during October: Hattiesburg, Laurel, Montrose, Decatur, Lake and Braxton. Mrs. Brame has found the schools at these places starting in on the year's work with determination to be better and do better work.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Men, let us organize, enroll, and federate. Why have we been so slow in doing this for our schools? Lack of prayer and too little vision.

Twenty-five preachers have sent in their report to the Sunday School Board, giving the written record of what has been done in the way of teaching religion to the people during the year. Let us have a report from every charge.

How many of the new superintendents have ordered the book, Organization and Administration? This book will help start right, it will show how to lay a foundation upon which you can build a great school.

How much time do you think a preacher ought to devote to definite prayer each day to prepare himself to preach the gospel? Do you think a superintendent can afford to take less time for such devotions to fit himself to lead his school in the worship of God? Should a teacher spend any less time in prayer to prepare herself for the wonderful work of teaching the children the things of Christ? Remember, the teacher can give out no more of God to others than she has received. When we raise up praying superintendents and praying teachers we will make a praying church. The church of to-morrow is in the making to-day. Then how much of ourselves should we place in the hands of God for this sublime purpose?

Brother Shearer gave me the opportunity of visiting Beulah, where he is caring for a union school. We put in the graded lessons for beginners and ordered O. K. record books for three classes. This is a small school, but the teachers are eager to give their children the best instruction. We visited Pace, another union school. The superintendent promised to use screens to separate the beginners from the rest of the school. Our next service was held at Winterville. The teachers agreed to use screens for two departments, to order chairs for the little ones, and to use the O. K. records. This school is using the graded lessons in all departments with success. The school at Benoit is another union effort to supply the people with religious instruction, something that is hard to do.

Let this be one aim for another year: Organize the beginners, primaries, and juniors into departments correctly, supply these departments with the graded lessons. Then organize all classes above the juniors into Wesley Bible classes, enroll these classes at Nashville, and get ready for a Conference Federation of these classes that will shake the Conference from center to circumference. We should organize for the purpose of finishing up our Centenary work honorably, then lay hold upon the educational program that is upon us. If we organize our forces, we can succeed; if we fail to organize, we shall be humiliated over our colossal defeat. Organization is not the whole thing, but it is an effective medium which our instruction and praying will bring victory.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

A young man wrote the other day that he was ready to go to college, but, since he had to help his parents, he would have to attend college alternate years while he made expenses. He is a bright young fellow and fully capable of a college education. He comes from a good family. His business contacts have sharpened his experience and he has won many business friends who are ready to give him a life-time position if he will accept it. As it is, he will live in the most frugal way possible for eight or ten years, stinting himself of many necessities if he gets the necessary preparation. Time is valuable to him; and the church is sorely needing men in the ministry here and on the foreign field. Why should not he be released of his financial burden to get into the work to which he purposes to give his life work?

A young lady wrote, saying that she had finished one year of college, but would be unable to return because her father was not able to keep her in college if her younger brothers and sisters attended high school. She is a bright young woman, with poise and dignity. She has carefully looked into the matter of a life-career and desires to enter Christian work on the foreign field. Here she is, ready and willing, with three more years of college work and two years of specialized work.

Situations like these could be multiplied. Workers are sorely needed. The young people of our church are responding. But will they continue to take us in earnest if we do not make some provision for their preparation? Is it not enough that we ask them to invest their lives in a service that can only at its best give barely a living in return? Should not funds be provided to make possible their preparation?

It has been asked, "Why cannot Centenary funds be used for this purpose?" The questioner forgets that Centenary funds were contributed for specific purposes and must be directed to those purposes alone. Besides, the calls from the fields are so urgent from workers who are already there, who face such strategic situations, that one would feel almost criminal to use funds for purposes at home that could be met otherwise.

Another remarks, "I thought the Educational Campaign would have a million dollars for assisting such students." True, but it will be three years before this money will be available; besides, there are situations now which need immediate assistance.

Are you good in estimating business values? What about this for a good business investment? Young men and women with brains and character present an investment where $100 to $300 per year would make it possible for them to get through college. You are putting money into bonds; you are investing in lands; you have buildings to rent. Are you interested in investing in such young people, whose only returns would be prepared leadership and redeemed humanity? Correspondence is solicited.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Prepare For Changeable Weather.

Many expensive doctor's bills are saved by prompt action with reliable family remedies. Foley's Honey and Tar has been successfully used in thousands of homes in cases of coughs, colds, croup, hay fever and asthma. H. B. Miller, R. F. D. 10, Wooster, O., writes: "By the changing of beds and the weather, I took a very bad cold and sore throat. Four doses of Foley's Honey and Tar put me right in a day's time. I never took any medicine that gave such splendid results." It pays to get the genuine Foley's. Contains no opiates.—Adv.

FROM LAKE CORMORANT AND ROBINSONVILLE.

Because the writer is going to Candler School of Thelogy on November 10, and thus will not be able to present his report to the Conference, he takes this method of giving some account of his stewardship of the Lake Cormorant and Rohinsonvliie charge.

The territory for which the pastor is responsihie, and which has no other preacher, is equal to haif a county. It includes all the territory lying between the hills on the east and the Mississippi River on the west, averaging eight miles in width, and from Walis on the north to Hollywood and beyond on the south, a distance of twenty-two miles. It embraces all the delta part of DeSoto County and a large portion of Tunica County. Robinsonvilie furnishes the only piace of worship for the people of the following towns: Penton, Clacks and Bowdre, on the Y. & M. V. Railroad; Banks and Lost Lake, on the Y. D. Railroad, and Commerce, on the Mississippi River. Rock roads are now being built to connect aii these points with Robinsonviile.

The Lake Cormorant church, under the leadership of Mr. Thompson Withers and others, advanced overnight from being the orphan chiid of a hiil circuit to the fuli dignity of a deita haif-station. It incidentally advanced its amount paid for the support of the ministry from $300 per year to $1200.

The Sunday schooi at Lake Cormorant has made several forward steps during the year. The system of graded literature has been put in. The pastor is teaching a teacher training class of twelve members. Two Wesley classes are being organized. Credit for this is due to the Grenada Sunday School Normal. Long may it continue!

The church at Rohinsonville has hitherto been merely a department of the Woman's Missionary Society, which society, however, is surpassed by only one in the district in the amount collected each year for Conference and general work. For its size it is one of the most active societies in the Conference. The pastor has been seeking to raise the dignity and status of the church to at least a piane of equaiity with the Missionary Society. What degree of success he attained is not yet apparent.

At our fourth quarterly conference, held in Lake Cormarant on October 12, assessments for support of the ministry, Conference collections and the Methodist Hospitai were paid in cash in full. Robinsonville is up-to-date and more on her Centenary quota. While Lake Cormorant did not subscribe quite all of its quota, its subscription for this year was paid in fuil. Our total coiiections for the year will show an increase of more than two hundred per cent over last year.

When the writer came to the charge iast fali he found the town of Walls with neither church or any sort of preaching services. This spring he was abie to organize a church with an initial membership, in number, more than Robinsonviiie had at the beginning of the year. A Sunday school was also organized which, under the fine ieadership of the superintendent, Brother L. W. Bowie, has kept up a splendid average attendance. A lot was secured this summer for the church building. Although the coiiapse of the cotton market mado building this fail an impossibility, the people will buiid as soon as conditions reach a stabie basis.

An Opportunity For Service.

In the opinion of the writer, and he is very frank to say that he is trying to heip his presiding eider find the right man for the charge, there is no charge in the Conference which presents a larger opportunity for the man with an ambition to serve. He is very certain that a more appreciative people or a people more ready to cooperate with a pastor in any forward movement, wiii not he found. It will pay the man who wiii stay with it and develop it. $2400.

It has no parsonage. One ought to have heen built this year, but singie preachers are, as a ruie, poor parsonage builders. The people are ready and abie to build a parsonage. The preacher who wants to do soome reaiiy constructive work would do weii to get in touch with the presiding elder.

JULIAN S. DUNCAN.

Robinsonville, Miss.

FROM PRAIRIE AND STRONGS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Cariey: Our fourth quarteriy meeting came off to-day, which was quite satisfactory. Though we are hard hit by boll weevil and iow cotton prices, we are aimost out on aii our finances.

We were assisted in our meetings hy Brothers Dodds and Simpson, of our Conference, both efficient, good preachers, doing /us permanent work both in building up the church spiritually, and ieading sinners to Christ.

The year has been one of many tests of faith, but in all we have come out victorious with Him in whom we trust. The year has been one in which much prayer has been necessary, with much anxiety, but with it ali it has heen deiightful with this good people. My presidlng eider, Brother Dorsey, comes in as worthy of much praise for his brotherly help and efficient management. Our people are loud in his praise. We expect to go to Conference with a full balance sheet. Hope you will be there.

Success to you in your noble work.

D. W. BABB.

PRAYER, LIFE SERVICE, AND STEWARDSHIP.

On October 5, the Campaign Committee of the Christian Education Movement officially adopted three months for the special emphasis of Prayer, Life Service, and Stewardship. Prayer and Intercession will be emphasized first, during the month of January. Life Service comes next in February. In March the Commission will stress Stewardship.

During these special months every person connected with the Movement or interested in its large success will talk, write and think about these most important subjects. They must and will be put before the people in the most forceful and attrctive way possible.

New literature on Prayer, Life Service, and Stewardship will be prepared and distrihuted. This will he in attractive form for the use of all those working in the interest of the Movement. There will he new things to be said, new methods of presenting these oid but ever new subjects.—Bulietin.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY
Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the good it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET DANZ, 743 N. 25th Street, Phila., Pa.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

LAXATIVE ~for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

PRAYER REMINDERS.

Pray for the uninterested, unreached women in your church and in your community, that they may be enlisted as workers for the Kingdom, as members of your auxiliary, and of the Bible and Mission Study classes.

Pray for our work in Poland, for our workers there, for the little children suffering by the thousands, for men without work, for broken-hearted women in that sick and desolate land.

Pray for the leaders in world politics, that some way out of the suffering and wretchedness may be found and world peace become a reality.

Pray for our own land, that in the coming elections men and women may be true to their convictions, that the candidates chosen may accept the responsibilities of office in the fear of God and conscientiously fulfill every duty devolving upon them.

POLISH RELIEF TO BE UNDERTAKEN BY THE COUNCIL.

At the called meeting of the Board of Missions on September 15, the following resolutions were passed:

"We therefore request the Board to authorize the Secretary for Europe to undertake this special form of relief and to set up at once such organization as will secure the co-operation of our constituency throughout the church to make effective this specific plan for relief work in Poland."

Immediately the matter of Polish relief was taken up with the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council. This body voted to undertake through their organization to carry out this program for special relief in Poland. The co-operation of the entire Southern Methodist Church, therefore, is asked in carrying out this program.

The Appeal of Eyewitnesses.

Miss Quayle, the official representative of the M. E. Church, South, in Poland, writes:

"The suffering here this winter is going to be unspeakable. People are starving now, so you can imagine what winter will mean. Please send us warm clothing, especially underwear and shoes. We must have supplies! Put on a campaign in the churches for old clothes. Nothing is too bad to send.

"A polish priest said, 'My people would rejoice to have the pieces of cloth you use to scrub the floor and the shoes you cast away as worn out.'"

Other excerpts from Miss Quayle's letter give us these distressing pictures:

"Every day three or four orphanages would pass through our camp. These poor kiddies nearly broke our hearts. They had started with little or no food (their supply is small) and in many cases had been on the road ten days or two weeks. These children we would feed, then give them some food to carry with them. One night about eight, a train came in with an orphanage of 150 children who had had nothing to eat for four days. My cook had gone and my kitchen had no light in it at all, but I felt around and finally prepared some milk and hot rice. We gave them this and plenty of bread. I went up to the car where they were, and if I live a thousand years I'll never forget the picture of these blessed hungry babies, all the hundred and fifty of them, sitting on the rails, eating their hot milk and rice out of cups made of milk cans. Their faces, though drawn from hunger and want, fairly shone as they would look from their cups to their bread. I stood there and cried like a baby, nor can I recall that picture yet without a tear. I know we fed ten thousand orphans coming through like that. I shall never get through thanking the Lord and the Methodist Church for giving me such an opportunity to serve."

"Refugees began to pour in. We decided to put up a kitchen for them. This we did out east of Prague about four kilometers where all the refugee trains stopped, sometimes for several days. The first day we fed about seven hundred. Then trains increased, so for three weeks we fed more than three thousand a day. Never in my life have I seen such misery. Many people were forced to leave their homes and fly for their lives with nothing except what they had on their backs. The condition of the children was most pitiful, and the poor soldiers would come in from the front, many times having gone five days without food. In the midst of this a terrible epidemic of dysentery broke out. Many a time have I had them fall on my canteen steps. They would hear that we had something warm to eat, and they imagined that if they could just get up there they'd be all right; so they would try to come and often would fall on their way. One night we had four to die."

FROM OAK RIDGE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: May I have space in the Advocate to sound a note for the good people of Oak Ridge charge? We are spending a most joyful and prosperous "year's end" at Oak Ridge. In many respects, this is the most pleasurable and successful year that I have had in the Kingdom of our Lord. While our work has been constant and laborlous, the results are forthcoming and evident. Our parishioners are genlal, responsive and appreciative. Many of them are religious, and enthusiastic, deeming it a privilege to serve their church and pastor. Indeed our lot, for a great part, has fallen in pleasant places. The Lord is our "guide and counsellor."

Our work is as broad as the rural parts of Warren County and as commanding as sin; but as promising as a reviving orchard. We have six preaching appointments ranging from four to twenty-two miles in various directions from our parsonage. We give one of these churches, viz. the home church, two Sunday morning and evening services, going out in the afternoons to other appointments. This implies that we have three preaching services almost every Sunday. My young wife and I serve this work with a little roan horse and buggy that is always ready to move. In emergency cases we call upon our kind neighbors and friends who, with their cars, very gladly and surely enable us to meet all engagements of that character.

We have had "protracted meetings" at all these churches. Some were conducted on the "old-time country style;" but, while in a great degree successful, with little "old-time shouting." We had a good many accessions, some conversions and reclamations, and many resolutions. The following brethren very faithfully and conscientiously served us: Revs. W. T. Griffin, D. W. Ulmer, M. J. Miller, J. W. Price and P. E., J. R. Jones. All these men came to us with power, and labored as "workmen that needeth not to be ashamed," etc. The writer conducted, in late summer, meetings at Oak Ridge and Culkin's Academy—driving very hard at prevalent besetting sins, resulting at least in much increased and substantial congregations. I never had more freedom to say what I feel prompted to say than in these meetings, and in these congregtons. The Lord has abundantly blessed us

During the year we have organized one Sunday school and revived another, which are now doing splendid work. We have set about reviving another, and to this end we had a most interesting institute program, conducted under the auspices of the Warren County Sunday School Association, on Sunday, October 17. We have this fall organized an Epworth League at Oak Ridge which has already yielded wonderful results. Our congregations at some points have remained regular with little change; some have been improved substantially, while still others have increased remarkably. At the home church the attendance has tripled during the last three months. During this time the young people have given time and place to League services.

We have now completed for the painter a $500 repair job in and around the parsonage. Some few repairs have been put in two of our church buildings, and our good folks at another are to re-roof theirs in a very short time, having a healthy fund in hand for this purpose.

Notwithstanding the short crops and cut prices of farm products, and the natural effect on the community, we hope to report all our benevolences in full, except possibly a few pledges on the Centenary. The finances are in general thrown into the hands of the stewards and committees. Of course the pastor will be cared for. We have recently received at the hands of one little congregation a most gorgeous shower of good things we look for shower of good things; we look for of the spiritual. We humbly praise God from whom all blessings flow. Pray for us.

Yours in His work.
C. Y. HIGGINBOTHAM.

What is Nuxated Iron?

Physician Explains — Says Public Ought to Know What They Are Taking — Practical Advice on What to Do to Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance and Increase the Red Blood Corpuscles

The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over four million people annually and that so many physicians are prescribing it as a tonic, strength and blood builder in weak, nervous, rundown conditions has led to an investigation of its merits by designated physicians and others whose reports should be of great importance to the public generally. Among these is the statement made by Dr. James Francis Sullivan formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and Westchester County Hospital, who says: "When one patient after another began asking my opinion of Nuxated Iron, I resolved to go thoroughly into the subject and find out for myself whether or not it possessed the real value claimed by its manufacturers and attested to by so many prominent people. This is exactly what I believe every honest conscientious physician should do before prescribing or lending his endorsement to any product whatsoever. If an article is worthless we practitioners ought to be the first to know of it and if it is efficacious we are in duty bound to recommend it for the welfare of our patients. A study of the composition of the Nuxated Iron formula so impressed me with the therapeutic efficacy of the product that I immediately tested it in a number of obstinate cases. So quickly did it increase the strength, energy and endurance of the patients to whom it was administered that I became firmly convinced of its remarkable value as a tonic and blood builder. I have since taken it myself with excellent results. There are thousands of delicate, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as this but do not know what to take. Therefore I have urgently suggested the widespread publication of the above statement of the composition of its formula so that the public may know what they are taking. This complete formula is now to be found in newspapers throughout the country. It is composed principally of organic iron in the form of iron peptonate (of a special specific standard) and glycerophosphates which is one of the most costly tonic ingredients known. To the credit of the manufacturers it may be said that they use the most expensive form of iron peptonate, whereas by employing other makes they could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one fourth the cost and by using metallic iron they could have reduced the cost to less than one twelfth, but by thus cheapening the product they would undoubtedly have impaired its therapeutic efficacy. In my opinion a careful examination of this formula by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that Nuxated Iron is to be placed among the very highest class and most strictly ethical preparations known to medical science. It excels anything I have ever used for building up the system and increasing the red blood corpuscles thereby enriching and fortifying the blood against the ravages of disease.

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from such forms of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write today.

DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

CAPUDINE

IT'S LIQUID—QUICK EFFECT.

THE FAULT-FINDER CONDEMNED.

The Rev. Manfred C. Wright.

Christ's word against judging does not preclude condemnation in legal procedure, or rejecting unworthy men aspiring to office, or parental disapproval of children's misconduct, or wise personal discrimination for one's moral guidance. It strikes at the violation of the law of love—censorious and aimless criticism, uncharitable judgments, obsessions of ridicule, cynicism, social dissections, unfriendly suspicion which springs from animal wariness and not from divine trust, bluntness which bruises but does not cure.

Like the devil, this sin frequently appears in saintly guise—under cover of honest dealing, plain speaking, loyalty to high ideals. Like other sins, it appears in many forms—assuming the dangerous form of wit; damning its victim with faint praise; keeping an attitude of silence in the presence of detraction; hypocritically seeking to hide one's own fault by uncovering one in another.

Unlike some other sins, this one captures many, even some of the saints. They may not lie, dissipate, cheat, or swear, but here is a fault that easily besets the most godly. Nevertheless Christ branded it no less than he did stealing, intemperance, falsifying, and profanity. It injures the better self of the one so criticised and so maligns the divine image in men. Motives, circumstances, training are ignored by which, if the victim were judged, he might far outshine the critic. From casual impressions unfriendly judgments are passed which create false personalities. Then wrong impressions, passed on to others, are taken for the real person, and lasting injustice results. Such defamation occurs in journalism and men bear to their death the injury of false caricatures. Literature richly exemplifies it. Silas Marner, innocent, is ruined by rumors. Dodson, condemned as a miser, is found when dead to have given all his wealth to charity. And the worst of it is, those given to censure are frequently most deserving of blame.

Fault-finding reacts. The censorious person becomes cynical, reflecting the faults he sees in others, until he robs himself of those ennobling qualities which come from the habit of looking for the best. His very superior qualities become the author of unkindness as he seeks to standardize them upon others. As the proofreader after awhile sees only typographical errors and not the content of the printed page, cynicism revenges itself upon the cynic by blinding him to spiritual beauty. Dean Swift, satirist, becomes as unlovely as the pictures he paints of the world and dies a raving maniac.

The evils of sinful censuring in family, church, and social life are greatly to be deplored. Unloving censure may drive an erring one farther from rectitude and break up a home. In a church it throttles spiritual progress and reproaches the name of Christ. Bitterness among the denominations in the past has most delighted the devil and divided the body of Christ. Directed toward fallen girls in society it has forced them into a life of shame and barred their return to the Father's house.

Carried to extreme against public officials, it has calloused them to a finer public opinion when co-operation and appreciation might have saved them to a better public service and noble purposes.

"With what judgment ye mete it shall be measured to you again." When judgment must be given, let it be given with a rectifying purpose and from the motive of love, and always in good humor in the absence of anger and envy and pride. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." To us is given not the word of criticism, but the word of reconciliation. We are responsible not so much for rectifying the world as ourselves. There are set thrones of judgment, but these for most part belong to God. "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."—Western Christian Advocate.

RELIEF FOR PROSTRATE POLAND.

The Methodist Polish Relief, authorized by the Board of Missions in an attempt to save from death by freezing thousands of the suffering people of Poland, has met with a hearty response from all sections of the church. The first campaign for clothing was conducted on October 17, but the canvasses should be pushed with all possible vigor until it has been carried out thoroughly in every congregation.

The work of saving the Polish people will continue throughout the winter, and the Methodist Polish Relief accordingly urges all of the churches to continue their work of securing the necessary articles of clothing. The relief workers of our church who are struggling with the desperate situation are beseeching us by letters and cables to push the movement with all possible speed, and send them clothing in great abundance. Preparations have already been made for shipment and distribution, and the life or death of multiplied thousands now depends upon local congregations.

Bishop Atkins, who has just returned from a tour of the unhappy country, reports that there are now more than 1,300,000 children in Poland who are too young to get food even by begging, and must be kept from starvation by help from without. "I saw babies in Warsaw not over six weeks of age who had been picked up and nobody knew to whom they belonged," says Bishop Atkins. "Thousands of old men and women from whom all hope has gone are as needy and helpless as the infants. The people have turned and patched and remade their clothes until nothing is left. They must be helped or perish from the effects of the cold winter. All ages are involved. Old people will pass off by mere exposure and the cries of shivering infants will ascend to heaven against those who will not help at such a time. We want every tender-hearted member of our church to take some part in this enterprise to clothe Poland."

Miss Margaret Quayle, one of our relief workers in Warsaw, says that nothing we have is too poor to send to Poland. The people would be glad to have the rags which we use to scrub our floors. The articles of clothing which we cast aside as worthless would be received by them with the greatest delight. This is an appeal which should lay hold on the heart of every Christian person, and the missionary societies are urged to hasten the work in every possible way.

When clothing has been secured it should be securely and tightly packed in bundles of fifty pounds each and sent by parcel post to

THIS MONTH AND CATARRH.

Many people find that during this month, catarrh is so aggravated by sudden changes of weather, indiscretions in the matter of clothing, and other things, that it becomes constantly troublesome.

There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, also relieves catarrh, and aids in the prevention of consumption.

It is not easy to see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its remarkable successes. It is called by its proprietors America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

In some cases there is occasionally need of a thorough cathartic or gentle laxative, and in these cases Hood's Pills are taken with very satisfactory results.—Adv.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 67—No. 46. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South Whole No. 3377.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1920. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

First Day.

The Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in its seventy-fifth annual session, in the First Methodist Church at De Ridder, on Wednesday morning, November 3, at 9 o'clock, Bishop W. F. McMurry presiding. The devotional exercises, consisting of singing, prayer, scripture reading, and appropriate remarks, were conducted by the Bishop.

The roll was called by the secretary of the preceding session of the Conference, Dr. F. S. Parker. The roll call showed that 17 women had been elected as lay delegates. Of these, only 5 were present at the opening session. Dr. F. S. Parker, after having served most efficiently as secretary for twenty years, and after being nominated for this session, earnestly requested that his name be withdrawn. His request was granted and, on nomination of Briscoe Carter, R. H. Harper was unanimously elected secretary. Jno. F. Foster and W. L. Doss, Jr., were elected his assistants, on nomination of the secretary. After his nomination as statistical secretary, R. W. Vaughan, who has filled this position with unusual ability for sixteen years, earnestly requested to be relieved of this work on account of other heavy duties devolving upon him. His request was granted, and P. H. Fontaine was elected statistical secretary. George Fox, J. M. Boykin and Jas. E. Selle were elected as assistant statistical secretaries.

Dr. F. S. Parker was elected secretary of the superannuate roll, to co-operate with Dr. Luther E. Todd, General Secretary of the Board of Finance, in securing accuracy in data concerning the records of superannuates.

After fixing the main auditorium of the church as the bar of the Conference and fixing the hours of convening and adjourning at 9 and 12 o'clock, various communications were referred, without reading, to appropriate Boards.

Dr. F. S. Parker read a statement from Mr. J. D. Hamilton, treasurer of the Board of Missions, showing that the value of certain shares of stock in a Louisiana sulphur company, reputed to be very valuable, are really of no present value at all; and their future value is dependent upon the discovery of oil or other valuable minerals upon land devised to the Board by Truxton Lowell, deceased. In this connection, W. W. Holmes called attention to the fact that A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, had, at his own expense, had the body of Truxton Lowell removed from an abandoned cemetery and re-interred in the cemetery at Lake Charles. On motion a vote of thanks was extended Brother Mayo for this act.

The Committee on Nominations made its report, which was adopted.

On motion, the action of the preceding Conference, providing that only preaching services should be held at the evening hour, was rescinded, after some discussion, and the nature of the service was left to the discretion of the Committee on Public Worship.

R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, read his report and the report of the president of the board of trustees, which were referred to the Orphanage Board. These reports showed that the receipts for the maintenance fund have been sufficient to meet the needs of the institution thus far, and that approximately $225,000 has been secured in cash and pledges for carrying out the proposed enlargement program.

Dr. Luther E. Todd, General Secretary of the Board of Finance, and Dr. O. E. Goddard, Secretary of the Home Departments of the Board of Missions, were presented to the Conference. Rev. E. M. Stewart, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, Rev. A. M. Shaw, and Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, transferred last year from the Little Rock and the Mississippi Conferences respectively, were also presented.

The Bishop announced that Dr. Jno. A. Rice, of the chair of Old Testament Literature in Southern Methodist University, had been transferred to the Louisiana Conference from the South Carolina Conference. Dr. Rice is no stranger in Louisiana, having served four years as pastor of Rayne Memorial, New Orleans. Dr. Rice was present and received a cordial welcome from his many friends in the Conference.

The Bishop called Question 17: "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The names of H. W. May, presiding elder of the Alexandria District; A. S. Lutz, of the Baton Rouge District; Martin Hebert, of the Houma District; H. W. Bowman, of the Lake Charles District; C. D. Atkinson, of the Monroe District; J. G. Snelling, of the New Orleans District, and J. M. Henry, of the Ruston District, were called, they gave account of the work of their districts, and their characters were passed. Encouraging progress was reported on each of their districts. It is evident that this has been a year of church building and revival effort. Several of the districts reported a fine net increase in membership.

The names of the superannuates and the supernumeraries were then called and their characters passed. Rev. J. M. Brown, Rev. W. F. Henderson, and Rev. F. N. Sweeney, three of the veterans of the Conference, were present and addressed the Conference. Rev. J. F. Wynn, Rev. M. G. Jenkins, and Rev. T. J. Embree having died since the last session of the Conference, their names were referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

Rev. Paul M. Brown, who was granted the supernumerary relation at the last session of the Conference, returned to the active ranks.

On motion of R. W. Tucker, the Bishop appointed a committee consisting of R. W. Tucker, A. S. Lutz, and W. W. Drake, to prepare a suitable expression of appreciation on the part of the Conference of the services of Dr. F. S. Parker, the retiring secretary of the Conference, for a period of twenty years.

W. W. Holmes suggested that the Minutes of the Conference be so edited as to show the actual time of service of men who have located and then have been re-admitted. The suggestion was adopted.

On motion of W. W. Drake the order of the day for Thursday, beginning at 10 o'clock, was made the educational program.

Dr. O. E. Goddard addressed the Conference, laying emphasis upon the urgent importance of paying the Centenary pledges as they become due.

Announcements were then made and the Conference adjourned with the benediction by Rev. J. M. Brown.

Afternoon Service.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Dr. O. E. Goddard delivered an effective message in connection with the Centenary in relation to world needs.

Evening Service.

At the evening hour Dr. Luther E. Todd, General Secretary of the Board of Finance, which is charged with the work of making adequate provision for the support of the superannuated ministers of the church, made a thrilling address on the great cause he represents. At its close, a collection of over $700 was taken to offset income tax expenses in connection with the Superannuate Fund.

Second Day.

The Conference convened at 9 o'clock a. m., Bishop McMurry presiding. The devotional exercises were conducted by R. W. Tucker, with prayer by Dr. A. F. Watkins. The minutes of yesterday's session were read and approved.

A communication was read from W. C. Everett, manager of the Dallas branch of the Publishing House, and the representative of the Publishing House, Mr. Bell, was presented.

The Bishop read an extract from a personal letter from Mr. H. H. Ahrens, formerly a member of this Conference, expressing his affection for the brethren and his regret at being unable to attend the Conference this year. On motion the secretary was instructed to send greetings to Mr. Ahrens.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions was read by A. J. Gearheard, urging all charges to pay 40 per cent of Centenary pledges by December 31.

Geo. S. Sexton and G. A. Morgan were added to the Board of Missions to fill vacancies.

Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called. J. L. Greenway, Jr., and D. J. Wilson, having met the necessary requirements, were, by vote of the Conference, admitted on trial.

Question 17 was called. S. S. Holladay made his report, his character was passed, and, at his request, his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

The time for the order of the day having arrived, the educational program was introduced by singing hymn No. 687, and an inspiring address by Bishop McMurry. Dr. A. F. Watkins, of the Mississippi Conference, president of Millsaps College, was then presented to the Conference and spoke on the Objectives of the Christian Education Movement. Dr. F. N. Parker, Dean of the Candler School of Theology, a greatly beloved member of the Louisiana Conference, then addressed the Conference on the Educational Movement.

The Bishop called Question 5, "Who are readmitted?" Lastie N. Hoffpauir was readmitted by vote of the Conference.

Question 3, "Who are discontinued?" was called, and was answered in the negative.

Announcements were made and the Conference adjourned with the benediction by Rev. J. D. Harper.

Afternoon Session.

The educational program was continued at the afternoon session. After devotional exercises, and the reading and approval of the minutes of the morning session, inspiring addresses were delivered by Dr. John A. Rice, of the chair of Old Testament Literature in Southern Methodist University, and Rev. J. L. Neill, of the Mississippi Conference, secretary of Missionary Education in the Sunday schools.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was presented by W. W. Drake. The report recommended the acceptance of the askings, approved and surplus, apportioned to the Louisiana Conference in the great Christian Education Movement, as follows: Approved askings, Connectional Interests, including Emory University, Southern Methodist University and our eight missionary schools, $1,000,000; Centenary College, $500,000; Mansfield College, $150,000; Seashore Camp Ground School, $12,500. Surplus askings, $267,000. It was recommended that of the first $265,000 surplus askings, $200,000 go to Mansfield College, $60,000 to Centenary College, and $5,000 to Seashore Camp Ground School, or in that proportion, and that the surplus above that figure be apportioned on the same ratio of the approved askings. This report was unanimously and heartily adopted.

The afternoon session adjourned with the benediction by Dr. F. N. Parker.

Evening Service.

The evening service, presided over by W. W. Drake, was devoted to further consideration of our educational interests. A stirring address was delivered by Dr. Paul B. Kern, Dean of the Theological Department of Southern Methodist Univer-

THE TWO VOICES—IN MEMORIAM.

(A tribute to the late Mrs. J. G. Moore)

By J. E. Dosroh.

(The First Voice)

"Sweet, come away! We missed your dear voice chanting
Our songs of praise before His mercy seat:
Its soft, glad melody alone was wanting
To make the song complete.

"Sweet, come away! We sought you in the roses;
We searched in vain each oft-frequented spot,
Beneath the palms and in the laurel closes
We sought and found you not.

"Sweet, come away! Adown the shining river
The white swans float, while on each rosy edge
The fragrant breezes set the ferns aquiver
And stir the golden sedge.

"Sweet, come away! The nightingale is soaring,
Singing the notes that dell and dale prolong,
Pulsing with joy, his voice in rapture pouring
His heart out in a song.

"Sweet Lois, come! O'er Heaven's white walls leaning,
As one entranced, you stand and gaze afar,
Your bright eyes luminous with hidden meaning
Fixed on yon distant star."

(The Second Voice)

"I keep my tryst beside the outer portals,
I watch for one who soon to me shall come,
Love-drawn from out that far-off land of mortals,
To her eternal Home.

"Far, far away I hear the sound of weeping;
Faint on my ear the alien echo rings;
Out of the vast I hear the upward sweeping
Of swift, pulsating wings.

"She comes, she comes! Oh, Angels of the starlight,
Sunlight and love-light, all the way illume
Shed o'er her path the near light and the far light.
Mother is coming Home.

"I clasp once more those dear hands, whose caressing
In tender touches falls on cheek and brow;
Close to my heart once more her dear heart pressing.
I am so happy now.

"Sweet Mother-love! Earth's dearest gift that crowned me:
Crown of my crown thro' all eternity.
Sweet Mother near, and her dear arms around me
Is heaven enough for me."

TEMPERANCE REFORM IN GREAT BRITAIN.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

From Geneva I went to Scotland to fill an engagement of eighteen months' standing to speak in the Scottish Local Option campaign. The sentiment against the liquor traffic, or "The Trade," as it is called in Great Britain, is much stronger in Scotland and Wales and in Ireland than it is in England. The Scottish Temperance leaders had pressed for and had secured from the Asquith Ministry a Local Option Bill in 1912, which gave the right to vote by wards or boroughs in 1920, thus giving the Trade eight years to set its house in order. The bill provides three options: no change; decrease in number of licenses; no public house. The Temperance Societies of Scotland have been preparing for the contest, especially for the past two years, and during the past few months the various societies have banded themselves together and under one General Committee the whole country is being thoroughly and efficiently canvassed. It should be known to our people that in addition to the work done by Mr. Johnson, whose name has become a flag for Temperance Reform in Great Britain, and who has recently returned, three official workers of the Anti-Saloon League of America have been giving their full time to the Scottish campaign for the past year.

In the winter and spring of 1919, I had made a number of addresses in Edinburgh and Glasgow and in neighboring towns, and had held several conferences with the leaders. As the election is to be held on November 2 of this present year, I promised that if possible I would return and give such assistance as I could the present summer and fall.

There has been a decided change in the situation during the past year. In the spring of 1919, the feeling for the United States was kindly, indeed grateful; Americans were popular, and while even then the Trade had its emissaries at the meetings I addressed, the audiences opposed anything more than mild heckling. In Edinburgh three men who continuously interrupted were taken out by six other men, by head and heals, and unceremoniously ejected from the building; and in Reading, a man who persisted in loud interruptions was led out by the police. But this year the difference in spirit and attitude was marked. The people have resented the failure of the United States to sign the Peace Treaty. They naturally believe that if all the other nations can sign the Treaty, the United States can do likewise; and if there are defects in the Treaty and in the League Covenant, they can be remedied by mutual agreement later on. They look upon us as a nation of shirkers. They think that we have withdrawn at the critical time in the world's history, and have left to the Allies, and especially to Great Britain, the heavy burden and responsibility of the work of reconstruction of the shattered, well-nigh destroyed fabric of stable government in Europe. Inasmuch as our Government, acting through the Republican Senate, has refused to bear its share of the world's burdens, the influence of Americans with the masses of the British people has greatly declined. The Trade, ever alert to becloud the issue, has taken advantage of the present attitude of the popular mind and has attempted to prejudice the people against the Local Option movement in Great Britain by branding it as "imported from America," as an effort of American busybody to tell the British people what they shall do.

In view of this situation, if they are not to do more harm than good, American speakers must be exceedingly careful, both in the manner and in the matter of their speeches. To go into Great Britain as Crusaders, declaring that we will lead in the fight to overthrow the Liquor Traffic would be not only offensive but foolish, and would be resented by the masses of the people. The Trade has recognized this fact and has gone to the limit, by poster, circulars and speeches, to prejudice the Local Option movement as "made in America," as promoted and carried on by American money and agitation.

With a clear recognition of this fact, it has been the habit of the writer to speak and to write as one requested by the temperance leaders of Great Britain to testify as a witness on "Why and How the United States Adopted Prohibition." Audiences in England, Scotland and Ireland, composed of friends and of opponents of prohibition for their own countries, will ordinarily listen with great interest to a recital of what we have done in the United States, but the Trade now has become so thoroughly aroused that it nearly always has its agents at public meetings, who will go to any limit the audience will permit to destroy the effectiveness of a speaker, breaking up the meeting entirely, if it is possible. There is much greater liberty given to "heckling" in Great Britain than in the United States. Our law and especially our custom protects persons who are holding a public meeting from such conduct as will seriously interrupt it, and we consider it to be the duty of the police to arrest such disturbers as are guilty of a breach of the peace.

I had experiences this year of a varied nature. I made four open-air speeches in one of the mining districts of Fifeshire, in one of which the male portion of the crowd was almost entirely hostile and resented my presence, ostensibly because I was an American, really because they do not want the public houses to be closed, and do not want anybody to hear any testimony in favor of that policy. I was exhorted in vigorous and somewhat profane and opprobrious language to go back to America and stay there along with the rest of my cowardly, money-loving, hypocritical countrymen. The questions asked had been framed by the Trade and were easy to anybody who had been in our American fight. Such meetings have a certain element of uncertainty as to what may happen, which makes them interesting, if not exciting.

In Dundee the experience was different, but the purpose was the same. Three of my meetings were in churches, and the audiences were greatly interested, and the questions intelligent and expressive of a desire for real enlightenment. The one exception was an open-air meeting on Sunday afternoon on the Albert Square, which is located in the very heart of Dundee. The Square is surrounded with great public buildings and churches, and several of the principal streets of the city run through it. So many people passed to and fro that it was easy to secure a crowd at almost any time. On that afternoon there were four different meetings going on at different points on the Square, all well attended, all discussing different subjects. At our meeting we had a small organ, some singers and the speakers stood on a lorry. There were some minor interruptions at different points in my speech, which, as they were not especially vicious, were easily met; but at a point in the speech where I was describing the methods used in Virginia and Tennessee to abolish the saloons, showing that step by step dry area increased from district to county, from town to city, from county to State, and finally from State to nation, the latent antagonism could no longer be restrained, and a woman whom I later learned was the wife of a public house keeper, possessed of the shrillest voice I think I ever heard, opened fire. She demanded my immediate return to the selfish, cowardly, money-loving, thick-skinned Yankees, whom she declared to have stayed out of the war in order to grab the trade of the world while Great Britain was fighting for liberty. She said we had come into the war only because we were afraid that Germany would win, and we would lose all the money due us by the Allied nations. She was especially vigorous in denouncing Americans as a race of quitters and shirkers, who, as soon as the war was over, had gone back to their selfish money-getting, leaving Great Britain to carry the heavy end of the log. She declared that the British people needed no advice or assistance from a nation which had stood by without giving assistance while British boys were being slaughtered by the Germans. She scarcely mentioned the Liquor Traffic, but confined herself almost entirely to denunciations of American attitude toward the war and the League of Nations. It was practically impossible to speak at all while her shrill voice was shrieking out denunciations, and candor compels the statement that with my views on the League of Nations I could not have made any defense of the position in which the United States had been placed by the Republican majority in the United States Senate. Having unburdened herself of her carefully chosen epithets and denunciations, she gradually moved out of the crowd, but whenever I began to speak she would turn and indulge in a fresh outbreak, and this continued until she had gone at least two full blocks, the shrillness of her voice easily carrying her words that distance. This incident illustrates the shrewdness of the Trade in endeavoring to becloud the main issue and exciting the antagonism of the people toward American speakers so that if possible their speeches may not be delivered, or, if delivered, may lose much of their effect. It is the time old trick of "abusing the plaintiff's attorney."

A fair estimate of the conditions may be obtained with Dundee as an average case. The population of Dundee is 181,800 (about the size of Richmond, Virginia, or Birmingham, Alabama); the number of licenses to sell intoxicants is 389—one license to every 467 men, women and children in Dundee; tho arrests for drunkenness in 1918 were 810; in 1919 arrests for drunkenness were males 952, females 394—total 1346, an increase over 1918 of 536, or over 65 per cent. The average expenditure for drink in Scotland was about $35 per capita, which would give a Drink Bill for Dundee of about $6,350,000. With such drunkenness, especially among women, and such an enormous expenditure, it is evident that the Temperance workers have a tremendous appeal to every Scotchman who loves his country above his own personal indulgence.

From what I saw and heard at the meetings and from conferences with the dry leaders, I think it possible that a large number of the wards and boroughs will vote dry in the November elections. The terms of the bill put the drys at a decided disadvantage. Tho bill requires that the drys shall secure 55 per cent of tho number of votes cast, and that at least 35 per cent of the total electorate shall vote dry. In view of tho fact that these conditions are not imposed in the elections for public offices, and frequently one-half of the voters do not come to the polls, indifference resulting in abstention from voting may result in prohibition defeat.

Having studied the prohibition situation in Great Britain during all four of my visits in the past two years, the following conclusions seem to be warranted:

In 1918, while the war was at its height, the British people submitted to the restrictions imposed by the Liquor Control Board because everything was of comparatively minor importance in comparison with the winning of the war. In consequence there was a great decrease in crimes and in the number of arrests for drunkenness, especially among women, and it was impossible for anyone to ignore the great benefits which came from the restrictive use of liquor. In 1919 some of the restrictions were removed and the alcoholic content was increased. The result was a startling increase in crimes and arrests for drunkenness, tho arrests of women being more than doubled, as shown above in Dundee. In my visit last spring and again this past summer tho temperance workers were emphasizing to the utmost the lessons and the warnings given by the war.

There is a great number of Temperance Societies in England, many more than in the United States. The leaders of the societies with whom I have had opportunity to confer have been the Hon. Lief Jones, Canon Masterman, Mr. G. B. Wilson and Sir George Hunter of the United Kingdom Alliance; the Countess of Carlisle and Miss Agnes Slack of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union; Mr. F. G. Creed and Dr. C. W. Saleeby of tho Strength of Britain Movement; Rev. Henry Carter and tho Hon. Walter Runnciman of the Wesleyan Temperance Committee; and the Bishops of Croyden and Willsden of the Church of England Temperance Society. While there is not entire agreement as to methods, it seems that the lessons of the war have resulted in a greater spirit of union, especially among the churches. The Temperance Council of the Christian churches, which is composed of representatives of practically all the denominations, has among its sponsors, not only the non-conformist leaders, but also the Archbishop of Canterbury of the Anglican Church and Cardinal Bourne of the Roman Catholic Church. This Council has united upon a platform of nine points, which not only include educative and restrictive provisions, but also has as its climax Local Veto, which means the same in Great Britain as Local Option in the United States. The churches of Great Britain have been stirred as never before to a sense of their responsibility for the existence and for the evils of the Liquor Traffic. And just as it happened in the United States, so I believe it will happen in Great Britain, that all the denominations will gradually come into line, and join in the fight whole-heartedly to overthrow the Trade.

I was privileged to be present at the debate in th House of Commons last April on the Welsh Local Option Bill, and I was delighted at the vigor and the effectiveness of the speeches of the advocates of Local Option. The most attractive and forceful of all tho speakers was our Virginia-born member of Parliament, Viscountess Astor, formerly Miss Nancy Langhorne. While such a speech would not be strange to Americans, accustomed to the speeches of Miss Willard, Miss Gordon, Mrs. Yost, Miss Stoddard and other women prohibition leaders in America, it was a new note sounded in the House of Commons. Never before in all the history of that body had there been such speeches as those made by Lady Astor in her maiden effort and later in the debate on the Welsh Bill.

The active entrance of Lady Astor into the conflict against the Drink Traffic has tremendously stimulated interest, and has given an exceedingly influential voice in favor of the great reform, not only in the forum where legislation must be formulated, tho House of Commons—but also on the public platform, where every appearance of Lady Astor is greeted by great crowds, and where with persistent good humor and alert intelligence she meets the hecklers, and does tremendously efficient service.

The vicious attacks which have been made upon Lady Astor by the Trade and its supporters are not surprising to Prohibition workers in America, who know that abuse, slander, vilification are favorite weapons of the Trade, and their use in Great Britain is the most encouraging sign that the Trade considers that the conflict is entering upon the last great stage. As Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador to the United States, said officially at the International Congress against Alcoholism in Washington on September 21, "the whole British Empire is watching with intense interest your great experiment in Prohibition." He might truthfully have continued that if we fight as intelligently and persistently to enforce the 18th Amendment as we did to secure its ratification, Prohibition will soon be recognized as not only reasonable but the necessary policy in every civilized country.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Dear Brother Carley: During the past six years I have written many "tales of the old time"—tales concerning men, women and things—but I have indulged sparingly in personal reminiscences. In a great majority of the things written about, I played no part. It was never my fortune to be the leader in any great enterprise, or to be tho hero in any thrilling incident. All my life I have been only a plain Methodist preacher. This scroll will be wholly personal.

I began my career by authority of the quarterly conference of the La Grange circuit, Memphis Annual Conference, my license bearing the signature of E. C. Slater, P. E., Whiteville, Tenn., February 13, 1859. For nearly ten months I exercised in the local ranks, exhorting, helping different preachers in their meetings, and sometimes went on excursions "all by myself." It was during this period that the presiding elder put me up to preach in the afternoon at a quarterly meeting. I don't remember the subject of the discourse, but I call to mind that quaint John Hunt, a rich old "brother-in-law" of tho church, took the wind out of my sails by saying: "That boy began where his daddy left off."

I did not always pass among strangers for what I thought I was. Everybody didn't snap at me for a preacher, then, nor for a long time afterwards. Sometime in July I was making my way to a little village. Late in tho afternoon I struck a bit of road that was rather obscure, and I was not sure of being on the right track. Just then an old colored man came in sight, and I made inquiry. He very politely gave me directions; after which, as politely and delicately as he knew how, he said, "Massa, does you ride de mail?" I told him, no. "Well, Massa, what does you do enny how?" I told him that I tried to preach. He was astonished, for I was but a beardless boy. "Well, well, Massa, what kind of a preacher is you?" I knew he didn't intend to ask about the quality of the preaching, but to what church I belonged, and I replied: "I am a Methodist." "Ise a Baptis myself," he said, "but I lack to hear 'em all. I wish you would come down to Ole Egyp and preach for us." I thanked the old man, and rode on. Mighty few old colored men, that learned lessons of politeness from "Ole Master," are living.

I was received on trial into the traveling connection by the Memphis Conference and started to my first circuit, November 30, 1859, the day I was twenty years of age. From that time on for many years, in the matter of circuits and stations I had a "streak of fat and a streak of lean." My first appointment was Holly Springs circuit, among the best; then the Oxford circuit, one of the largest and poorest charges in the Conference. From there I went to the Sardis circuit, the cream of the South. After that came Hickory Flat, a duplicate of the Oxford work except in size. My tenth appointment was Grenada station, where I remained three years. Dear old Grenada!

Between 1859 and 1869 the war intervened. That is why some of the circuits I traveled were so hard. With all the boys in the army, and a majority of the men of middle age, it was with difficulty that many people obtained a living. What little they had they gladly shared with me. But as I did not eat beef or mutton, and used neither milk nor butter, my living was often very scant. But the time came when I felt that I ought to do something to help myself. Fortunately I undertook to make shoes. I soon learned the art, and in a little while I could turn off a pair of shoes—rough ones—in as short a time as any one. Then I got to making boots—could make a pair a day. Home-made boots of the best calfskin brought fifteen dollars. I sold mine for ten, and made a fair profit.

During the war I went from house to house and made shoes for the whole family, the head of the house supplying the material, which was home-tanned, much of the sole leather being little better than rawhide. I made the pegs of maple wood, and the lasts of persimmon. Nothing of the kind was on the market—there was no market. Country blacksmiths made my awls. Old Brother Fowler near Chulahoma made the best.

One hot day during wheat harvest I was at Brother John I. Collier's plying my trade. He had working for him a man by the name of Jake Baysinger, a great big, heavy, healthy fellow, at times a hard worker, though work was not at all to his liking. He was weak-minded—in fact, an idiot, and had to be controlled like a child. Brother Collier was the only man in the community that could manage him and keep him at work any length of time. Jake came in at noon, hot and tired. I was pegging away as fast as I could. He stood and looked at me a long time without speaking. Finally he said: "Well, if I could make shoes like you, I'd build me a shop in the shade, shore." Not much idiocy about that, considering the weather, and the work Jake had been doing.

I made my own shoes from 1861 to 1885. For ten years or longer I made them on the same pair of lasts—engine-turned lasts, manufactured somewhere up North. No matter what kind of leather I used, the shoes fit like a glove from the start. From 1885 to the present I haven't had a pair of new shoes that didn't hurt my feet. I followed the business of working for the public a year or so longer than I should. I realized that after it was too late. My plea for continuing, which I thought was a good one, was based on the fact that the people were as poor for several years after the war as at any time during its progress. As a matter of fact, two years after its close, I had a harder time than ever, and among people many of whom had been rich.

For many years it has not been necessary for me to make shoes for a living, nor to supplement my salary, but all along I have kept up the habit of doing something outside of preaching and reading and editing bad copy. I still work. I work the ground. I do it of choice and for the pleasure and pardonable pride of eating, and feeding my family on home-grown food fresh from mother earth. In the working season I don my blue overalls the same as any hired man and spend an hour every morning, and from two to three hours in the afternoon, in my garden and truck patches. I do the biggest part of my work with a hoe, but during the past spring and summer I followed "old Dan" behind a plow up and down the corn rows.

I grow all the vegetables usually grown in a small family garden, and in abundance. Outside the garden I grow potatoes, sweet and Irish, cornfield peas and corn—the latter in succession—and have roasting ears from early summer until the coming of frost. And all along from the beginning of the season until its close I fairly revel in cantaloupes and watermelons. I don't know, but I think it probable that I raise as many melons as Brother Sam Steel does, and relish them quite as well. It goes without saying that I have to rise early. Of course I do, as it is twenty-four miles from my home to my office. It is not the pleasantest experience in the world, but it is healthy. At my time of life I could not keep up and keep going except for the constant bodily exercise that I take. I am thankful for the privilege and the opportunity. I don't think St. Paul had anything like this in mind when he said, "bodily exercise profiteth little."

If any of the Advocate's readers have gone through this letter and feel tired, I beg leave to refer them to the Editor, who will tell them if it is necessary, why it was written. He knows.

With love to everybody.

JNO. W. BOSWELL.

Nashville, October 26, 1920.

(It was at our earnest and urgent request that Dr. Boswell consented to give this intimate sketch of some of his personal experiences and habits of life. He is as remarkably well-preserved in body as he is vigorous in intellect—and his spirit is rarely radiant in the light that shines from the hilltops of the Beautiful Land. In asking Dr. Boswell to write this article, we had in mind the profit that might accrue to our younger preachers especially from the experience of so good a man. It is hardly necessary to add that we supplied the caption to the article.—Editor.)

COOLING OFF.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

In this day of rush and hurry, there is much comment here and there relative to the effect of the so-called liberal theology on soul-saving evangelism. Sociological study, philosophical investigation and scientific research, plus all the other helps that may be introduced, are powerless within themselves to save a precious immortal soul from death and hell. They have their proper place and it is not an unimportant one, but certain it is that the rating which the Bible gave men was based upon their spirituality, and not upon what they knew about philosophy and sociology. Men are great in proportion as they know God. Success to every enterprise for the betterment of humanity! But we lose efficiency when we become so enamored with social schemes and scientific methods that the heart is chilled, and our lives are dragged into a callous state. There must be a fervent spirit if we are to succeed in wrenching men of the world from their old wicked habits and wed them to Christ. Divine light in the head without Divine love in the heart has always been attended with disaster. Love is about the most winning thing that we know anything about, and when the love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit, the church will not only be busy but will also be winsome, forceful and divinely impressive.

Joyful News says: "The church has become a nursery instead of a camp, and we have taken to growing saints instead of converting sinners. Some argue that it is the more excellent way; and it is certainly the less heroic. There are no wild beasts in the nursery, and teaching the docile is less exacting than conquering rebels. Even evangelists evangelize within the churches. They have neither the daring nor the originality of thirty years ago. Missions do not stir towns and cities to their depths as they once did. Evangelism has got into ruts and become respectable. Fires are kept within bounds. Services are praised for their orderliness and quiet impressiveness The rollicking bolsterousness, quivering earnestness, and daring originality of Isaac Marsden, Squire Brooks, Thomas Collins and Peter Cartwright, their names are recalled with horror, and dismissed with contempt. Evangelism has become an art instead of a passion; the churches in some places have ceased to desire penitent-form conversions."

Lord George pleads with the churches to supply statesmen with an atmosphere and a dynamic. That is their work, but I doubt whether it can be supplied through pulpit denunciation of slumdom, or sermons on industrial problems. Atmosphere is the sum total of personal influence, and is most powerful when least sought. The work of the church is spiritual; its work is within the man. It serves the world by making saints who shall rule and save it. It touches all problems because all problems are rooted in the spiritual. "All things are ours." He that is spiritual judgeth all things. Our insistence is upon the spiritual character of the church, the sources of spiritual power for its work, and the effectiveness of the spiritual order in all works of redemption through the blood of Christ.

Strange to say, there are those among our religious leaders to-day who speak lightly of the atonement. How can this be, when we are plainly told that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins? Think of the sacrifices which were offered on Jewish altars for years to typify the blood of Jesus, which was to be shed for the sins of men! This is an age of new ideas and new methods, but, in seeking for something new, let us not let go the blessed truths of the Gospel, but hold to them just as they are taught in God's Word. These truths will stand the test when this old world shall be rolled in flames. They are safe to live by, and to die by. We shall find some time that not one of these truths, or of God's promises, has failed. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

All this would have been impossible to believe or even to think except for one thing: Paul knew, as the whole confessing Christian body knew, the reconciliation accomplished in the Cross of Christ. Man is the subject and victim of sin, and Paul, deeply sensitive to the world of spiritual fact and reality, had felt in his own person the fatal principle that had riven the mighty order and thrown it out of harmony with God. He felt the fatal antagonism that had separated God and man and had cried out in vain for deliverance. In the cross of Christ he (and they for whom he spoke out of the fulness of comprehension) had been reunited to God in Christ. For him and for them the rift had been closed, the world reconciled, the divine order potentially and assuredly restored. Here it is that Christian experience closes the historic circuit, for in Christ the desire of nations had been fulfilled and the world restored to harmony in God.

"God flashed His power into the void,
And thus His bidding ran:
Be thou through curve on curve employed
Of greater Life, till man,
Last-born, with clear will unallowed,
Turn Life where Life began.
In clear-drawn round the line was steered
Till man's powr seized its sway;
Through will unruled and spirit seared,
Was checked the circling play;
And Life fulfilled no perfect sphere,
God-born, God-ended way.
God's power flashed forth once more—and lo!
Whence Life had first begun
Life o'er the gap itself did throw
To Life whose sweep was done;
God the clift circle rounded so—
Man, God-grasped by God's Son."

TRAINING PREACHERS IN THE OLD SCHOOL.

By Rev. Payton A. Sowell.

The teacher and the school are vital facts. The high renown of ancient Greece owed its existence and glory to her wise teachers and her schools.

Prophets, priests, and preachers, form a positive class in the ages and the histories of the peoples of the earth. It seems marvelous, despite the varied faiths of the world, that no time has been that the prophet, or priest, or preacher—often all of them—has not been.

Their culture, their training, has been a vital matter. At least three lines of training seem important. They are to be men of affairs, they should possess the art to deal with their generations—get on in the world, with the world—direct the world. They should be trained, having already exercised saving faith, into a real enlargement—going on toward perfection—of a profound and rich religious life. Preachers without a religious spirit are no more than "professional" men. They are "sounding brass;" there is noise, but it is metallic.

They must be trained to preach. It is not altogether the length of the sermon, nor is it altogether the culture of the sermon. If the Scriptures are half as full and meritorious as we claim them to be, there is no poverty in the mine from which the preacher draws. True painters without any knowledge of ancestors, putting to canvass the features of the child, reproduce those of its great-grandparents. So the preacher needs a training that enables him to find the new and old. There is more to his message than mere "catch terms"—filling the lips in his time, of every "copyist."

What have been the methods or schools for the training of preachers?

The prophets, including Elijah, and even Elisha as it related to his own training, learned first—out of the depths of the invisible, spiritual realm—the deep conviction of duty and its solemn realities. Then they were trained in the school of service. They began and proceeded; and as they used and applied, the sphere of their resources grew. Elijah was senior preacher on "Gilgal" circuit, Elisha was junior, and went with Elijah from Gilgal to Bethel, from Bethel to Jericho, from Jericho to Jordan, from Jordan to the mountains. From those heights, he, being so trained in this school, beheld the chariot and horses; and so did the junior. When the senior had perfected his reports, and had gone to make them at the great Conference, Elisha planned to build a school on the banks of the Jordan to train the young prophets.

Some way—so far as the record shows—only mediocre candidates for the ministry matriculated, Elisha was a worthy successor and representative of his great master, who held the keys to the clouds, and stood on Carmel's summit, and faced the regiment of the priests of Baal. Elisha never lost his power or place. But not one of those whom he trained in the school on the bank of Jordan ever rose to the altitudes of service to which their master attained.

The heroism of his faith never became a part of their lives. They thought Elijah was lost in the mountains. They had no conception of anything beyond "cutting wood" and grieving over the ax lost in the river. These young prophets were so little accustomed to the practical, and so far removed from nature, they gathered a lapful of wild gourd leaves for pottage. Elisha had walked with Elijah; he understood something of the strong, unseen fellowships that entered into his life. Elisha knew Elijah was not lost in the mountains. Why should he waste time in telling those spiritually obtuse young prophets what he saw in the mountains? He knew his master had gone up the shining way. Even when Elisha had rounded out his illustrious career, and some new leader must be had some way, the man who received the call was not one of those trained at the school on the bank of Jordan. A heroic spirit was found; one trained in the same school as Elijah and Elisha came upon the arena. Isaiah, the son of Amoz, who was able to stand in the midst of a vision that filled the temple and made it quiver from floor to ceiling, came to stand for righteousness and God.

Methodism trained many hundreds in this "old school," calling them from among the fields and flocks, from among the mountains, from their proximity to nature; calling them in the sincerity of their youth; calling them when their faith had the dew of the night of repentance and struggle on it, when the richness of their imagination clearly saw the invisible.

The purpose of Methodism was to make preachers of these to whom she had opened wide this "school of training." Finding in them a "genuine" experience, and the "evidence" of a divine call, Methodism put into their hands the Bible, saying, "If it is not clearly taught in this, or cannot be proved by this, then leave it untaught." Methodism put into their hands a list of books on doctrines—written by men who believed in verities, who had no apologies to offer.

Then stretching out the lines of circuits and districts until their metes and bounds crossed the rivers and scaled the mountains and girdled the wilderness, she said, "Go, and as ye go, study and preach, preach to these brothers who live in the very heart of nature."

And Methodism made its history—the pages are full from top to bottom. She made the demonstration—any who will look can see. Where in the professions, in the industries, in statesmanship, in war, have there been illustrious examples for integrity of purpose, stamina in responsibilities, profounder convictions for principle, resourcefulness in emergency, commanding in utterance, that surpass—or equal—the men whom Methodism trained in the "Old School?"

Let whoever may, choose another school; but no fair mind can speak lightly of the "old school" while, from McKendree to forty years ago, the roster of the church in every State of the Union has written by the hundreds on its pages names that should not die.

BISHOP MOUZON'S MESSAGE.

The "keynote address" of the Christian Education Movement was by Bishop E. D. Mouzon. That great message, "The Duty of the Church to Educate," closes with the argument that the leadership which the times demand both in church and in State must come from Christian colleges and universities. At a time of supreme crisis, when civilization was threatened and the future of Christianity itself seemed to be at stake, America spoke the word that brought hope to the lovers of liberty throughout the world. This was possible, "because in the seat of authority at Washington there sat men who had been brought up in Christian homes and trained in Christian colleges." And, as Bishop Mouzon declares, we later failed and are now ashamed to look the people of Europe in the face because, "many of our leaders were 'blind leaders of the blind,' and the great mass of our people had not been sufficiently trained in the principles of Christ to know what ought to be done. America lacked Christian leaders at her supreme moment of world opportunity."

Bishop Mouzon closes his great message with the following statement: "Our appeal, therefore, comes with the highest authority. Our homes must be made more truly religious; our colleges and universities must be made more genuinely Christian; our largest offerings must be laid on the altar for these schools which are so indispensable to the work of the church. This appeal comes with all the authority of intelligent patriotism. The future of America depends upon whether or not America is to be genuinely Christian. If the Christian college fails, Christianity fails in America. This appeal comes with all the authority of Christian duty. One's first interest is his interest in Christianity. America must be made Christian. If the Christian colleges fail, it is certain that America will not be made Christian. And this appeal comes with all the authority of duty to one's denomination. From the beginning Methodism has had a large place in the life of America. The purpose of our fathers was to reform the continent and to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands. God wills it that this should still be our program.

"To this high task God has called us. We showed other denominations the way in the matter of our Centenary. In the providence of God, we are now undertaking the most thorough movement in the interest of Christian education that has ever been undertaken by any denomination. And in the providence of God, Christian education goes before the church on its own merit, not merged with any other interest or confused with any other cause. It is a great undertaking—this, to raise thirty-three million dollars, and at the same time bring about a reformation which shall restore the work of Christian education to its New Testament place in the life of the church. But it can be done. We can do it if we will; WE CAN DO IT, AND WE WILL."

THE FLYING SQUIRREL.

"Daintiest and most rarely seen of all his tribe, is the flying squirrel, the connecting link between the quadrupeds and the birds," writes Arthur F. Rice in "Four-Footed Folk," an article appearing in the January number of Boys' Life, the Boy Scout Magazine. "Soft and downy as any of his feathered congeners, he might easily be mistaken for one of them as he skims from tree to tree. We do not often get a view of him because he is a nocturnal animal and few know where to look for him in the daytime. Yet he has been long known, for it is recorded that in 1624 Governor Smith, of Virginia, described him as 'a small beast they call assapanick, but we call the flying squirrel, because spreading their legs and so stretching the largeness of their skins that they have been seen to fly 30 or 40 yards.'

"There are more of these little fellows in the woods than one would suppose and they can be found without difficulty in any old forest where there are numerous decayed trees. Their home is generally in some old yellow birch or beech stub or tall stump, and is located near the top. The entrance is a small round hole, usually on the south or east side. In situation and appearance it is so similar to the home of the woodpecker as to be easily mistaken for it, and it is more than likely that in some instances it has served as such for both, the squirrels taking possession after the bird has hatched her brood and vacated the tenement. Whether the squirrels select these comfortable but somewhat shaky quarters because the wood is soft and easily worked, or because the insecurity of their abode acts, in a measure, as a protection from their enemies, I am unable to say. They seem to be aware, however, that their house is liable at any time to be down about their ears and appreciate the necessity of being ready to move out quickly. It requires only a slight jar or blow on the base of the building to create consternation among the family in the top story. First a sharp little head, with black beads as eyes, pokes itself out of the window and takes an observation as to the nature and motive of this unceremonious knocking. If the jarring is continued, one after another the mouse-like little creatures hurriedly emerge and sail off in different directions.

"They do not fly as birds do; there is no flapping of their wings, which are merely an extension of the skin from the sides of their bodies to their feet; nor do they possess the power of flying upward. They simply sail down to the base of some tree conveniently near, run up to get a fresh start and again fly downward. If closely pursued they usually run up to the top of some large tree and hide there. They breed abundantly, and it is not uncommon to find 6 or 8, old and young, in a single nest. They are the least obtrusive and noisy of squirrel kind, and if you seat yourself at night under the tree in which they live, you will merely hear a few mouselike squeaks as they frolic and chase one another about your head. There is nothing in nature softer than their fur, and some country people say it is a sure cure for the earache. Fortunately this is not a universally accepted fact."

GRANDMA'S "SUNSHINE BUTS."

I had a perfec'ly lovely time
At Bettikin's birthday feast.
It wasn't because of my clothes, 'cause it rained,
And I wasn't dressed up in the least.
But I think it was 'cause of the time that I spent
With grandmother dear, just before I went.

You see, she told me 'bout "sunshine Buts,"
To use when a thing goes wrong.
Right after a thing that's unpleasant, you know,
Is the place where "Buts" belong.
And she asked me if I wouldn't try them soon,
And I promised I would, that afternoon.

So, when I found that the clock was wrong,
The clock that stands in our hall;
I said, "I am late, 'But'—poor Gladys has mumps,
And can't go to the party at all."
And it s'prised me to feel so much better, so quick;
Though, of course, I was sorry that Gladys was sick.

At the party one girl had the darlingest curls;
"But"—'twould hurt when the comb went through!
And Elizabeth's sash was lots bigger than mine,
"But"—mine was the prettiest blue.
And the prize for the game didn't come to me,
"But"—Billy Boy won, and he's lame, you see.

I didn't get any pink-frosted cakes.
"But"—the white ones were awful good.
They didn't pass candy to me, "But"—I thought
I might have toothache if they should.
And I sat near the grate, and it melted my ice,
"But"—my dress was real thin, and the fire felt nice.

When nurse came for me, I hated to go,
"But"—at home I should find papa.
It was awful dark in the street outside.
"But"—I saw such a lovely star.
So I'm going to try them, the whole of the year,
These "Sunshine Buts" of grandmother dear.

THE "KEEP-OFF" SIGN.

Thord Newcomb stood by the side of the cheery fireplace in his uncle's comfortable book-lined study, leaning one elbow on the broad brick mantelpiece. There was an expression of noticeable indecision on the boy's slightly flushed face. Several minutes passed before either spoke.

"Were I you, I wouldn't do it," finally declared Dr. Hammond in a quiet but resolute voice.

"But," argued Thord, unconvinced by the older man's decision, "it is only for—once. Of course, I admit—as you have suggested—that it wouldn't be a commendable thing to keep up. Yet, so far as I can see, in spite of what you have said, I can't quite agree that my doing what Jack Thomas and Holt Wilkins have proposed—just this once—can have any objectionable influence on me or on the members of my Bible class at the Summit Mission, even if it should become known. And it doesn't stand to reason that it will.

"Besides," and Thord shifted uneasily from one foot to the other, "it isn't—wrong, even if I should do it."

"Perhaps not—in itself," returned Dr. Hammond quietly, "but it's the example, of which I am thinking. Under the circumstances it is a questionable step.

"If you hadn't felt, Thord, that it wasn't quite the thing to do, you wouldn't have consulted me concerning it."

"I——"

The doubt that has occurred in your mind," continued Dr. Hammond, paying no attention to the interruption, "is what Judge Rollins used to call—and I have always liked the expression—the 'Keep-off!' sign. It might be a step—not realized now—possibly causing you future regret."

"Perhaps," and Thord's face slightly cleared. "I don't suppose it is the best thing—to neglect a 'Keep-off!' sign."

"No," and Dr. Hammond arose from his easy leather chair.

"Would you—"

"Have you a few minutes to spare?" interrupted Dr. Hammond, suddenly, consulting his watch as he spoke.

"Certainly," replied Thord questioningly.

"I'd like to have you take a little walk with me down to the Randolph building. It's only a short distance, and we'll be back in time for you to make the 5:30 train. I believe you said you had an errand at Durham this evening."

On reaching the corner of Lenox Street, Dr. Hammond remarked to his nephew, "What we came here for is just across on Delmar Avenue."

"Is it anything to do with—"

"We'll see in a minute," broke in the older man evasively.

On reaching the spot which Dr. Hammond had had in mind he stopped, pointing down to the walk before him.

"This, Thord, is what I wanted you to see."

"Just a section of new walk, and nothing—else?" asked Thord in a tone of surprise.

"It's the footprint in the cement," and Thord's uncle pointed to the impress of a footstep in the solid cement walk.

"When Lawrence Randolph—I knew him when a boy," continued Dr. Hammond—"had the new walk made here in front of his building, the contractor, Robert Parker, put up a sign, 'Keep-off!' just at this place. He feared that somebody might accidentally step on the cement before it got hard."

"And I should think some one—did," declared Thord.

"Yes; it was Leonard, Mr. Randolph's twelve-year-old son. His father told me about it only a few days ago."

"Couldn't he—Leonard Randolph—read?"

"I presume so," returned Dr. Hammond. "But, as Mr. Randolph explained, his son wanted to see if he could jump over the contractor's sign. He tried it, and one foot—falling a trifle short—stuck in the soft cement. And it will remain there, the impression is made, as long as the walk shall last."

"I—I see," said Thord soberly. "I guess, Uncle Cyrus, I'd better take your advice. It's wiser to heed a 'Keep-off!' sign."—A. F. Caldwell, in Western Christian Advocate.

THE CHURCH AND HUMAN SOCIETY.

But the stream of spiritual vitality in the church is, nevertheless, the river which makes glad the city of God. What one of our great rivers, a Hudson or a Connecticut, for instance, is to the country through which it flows, the church is to human society. The river's more rapid upper reaches turn mill-wheels and supply power to run factories and to light towns. Its pools are the swimming places of small boys in summer and their skating ponds in winter. In its shallows the cattle stand and cool themselves on torrid days. At intervals its banks are cut and its water deflected to fill canals. Its broader waters bear vessels freighted with merchandise. It sweeps past cities, carrying the filth from their sewers out into the ocean. And all along its course meadows are richer, trees more luxuriant, the whole countryside fairer and more fruitful for its beneficent presence. Such is the church of God in the world of men. It supplies busy lives with inspiration to do the world's work in the spirit of Christ. It affords little children their happiest ideals and develops them for their highest service. It rests the tired with its ministry of comfort and renewal. It furnishes devoted workers to innumerable organizations whose work is parallel with its own aims. It supports and carries along lives laden with responsibilities and burdened with oppressive weights. It cleanses the sinning and purifies the social life, to which it brings the constant flow of its purer standards and more generous spirit. And wherever the church is, lives that are not in direct touch with it are richer in ideals, fairer in character, and more fruitful in service for its inspiring presence in their neighborhood. There are, doubtless, showers of divine blessing that refresh God's earth everywhere, and dews of mercy that form nightly over the most parched and barren soil, but the church is the channel through which the central stream of divine life is flowing to fructify the earth with fruits of righteousness akin to those of Jesus.—Henry Sloan Coffin, in University Sermons.

SENDING HIS LOVE TO CHINA.

A little boy who had been carefully taught to love the missionary cause and to think of the poor little heathen children, one day showed that he was thinking of them. He looked at the sun one evening just before it hid behind the hills. He had been told that the sun rises in China about the time that it sets here. He began in a low tone: "Farewell, sun! Give my love to the little boys in China."—Olive Plants

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.

Information is the fountain of inspiration. Cheap publications, John Wesley discovered, were a powerful agency in the religious education of the common people. A publishing house is the base of supplies for applied Christianity. A reading church is a prepared church for every good cause.

Unless our people read the printed propaganda, the five great objectives of the Board of Education will not find its way into the purses of the people called Methodists.

We recommend large purchases of our literaturo published at Nashville so well adapted to our Sunday school work.

The Nashville Christian Advocate is a weekly survey of world-wide Methodism. The Quarterly Review is the cream of our leterati. The Epworth Era is a many-sided helper in League programs and progress. The Missionary Voice is a power for good in countless groups.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate feeds on the heart-blood of the editor and publisher. The cost of the production outruns the revenues in spite of unusual economies practiced by the management. It is a time-saver to a busy pastor in educating our people concerning the diversified plans and claims of our great church. What an immediate convenience it would be to our bishops, boards, connectional officers, presiding elders, in conveying their messages, if every Methodist household was an Advocate subscriber. It is ably edited and efficiently published.

We nominate as Publishing Committee for the Louisiana Annual Conference, Revs. J. M. Henry, D.D., John F. Foster, and S. J. Davies.

We request that Henry T. Carley be appointed editor.

Resolutions—In observing the request of the Publishing Committee, and concurring with their views, we recommend that the Louisiana Annual Conference fix as their immediate goal a minimum quota of one subscriber for every ten members in every pastoral charge, and that, further, each presiding elder be instructed to distribute aforesaid quota in the respective charges of his district at the district stewards' meeting and call attention at the first round of quarterly conferences to this Conference Resolution.

C. C. MILLER, Chairman.
H. W. RICKEY, Secretary.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

His many friends missed the genial Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, a superannuated member of the Conference who has rendered notable service to Louisiana Methodism.

For the first time since he became a member of the Conference, Dr. R. H. Wynn, of Trinity Church, Ruston, was unable to be present on the opening day. He was detained on account of a funeral.

The hospitality of the good people of De Ridder in entertaining the Conference was unstinted. Every preacher seemed to think that he had the best home and the finest host and hostess in the town.

The presidency of Bishop W. F. McMurry was altogether pleasing to the Conference. His executive ability insured the prompt dispatch of business, and his imperturbable good humor kept everybody in a happy frame of mind.

The action of Dr. Jno. A. Rice, of Southern Methodist University, in selecting the Louisiana Conference as his own Conference home is appreciated by the brethren with whom he was formerly associated while serving a pastorate in New Orleans.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney enjoyed the unique distinction of being a superannuate, a circuit preacher and a station preacher all in one during the year. He was serving Franklinton circuit as a supply; after the death of the lamented J. B. Fulton, he served also the Franklinton station.

It was a source of regret to many members of the Conference that Mr. H. H. Ahrens was not able to attend the sessions. Mr. Ahrens is now in Washington, D. C., which is headquarters for his work in an important governmental position which takes him into all the great cities of the East.

Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the Ruston District, whose health was somewhat impaired during the year, seemed to be in first-class physical condition, able to do his full share of the work of the Conference. He is recognized as one of the most capable leaders of Louisiana Methodism.

It is seldom that a finer series of addresses is heard in one day than was delivered by the speakers on the educational program on Thursday. It was a source of regret that Dr. Paul Linn was unexpectedly kept from attending the Conference, but the educational interests were well taken care of by the speakers who were present.

The editor was perfectly entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Blue. He had Mr. S. S. Thomas, Missionary Centenary Secretary-Treasurer, as a fellow-guest, with Dr. W. Winans Drake and Dr. R. H. Wynn as delightful companions at meal time. We were happy also in having the company of Rev. E. M. Stewart, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, to whose flock Mr. and Mrs. Blue belong.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The North Mississippi Conference will be held by Bishop W. F. McMurry at Charleston, Miss., on Wednesday, October 17.

We are glad to note that Rev. J. C. McElray, of Chester, Miss., is much improved in health, and has been removed home after spending three months in the Hospital in Memphis.

Last Sunday at 11 a. m., the pulpit of Second Church, New Orleans, was filled by Dr. J. T. Sawyer. He reports a large and attentive congregation and a very helpful communion service.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Corbin, of El Paso, Texas, now on furlough, called at the office last Friday. Brother Corbin is superintendent of the West Mexican District, in Texas Mexican Conference.

Rev. A. Floyd Vaughan, recently appointed Chaplain in the U. S. Army has been stationed at Camp Grant, Chicago. We congratulate Chaplain Vaughan on the splendid opportunity for service for our soldiers.

Dr. C. M. Chapman writes that $4000 repairs on church property have been made, and that 32 have been added to the church membership in a recent revival in Poplarville, Miss. The preaching was done by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder.

Mrs. DREW C. DINKINS, wife of John F. Dinkins, died at her home in Senatobia, Miss., Oct. 13, 1920, after a brief illness. She was a loyal, true and faithful member of the Methodist Church, and had been since early life. It was the pleasure of the writer to know her for about six years, having been her pastor at Glen Allen before she came to Senatobia. It has never been my pleasure to know one whom I thought was more nearly an ideal church member and exemplary follower of Christ than she. She took the same interest in all the services of the sanctuary—prayer meeting, Sunday school and preaching service. It was as keen disappointment to her to miss the midweek service as to miss the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning. No pastor ever had a greater friend and sympathizer than she. His burdens were her burdens. She was always ready to make kindly suggestions as to the work of the church, and ever stood ready to do her part. She loved and appreciated friends, and made them by large numbers. It was remarked the day she lay a corpse, "That no one had ever lived in Senatobia so short a time and made so many friends." In the passing of this most worthy character, the home, community and church have suffered a great loss. She is survived by a devoted husband, one sister, and two brothers. Her remains were laid to rest in Bethesda cemetery at this place. A. T. McILWAIN, Pastor.

Senatobia, Miss.

MARY MARIAH PRICE, wife of Fred Price, of Noxapater, Miss., was born May 28, 1850. She joined the Methodist Church in early girlhood, and went through life with unselfish zeal in her Savior's service. On October 14, 1867, she was married to Fred Price. To this union were born eleven children, nine, with her husband, surviving her, all members of the church. She was a devoted Christian, having been reared by godly parents. Her maiden name was Lipscomb. She was a sister of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb. She loved her church, and was a faithful attendant at the preaching service, and an inspirer of the young in God's service, as a friend of every virtue, and a foe of every evil. She lived close to God by walking in the footsteps of Jesus, until she passed away on May 28, 1920. Her funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. J. W. Dorman and Jessie Watson, after which all that was mortal was laid to rest in the cemetery near the old church of which she had been a member so long, to wait the resurrection of the just.

J. A. GOAD, P. C.

MRS. MARY TARKINGTON COLEMAN was born in Marshall County, Mississippi, June 7, 1841, and quietly passed away at her home in Coldwater, Miss., July 12, 1920. Her first marriage was to Richard Berry, of Franklin, Tenn. To them was born one son, who lived about three years after the death of his father in 1862. In April of 1865 she was married to James J. Coleman, who died in 1910. To this happy couple was born four children: Mrs. W. H. Harden, Kensett, Ark., Mrs. A. Y. Gillespie and Miss Lillie Coleman, Coldwater, Miss., and Wilkins Coleman, whose death occurred in 1897. Beside rearing her own children, Sister Coleman reared two stepdaughters: Mrs. Allie Davis, Russellville, Ark., and Mrs. Mattie Harper, Pine Bluff, Ark. The love and devotion of these daughters, as well as that of her own, was beautiful. In fact, one could not tell which were her own daughters. Sister Coleman was indeed a faithful wife, devoted mother, and thoughtful friend. In the summer of 1856 at an old-time Methodist camp meeting she gave her heart to God and entered into a life of service for her Lord. It is true she fought her battles, but she won her victories. Her relatives and friends will miss her, but not as those who have no hope. Earth is poorer, but heaven is richer. In the land beyond the skies she is waiting and watching for the saints to gather home. STANDIFER RAPER.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to call Brother Frank B. Catching from his earthly labors to his reward in heaven; and

Whereas he lived to the ripe old age of seventy years, having been a devoted member of the Georgetown Methodist Church and Sunday school for a period of more than fifty-three years; and

Whereas his life has been worthy in every respect of emulation, not only by the Georgetown church and Sunday school, but by the entire charge and district, therefore be it

Resolved by the members of this church and Sunday school that we extend to the bereaved family of our beloved friend and brother, Frank B. Catching, our sincerest sympathy in their deep sorrow and point them to Him whom he so long worshiped and loved and who alone can comfort the sad and broken-hearted.

Resolved, That we, as a church and Sunday school, can point to Him and say, "He was indeed a father in Israel in whom there was no guile," and his devotedness will ever inspire us to walk more closely in the footsteps of Him who was ever his friend and guide.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Sunday school record, that a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and one sent to the bereaved family.

Signed by: S. A. Williams, Mrs. S. A. Williams, Mrs. G. B. Wilson, Jno. A. Pringle, McC. Stuart.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God has called our sweet, most highly esteemed sister, Mrs. J. F. Dinkins, unto himself; and whereas, He has taken from our number one so loyal, true, helpful; one so Christlike, therefore be it

Resolved, That while we of the Methodist Missionary Society are deeply grieved over our loss, yet we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well and commend her beautiful life to her beloved companion and our membership as a beacon light to guide us on to greater effort, stronger faith, more fruitful lives.

RELIGION—WILL IT WORK?

By Walter Dibrell.

"What kind of Christians do the people of that land make?" This is a question that every missionary is asked repeatedly, and, answering for Cuba, I reply that they make excellent Christians. Here is an experience of one of our members:

Brother M—— was converted and was living an exemplary life. In one of his sermons, Brother Smith made the statement that a man could not live right with God without being right with his fellow-men. At the close of the service Brother M—— asked more about that statement. Brother Smith, noticing a very peculiar look on the man's face, an expression of deep worry and earnestness, explained at length the meaning and importance of this matter in the plan of salvation. For about two weeks after this night Brother M—— hardly ate or slept. His family and close friends thought he had lost his mind. Things went from bad to worse, until it was thought the man would die. Finally Brother M—— won his fight. Before his conversion, by some arrangement with a clerk, he defrauded a friend out of a large part of each month's grocery bill. Two things were in Brother M——'s way. This theft had gone on for a long time and in such a way that he did not know how much he owed the merchant and, next, he found it hard to confess this wrong to an old friend; he had too much manhood to send an anonymous letter, enclosing an approximate amount of his theft. During the fight a thousand horrible thoughts came to his mind. What would his family say? What would his friends think? What would everybody who heard think? Previously, they had respected him—but what about now?

In spite of all this Brother M—— went to the man and told him of the theft, offered to pay whatever amount the merchant asked, and added that after this theft he knew the merchant would never trust him again. The merchant was surprised at the confession. Such honesty is seldom seen in Cuba, outside of our Protestant churches. Though the merchant was not a Christian, he took Brother M—— by the hand, told him that he owed nothing, and as for trusting him, he had more confidence in him than any other man in the city.

WHY A BALL CURVES.

There are many scientific explanations to account for the curve of a baseball. It is generally agred that the rotary motion of the ball after it leaves the pitcher's hand so affects the resistance of the air that it is deflected from its original course. A fascinating experiment may be made by spinning a marble in water. The resistance of the water being much greater than that of the air, the effect is exaggerated. The marble should be dropped in water two feet or more deep. By spinning it fast or slow and in various directions the curve of the most skillful pitcher can be reproduced.—Boys' Life for January.

EVANGELISTIC SINGING.

The late Charles M. Alexander, famous gospel song and chorus leader who died suddenly October 13, at his home in Birmingham, England, spent the first week of last July at The Moody Bible Institute where he received the training which launched him on his career beginning in 1894.

In one of his addresses to the student body on evangelstic singing and conducting he said: "Don't be afraid to use the old songs. Just because some of them have been worn threadbare here in The Moody Bible Institute, don't think they have been out in the world. They may be new there, and even the old songs can be made new by the way they are used and sung.

"Take the one, 'Tell Mother I'll Be There;' that has led more men to Christ than any other one song I know of. While it doesn't give the gospel, it prepares the hearers for the gospel message. I had the teachers in a normal school call for that over and over again some meetings. They were not any two by four men either, but big, thinking men in the school.

"Don't be afraid of a song because you fear it may be considered sentimental. Strike for the hearts of people, don't bother so much about their heads. Remember the outside too, in your choice of hymns. Don't always use the ones that only the Christians can enter into.

"Remember that there is never a crowd without troubled hearts in it. Be sure of that. Take a hymn like this one by Charles H. Gabriel, for instance:

Pray, pray when things go wrong
And gloomy fears around you throng;
Pray, pray though your eyes grow dim;
Go with your troubles straight to Him;
Pray, pray, for God understands;
Have faith, leaving all in His dear hands.

"When you begin to sing it they will be standing there, sitting there, with heavy hearts and sad faces, but the singing of a hymn like this will bring a change—look for it, watch their faces—they will go away looking rested, and before they go you will have made the opening for conversation with some by the words that have touched their hearts.

"Select hymns with pictures. Some have pictures in almost every line. They grip the heart at once, e. g., 'Saved by Grace,' by Dr. D. B. Towner and 'We Journey to a City.'"

Asked what his method was in gaining command of an audience, Mr. Alexander told the following story:

"A man came home from a state railway Y. M. C. A. convention and was asked what he considered the best speech he had heard. He answered that it was not that of a regular speaker, but a fireman who got up and told his experience. 'I was converted two years ago and was converted from my shoes to my hat. I am a fireman on a locomotive and old Bill —— was the engineer. He taught me how to fire in one lesson. He opened the fire box and told me to look down and asked me what I saw. I told him I saw nothing but coal. He said 'Look again.' I looked and told him I saw nothing but a tiny flame. He said, 'That's it! put the coal on the flame!' When I see somebody interested I forget everything but that one person and talk to him as though there were just he and I in the place, and pretty soon the whole service is on fire."

He said also that there is a great demand all over the world for gospel singers who are equipped not only to sing, but who have character behind them and a knowledge of the Bible; and that the requisites for a good evangelist is a love for men's souls and a desire to get the message to them rather than to conduct the service.

"Never get away from the Bible," he continued, no matter what you are doing. All over the country people may be down on sermons, but not on singing nor the exposition of the Bible."

Asked what gospel songs had been most effective in his experience, he named four in the following order: "Tell Mother I'll Be There," "The Glory Song," "He Will Hold Me Fast" and "I Know Whom I Have Believed." —Bulletin.

A 200 YEAR JOB.

At the present rate 200 years will be needed to finish mapping the world. Great areas remained unexplored and little is known of millions of square miles of land. By using the aeroplane for map making this work may be done in the next twenty years. Instead of climbing mountains and laboriously measuring the land foot by foot, we shall do the work while flying a hundred miles an hour. A special camera is placed in the bottom of the car and photographs are taken automatically, so many to the second or minute. These photographs are then fitted together in what is known as a mosaic map which shows every house of towns or cities and every road and tree of the country. No such maps have ever been made before. The aero map is one of the inventions of the war which will prove invaluable.—Boys' Life for December.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

All right, Brother Preacher, send me your Sunday school report to-day. The record may not be all you like, but it must stand to commend or condemn.

The missionary committee in the Sunday school has the privilege of giving missionary information to the entire school once a month. This information will keep the missionary fires burning. It will do much toward helping the church meet its Centenary obligations. It will open the way for God to call some one into the ministry or to the foreign field; it will help to strangle selfishness. There is no limit to the good it may do. You will find a program in the Magazine or in the Voice.

The temperance committee in every school has something to do at least once a quarter. If we are to hold what we have gained in prohibiting the use of whiskey we must keep up the fight by giving the people information.

We need about thirty young men and women who are anxious to make their lives count a thousand fold by devoting themselves to prayer, Bible study, and service in Sunday school work. We must have more workers who are willing to organize Bible classes, teacher-training classes, and help teach these classes. If you desire to make your life count let me help you. Parents could suggest this to their children.

The question is often asked, "Well, how are you getting on with your Sunday school work?" The answer is in every school that has increased its membership, or organized a teacher-training class, or has introduced the graded lessons, or has nurtured or led a soul to Christ, or has trained a soul in the worship of God, or has done something to establish the kingdom of Gad at home or abroad. Every good thing done answers the question. Who deserves the credit? I do not know. To our God be all the glory and praise.

Brother Guerry had a fine group of people to meet at Poplar Corner in a circuit institute on the 3d of this month. We helped two of his schools straighten out some of the kinks. Poplar Corner is planning to add three rooms to their church. We had a good day. The ladies served the best dinner I have seen this year.

FROM WESSON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Brother Thompson is just closing his fourth year with us. He has done faithful work as pastor. His godly life among his people will have an influence for good as long as time shall last. Our church at this place is in splendid working order. We not only have a good pastor, but one of the most efficient Sunday school superintendents I ever knew. The faithful, loyal spirit of Methodism that Mr. V. D. Youngblood manifests is hard to surpass. I wish to mention a very impressive service in our church last month: at the Sunday school hour, nineteen children were received into the church. It was a beautiful scene. All of these children have been brought up in the Sunday school. As they stood before the altar and took the sacred vows of the church, profound silence reigned over the congregation, and a spirit of prayer seemed to ascend from every heart. Surely it pays to bring up our children in the Sunday school.

FROM EUPORA AND MABEN CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: This is our third year on the Eupora and Maben charge. and I am sending you a few dots concerning happenings during this time. In the first place, our parsonage received attention by way of putting in lights and fixtures, which was done before the war advance in prices. We have a light in every room, and porch, with as nice fixtures as can be found in any home in Eupora.

For many years we have been hindered by "that old debt" hanging over our people. But that has gone to the rear, and with joy we all felt a thrill of gratitude, and feel the ways are opening into new possibilities before us. And here came another view of the parsonage needs; and as the hour seemed to be upon us for moving forward just now, no time was wasted, and especially by those "women who labor with us in the Lord," for move after move was sought out, and its interest caught the attention of our men more than before, and not a great while had passed until the finishing of the outside, and painting of the parsonage be done, was wasting not, in time or energy to that end.

Now, the wide, spacious porch is decorated by nine beautiful columns; aud two coats of pure, white paint are on the walls. This caused the eyes of the people to stop in admiration and see what a beautiful home the people called Methodist have for their pastor. But that is not all, for another need is felt, and much so by the inmates of this home, in the fact that the pastors have carried water for a chain of years some two hundred yards, and water is and has been a question of much concern. A few wells have been bored, but no water had been found that could be used, and finally a very reasonable and right decision was made; and a good, large cistern is being built, getting ready for the winter rains.

Our meeting here was held the first week in May, with Dr. Dan E. Kelley doing the preaching, and it was done well. Brother Kelley is a preacher who does things in his way; and his way is a way to drive facts home to the heart. These facts which were brought to the people will stand the test of the judgment. Our people often speak of him, and he would be gladly welcomed on a like mission to us again. His song leader, Brother D. Ward Milam, did a faithful service in his line. Hoarse during the whole of the meeting, he was much hindered in his work. But his wife came to his rescue with her splendid voice. She gave us some splendid solos, and was a great aid in leading as well.

I baptized eighteen, and received six by letter at the close of the meeting.

Our meeting at Maben was also of help and encouragement. Brother T. E. Gregory did the preaching here.

This is our first year in the Columbus District, and our relation with our Brother Duren, as presiding elder, is most apprcciative; and I am glad our lot with this district has been so pleasant. I like our sub-bishop, for he is true to his office, and faithful to his great trust. He is one of our very best. We contemplate a full collection at Charleston. H. M. YOUNG, Pastor.

IN MEMORIAM—REV. J. W. PRICE.

On the evening of June 22, 1920, at 8 o'clock, all that was mortal of Rev. J. W. Price passed to his reward. His spirit winged its flight to his God, whom he served so faithfully for seventy-nine years.

Dr. Price was one of the few old preachers and one of the most beloved pastors of the North Mississippi Conference. He died at the home of his daughter, Margaret Price Likens, at Somerville, Tenn. He was in his seventy-ninth year.

Dr. Price was born at Lagrange, Mo., in 1842; his parents moved to Russellville, Ky., when he was a baby. In 1869 he was married to Mary E. Valentine, of Bowling Green, Ky., she having passed away two years ago. Six children were born to them, of whom three are living.

He moved to Mississippi in his young manhood and joined the North Mississippi Conference, where he labore for his Master for over forty years.

Dr. Price served the best appointments in the Conference. He was one of the most beloved pastors of the Conference. People said of him he was a born preacher. Five years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis of the throat while stationed at Lambert, Miss. For over two years he lived on liquids, but through it all he was ever cheerful and never complained, trusting always in God. He was a devoted husband and father.

Just a few days before his passing away, he told his daughter he hoped his good Master would give him an acre when he got to heaven, so he could have his children and grandchildren with him. And he told one of the good pastors if he should hear of him slipping away, he would know where to find him. He was sick only four days. His going away was a sweet one. He fell asleep in Josus without a struggle.

We laid him to rest by the side of his wife and daughter in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery in Greenwood, Miss. We have bid him adieu, but not forever. We will all meet you, papa, in the Beulah Land. DAUGHTER.

A great part of the happiness of life consists not in fighting battles, but in avoiding them. A masterly retreat is in itself a victory.—Longfellow.

Simple Mixture Makes Hens Lay

By W. S. Burgess.

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A life long study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way the tablets are to cost you nothing. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 158 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.—Adv.

1000 EGGS IN EVERY HEN

New System Of Poultry Keeping—Get Dollar A Dozen Eggs—Famous Poultryman

TELLS HOW

"The great trouble with the poultry business has always been that the laying life of a hen was too short," says Henry Trafford, International Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of Poultry Success.

The average pullet lays 150 eggs. If kept the second year, she may lay 100 more. Then she goes to market. Yet, it has been scientificaly established that every pullet is born or hatched with over one thousand minute egg germs in her system—and will lay them on a highly profitable basis over a period of four to six years' time if given proper care.

How to work to get 1,000 eggs from every hen; how to get pullets laying early; how to make the old hens lay like pullets; how to keep up heavy egg production all through cold winter months when eggs are highest; triple egg production; make slacker hens hustle; $5.00 profit from every hen in six winter months. These and many other money making poultry secrets are contained in Mr. Trafford's "1,000 EGG HEN" system of poultry raising, one copy of which will be sent absolutely free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. Eggs should go to a dollar or more a dozen this winter. This means big profit to the poultry keeper who gets the eggs. Mr. Trafford tells how. If you keep chickens and want them to make money for you, cut out this ad and send it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, Suite 251-F Tyne Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and a free copy of "THE 1,000 EGG HEN" will be sent by return mail.—Adv.

FOR MEN WHO WORK HARD.

Factory workers, railroad men, farmers, miners, mill employees and all men who work at hard, straining physical labor are more or less subject to kidney trouble. Nature gives warning signals by frequent lameness, stiff joints, sore muscles, backache and rheumatic pains. J. G. Wolf, Green Bay, Wis., writes: "Foley Kidney Pills relieved me of a severe backache, that had bothered me for several months. A few bottles fixed me up in good shape."—Adv.

Millions for a New Stomach

One of the greatest American millionaires said to his physician, "A million dollars, Doctor, spot cash and no grumbling, for a new stomach," and then the sick man groaned and turned away. All his wealth could not make him happy or contented, for happiness largely depends upon digestion. Without health where does happiness come in? After all the stomach plays a great part in everyday life. Without a healthy stomach and good digestion our blood is thin, watery and poor, our heart action is weak, our liver does not do its duty, and man is miserable and unhappy. Prevent disease by putting the house in order and strengthening the system against the germs of disease.

Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., years ago understood diseases and their prevention, and he discovered certain roots and herbs which were nature's remedies, and succeeded in putting them up in a form that could be easily procured at the drug store (liquid or tablets). This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This Discovery gives no false stimulation because it contains no alcohol or any narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. It gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. For over fifty years it has enjoyed the confidence of the American public. Try it now!

FROM HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

Rev. J. H. Bell filled the pulpit at morning and evening hours here on October 31, representing the Superannuate Endowment Fund. The congregations at both hours were splendid and the people were richly blessed with his presentation of this worthy cause. No doubt we have too long neglected this, and our hearts and hands respond to a true call to relief. Certainly the committee was wise in choosing this man to go out and give our people the opportunity to give. The services were spiritual, making a fitting near climax to a year's work; $265,000 will soon be raised, and then we will have something to be proud of. Holly Springs church will be glad to have Brother Bell return any time he thinks we can be of help to him or he to us.

W. R. LOTT, P. C.

FROM SENATOBIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me space in the Advocate to say that Senatobia can match Drew in making a full report on all finances at the fourth quarterly conference. Brother Pope thought it worth special mention that the Drew church reported everything in full at the fourth quarterly conference, so I am asking for space to mention that at our last conference, held November 1, our board of stewards reported all assessments in full. This includes $400 raise on pastor's salary over last year. We think such reports as this worthy of special mention in the face of such financial conditions as prevail at present.

The old board was re-elected, adding the name of Prof. J. H. Brinson. No finer board of stewards can be found in the entire Conference than we have at Senatobia. No pastor ever had a more loyal board than this pastor has had for the past three years. The greatest objection I can offer is, they often pay the pastor in advance, which makes a long time between pay days. They are excusable, however, as all are such good business men they think that even a preacher ought to know how to take care of money.

We must not give all the credit to the men; we have as fine, consecrated bunch of women as can be found in any church. At a recent Rally Day service the woman's work of the church was discussed under the head of "The Liveliest Thing in the Church." And this was a good title for the activities of our good women. I could say much more along this line, but lest some older man might want to roll me for my job, I will tell the rest next year at the close of my quadrennium. Brethren, pray for us, for without God's help all must fail.

A. T. McILWAIN, P. C.
Senatobia, Miss.

A TWENTY-FOUR HOUR SCHOOL.

How would you enjoy going to school at two o'clock in the morning? There is such a school at Bethlehem, Pa., which is open every hour in the twenty-four. At present about 3,500 pupils are in regular attendance, but these will soon be increased to some 6,000. The pupils are the employees of the great steel works and the instruction courses are intended to make Americans of the many races who are gathered there. Many of these men meet in classrooms arranged next door to the shops so that they can go to school and return to their work in a moment's time. In some cases the schoolrooms are placed between the great blast furnaces and when the roar of these becomes too loud to hear the teacher speak he carries on the lesson with the use of the blackboard. Many of these pupils cannot at first speak a single word of English and cannot read or write their native tongues. The first lessons consist in holding up familiar objects such as shovels, hammers, pitchforks and so on, and teaching the men their names. At the end of a three months' course wonderful progress is made.—Boys' Life for October.

MISSIONS, THE FUNDAMENTAL PHILANTHROPY.

There are still among us, I suppose, a few atheists and unbelievers. To such, of course, the purely evangelistic phase of missions makes no appeal. Even to such, however, assuming that they are not utterly devoid of human sympathy, the appeal of the missionary program as a great and fundamental philanthropy must be irresistible. To every one whose heart responds to humanity's sore need and who longs to relieve it, missions offers far and away the most radical, comprehensive and effective program of human betterment to be found in the world.

This is true for the very good reason that the gospel which lies at the heart of missions is the center and source of our every conception and practice of philanthropy. Where the gospel has not gone, no such conception exists. This is quite natural, too, from the fact that the whole philanthropic idea is rooted in the thought of human brotherhood, which in turn cannot exist practically apart from the parent conception of the fatherhood of God. It was Jesus who first brought to the world in anything like fullness these two ideals, out of which has grown all that is altruistic in Christian civilization. It is not surprising, therefore, that altruistic ideals, with their resulting philanthropies, are unknown among people ignorant of the gospel out of which these things grow. [illegible] examples are numerous and convincing. [illegible] striking, perhaps, is the utter absence of medical science in lands where the gospel has not gone. The medicine man of Africa, the needle-sticker of China, the exorcist of Korea—these are examples of the best that non-Christian peoples know of medical science. There is no knowledge of prophylactics, or materia medica, or surgery, or antiseptic, or anaesthetics. There are no hospitals and no trained nurses. Their remedies cure only when they kill.

Into such conditions the medical missionary, the Christian nurse and the mission hospital go as the very quintessence of philanthropy, restoring the eyes of the blind, healing the sick and making the lame to walk, teaching cleanliness and sanitation, training native doctors and nurses and laying the foundations of a new and strange order of life and health.—R. B. Eleazer in Missionary Voice.

SAFE AIR TRAVEL.

The amazing records for safety in air transit established in England recently will go far to make the new method of travel popular. During the first year of civil flying in England following the war 38,954 flights were made and some 70,000 passengers were carried. In all this period there was but one fatal accident. The record compares very favorably with railroad or automobile travel. This enormous fleet of air craft flew a total of 734,200 miles, or a distance equal to about thirty times the circumference of the earth. Goods were carried by the air routes amounting to 116,498 pounds. During the present year $1,000,000 worth of imports and exports were carried between England and the Continent. In this period of civil flying 114 aerodromes have been registered and 519 machines of various types have been licensed. Flying is therefore not only one of the safest means of transportation but is making rapid strides as regards its commercial development. If such results have been accomplished in scarcely more than a year following the war, it is safe to predict that a few years will witness enormous fleets of commercial air craft winging their way in all directions.—October Boys' Life.

HYOMEI

From Famous Eucalyptus Tree of Australia Comes Mr. Booth's Wonderful Discovery.

Some years ago, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, temperance orator and leader of international fame who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble while lecturing in London. Seeking to regain health, he went to inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests—especially the Eucalyptus trees.

This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment known to the medical science—Hyomei, which is formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air, absolutely harmless but wonderfully effective in the treatment of catarrh in all of its forms, cold in the head, spasmodic croup, hay fever, clergyman's sore throat and similar complaints.

The treatment is simple but most scientific. You breathe Hyomei. It is pronounced the only method of treatment that sends by direct inhalation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamic air that destroys all germs and bacilli of catarrh in the breathing organs, soothes and allays all irritation and enriches and purifies the blood with additional ozone.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment, $1.35, extra bottle inhalant 75c. Sold by druggists on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. If your druggist can not supply it, write

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The annual meeting for the Winona District opened in Greenwood on October 7, with the secretary, Mrs. C. A. Neal, of Carrollton, presiding, and the devotional led by the presiding elder, Rev. S. L. Pope, of Winona.

The organization showed present: Belen, 1 representative; Belzoni, 1; Carrollton, 1; Doddsville, 1; Drew, 1; Dublin, 2; Greenwood, 40; Inverness, 16; Itta Bena, 15; Marks, 1; Moorhead, 2; Schlater, 6; Sunflower, 2; Winona, 3; Tutwiler, 3. Also a number of visitors. Mrs. J. D. Hamilton, of Tutwiler, was elected secretary, and was assisted by Mrs. G. C. Jones.

During the day able and instructive addresses were heard from Mrs. L. G. Fant, of Holly Springs, vice president of the Conference, Mrs. G. C. Jones, of Belen, secretary of the Conference; Miss Corinne Rogers, of New Albany, superintendent of Children's work; Mrs. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, chairman of Endowment Fund for Grenada College; Mrs. T. M. Brownlee, of Grenada, superintendent of Mission Study; Rev. T. M. Brownlee, of Grenada College.

The day was a Rally as well as a time of reports, all but two auxiliaries of the district being heard from.

Tutwiler and Inverness both invited meeting to come to them next year, but the last named place withdrew, leaving it unanimous for Tutwiler. At noon a most tempting lunch was served at the church by the ladies of the Greenwood Auxiliary, Mrs. Eicholtz, the president and her committees, assisted by the pastor, Rev. Tucker and his wife, making each guest feel at home while in the city. The choir furnished splendid music, a sextette by young men in the afternoon was especially enjoyed.

The day closed with a consecration service led by one of the most loved and sainted women of the State, Mrs. S. M. Thames, of Jackson, one of the honorary presidents of the Conference.

Wesley House Record.

"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." This was the motto for the Institute for boys held at the Wesley House July 25-31, bringing to mind their need for mental, physical, spiritual, and social development. Fifteen boys were in attendance and three young ministerial students who were the leaders in all the activities. These boys were chiefly interested in agriculture and business life, so excursions were made to a neighboring scientifically conducted farm, to a dairy, to a sugar mill, and to some of the banks. The studies also were adapted to their needs for development into intelligent Christian business men. Many friends of the boys have expressed the hope that we plan for a longer period and a bigger crowd next summer. This request was also voiced by the boys themselves.

Seventeen little girls were at the House Party during the week of August 8-14. They had sewing, kitchen, garden work, Bible memory work, story hours, and other things in which they were especially interested. Mrs. A. M. Martin of Lockport and Miss Ora Hooper, of Rosedale, were able assistants in making this week a success.

After these things the carpenters took charge and the Wesley House was soon well screened against the myriads of mosquitoes and bugs, clothes closets were put in, and some other needed improvements made, among which was the fixing up of the farmer's cottage for the farmer whom we hope to have soon.

Among the most pleasant happenings of the quarter were the visits received from Mrs. Holt, of Crowley, from Deaconess Cora Godat, and from Brother Carley, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Schools have opened again and this year six girls find the Wesley House a pleasant, helpful home base from which to attend school.

Miss Ora Hooper who assisted in all the Wesley House activities through the summer has now entered college at Athens, Ala., for preparation for life work in the mission field.

"The foolishness of God is wiser than men." So many cherished plans for intensive campaigns in the country places were entirely spoiled by continuous rains and bad roads. We were inclined to feel disappointed, but other work was pressing, so we did whatsoever our hands found to do. An account of the results in one community will show how it is that Paul may plant and Apollos water, but it is God that giveth the increase. All through June, July, and August the roads to Point au Chene were impassable. The Sunday school and all activities of the Missionary Society were closed for the summer inasmuch as there is no one in the community who can carry on the work. The first week in September the Missionary Ford with great difficulty pushed through the mud to the place of meeting, but instead of a discouraged, disorganized people we found them more intelligently eager then ever. The Missionary Society had the best meeting of the year with only one member absent and all dues and pledges for the quarter paid in full. (Every member of this Auxiliary pays a pledge.) The Sunday following the Sunday school was reorganized and again we realized that the foundations had been lifted and the work of the new quarter could be begun on a higher plane. Much credit for this summer growth is due to the splendid work done by Rev. E. V. Duplantis during his ten days of teaching, preaching, and living among this people.

Especial appreciation is due the student preachers, E. V. Duplantis, Jas. A. Knight, and Edgar Dufrene, for their valuable assistance and co-operation in all the summer work; to our two boys, Eastom Marcelle and Buddie Martin, of Bourg, for three days of labor helping the carpenters; to the Bayou Blue Auxiliary for a generous "box," chickens, eggs, canned fruit, and other good things: to the Auxiliaries in other points for boxes of clothing and other supplies; to Mrs. A. P. Holt for her great contribution in planning the repairs; and to all the friends in Houma and elsewhere who have assisted by prayer and by gifts.

Two new books for Bible study: For Adults, "Great Characters in the New Testament," by Doremus A. Hayes; price, 75 cents. For Young People, "The Story of the New Testament," by Thomas Carter, B.D., D.D.; price, 90 cents. Order from Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn. There was a brilliant Rainbow Rally given by the Natchitoches Auxiliary in the social rooms of the Methodist Church on Thursday, October 21, for the purpose of enlisting new members and advancing Mission Study. Mrs. Henry Turpin followed with the Rainbow leaflet, "Why Should a Woman Enter Service Through the Missionary Society?" Mrs. V. G. Hyams gave "The Woman's Club Par Excellence;" Mrs.

Arkansas Lady Says She Was In a Serious Condition, But Promptly Recovered After Taking Thedford's Black-Draught.

Peach Orchard, Ark.—Mrs. Etta Cox, of this place, says: "Some time ago I had a spell of acute indigestion, and was in a bad fix. I knew I must have a laxative, and tried Black-Draught. It relieved me, and I soon was all right.

"I can't say enough for Thedford's Black-Draught, and the great good it did for me.

"It is fine for stomach and liver trouble, and I keep it for this. A few doses soon make me feel as good as new. I am glad to tell others the good it did."

Acute indigestion is a serious matter and needs prompt treatment or dangerous results may ensue. A physician's help may be needed, but a good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught will be of benefit by relieving the system from the undigested food which is the cause of the trouble.

Thedford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, not disagreeable to take and acts in a prompt and natural way.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. RECRUITS FOR THE RANKS: THE CONTRIBUTION OF ONE CITY.

By Rev. P. L. Cobb.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating." All agree to this. It is more difficult, however, to judge of the vitality of the church in any given community or section. Possibly the number and effectiveness of the Christian workers given to the church is as valuable as any test that can be applied. Lately my attention has been called to the unusual record of Knoxville, Tenn., in this respect during the last three years, and in order to be explicit, I am taking the liberty of calling names.

Edgar Letspelch, an A. B. graduate of the University of Tennessee, gave up his business and became Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Knoxville—probably the most effective secretary the Association has ever had. He is a splendid lay preacher and qualified to handle any church in our Conference.

Miss Jean Crawford, wonderfully successful as an elementary superintendent of the Church Street Sunday School, is now Conference Elementary Secretary, giving her entire time to the Sunday schools.

Miss Lillian Godard, the efficient bookkeeper for the Hope Jewelry Company, gave up her splendid position to become an Industrial Secretary among the factory girls of Greensboro, N. C., under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A.

Samuel Akers, son of the well-known jeweler, B. W. Akers, who graduates at the University of Tennessee this year, was licensed to preach.

Austin White left a business position to supply a circuit and is loved and respected by all who know him.

C. L. Thomas likewise left a position to act as a supply and at the last session of the Conference was ordained a deacon. He has been admitted on trial.

Miss Rachel Cantrel, for sometime Superintendent of the Junior League Union, gave up an office position recently and went to Scarritt Bible and Training School for preparation as a missionary.

Leon Tourolman, worthy son of a noble father, when elected President of the Holston League Conference, surrendered his college activities, including editorship of the weekly paper and a monthly magazine, and, with the aid of a stenographer, is probably giving more time than all the officers of the Conference combined have ordinarily devoted to the task.

Carroll Carter, the versatile son of our Conference Missionary Secretary, was licensed to preach.

William Cobb, in his third year at the University of Tennessee, was licensed to preach. Webster is at the Moody Bible Institute preparing to be an evangelistic singer.

Among the volunteers for missionary work, I can recall Clyde Watkins, Hollen Frazer, Catherine Cobb, Virginia Bondurant, Miss Brown, and there are many others whose names I could secure.

How are we to account for this large body of recruits at work and in preparation? There are many influences, too numerous to mention. However, I would like to call attention to the fact that all of them have been officially connected with the City League Union and have been active in the local chapters.

If this is true, are we not suffering a serious loss by not pushing the organization into the small town and country churches?

Out of practical experience, I should say, that as a minimum, twenty-five per cent of the churches in any given district could and ought to have Epworth League Chapters.

I am persuaded that we are at the dawning of a new day in the Holston League work, and I exhort especially the younger pastors not to allow this great opportunity to pass you by. Do not believe any one who tells you the day of the League is past. It is here in all of its splendor.

HUNDREDS MAKING APPLICATION TO METHODIST MISSION SCHOOLS, ONLY TO BE TURNED AWAY.

By H. L. Hughes.

Back among the mountains behind Kobe, Japan, in a little chapel hidden among the trees by the side of a swift-flowing stream, the Japan Mission Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened September 1.

A greater meeting the writer never attended. Bishop W. R. Lambuth, who organized this Mission thirty-three years ago, presided. Dr. R. E. Dickenson, of Colorado Springs, added much to the sessions by his inspiring message each morning. Forty-nine missionaries were present with manifest zeal for the cause of the Kingdom and strong faith in God who had called them to service in this land.

The reports of the missionaries made our hearts rejoice because of the progress that was shown in every line of the work. A marked advance was reported in every charge and every school. The Japanese Christians are enthusiastic for the extension of the Kingdom of God and are spending their time and money for that purpose. In some cases severe persecutions have been endured by them for the cause of Christianity.

Friday afternoon was set aside as a special time for introducing our Japanese co-laborers. There were a number present who had been converted under the work of our Mission. In their talks they told of their conversion and of what Christianity had meant to them, their families, and their people. Bishop Usaki, a graduate of Vanderbilt University and recently elected bishop of the Japan Methodist Church, told of his conversion under Bishop Lambuth thirty-three years ago, and in the further progress of his great address made the statement that Christianity was the only hope of his people. To hear the testimony of these Japanese who had come from the darkness of heathenism and idolatry into the light of Christianity through the blood of Christ inspired us with a greater zeal and a stronger faith for the tasks that lie before us.

The opportunities for service here are almost unlimited. The call for more workers is heard on every hand. These people are seeking light, knowledge, and truth. They are reading and thinking as never before. Especially is this true among the young. All the schools in the land are full to overflowing and thousands of students are turned away because of lack of room. At one school there was room for only one hundred and eighty new students to enter and there were seventeen hundred applicants for the one hundred and eighty places. At our Palmore Institute they almost have to call in policemen every month to turn back the applicants for whom they have not room. May the Christian Church take advantage of these opportunities to mold the Japan of the future!

It brings joy to the missionaries that the Centenary is making possible a marked advance in our work at this time. They are doing their best to make the efforts of the home church count for souls in Christ's Kingdom. And they are glad to report that the Japan Methodist Church, inspired by the move of the home church, has launched a similar movement among its members which bids fair to bring great results. Already reports of noble sacrifice have come to us.

The Conference adjourned Monday, September 6, and the missionaries start to their several places of labor singing songs of praise to the victorious Lord who has led them thus far and who has promised to lead them through the coming year.

Pray for us and these people. No country needs Christianity more than Japan.

R. W. Winstead, "Through the Missionary Society—Where?" Mrs. G. P. Smith "Something New in Mission Study;" Mrs. Z. T. Gallion, Jr., "The How and Why of Bible Study," and Mrs. Mary Hargrove, "The Master's Questions."

The affair was decidedly the brightest and most enjoyable of all the parties ever given in the interest of the auxiliary. The decorations were as if the committee, Mesdames R. W. Winstead, Robert Cummins, Henry Turpin and S. C. McQuaig had used a magic wand and touched even the secluded nooks into brilliance.

Arched far overhead was a lovely rainbow of the seven soft blending colors, while a wonderful profusion of forest flowers and crimson dog-wood berries swung from every corner, transforming the rooms into a bower of loveliness comparable only to some lovely wild garden in the woodlands.

Rainbow-colored lights softly illumined the scene and flower-strewn tables were spread for the feast. Lovely place cards with tiny hand-painted rainbows, which had been contributed by the talented artist-members, Mesdames Clyde Jordan and P. T. Hedges, directed the guests to a sumptuous box luncheon. Each member of the Auxiliary had invited one or more ladies who were not members to share her delicious box. The lovely tables fairly groaned with good things to eat, supplemented by hot tea and coffee, served by Mesdames J. E. Guardia and Ed Dazendorf.

As a fitting climax to such an occasion, seventeen new members joined the auxiliary. Each was presented by the President with a small copy of John's Gospel. All present were agreed that this particular rainbow was the very brightest that had spanned their lives!

From Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb.

"I am feeling specially proud of Louisiana's financial record for the last quarter. Her increase is $4,066.54—40 per cent above three quarters of last year. You are standing right up at the top in your percentage of increase. Only two others have gone ahead of you, the Alabama and Northwest—each of which made 42 per cent.

We are all so entertained at receiving this morning your Louisiana Missionary News, on the back of our Bulletin: Of all the smart things I ever heard of in my life, I believe that without a single solitary exception this is the smartest. We folks here at headquarters will pass it on as a brilliant suggestion to the other Conferences. It seems now very strange that some one did not think of it before. The Louisiana Conference has surely put one over on all the Conferences and she has our congratulations.

N. B.—This scheme for cutting down old H. C. L. is Mrs. W. T. Cunningham's, our splendid Conference superintendent of Mission Study. Let the auxiliaries look for this dual Bulletin, which will have another important issue soon, bringing personal messages from the District Secretaries.

MRS. A. P. HOLT.

WEARIED WITH THE JOURNEY.

Life is a tiresome thing. It is full of tasks, toils, impositions, interruptions, irritations, and manifold exactions. We live in a distracting and demoralizing world. Every psychologist adds his testimony to that of the economist, showing that the incessant appeals of everyday life to the ordinary worker, added to the needless intrusions of what is miscalled "social life" upon his time and energies, tend all the while to wear down the nervous system, and to produce a fatigue which may soon open the door to folly, if not to an actual breakdown. But life from the start has never been easy or too delightful. It was not easy in Jesus' time. Our Lord did not know luxury and leisure, and their exemptions from hardship and want. He was a poor man, though He did not live poorly. Jesus became tired, more so than most men of His day, for He tasked His brain, His heart, and His sympathies, as well as His muscles and His nervous strength. On one occasion "being wearied with his journey," He sank well-nigh exhausted on the curb of Jacob's well. Even the Son of God could and did crave a drink from some cooling fount or stream, and thirst is harder to bear than hunger. Whether Jesus really obtained much refreshment on this occasion is doubtful, but at any rate He improved the opportunity for some telling evangelical work, and His heart was at peace. We, too, if we follow in the footsteps of the Christ, will often be wearied, not simply with the usual fatigues of life, but also distinctively by our ministration to the souls as well as the bodies of men. The rule for the Christian is well put in the sacrificial suggestiveness of the familiar hymn:

"Go, labor on; spend and be spent,
Thy joy to do the Father's will;
It is the way the Master went;
Should not the servant tread it still?"

Wearied at times, and indeed much of the time, the true servant of God and man must be, but the test of character comes in over the question, Are you tired by the right thing? If we are worn with undue pleasure-seeking, if we are wasteful of nervous force in mere frivolity, or just gossip and frothy conversation, or even if, like Martha of old, we are busy with overserving of pots and ketties, it is no credit to us that we are "so tired." We have a right to be tired doing our duty, but not in the process of simply pleasing ourselves, or following out our chance whims. The thing to do is to adjust time to tasks, and strength to service, so that, acting on the principle that duties never conflict, we shall proceed unhurried and unworrying throughout the day, taking up one duty after another, giving each its due amount of consideration, and so convert obligation into opportunity. And if in this procedure of rationalized activity, moderated zeal, and adjusted expenditure we are inevitably at times "wearied with the journey," God will provide every now and then the "table in the wilderness," bring us to rest awhile by the side of some Jacob's well, or refresh us on the edge of a palmy Elim. Let us work and be weary, and then wait, and worship, and drink of the water of life.—Zion's Herald.

If a man wants to pray aright, he first begins to pray for others.—Exchange.

The devil never gives a vacation to the man who works for him.—Exchange.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

THOUSANDS TRANSFORMED—MILLIONS MORE ACCESSIBLE.

The wonderful change that comes over the African when he becomes a Christian, and the eagerness of these people to hear the gospel, are the subjects of an interesting letter from Rev. W. M. McElroy, a Southern Presbyterian missionary at Luebo, in the Belgian Congo.

"Once having seen and accepted Christ," he says, "these people are as those who suddenly receive the power of sight and for the first time look out upon the universe in all its glory. A spellbound expression of satisfaction and of a peace never known before comes over their faces and transforms them. There are thousands, to be sure, who seem to have lost all hope, and who cannot be interested, after having been all their lives sorely disappointed in their gods and fetishes. But there are tens of thousands who are accepting, and millions who would accept if only there were enough of us to carry to them the message of the Savior.

"Hardly a day passes but that individuals or delegations from near and distant villages come, begging for an evangelist or teacher to return with them. They sit here for days, and sometimes for weeks, begging and saying: 'Come now, for we have many children to enter your school, and some of our old people will soon pass away, and will never hear of Christ unless you send the message soon.'

"They cannot understand why we are so few. If we have come from the Christian land, why do not others come? And as we continually see the openings and long for them to be filled, we, too, are forced to ponder this same question. We must acknowledge with shame that we cannot solve the mystery."—Missionary Voice.

LAYMEN AND THE PRAYER MEETING.

Rev. P. L. Cobb, pastor at Morristown, Tenn., after giving much serious thought to the problem of making the weekly prayer meeting worth while, has an interesting article on that subject in the October Missionary Voice.

Brother Cobb reaches the conclusion that the best way to make a weekly prayer meeting out of a "weakly" service conducted under that name is to turn it over to the laymen of the congregation and let them conduct it. He has already tried the plan he so enthusiastically recommends to other pastors and is delighted with the results. He would use the Minute Men, Emergency Speakers, Lay Leaders, and other leading laymen to conduct prayer meetings. The pastor's part would be to prepare a program and assign the parts.

MARRIED.

At the home of the bride's parents in Summit, Miss., October 5, 1920, Dr. H. L. MAGEE, of Jackson, Miss., and Miss EMILY VALLEY HOLMES, Rev. W. T. Griffin, officiating.

THE SECOND MILE.

The church to-day is filled with men and women who refuse to do more than is actually required of them, or, in the phraseology of the street, they do and pay the least they can "get by with." They seem to forget that God, not man, keeps the records that are to be opened at the judgment. If those who work for the church grudgingly and those who give reluctantly are successful in gaining admittance at the pearly gates, certainly heaven is not what we have been taught to expect.

The church needs many things today, but it needs nothing else quite so much as it needs thousands of godly laymen who are willing to go two miles when only one is required. Busy men frequently say, "When my day's work is done I am too tired to give an hour or two to church work." Such answers may satisfy their own consciences, because years of training have brought their consciences into slavery, but they will not satisfy an omniscient God. He who gave his body to die as a sacrifice for the world will hardly own as his disciples men and women who are not willing to make any sacrifice for him.

What is there waiting for laymen to do? Get your Bible, follow carefully the recorded works of our Lord, and you will have the answer.—J. M. Way in Missionary Voice.

In 46 years of use and test Hood's Sarsaparilla has relieved many cases as told by voluntary letters of commendation. Why not get a bottle today and give it a trial? It combines economy and efficiency. Keep Hood's Pills on hand as a family cathartic.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE GOOD IS THERE.

The most miserable man in the world is the one who believes that nobody is to be trusted, that selfishness is the predominant trait in every life, that goodness is merely a matter of convenience. There is much, it is true, to discourage us as we observe the ways of the world and see how little of the spirit of Christ is in many of the things that happen. But that is only a superficial view; we cannot see deep into the hearts of men and read the motives that lie back of what they do. Yet it is motive that gives moral value to actions. We need to realize that there is more good in the world and in the hearts of men than appears on the surface. Such realization will save us many an hour of discouragement and many a pang of disappointment. We should never condone sin—nor should we ever overlook goodness. Even the worst of men sometimes have noble impulses.

RACING IN NEW ORLEANS.

The promoters of horse racing in New Orleans are finding themselves, according to newspaper reports, in a difficult situation. Internal dissensions threaten to disrupt the organization that has, for several years, been back of the "sport," and the reported declaration of the Governor of the State that "the game must be cleaned up and made law-abiding," has apparently brought consternation to the racing crowd generally. In the meantime, however, preparations are going ahead for the usual season at the tracks in and near the city. It is demonstrated year after year that racing brings to New Orleans many undesirable characters, that it causes the downfall of many boys and young business men, and that it is not at all necessary as an attraction for visitors who crowd the hotels every winter. If sentiment in the city cannot be made strong enough to prohibit this demoralizing business, the State at large should demand its suppression as a measure of protection to its young people who are coming here in increasing numbers every year. We have reason to believe that our laws are already strong enough to suppress this evil; if they are not, the General Assembly can make them so. And the Governor and all other State, parish and city officials may feel assured that they will have the backing of the moral citizenship of the State in a rigid enforcement of the law. The lottery was found to be a curse, and it was outlawed; now let horse racing follow along with it.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

"The season approaches when it behooves us to turn from the distractions and preoccupations of our daily life, that we may contemplate the mercies which have been vouchsafed to us, and render heartfelt and unfeigned thanks unto God for His manifold goodness.

"This is an old observance of the American people, deeply imbedded in our thought and habit. The burdens and the stresses of life have their own insistence.

"We have abundant cause for thanksgiving. The lesions of the war are rapidly healing. The great army of freedom, which America sent to the defense of liberty, returning to the grateful embrace of the nation, has resumed the useful pursuits of peace, as simply and as promptly as it rushed to arms in obedience to the country's call. The equal justice of our laws has received steady vindication in the support of a law-abiding people against various and sinister attacks, which have reflected only the baser agitation of war, now happily passing.

"In plenty, security and peace, our virtuous and self-reliant people face the future, its duties and its opportunities. May we have vision to discern our duties, the strength, both of hand and resolve, to discharge them; and the goodness of heart to realize that the truest opportunities are those of service.

"In a spirit, then, of devotion and stewardship, we should give thanks in our hearts, and dedicate ourselves to the service of God's merciful and loving purposes to His children.

"Wherefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, do hereby designate Thursday, the 25th day of November, next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I call upon my countrymen to cease from their ordinary tasks and avocations upon that day, giving it up to the remembrance of God and his blessings, and their dutiful and acknowledgment."

IMPRACTICABLE.

Some irritated victim of the greed of the profiteers has proposed that a prison sentence be imposed upon those who are convicted of this heinous crime against humanity. We think the suggestion is altogether appropriate—but there are two serious difficulties in the way of putting it into effect: in the first place, the profiteers seem to bear a charmed life—it is almost impossible to convict them; in the second place, there are not jails enough to contain them if they should be convicted. Our strong consolation is in the thought that the good Lord will separate the goats from the sheep in the Day of Judgment.

MAKING THINGS A LITTLE BETTER.

If we had only our shortcomings and failures to think of, we would ultimately become despondent and utterly miserable. But the future always looms large in our field of vision, and we have the opportunity of planning for better things in the days to come. It is then that our failures may become our friends by showing us how to avoid the mistakes of the past. It may happen—it often does—that we go forward with fear and trembling because of the difficulty of overcoming our evident failures, and we may feel that it is impossible to make marked improvement. But surely we can see how we can make things just a little better than they were—and that is a good beginning; and if, by our best endeavors, we can make them only a little better, even then we have done well.

LOOKING NEARER HOME.

It has recently been announced that an expedition, financed by a $250,000 fund, will soon make its way to Central Asia for the purpose of conducting a five-year search for the "missing link"—that widely-known but undiscovered near-man that scientists have long desired to lay eyes and hands on. We do not know what the prospects of success are for this elaborately organized expedition—but we fear it is going too far away from home to accomplish its purpose. If we were looking for specimens of the "near-man," we would head straight for New York itself, believing that some of the intellectual drivel that emanates from that great center of population is sure proof that the species is not yet extinct. Paradoxical as it may seem, we do not believe that the "chain" has been perceptibly weakened by the absence of this hypothetical "link."

DOING FAVORS.

One of the privileges of friendship is the doing of favors. The recipient of the favor is, of course, blessed by the goodness of his friend; but, in all probability, the greater blessing rests upon the doer of the deed himself. The real values of life are not to be measured in terms of that which brings material profit, but in that enlargement of soul which follows an unselfish act. I may put a gain of money in my pocket—and walk grimly down the street, narrowly watching my fellow-men for an opportunity to add other dollars to my store; but when I have unselfishly done that which has helped a friend, I have done that which puts a glow in my heart and makes me feel kindly toward all the world. "Let us do good, therefore, as we have opportunity."

THE COMRADE IN WHITE.

By Nellie D. Morgan.

Based upon a conversation between Rev. Boswell Dandy, D.D., and a returned soldier who, when asked, "Who won the war?" declared that it was the "Comrade in White.")

"Who won the war?" said a man of God
To a soldier from overseas;
"Was it France, or England, or Italy,
Or America? Tell us, please.
Was it the Anzacs in Egypt, do you think
And Allenby's Far Eastern plan,
Was it Foch or Haig or Pershing brave
Who beat the arch-fiend?"

The soldier looked in the good man's face
And his eyes with a strange light gleamed;
The moments came and went apace
While his mind with strange thoughts teemed.
Then proudly lifting his manly head,
He answered the good man thus:
"The glory belongs to God," he said,
"And not to any of us.

"The men of the Allies were soldiers all
The generals were men of might,
But, sir, I'll tell you who won the war,
'Twas the wonderful Comrade in White.
He won the war by His mighty arm;
He put the foe to flight;
I tell you the truth, for I saw Him there,
This wonderful Comrade in White.

"I saw Him there on Flanders field,
When the tide was running red,
Silently, sorrowfully looking on—
I saw the thorns on His head;
I saw Him, too, in the greatest grim,
While the guns like thunder pealed,
Through smoke and fire and shower of lead,
In the midst of bursting steel.

"He was always there in His matchless grace,
There in the thick of the fight;
He steeled the heart and nerved the arm,
This wonderful Comrade in White.
No weapon he bore, no sword or gun,
No hatred was in His heart,
But ever aloft a shining cross,
And bravely He did His part.

"And many a lad, when his eye was dim
And his life-blood ebbing fast,
Looked long at that face, those thorns, that cross,
And they brought him peace at last.
So, when to the world you tell the tale
Of the war of wrong against right,
Just say for me that the war was won
By the wonderful Comrade in White."

THE TEACHINGS OF CHRIST.

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

Plutarch mentions it as a memorable proof of the extraordinary eloquence of Mark Antony that, when soldiers were sent to kill him, he pleaded for his life in such affecting language that he totally disarmed them of their resolutions and melted them into tears. It was said of Christ by officers sent to arrest him, when they heard one of his ordinary discourses: "Never man spake like this man."

All the great masterpieces were the offspring of great occasions—the orations of Demosthenes when Greece was battling for her liberty, of Cicero when the free institutions of Rome were threatened, of Chatham at the time of the American Revolution. When Christ appeared in human form the world had reached its lowest ebb—politically, intellectually, socially, morally. So Jesus had a great occasion because there was great need and a lingering hope. The greatest orators will the greatest opportunity before them have failed only because they have failed themselves of the strong aids and failed to rise to the occasion with a great message. The Great Teacher on the other hand, proclaimed a message of hope and one which called men with a trumpet call to battle.

The first distinguishing feature in the teachings of Jesus is their simplicity. If we examine the Talmud, or the discourses of the ancient orators, or the religious literature of the antique world, or the mystic phraseology of "Science and Health" by Mrs. Eddy, and then turn to the Sermon on the Mount or the high-priestly prayer recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John, we shall find that there is no greater contrast in all the literature of the world. The simplicity of Christ's words is what constitutes their perfection. His figures and illustrations were drawn from the book of nature, which the unlettered could read and the simple could understand. Speaking just after the visit of John's messengers, he exclaimed: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding, and didst reveal them unto babes." As a further proof of this fact, we are told that the common people heard him gladly.

Another feature of Christ's teaching is its profound revelation. He opened vast continents of truth which had been hid from the foundation of the world, and astonished the wise with the originality and the superiority of his doctrines. The reality of the unseen world, the events of the general judgment, the eternity of the former state of the saved and the lost were but dimly and indistinctly set forth in the Old Testament; Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. He presents to our wondering gaze the splendid panorama of human destiny, reaching the

"Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God who is our home."

And looking across the track of the revolving years, he wings our imagination with celestial visions till we soar beyond the dark and terrible tragedy of the apocalypse and contemplate the highest and noblest creatures, make our final abode with Christ upon the throne of universal dominion. Such knowledge is too wonderful for us; it is so high that we cannot attain unto it in our present limitations.

So Christ gave to the world new and original ideas of life—its scope and meaning, its opportunities, its responsibilities, its far-reaching significance. The greatest of all poets tells us beautifully but not truly:

"We are such stuff as dreams are made of,
And our little life is rounded by a sleep."

The Son of God said: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, . . . that where I am, there you may be also."

The teachings of Christ set forth in grandest outlines and fullest significance the great scheme of recovering mercy, and present to us the mysteries of wisdom and benevolence which the angels desire to look into. The plan of salvation has the divine approbation, and appeals to the universal conscience of mankind, flinging the destination of hope to every member of Adam's apostate race. Modern missionaries, in all their wanderings among the lost and sinful tribes of men, have never found a people who did not approve and respond to the gospel message.

Finally, this teaching is the language of authority. The weight and impressiveness of a man's

DR. T. C. WEEDMAN APPRECIATION.

By Prof. Sidney Lanier.

Measured by almost any standard, moral, mental or spiritual, Dr. T. C. Weedman was an extraordinary man. His life [illegible] exemplary that in [illegible] will amply repay [illegible]

Simply to say that [illegible] Alabama, December 12, 1841, and [illegible] August 29, 1911, the [illegible] seventy years, would [illegible] of a century of [illegible]—more than seven decades of the 19th century and two of the 20th—[illegible] one may be but [illegible] when [illegible] with an alert, [illegible] resourceful personality in the [illegible] or [illegible] such a [illegible] spell the [illegible] life, and say [illegible] machines, and [illegible] men as to [illegible] are [illegible] dispensed. For [illegible] years [illegible] such: its history and [illegible] life. He saw church and nation [illegible] War and reconstruction [illegible] and into the life of the New South [illegible] through the World War [illegible] serene and strong, watchful, cheerful, [illegible] and unafraid. How rich in knowledge [illegible] and illustration, his conversation and [illegible] sentences increasingly [illegible] but [illegible] and acquaintances could readily [illegible] have lived a hardy, truly happy [illegible] enlarging and steadily [illegible] many old fresh eventful years. [illegible] med by all who knew him, is a rare and [illegible] achievement entitled to an [illegible] its secret well worth the [illegible]

By early Dr. Weedman [illegible] certain clearly defined [illegible] seldom wandered or could be enticed by others. The home, the church, and the school were dearly of paramount importance [illegible] community. State, and [illegible] life-giving streams. In [illegible] where he was apparently content to [illegible] his many years, unfailing [illegible] attainments. Politics [illegible] and of the great business [illegible] way, he was almost oblivious. The writer from youth knew him intimately and yet cannot recall ever seeing money in his hands or hearing him speak of his personal finances. On the salary basis—after his day perhaps—it is hard to place him as a preacher. Thrifty, self-reliant, confident, erect in body, pure in heart, and firm in faith, he kept the tenor of his way; uncomplaining even when the shadows of extreme old age and enforced inactivity were slowly enveloping him. Few men who had so little have gotten out of life so much. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth, Scripture declares and his life illustrates.

Dr. Wier seemed to possess almost genius in the fine art of home making, securing the hearty co-operation of his large family. To this he devoted most of the time left him after duties as pastor or presiding elder had been performed with characteristic thoroughness. He never left a parsonage that he had not improved within and without, often with his own hands and the help of his sons, who thus acquired some of their best education. If not for his family, for that of his successor, he planted an orchard, improved the garden, painted and enlarged the house for both, and always left fences and gates in good order. In doing this, he gave his children occupation and interest in the house that bound them together and kept them no doubt from harmful associations. As husband and father, he was gentle, helpful, and instructive. His wide range of knowledge and experience and his mechanical aptitude and skill he delighted in imparting to his children without compulsion; for they vied with one another in the share that each might claim of his time. Genial, enjoying a good joke or bit of fun, yet generally quiet and thoughtful, there was withal a pervasive, wholesome spirit of good humor that made him comrade and friend, teacher and entertainer as well as father and husband, provider and director of the home. The writer counts among the happiest days of his youth those spent in that free, happy, ever busy, yet never worried or over-wearied household.

As pastor and presiding elder, Dr. Wier for over fifty years of active service displayed the same constructive, sympathetic, co-operative spirit in his dealings with congregations and preachers. On his district, they seemed to feel that their welfare was first in his mind; hence, the confidence and the affection bestowed on him and the welcome that awaited him in country or city home of the rich and the poor. The preachers fully trusted him; for they knew that their interests were safe in his hands in the cabinet, on the Conference floor, and elsewhere.

In preaching, he was expository and illustrative rather than argumentative, practical and simple rather than doctrinal and abstruse. Adaptable to changing circumstances and conditions in all his relations in life, he did what many of his contemporaries seemed unable to do—cut his fifty or sixty-minute sermons to thirty minutes or less, to the advantage generally of both speaker and hearers. In a quaint, good humored way he thus explained: "I've found out the average hearer doesn't listen well enough to know whether I've finished a sermon or not; so, when my time is up, I quit and finish it with perhaps a different text another time." To some of the brethren, this might still occasionally be helpfully suggestive.

After eighty-five years of age, his call to preach still urgent, this marvelously preserved pulpit veteran could preach effectively in protracted meetings, and at eighty-eight he could at times preach twice on Sunday for an absent pastor with vigorous thought and resonant voice, to the edification and pleasure of the congregation.

Preaching to children, in which he was specially gifted, grew increasingly important and frequent with him as he advanced in experience and years; for results from such efforts he thought the most fruitful and abiding. Few in the Conference, lay or clerical, could excel him in a sermon or Sunday school talk to young people.

On Conference occasions, he took special interest in the Sunday school and in other educational and publishing activities of the church. In debate, he was courteous and fair to all and firm in the positions he took. Neither the bishop nor his brethren could hurry him or swerve him from a full and clear statement of his cause when he had secured the floor. Attendance on Conference was one of his chief joys to almost his ninetieth year. In noting the welfare of Zion and in the fellowship of his brethren, he renewed his strength, drank afresh of the very waters of life.

Other aspects of the life, work, and character of this exceptionally useful, gifted, interesting man would furnish abundant evidence of that in him which men account noble, admirable, and worthy of emulation. But no eulogy is designed of one who so habitually did good without knowing or counting it, whose life was largely an unconscious benediction to those who touched it. Aware of the difficulty of measuring a character so symmetrical, only a brief appreciative retrospect has been hesitantly attempted for the sake of those who knew and loved him, and for those who knew him not, but can recognize the extraordinary and the unique in the life and character even thus imperfectly portrayed. To such Dr. T. C. Wier, though dead, yet lives and speaks and lessons from his tomb may teach more effectively than in the days he dwelt on earth.

REVIVAL CAMPAIGN IN OUR COLLEGES AND SCHOOLS.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard.

The Evangelistic Committee offered every university, college and school in our church a revival campaign at the expense of the Board of Missions. Some of them had already made other arrangements. Others preferred to make their own plans. But a vast majority welcomed the opportunity we offered them and arrangements have been made to conduct these meetings. We shall hold revival meetings in about sixty of our institutions. About twenty-five men and women who have the gifts and graces for holding college revivals were asked to conduct one or more of these meetings. Those who accepted the invitation to help were invited to meet in Atlanta, September 24, for a day of conference and prayer. Eighteen met in Atlanta on the appointed date. It was not a day for speech-making, but for conference and prayer. Dr. Franklin Parker was invited to make the only speeches made during the day. He closed both the forenoon and afternoon sessions with strong, timely suggestions as to the religious life of college people today. He suggested in the forenoon address that the messages in these revival campaigns be addressed to the whole institution, not exclusively to the students. Several of those present had conducted revival campaigns last year. All these reported that where the faculty was in hearty sympathy with the meeting, they invariably had good results. Where the faculty was apathetic. It was hard to get good results. In all cases where the faculty met daily with the leader of the revival for prayer, good revivals followed. How many men and women teaching in church schools are apathetic toward religion and revivals? What would the great Methodist constituency who support these Methodist schools think, were they to know that some men and women who teach in these schools are not in sympathy with Methodist methods of saving sinners and upbuilding the church? Will our contributors gladly contribute their money in the coming drive for money for Christian education if they suspect that the church school does not furnish better religious opportunities for our young people than State schools? Does not the average patron believe that he is sending his boy or girl to the best place outside his home for his child? If our schools do not have all the State schools have, plus an atmosphere, ideals and objectives that the State school cannot provide, why a church school? My dealings with the church school presidents and faculties lead me to believe that the great majority of them want these schools to be all that Methodism expects them to be. But I started out to tell of the Atlanta meeting. If ony one ever suspected that there was a lack of prayer and reliance on the Holy Spirit, he would have been disillusioned by staying in Atlanta with these persons who are to conduct these meetings. The evening session was given wholly to prayer. It was a real waiting in the upper room. These men and women waited before God for that power that came upon the disciples on the Day of Pentecost. It was a day never to be forgotten. One of the workers came nearly three thousand miles to spend this day in conference and prayer and expressed himself as feeling well repaid for his long journey.

I desire to make three requests:

1. That all the faculties where these revivals are to be held begin some weeks before the meeting to have prayer, especially for these meetings. After the meetings open, meet daily with our representative who conducts the meeting, for prayer for the meeting. If a faculty will not take time for this, are they willing to pay the price for a real revival in the school?

2. Let the Annual Conferences in whose bounds these meetings are to be held agree to pray unitedly, especially during the week of this campaign, for the greatest revival in the history of that school.

3. Let parents, especially those who have sons and daughters in the church schools, pray mightily for power to come upon our leaders who go to conduct these meetings.

Our supremest need is a genuine Scriptural revival in every one of our church schools. If we can get all who attend these schools committed to Christ, and all who are committed to Christ to hear the call to service, men of means ought to be willing to give millions to schools of that sort. The religious life and atmosphere of our schools will be scrutinized this year as never before. Already men able to do great things are asking, "Are you really turning out products that other schools cannot turn out?" We want a great revival in all our schools, not to get men favorably disposed to give their money to our church schools, but to save souls and furnish Christian leadership for the next generation. Incidentally, if we demonstrate that we are actually doing that, millions will come to the church school that will not otherwise come. The principal thing is to have a revival. A by-product will be predisposing moneyed people to invest in such schools.

WANTED—DIRECTORS OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By Dr. E. B. Chappell,
Sunday School Editor and General Secretary.

Frequent requests come to the members of the Central Staff of the Sunday School Department for counsel in regard to directors of religious education for local churches. The demand for such workers is rapidly increasing. In order to aid, as far as possible, in meeting this demand, I am asking that those who desire to devote themselves to this type of religious work file their names with me as soon as possible. With the name should be sent such facts in regard to the person making the application as are necessary to an intelligent judgment. For instance, he should give his name, age, general educational qualifications and special preparation for and experience in leadership in religious education, and should state whether he is married or single and, if married, the size of his family. A pamphlet will be sent upon application explaining the functions of a director of religious education and what special preparation he needs.

Consecrated laymen are preferred for this work, especially in view of the scarcity in the supply of preachers. If, however, a young preacher, after prayerful consideration, has reached the conclusion that he is called to this work rather than to the pastorate, there is no reason why he should hesitate to enter it. The Puritan Church of early New England always had a teaching pastor and a preaching pastor. Cotton Mather, one of the great leaders of his day, was a teaching pastor.

I trust that pastors and presidents of our Methodist schools who chance to read this request will bring the matter to the attention of young men who seem to have special fitness for such work, with a view to awakening their interest and leading them to give the subject prayerful consideration.

THE SUPREME CALL OF THE HOUR.

By Bishop William B. Murrah.

The world's confusion is the church's opportunity. The familiar and often quoted saying of Shakespeare about a tide in the affairs of men has application to the church not less than to individuals. Our Lord rebuked the stupidity that failed to discern the signs of the times. The fact that the children of this world are often in their generation wiser than the children of light is a rebuke that the church should not always deserve. In matters educational, the church, especially in America, is confronted by splendid opportunities which impose grave responsibilities. This enforces an imperative duty which we can not afford to disregard.

Certainly one could not with propriety be charged with extravagance in statement when it is declared that there was never before a period in the history of the world when so much attention was given to the subject of education as now. Men of all grades of intelligence, widely separated by employment and fortune, are united in the conviction that in some way the character of the civilization of the future is to be determined by the forces generated in our educational institutions. This unanimity of sentiment is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that many who are foremost in the recognition and assertion of this conviction have not themselves had the advantage of these institutions. They discern a manifest fact and with practical wisdom adjust themselves to actual conditions. Two notable sayings, because of their historical setting and philosophical significance, have attracted widespread attention. At a critical period in the history of Germany, the statesman Von Humboldt was asked what the government should do. He answered: "Whatever you would put into the life of the nation you must put in the nation's schools." A great soldier, Von Moltke, when he entered Paris in 1871 at the head of the triumphant German army, said, "It is the Prussian schoolmaster who must be given credit for this."

It is important at this time that we should keep in mind the fact that we are living in a period of transition. Methods, systems, and policies are undergoing revision. We hear a great deal of the old education and the new education, and since Herbert Spencer, with that felicity of expression that was characteristic of him, said that "we dress the minds of our children as we do their bodies—in the prevailing fashion—it is of the very first importance that the church should be powerfully influential in setting the fashion in education.

In some way the conviction must be burned into our people that great things must be done in our educational work, and done soon, or we are going to suffer disastrous consequences. Indeed, it is not too much to say that unless we make a very great advance in the way of organization, system, and equipment we must abandon it altogether. It would be disloyal and even a craven thing to think of this.

Since education in its highest sense means the perfect development of all the capabilities with which one is endowed, it is of paramount moment that one should get the right direction in the formative period of life. The life-moulding of an immortal being is a tremendous thing. In the stage of growth and development when the great questions which pertain to destiny are presenting themselves for answer, the institution that he attends, which to him is supposed to be authority in all things, ought not to be indifferent and silent.

The supreme purpose of an educational institution should be to make character, and there is nothing about which we need to feel concern so much as the influences which are to shape the characters of the leaders of public thought. If the Christian church ceases to dispense the blessings of education through its colleges and universities, it will soon lose all control over brilliant and influential men. If there is any place in this world where Christianity should speak with definiteness and authority, it is in our educational institutions.

The church then must educate. This is not only a legitimate function of the church; it is a normal function as well. There can not be any healthful, vigorous church life where this department of enterprise is neglected. It opens avenues for activity and channels for beneficence which are closed to all other motives and appeals. We may be sure that the church which does not maintain a constant and firm hold upon educational institutions will have no future. And it must be an intelligent and persistent hold. Mere spurts of enthusiasm will not count for much. It is not too much to say that the church should exercise coercive influences strong enough to make the colleges and universities of America Christian colleges. We have a right to demand this in the name of our civilization. Thus far they have been largely so. The church must say what shall be their character in the future. But unless the church fosters and controls great educational plants of commanding influence, its demands will be impotent.

It follows from this that if the church is to educate, it must do so in a respectable and efficient way. It cannot afford even to suggest the suspicion that it is a party to sham and mere pretense. It must never put its members in a position where loyalty to its institutions will be in conflict with the interests of their own children. To meet the demands suggested by these considerations, the church must speedily and adequately endow its colleges for higher education. This is pre-eminently the duty of the hour.

AN APPRECIATION.

Rev. Jessee Ben Fulton was born near Campti, La., in Natchitoches Parish, January 16, 1878. He was the son of Rev. Jessee Fulton, one of the pioneer preachers of Louisiana Methodism. His mother, Lucie Hammett, came from a family noted for their piety, loyalty and devotion to the church. Having had such a noble parentage, the impressions of the religious life were early made upon his mind and he made a profession of faith and devoted his whole life to the work of the church. He was educated in the public schools of our State until he entered Southwestern University at Georgetown, Texas, where he made appreciable progress in his studies. He was licensed to preach in 1903 at Shreveport, and served Plain Dealing as a supply during the year of 1904. He was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Annual Conference at Lake Charles during December, 1904. His appointments as an itinerant Methodist preacher were as follows: In 1905, at Pineville; in 1906, 1907, and 1908, at Gilbert; in 1909 and 1910, at Sibley; in 1911 and 1912, at Greensburg; in 1913 and 1914, at St. Francisville; in 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918, at Baker; in 1919 and 1920, at Franklinton.

Brother Fulton was truly a servant of God, one who realized the fact so thoroughly that it controlled his life, and he gave himself whole-heartedly to the great work of carrying the world forward to consummations the most sublime. His physique arrested attention and commanded respect wherever he went. Nature, by frame and fiber, had fitted his body for great physical endurance and his mind for an active career. He had a genial disposition without frivolous levity, and a dignified bearing without any austerity. He had the unction of the Holy One upon him. His word was in demonstration of the Spirit and power. The Kingdom which is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost was consciously set up within him. He enjoyed a conscious salvation, and often warned people against the sub-conscious state which led to indifference. Frequently in the pulpit he exulted in prospect of the great things his Heavenly Father had in store for his children. The pulpit was his throne of power. By his preaching sinners were convicted, mourners comforted, believers edified, and many added unto the Lord. He had just reached the zenith of his power and was destined to reach a high level as a preacher.

He was taken with a violent cold, which soon developed into pneumonia. His life was cut off so quick that none of his most intimate friends at a distance knew of his fatal sickness. His death, which occurred on March 5, 1920, was a shock to the entire community. Beautiful floral offerings were sent by the school children to whom he was a particular friend, and by many organizations to whom he had been an inspiration and a wise counsellor.

The body was conveyed to the family burying ground and laid to rest in the Davis Spring Cemetery near Campti, La.

"The stars shall fade away, the sun himself
Grow dim with age, and Nature sink in years;
But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wreck of matter, and the crush of worlds."

ALBERT S. LUTZ.

PAY THE CLERGYMAN HIS DUES.

In the last twelve months almost the entire country has been aroused to the peril of inadequate salaries for teachers. It has been shown that an alarming shortage of teachers existed, that incompetent instructors were being employed and that, unless sufficient pay for school work was made possible, the standard of education was bound to be seriously lowered. Agitation secured results and, in parts of the country at least, something has been done toward providing reasonable wages for the teaching profession.

But there is another profession in this country that has been increasingly neglected in the matter of pay, and a profession in whose behalf there has been little agitation. As a body, the ministers of this country are as competent as the teachers, and they are performing an essential function. But the ministers are shamefully underpaid.

United States income tax returns show that less than 1 percent of all the ministers in the country have a total income, including salary, of $3000 a year. The fortunate few number only 1671 from a total of 170,000 active ministers. Less than half of the total number received $700 or less, approximately 30 per cent of them received salaries of $500 to $1000, while nearly 13 per cent were paid $500 or less. It was only in the larger towns and cities, where just one-sixth of the ministers live, that parsonages were provided with these salaries.

Results of such conditions are apparent. The supply of ministers has been inadequate in a number of denominations for several years. Decreases have been noted in the number of students entering theological seminaries, and it has been more than once emphasized that in recent years the best equipped and most intelligent young men have not been directed to the profession. Untrained ministers and ministers who can afford to give only a part of their time to religious work have increased in number.

A significant fact in the situation is that increasing failure to provide for ministers has come at a time when the number of church members and the wealth of members have been growing, and at a time when wages generally and salaries in many other professions have moved upward. The pay of the minister is primarily the business of the church, but it cannot be said that inadequate pay has been due to inability to pay. The discouraging fact is, as religious leaders put it, the more the members have, the less they give.

A survey of contributions to pastors' salaries in one large denomination revealed that only about 1 per cent or "one-tenth of a tithe" of the income of members was given. In several denominations there has been a rather steady decrease in the amount of per capita giving to ministers for the last 50 years.

It should be remembered, of course, that only a small portion of members take an "active" part in church affairs, and that these must bear practically all the expense of the organization. It is true, too, that everything possible should be done to make the church attractive to the majority of members. This would aid also in bringing more capable young men to the ministerial profession.

But no change of conditions that omits provision of adequate pay for ministers, along with provision for inactive years, will be at all likely to place the profession in the position of power that it should hold. Simple justice to the minister demands that he be paid in accordance with his ability and labor. He is but a man after all.

Where sufficient attention has been called to conditions churches have done something toward paying ministers what they deserve. But the move toward betterment has hardly started and it is worthy enough to receive wide support.—Kansas City Star.

A NOTE FROM BISHOP McMURRY TO REV. W. C. CHILDRESS.

Dear Brother Childress: Your appointment is "preacher in charge" of City Missions in New Orleans. Under your oversight will be the St. Mark's Hall, Mary Werlein Mission and the Memorial Home, and any other missionary agencies that it may be determined should be connected with your charge.

You have associated with you for the time being the Italian preacher, Brother Romano, who will assist you greatly with the Italian congregation. Also you have Brother W. E. Thomas, who is named in connection with the Memorial Home. He will be of great assistance to you in that work. The Conference placed an assessment for the support of this Home, and Brother Thomas, or some one else, should go to the Mississippi Conferences, as it is decided that these Conferences join in the support of this work. The Home is not formally under what is known as the City Board, in the sense that the Board is responsible for its support. Plans are on foot, by Conference assessment and otherwise, to care for its financial needs. It is, however, under your charge, and like all other mission agencies named should report to the quarterly conference and to the City Board, and all funds received from whatsoever source for its support should be received and paid out by the Treasurer of the City Board, or what perhaps would be an Assistant Treasurer for that particular work.

You will find Brother Thomas interested in this particular work, and with him as your fellow-laborer, with special references to this particular "job" and the presidng elder's co-operation, the work should go forward and speedily reach the unified state that seems desirable.

I have confidence in your judgment and religion and believe that under the blessing of the good Father a new day is dawning for mission work in New Orleans. Yours sincerely,

W. F. McMURRY.

THEN WE SHALL SEE MOUNT ZION.

A few years ago I traveled out to our Northwestern coast. My friends there had written me of the beauties of their great guardian mountain, Mount Tacoma. Travelers on the way who had seen it told me of its glories. I had a desire to see it. When we crossed the mountain range at early dawn I was watching for it, but it was nowhere in sight. Finally I said to a fellow traveler "Where is Mount Tacoma?" "It ought to be right over there," he replied, "but I fear you will not be able to see it for the mists." But I kept watching in the direction he had indicated, and suddenly as we rounded a spur of the mountain chain, away up through the clouds, towering in imperial grandeur above the little hills about it, was a great white breast of mother earth, and I had just time to say, "That must be Mount Tacoma" when it was gone. That glimpse was the only view I had of it. From the valleys below and from the streets of the cities on the sound, morning after morning, I turned my eyes mountainward, but I could not see it. Yet I doubted not it was there. One day from a sparkling stream of water dashing into the sand I drank a refreshing draught, and when I asked, "Whence this cool, clear water?" my friends replied, "From the mountains," but I could not see them. Yet I doubted not my friends. I received the witness of men in regard to that mountain of earth. The witness of God to Mount Zion is greater. We cannot see it now for the mists of life. Occasionally we catch maybe a glimpse or are refreshed by the streams that flow down from that hidden source; but some morning, bright and fair, we will wake up and the clouds will all be cleared away, and before us will tower in glory the city of our God, the mountain of his holiness, the streams whereof make glad this earth.—The Rev. Robert S. Inglis.

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-workers: We hope you had a great day in your churches, Sunday, November 7, results of which will enable you to report 100 per cent collection of your Centenary Pledges for the first two years. Be sure and get your reports to this office so that we may know the result of your effort. If you do not collect 100 per cent, and do not complete your task, allow us to suggest that you continue your work through your committees, until you have reached the desired goal.

If, for any reason, you could not observe last Sunday as Pay-Up Day, use some other Sunday, so that every church may be able to report all paid in full. It is very important that your reports get to this office as early as possible, as we have a great deal of work to do in getting ready for Conference.

We hope to see you at Conference, and enjoy the fellowship of the occasion, and extend to you a cordial invitation to visit us at "Centenary Headquarters." If there is anything left undone, and you did not get in on your final report, you may bring it to the Centenary Headquarters there at Conference.

Assuring you of our appreciation of your co-operation during this year's labors, and anticipating meeting you at Confrence, I am,

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Conference Centenary Treasurer.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, AND ALL CO-WORKERS IN THE CENTENARY IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Allow me to thank you for your co-operation that has made it possible for our Conference to climb upward from thirty-sixth place in Centenary Collections to occupy now the eleventh place—but I wish we were at the top.

Much can be done in the last "lap of the race;" therefore, I appeal to you in these closing days of the Conference year to do your very best to collect every pledge before Conference. I would like to have a report from each church in the Conference, using the regular report blank, and answering all questions on the report. Please let the report show the amount paid for the entire time; also, should you have any money on hand (either cash or in bank), report, and send it to me right away. Do not make your report by charges, but by churches. Do not take it for granted that your Treasurer has reported, but be sure that he has.

All together now, for the last pull before Conference. Let's make it a systematic pull together, in each church for 100 per cent collection for the first two years.

Yours for the Payment of the Pledges in Full, and Service in His Name, W. D. HAWKINS.

Conference Missionary Secretary,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

PRE-EMINENCE OF CHRIST IN A LIFE.

But let it not be thought that the actual pre-eminence of Jesus in any life is a mere inference from truth, a mere philosophic acceptance of doctrine, or a mere prospect of faith and hope. Let it never be forgotten that it is rather a definite consecration in expression of personal indebtedness—the response of a love which constrains. Professor Drummond used to tell of an invalid girl whose life, so unruffled in its peace and fragrant with the beauty of holiness, was a constant source of wonderment to those who knew her pain and were acquainted with her circumstances. After her death the secret was discovered. A small locket which had hung about her neck was found to contain the words, "Whom having not seen I love!" The pre-eminence of Jesus Christ is the pre-eminence which love will ever give to the One of its choice, however costly it proves. And the cost will always be prominent, for it is nothing less than that "He must increase but I must decrease." Since He is worthy, and desireth to accept the pre-eminence in such trifles as are "all things" in our lives, let us not fail to search ourselves as to whether we have given him a corner or the crown of life, as to whether he is on the threshold or on the throne.—J. Stuart Holden.

TWO WEEKS ON A JAPANESE LINER.

By Dr. Carlton D. Harris,
Editor, Baltimore Southern Methodist.

(This is the first of a series of travel articles which Dr. Harris, who attended the World's Sunday School Convention in Tokyo, Japan, promised to send to the Advocate.—Editor.)

Hundreds of people crowded the pier at San Francisco, on the afternoon of Saturday, September 18, when the "Tenyo Maru," the big Japanese liner, loosed her moorings and started upon her long voyage across the Pacific. There were waving of handkerchiefs, throwing of roses and kisses, shedding of tears and a final interchange of words of farewell, as the liner moved slowly toward the Golden Gate. But in the sea of faces there was none we recognized. No one shouted "Good-bye" to us. A packet of letters and post cards from some of our readers, however, somewhat softened our feeling of solitariness.

There was no fog. The weather was bracing. The atmosphere was clear, affording an ideal view of the Golden Gate bathed in the glory of the afternoon sun as we swept out beyond its portals. A Philadelphia judge who was standing on the deck remarked that in all his experience he had never seen the Golden Gate under such favorable atmospheric conditions. The skill of no painter could reproduce that marvelous scene in its golden glory, as it seemed to breathe upon us the parting benediction of the homeland.

But the last vestige of land soon faded, and we turned to see what sort of vessel we were sailing on and what sort of company we were journeying with.

The Tenyo Maru is a 22,000-ton steamer, one of the largest that ply the waters of the Pacific. The name is Japanese and means Heavenly Ocean Circle. It is one of a fleet owned by the Toyo Kisen Kaisha (Oriental Steamboat Co.), with headquarters at Tokyo, Japan. It is officered by Japanese with the exception of Mr. T. C. McCombe, the traveling purser, and Mr. A. E. Evans, the chief steward, who are Americans. Its commander is Mr. T. Maki, a Japanese navigator of large experience in typhoons, and its purser is Mr. Kobayashi, a very accommodating and courteous officer.

Every morning the chief officers, headed by the captain, all clad in immaculate white ducks, make a tour of inspection over the boat, peering into every nook and corner for a speck of dust which they seldom find, as the Japanese and Chinese stewards and cabin boys keep the ship as spotless as "spotless town." The Chinese waiters in the dining room are so attentive that if one stops eating a moment to glance around the room they, thinking he is through with that course, will remove his plate and substitute another. More than once when we have looked for our plate after glancing around we have seen it, sometimes with food scarcely touched, vanishing toward the kitchen in the hands of faithful Yua, our waiter. "The heathen Chinese is peculiar," but one cannot travel on this boat without forming a high estimate of the intelligence and serviceableness of the Chinese waiters.

We have 251 first-class passengers, 58 second-class, and 281 third-class, which, with a crew of 295, make 885 souls on board. There are 54 first-class passengers in the Sunday School Convention party and about 38 Japanese Christians from California sailing second-class to the Convention. Dr. Joseph Clark, State Sunday School Superintendent of New York, is chairman of the party. He is a man of large experience in Sunday school matters and is the author of several well-known Sunday school books, one of which is "Fishin' for Men," being a series of letters in provincial dialect from Timothy Standby to his brother Laban in regard to the "Redemshun of Jericho Kort House." Dr. Clark is accompanied by his wife and daughter.

Mr. C. R. Fisher, who is the State superintendent of California, has charge of the Japanese contingent to the Convention. He brought his stereopticon and a choice selection of slides with him and every evening entertains and edifies by means of pictures and lectures.

Of other persons of interest on board we shall mention several: Hon. K. Uchida, formerly Governor of Formosa, a peer and a member of the Japanese Parliament. Mr. Uchida is returning from Italy where he represented his government at a labor conference. Though not a Christian, he is a member of the Tokyo Sunday School Convention committee. He is a very affable gentleman and is generally present at the religious services which are held three times on Sunday and every night in connection with illustrated songs. He told us that he believes in the Book—meaning the Bible. He also declared that the Japanese Government recognized the excellent fruit of the Christian religion and was in no way hostile to Christianity—in fact, for years it has been making appropriations to the Salvation Army and to Christian hospitals.

Mrs. E. Sugimoto and daughter, Miss H. Sugimoto. Mrs. Sugimoto is the professor of Japanese literature and history in Columbia University. This lady confided to us that she is taking her daughter to Japan to be married. She has studied in several American schools and is as dainty and sweet as a Japanese plum blossom. She speaks a perfect English with a musical voice.

Rev. W. E. Jordan, a Randolph-Macon graduate of 1912, now the pastor of Calvin Presbyterian Church, of Philadelphia. He is the bearer of greetings from John Wanamaker to the convention and of presents to the Emperor and his family—a rare, hand-painted portrait of George Washington for the Emperor, a silver vase filled with rose leaves from France for the Empress, and sleeve buttons with diamonds set in platinum, a gold green watch ornamented with diamonds and rubies, and two pencils of exquisite workmanship and design for the four sons.

Dr. S. S. Waltz, the Executive Secretary of the Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church of America, who is on his way around the world to visit the missions of the Lutheran Church. Dr. Waltz preached a comforting sermon the second Sunday we were at sea.

Rev. Charles E. Ewing, a missionary of the American Board, who, with his wife and two small children, was in the Peking siege during the Boxers' rebellion of 1900. He is sailing for Tehslen, Shantung province, North China, where he will be joined by his wife in a short while.

Rev. and Mrs. C. N. Magill, missionaries of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., for fifteen years in Tayabas Province, Luzon, P. I. They translated the Bible into the Tagalog language—the most important dialect of the Philippines.

Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Salsbury, returning from their first furlough to Hai How, island of Hainau, South China. They have charge of the American Presbyterian Hospital located there—one of the largest in China.

Mrs. A. L. Pownall, an English woman, who is returning to her work in China, where she has been a missionary in connection with "Christian Missions in Many Lands." She is the principal of the Gracie Kingham Memorial School in Manchang—a school in memory of her little niece, who, at the age of seven, was massacred with her father and mother in a local riot in that city in 1906.

Rev. Robert Irwin, who is operating in Siang under the auspices of the American Bible Society.

Rev. Henry Allen Boyd, of Nashville, Secretary of the Sunday School Congress of the National Baptist Convention. Mr. Boyd is the only colored delegate on the ship. He speaks in the highest terms of the connectional men in Nashville.

The following Baltimoreans are with the Sunday School party: Rev. B. F. Lewis, Miss Bettie Newmann, Miss Hilda Lindenstruth, Miss L. F. Bittinger, and a Country Parson at this writing.

The voyage has been uneventful. The sea has been gentle and ladylike, and generally not ruffled enough for whitecaps. There has been no sign of life except a few flying fish resembling tiny birds skimming the waters—no gulls, no porpoises, no whales, only a barren waste of water. Once or twice we sighted a passing ship. The wireless man told us there were vessels within reach of his voice all the time. The wireless has a radius of 600 miles by day and 2,000 by night. It loves the witching hours. Sunrise, we are told, is worth getting up to see, and the sunsets we know are gorgeous. But neither is so enchanting as the view of the full moon as it rises upon the waters.

There are all sorts of diversions on board—dancing, card playing, baseball, shuffle board, knitting, story-telling, swimming in the pool and holding hands by the young people in the moonlight.

Dr. Clark manages to have a program every afternoon and night that meets the intellectual and spiritual needs of the company. These meetings are usually well attended. Experts have thrown a flood of light upon the countries of the Orient, especially in their relation to missions.

The Japanese, under the leadership of their native pastors, hold one or two services every day on the lower deck, sing our hymns in the Japanese language and preach to their people in that tongue. They are a band of devoted and joyous Christians, and are making an impression on the ship's company.

There have been two deaths on the vessel since the voyage began, one in the steerage and one among the crew. The ship's butcher was attacked the night before we reached Honolulu with what the purser called "congestion of the brain" and died in two hours. On an aft deck his body in an iron receptacle covered by canvass is lashed to the uprights of the deck. On the top are the dead man's spectacles, a plate of grapes and bananas, a cup of water and a tin vessel of flowers. He was a Buddhist and had been with the company for twenty years, so the captain decided he would take his body to his wife and children in Yokohama. At the service on the Sunday following his death, the blessing of the common Father was invoked upon the widow and children who await in vain the return of a husband and father.

On Tuesday, September 28, about 2:25 in the afternoon, we crossed the 180th Meridian, the International Date Line, and dropped the following day of the week and its date from the calendar. We went to bed on Tuesday night and woke up on Thursday morning. On the return trip we shall pick up the lost day by living one day twice. This must be done to harmonize the time of the West and the East. The ship has posted a statement explaining all this, which is very simple—to those who understand it.

As we are nearing the end of the voyage the ship has published an edition of the "Pacific Wireless Daily News," a fourteen-page magazine with the latest world happenings received by wireless from Tokyo. Its first page is ornamented with a beer advertisement and its second page contains a seathing arraignment of dancing, declaring that the "one-step and jazz are the newest signpost on the primrose path to the everlasting bonfire." It strikes us that the beer advertisement is not consistent with the attack on dancing and is scarcely in good taste when the fact is taken into consideration that the ship's company is from a prohibition land and that many of them are going to a Sunday School Convention.

We should like to reprint a menu card to show our readers the gastronomic provision the ship makes for its guests. The ship knows that it runs no risk in holding out beautiful promises to them, that when it gets well under way such things lose all their attractiveness. To many of us they defy the law of gravitation. They won't stay down. We had a fellow feeling with Mark Twain who said that he threw up everything but his immortal soul—and he expected that up every moment.

IMPATIENCE.

The soul loses command of itself when it is impatient, whereas, when it submits without a murmur, it possesses itself in peace, and possesses God. To be impatient, is to desire what we have not, or not to desire what we have. When we acquiesce in an evil, it is no longer such. Why make a real calamity of it by resistance? Peace does not dwell in outward things, but within the soul. We may preserve it in the midst of the bitterest pain, if our will remains firm and submissive. Peace in this life springs from acquiescence even in disagreeable things, not in an exemption from bearing them.—Fenelon.

The Home Circle

OUR GOOD OLD WORLD.

The green world, the clean world—
It's mighty good, my boy!
And if we only look for it,
The world is full of joy.
Sad enough and glad enough,
In almost every spot—
So let us make the best of this,
The good old world we've got.

The green world, the clean world—
The world we're living on—
Has every night a lucky star
And every day a dawn,
Everywhere are smiles to spare
And everywhere a song—
Our good old world can run itself
And keep from going wrong.

The green world, the clean world,
It swings along its way—
The finest place that we have lived,
And better every day.
Smiles are here for every tear,
So let us not be vexed—
But let us build up happiness
To treasure in the next.

The green world, the clean world—
It's good to you and me.
It holds for us our heart's desire,
If we can only see.
Sing and smile most all the while
And roll the griefs away—
The happy world, the friendly world,
The world we have to-day.

THE SERVICE OF MARGARET.

"What a beautiful afternoon!" exclaimed Margret Wilson, as she tripped lightly down the steps. "Just delightful for shopping! There's the ribbon for Aunt Kate, the lace for Evelyn, the trimming for mother and the dress for myself. I must hurry, or I'll not get through the list."

She was rushing along when a stilled sob aroused her from her happy reverie. She looked around quickly, and there was little Tommy Jones, leaning against the fence, crying piteously.

"What's the matter, Tommy?" she stopped to ask.

"I'm lost," he sobbed.

"Lost!" laughed Margaret. "Well, come along, Tommy, and I'll take you home."

Tommy's home was two blocks out of her way, but his gratitude, and his smiling face when he recognized his own gate, fully paid Margaret for her trouble and loss of time.

She hurried on again and had just made up the two blocks when she met poor old Uncle Billy Thompson, whose face brightened up as he saw her coming.

"Howdy do?" he exclaimed, joyfully. "Your bright face does my old heart good for sure."

"Why, Uncle Billy, said Margaret, anxiously, noting how wearily he crept along, "you look all tired out. I fear you have taken too long a walk this time."

"Yes," sighed the old man, "I'm all done out. Seems lf I ain't much strength lately. I'm most afraid I can't get home," he said, looking appealingly at the girl.

"Just take my arm, Uncle Billy."

When she got Uncle Billy home she rushed on again to make up time. Just as she turned the corner she saw two boys fighting. This was a little out of her line, but she finally persuaded them to go home, and as they lived in opposite directions, the fight was put off.

A little farther on lived a cripple girl, who on shiny days was a member of Margaret's Bible school class, and when she reached the house of the poor little shut-in, her kind heart got the best of her, and she went in for a minute, "just a minute," she said to herself. The girl was so overjoyed to see Margaret that the minute was a long one, and once on the street again, she thought to herself: "Now I must go right along, and not stop another time for anybody."

Her mind was busy with her shopping again, when she heard some one calling, in the weak and trembling tones of old age: "Margaret, my dear, can't you come in a moment? I have a lettor from my boy Jimmy in California, and my eyes are so poor I can't see to read it."

Margaret ran up the steps. "Yes, indeed, Aunt Rachel, I'll be glad to read it for you," forgetting her resolution.

"Oh, Margaret, my dear, God bless you for being so kind!"

The letter from Jimmy cheered Aunt Rachel wonderfully, and as Margaret finshed reading the old lady exclaimed: "You must have been sent by Providence, Margaret, for I was so anxious to hear from Jimmy. I hope you weren't in a hurry."

"No," gasped Margaret, "I'm never in too much of a hurry to stop and read Jimmy's letters to you, Aunt Rachel."

Out on the street again, Margaret fairly flew, until she collided with a very substantial object going in the opposite direction. This object proved to be Mrs. Wilson's washerwoman.

"Why, Mrs. Finnigan," exclaimed Margaret, "what's the trouble?"

"Och, Margaret, honey, Mikey's took awful sick, and I'm goin' to the drug store for some medicine. I hed to l'ave 'im alone, poor b'y."

Margaret hesitated, but only for an instant. "I'll go and get the medicine, Mrs. Finnigan, and you run back to Mikey."

When she arrived at the house with the medicine, Mrs. Finnigan asked her to run in and tell her next-door neighbor that Mikey was sick, and "would she plaze come over for a spell."

As soon as she reached the sidewalk again, Margaret screwed up enough courage to consult her watch. It only lacked thirty minutes until closing-time at the stores, and she was several squares away.

"I'll take this car," she thought, "and perhaps I can make it in time to do part of my shopping, at least."

"Wud ye be koind enough to tell me whaur State Street is, leddy?" asked a frightened-looking woman standing on the corner.

Margaret stopped and relieved the woman's anxiety by giving her careful directions as to State Street. The woman thanked her and started off, and Margaret looked up to see her car gliding by.

"It's too late anyway," she soliloquized, looking down the street at the disappearing car.

She sighed as she turned reluctantly toward home. The family were eating supper when she came in, empty-handed, from her supposed shopping excursion.

"Well, Margaret, where's the new dress?" asked her father, teasingly.

"Humph!" exclaimed her young brother, "it takes a girl the whole afternoon to buy one dress. Whew!"

Margaret smiled rather doubtfully as she sat down.

"I'll have to confess that I simply wasted the whole beautiful afternoon. I don't understand exactly how I did it, but I know that I didn't get down street at all, and I hurried every minute, too."

Her mother laughed. "What were you doing?"

"Well, I stopped too many times on the way, I think; but really what became of the afternoon, I can't tell."

They listened while she rehearsed her experiences of the afternoon. As she finished, her father said, earnestly: "My dear daughter, I do not call the afternoon wasted, by any means. It seems to me it was very well spent."

"Although you failed to carry out your own plans, Margaret," said her mother, softly, "you have surely filled the afternoon with loving service to those who needed your help and sympathy. Let us not call it wasted time."

"I had not thought of it in that way," admitted Margaret.

"You may not have realized it, Margaret," said her father, looking into her face, "but you have been serving the Master himself, for he said: 'Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these, you have done it unto me.'"—Anne Porter Johnson, in Christian Standard.

THROUGH LOVE.

Be diligent, after thy power, to do deeds of love. Think nothing too low, to do lovingly for the sake of God. Bear with infirmities, ungentle tempers, contradictions; visit, if thou mayest, the sick; relieve the poor; forego thyself and thine own ways for love; and He whom in them thou lovest, to whom in them thou ministerest, will own thy love, and will pour His own love into thee.—E. B. Pusey.

A man is relieved and gay when he has put his heart into his work, and done his best; but what he has said or done otherwise, shall give him no peace.—R. W. Emerson.

THE WILL TO DO.

The Centenary was probably the greatest movement ever undertaken in the history of Methodism. It was great in conception, great in its ultimate objectives, and great in execution. There grew up out of it and around it an organization of the working forces of the church that has been a revelation to us all as to the possibilities of concerted action.

But we are face to face now with a movement that is greater, in some respects, than was the Centenary—the Christian Education Movement. The Centenary was an expression of the church's determination to meet the world's need of an extensive program of evangelization; the Christian Education Movement is an expression of the church's determination to provide for an intensive program of development without which its ambitious plans for a constantly enlarging sphere of activity will finally come to naught. Although secondary to the Centenary in point of time, the Christian Education Movement is of primary importance in that the fruition of the Centenary plans is dependent upon the accomplishment of all that is involved in it.

We cannot believe that any of our people, ministers or laymen, do not realize how urgently necessary is the strengthening of our educational institutions; but we do believe it is well to lay such emphasis upon this necessity that it cannot be lost sight of, no matter what other interests may be brought to our attention. The time has come in the history of the world when education is indispensable to worth-while achievement. It is true that educaton is not always received through the schools—that is, some may educate themselves by their own efforts, apart from the facilities of educational institutions—but it is likewise true that the surest, quickest, and best training comes through the schools. The general manager of one of the great corporations of New Orleans, speaking in a connection entirely unrelated to the movement in our church, said recently: "The difference between civilization and barbarism is education. A nation's station in the affairs of the world is determined by its educational facilities and the extent to which these advantages are accepted by the people. On the high pinnacle of achievement there is no place for the illiterate; the semi-educated are limited by the bounds of their knowledge. There are a million reasons for education and none against." A New Orleans bank president, probably not even aware that our church was contemplating a great educational movement, wrote these words last summer: "A noted man said that if he had a great work to do and was given ten years to do it in, he would spend nine years in preparation. His meaning was that he could do more in one year by being thoroughly equipped and prepared than in ten years with ordinary and insufficent knowledge. The present is so pregnant with possibilities that one cannot afford to endanger his career by going out into the world handicapped by a blunt instrument."

These men were speaking purely from the utilitarian point of view, with the idea of personal success in mind; but if they attach so much importance to education merely as a means of material prosperity, how much more shall we value it as a condition of intellectual and spiritual achievement? If the church of God does not give to education the importance assigned it by the business community, it can hardly hope to command the respect of business leaders by appealing to them with uneducated ministers and an ignorant church membership.

That the raising of $33,000,000 for our educational institutions is a great undertaking, and a difficult one, no sane person will question; but that it is impossible of accomplishment no reasonable man will dare affirm. If the need is self-evident and urgent, as it unquestionably is, that of itself constitutes the strongest possible reason for believing that it can be met. Just as no temptation assails men from which there is no escape, so no need confronts them that cannot be supplied. The good Lord does not mock men by implanting in their souls yearning for that which is high and holy and then denying them the possibility of attainment. What ought to be done, can be done—and it can be done by the people who ought to do it.

It would be foolish for us to ignore the difficulties in the way of our raising $33,000,000 within the next few months for our educational interests—but it would be almost sinful, if not altogether so, for us to be dismayed by them. "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady"—and hesitating, disheartened, timorous leaders never won a fight against heavy odds; yet the king's son, with the broken sword that the panic-stricken soldier had cast away, rallied his forces and won a memorable victory that day. Let us enter this Christian Education Movement with the will to do, and such difficultics as do not disappear will be overcome, and a success will be achieved that will amaze even the most optimistic among us.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

When this issue of the Advocate reaches its readers, the North Mississippi Conference will be in session at Charleston, under the presidency of Bishop W. F. McMurry. Like De Ridder, the seat of the recent session of the Louisiana Conference. Charleston is one of the newer towns that have reached the point within the past few years where they feel equal to the responsibilities involved in entertaining a great ecclesiastical gathering. De Ridder acquitted herself most creditably, and we have every reason to believe that Charleston will do likewise. The pastor, Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, is a most genial host, and he has the assistance and co-operation of his own church and of the citizens generally. Personlly, we anticipate a very delightful occasion.

The recent fall in the price of practically all agricultural products, especially cotton, Mississippi's great crop, has made it difficult in many cases to secure collections in full; yet we are confident that reports will show that our preachers and people have been faithful, diligent, and generous in providing for the claims assessed against them, and we do not anticipate very much falling off in the collections as compared with previous years. Methodists have a great way of making the best of a difficult situation, and we believe this will be no exception to the rule.

Greater than the financial returns, though, are the results of the revival meetings that have been held during the year. Our hearts have been cheered as we have read from month to month of the gracious outpouring of the Spirit upon earnest seekers after a better life and of the number of those who have identified themselves with the church. We shall be greatly surprised if the reports to the Conference do not show that there has been a considerable increase in the membership of the church during the year.

It will be a fitting thing for all our people to remember in their prayers the officers and members of the Conference as they assemble this week in the hospitable city of Charleston.

THE METHODIST QUARTERLY REVIEW.

The October number of the Review was a little late in making its appearance, but its table of contents makes full amends for any disappointment that may have been felt because of the delay. The range of subjects is wide, running from philosophy and theology, through pressing practical problems, to literary discussions and appealing essays. Not only is it worth its price in money—a small thing—but it is also worth the time it takes to read it from cover to cover. We commend it to the favorable attention of all our people.

SOME FEATURES OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

First in importance of the outstanding features of the recent session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, we place the report of the statistical secretary to the effect that the net increase of membership during the year exceeded 3000. Earnest efforts have been made throughout the year by all our preachers to bring the gospel home to the lives of the people, and it is inspiring to know that, even in the midst of the most troublous times we have had for many years, the gospel appeal has not lost its power. While it is difficult to guarantee the accuracy of membership statistics, we are assured that there has been a substantial growth during the year just closed. For this we give God thanks, and take courage.

The Christian Education Movement was given right of way on Thursday, and the subject was strongly presented by those in charge of the program. Bishop McMurry gave hearty endorsement to the Movement and consistently emphasized the necessity of pressing it to a successful issue. The Conference, without a dissenting vote, accepted its quota, and the Bishop appointed one of its strongest men, Rev. A. S. Lutz, as Conference Secretary of Education to direct the Movement. Certain controversies concerning Centenary College were amicably adjusted, and the Conference pledged its hearty support to this and and its other educational interests.

The number of districts was reduced by one, the Monroe and the Ruston Districts being merged into the Monroe-Ruston District. There was almost a complete change in the personnel of the presiding elders, the feeling having arisen among both laymen and preachers, not only in Louisiana, but also throughout the church, that there should be a constant rotation between the pastorate and the presiding eldership.

The Conference took advanced ground with reference to the support of the Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate. A minimum quota of one subscriber for every ten members of the church was adopted, and the quota was ordered distributed to the pastoral charges by the district stewards. After representation by the Board of Christian Literature, the Commission on Finance included in its assessments the sum of $1218 for the editorial support of the Advocate, and this item was unanimously approved and adopted by the Conference. Not only was this action deemed wise in the present critical situation due to the extremely high cost of producing the paper, but the opinion was also expressed on the floor of the Conference by the chairman of the Commission on Finance, Dr. F. S. Parker, that as a permanent policy the salary of the editor of the Conference organ should be removed from the uncertain vicissitudes of journalistic enterprise. This action of the Louisiana Conference is in keeping with that of the patronizing Conferences of most of our church papers in providing an assessment for their maintenance.

The weather during Conference was ideal, and the hospitality of De Ridder was without a flaw. It was good to be in attendance upon this, the seventy-fifth annual gathering of this notable body.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Brother E. E. Williamson, of Crew Lake, La., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for thirty years or more. He belongs to an elect company.

Rev. J. Loyd Deceil, a Mississippian who has made a fine record in California, has recently been visiting friends and relatives in his old home-State.

According to reports reaching us, the revival meeting at McComb, Miss., conducted by Rev. G. A. Klein, was a great blessing to that community.

My work is closing out in fine shape; everything in full and a little 'bonus' for the preacher," writes Rev. M. K. Miller, of Holly Bluff, Miss. Fine!

According to the Texas Christian Advocate, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon has accepted an invitation to make his home at Tulsa, Oklahoma. He will move there about January 1.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the new pastor of Parker Memorial Church in New Orleans, is really coming back home, as he has previously served two pastorates in this charge, where he is greatly beloved.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley being out of the city last Sunday, Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer filled the Felicity pulpit at the morning service. He reports a very large congregation and close attention to the sermon.

Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor of Second Church, this city, has an unusual record in that he is beginning his sixth consecutive year in his present charge. It goes without saying that he has done a great work at Second Church.

Rev. W. C. Childress, the new superintendent of missions in New Orleans, reached the city on Thursday of last week, after a 1700-mile automobile trip from Deming, New Mexico. He has entered actively upon his work.

A preacher's wife recently wrote to her husband's predecessor: "You left the parsonage as clean as a new pin; you do not know how much we appreciate this kindly act." We wonder if every preacher deserves such commendation.

Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, our pastor at Sulphur, La., suffered a painful, though not serious, injury while attending Conference at De Ridder. The automobile in which he was riding with his host very foolishly left the road. It was hurt worse than its occupants.

Dr. J. Stewart French, for four years pastor of Church Street Church, Knoxville, Tenn., has been electd prsident of Emory and Henry College, at Emory, Va., and Martha Washington College, at Abington, Va., to succeed Dr. C. C. Weaver, who recently resigned.

Rev. D. Scarborough, well known in Mississippi where he formerly held pastorates, was transferred from Midland to Victoria at the recent session of the West Texas Conference. He thinks often of his old friends, with many of whom he keeps in touch through the Advocate.

Her many friends regretted not seeing Sister T. S. Randle at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, held at De Ridder. Sister Randle is an enthusiastic Methodist and an ardent supporter of the Superannuate Endowment Fund. She is also one of the best friends the Advocate has.

The first service in the new church at Winnfield, La., was held in the basement on the last Sunday in October. At that time resolutions were adopted, expressing the appreciation of the services of the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Walton, who have rendered most efficient service during the past four years.

The fourth quarterly conferenc of the Harriston charge, Mississippi Conference, adopted highly commendatory resolutions concerning Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Hopper. Brother Hopper has served the charge four years as pastor, and he and his good wife have won the love and esteem of all the people.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, the recently appointed pastor of Felicity Church, is no stranger in New Orleans, this city having been his home before he entered the itinerancy. He also served as pastor of Second Church some years ago. It will be an easy matter, therefore, for him to adapt himself to his new charge.

Rev. W. L. Duren, the new pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, this city, was in his pulpit Sunday morning and evening. He was given a very cordial greeting by a large congregation. His friends in Mississippi will not be surprised to hear that he made a fine impression in his new charge. He is attending the North Mississippi Conference, at Charleston, this week, where he will make final report of his work as presiding elder of the Columbus District.

The last Sunday in October was a banner day with the Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss. There were 510 present, and at the church service which followed, forty-two members were received, thirty-four of them by baptism and vows. Thirteen infants and children were baptized. Thirty of the new members came from the Sunday school. An unusual, but very fine feature of the service was the presentation of the Discipline of the church to the members joining from the Sunday school, the presentation speech being made by the superintendent, Col. J. C. Hardy. The Sunday school at Gulfport was organized about twenty years ago by Mr. S. A. Tomlinson and Miss Juliette Rhorer and a few others, meeting in a box car; it is now one of the best schools in the Mississippi Conference. Rev. W. L. Linfield, the pastor, is an indefatigable Sunday school worker.

On the last Sunday in October, Mr. A. M. Mayo completed his twenty-eighth year as superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school in Lake Charles, La. In recgnition of that fact he was presented with a beautifully bound volume containing interesting historical data and personal letters from former pastors and presiding elders who have served the local church, from local coworkers, and from more than one hundreds members of the Louisiana Conference who have been brought into close association with Brother Mayo. The affair was managed so skillfully by Rev. W. W. Holmes, the pastor, that Brother Mayo was wholly unaware that any special notice was to be taken of the day. We have it from a friend that he was so overcome by emotion that a little boy, in telling of the occasion, said, "Brother Mayo was so scared he couldn't talk." Methodism has no finer layman than this Sundy school superintendent of Lake Charles who has magnified his office for twenty-eight years.

REAL GIVING.

H. G. Hawkins, Campaign Manager for the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg, relates that recently at the close of a service he was looking over the subscription cards. Several were for a hundred dollars, but he was attracted by one card signed by a college girl who was at home for the day, and in the congregation. Upon inquiry it was learned that when it came to making subscriptions this young lady had said to her mother that she wished to sign for twenty dollars. The mother objected that they could not afford it, but withdrew the objection upon the daughter's claim that she could pay the twenty dollars in four years by saving out of her spending money ten cents per week.

The first installment of five dollars has already been paid. It doubtless was a sacrifice; but there is not such a thing as an ignorant sage or a selfish heroine. This girl has the satisfaction of knowing that she has invested in a noble enterprise.

MY GUIDE.

When all the way is dark and strange,
With lights familiar gone,
How blest to close my straining eyes
And just let Christ lead on!

With thought perplexed, with judgment weak,
And questions pressing sore,
What peace to say, "He shall decide!"—
And know my troubles o'er.

When bowed beneath care's weary weight,
What joy to hear His call,
"Child, heavy laden, come to me!"—
And see my burden fall.

Be thou, O Christ, my wisdom, strength,
Till all my journey's past!
There is no other way for me
To reach my home at last.

The Monticello charge, the Georgetown church, and the people were greatly bereaved on the night of October 3 when the news went out that Brother F. B. Catching was dead. Yet there was a sense of comfort, for we knew that all was well with this man of God. He had told us that he was ready to go home to his Father's house. Franking Bridges Catching was born at Georgetown, Miss., on September 27, 1850. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Blair Catching. His father was a physician and farmer, and he lived his life on the farm. He farmed and merchandised for his living. He always said that he never moved to town—that the town came to him. Brother Catching joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his seventeenth year. He was made steward of his church and secretary of his church board when he was twenty-five; this place he filled till he went away. For many years he was a delegate to the district conference, and I am sure he was a delegate several times to the Annual Conference. In the Conference he was well known by the preachers and the leading church people. He was not a man to make a great ado over what he did, and yet he did it in such way that every one knew that he was doing his part and helping others to do their part. He was a man that loved his church, his home, his pastor, and his presiding elder. His house was the home of all preachers who would make it their home. He was loved by the preachers, and he was loved by the people, white and black. This was evidenced by the throng at his funeral, and the flowers on his grave. The church and the town have lost a great and good man, whose place will be hard to fill. One of the great characteristics of Brother Catching was his friendliness. He showed himself friendly, and received in return a wealth of friendship that only a few men have. When he went away, he went quietly and gently, just as he had lived and just as he wished to go. We who are left behind cannot but miss our great friend, and we shall miss him till we meet again. My prayer is that all that loved him will be faithful to his God till we meet again. Brother Catching was married three times. First, on November 23, 1876, he was happily married to Miss Mary Lucrétia Steele. She died on November 5, 1894, leaving him with seven children. On January 5, 1899, he was married to Miss Mable S. Bovard. She died on May 24, of the same year. From that time until 1908, he lived alone with his children. On May 30, 1908, he was married to Mrs. Jessie Ward Shrock, who survives her husband. She was a blessing in his home. As a helpful wife and a devoted mother to his children, she stayed by his side till the end came; no wife could have been more faithful. Brother Catching leaves his mother, 89 years of age, who feels as if she has lost her all. He leaves three brothers, five sisters, four sons, and two daughters, besides a number of relatives and friends to mourn his going away. He was a devoted husband, a loving son, and an indulgent father. The funeral services were held at the Georgetown Methodist Church, Tuesday morning, Oct 5, 1920, conducted by his pastor, assisted by preacher friends of our own and other churches. We sympathize with the bereaved ones, and commend them to God who is too good to do wrong and too wise to make a mistake.

His pastor, W. F. BAGGETT.

WILLIAM HILLIARD GARDNER was born near DeKalb, Kemper County, Miss., June 29, 1844, and died at the home of his son, W. D. Gardner, in Granger, Williamson County, Texas, October 24, at 7:45 p. m. He was the son of Rev. W. W. and Mrs. M. A. Gardner. He was married to Mrs. Hattie Wilson, April 17, 1866. To this union were born six children. His first wife having died, Mr. Gardner was married to Miss Mellie Myer, July 15, 1885. Four children were born to them. Death came again to take the wife and mother. On April 12, 1906, Mr. Gardner was married to Mrs. Lula Stegall-McCallum, who survives the husband, after having lovingly and faithfully ministered to him through a long, lingering illness.

The children all survive the father, and are: W. W., Oma, Mississippi; H. E., Fort Worth, Texas; Miss Ida, Tulsa, Oklahoma; Mrs. H. F. Calfee, Dallas, Texas; J. H., Ada, Oklahoma; Mrs. G. C. Morris, Waco, Texas; W. D., Granger, Texas; Mrs. H. L. Flowers, Granger Texas; W. H., Jr., Ardmore, Oklahoma; Mrs. O. H. Des Roches, Hattiesburg, Miss. All were at the bedside when the end came, except one son, W. W., of Oma, Miss.

Mr. Gardner was a soldier in the Confederate Army, 1861-65, serving in the 46th Mississippi Regiment. At the time of his death he was Commander of U. C. V., Magee, Miss.

When a mere lad, Mr. Gardner was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which he was a faithful member throughout his life. Having been taught from infancy by a Methodist minister, one does not wonder that he loved the doctrines and polity of that church. Among his many friends, none were more highly prized by him than were those who were prominent in the councils of his church. He was also a Master Mason, his membership being in Cooper Lodge, No. 225, A. F. & A. M., Magee, Miss. He was a member of the K. of P. fraternity, his membership being in Lamar Lodge No. 30, Jackson, Miss.

Funeral services were held at the residence of his son, W. D. Gardner, Rev. W. J. Mayhew, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiating. The services were held at 1 p. m., October 25, after which the body was carried to Forest, Miss., where interment was made in the family burial plot.

Mr. Gardner had lived in the State of Mississippi all his life until recent years, when he had spent a part of his time with his children here and elsewhere. He had made many warm friends in Granger, who grieve at his going. In his native State, he had multitudes of close friends, for he led a very active life commercially, politically and religiously. For years he was a prominent merchant, he served his people as postmaster for a long time, and was always a leader in his church, both locally and connectionally. We join the host of friends here and elsewhere in extending sympathy to the bereaved children and broken-hearted companion. May the God of all grace comfort their hearts.

W. J. MAYHEW.

ALBERT G. B. HAVENS was born in Jackson County, Miss., May 5, 1851. There he grew to manhood and was happily married to Miss Mary Ellen Smith, April 14, 1870. To this union were born ten children, all living. Brother Havens moved from Mississippi to Louisiana some forty years ago and identified himself with all the progressive programs of this section. He was loved and respected by a large circle of friends, for he was trustworthy. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in his youth. After his marriage, he established and maintained the family altar. He was an official of the local church and was faithful to his obligations. Brother Havens was very patient through his long illness and passed away October 19, 1920, at 4:45 a. m., near Glenmora, La. A good man has gone to his reward. We shall miss him, but our loss is his gain. We pray that the loving Heavenly Father will comfort and keep the dear ones whom he left here below. His pastor, W. W. PERRY.

On Sunday, September 12, about noon, the death angel claimed the spirit of Brother JOHN C. SIMS. As this light went out, a cloud of sorrow came that not only covered that home, but also the entire country around. Brother Sims was so devoted to his family that his death brought such sorrow upon them that seemed more than they could bear. Brother Sims was born in Louisiana, July 22, 1857, and when about eight years old his father, D. J. Sims, moved to Pleasant Ridge neighborhood with his sister, Mrs. M. E. West. He joined Pleasant Ridge church, September 7, 1875, and on January 17, 1878, he married Miss Mary J. Morton. To this happy couple were born ten children, one dying an infant. He leaves behind a devoted wife and nine children and a sister. Brother Sims was feeding his hogs Thursday evening, September 9, when one of the hogs attacked him and he fell while trying to escape. This resulted in a serious injury. Twenty-four hours later he was operated on, but he died the following Sunday about noon he died. He was conscious until the last and still he was not afraid to die. The funeral service was conducted in the home and his body was laid to rest in the Hazlehurst cemetery. His wife are not grievous to those who live him.

R. A. ALLUMS.

Glancy, Miss

On June 12, the death angel passed over the home of Mr. J. J. Knight and took from Him his companion. MRS. KNIGHT was born July 8, 1891, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Singletary. She joined the Methodist Church early in life and was organist for quite a while. While in school at Florence she made many life-long friends. She was loved by all who knew her. She tried to make others happy as she passed along through life. She was so thoughtful of the sick and distressed, or those who were in trouble. She died June 12, 1920, and was laid to rest in the Florence cemetery, in the presence of a large congregation of friends and loved ones, who covered her grave with flowers as an appreciation of the noble life she had lived. Her going away is sad. She leaves a husband and two children, Mary and Carrie, father and mother, besides a host of relatives and friends. May the Lord bless those who are left behind, and help them to see the brightness of the Great Beyond. Loved ones, trust the wisdom of God, and pillow your heads on the bosom of his love. Out of the cloud of sorrow he reached his hand.

MRS. VERNON BRYAN, wife of H. M. Bryan, died on October 20, in Touro Infirmary, New Orleans, where she went for treatment. In early girlhood Mrs. Bryan joined the Methodist Church and lived a consistent Christian life. A member of the Missionary Society for thirty years, holding the office of treasurer for Carrollton auxiliary for twenty years, no member has ever been more faithful than she. The realms in which sho moved were her home and church. Just before going away she sent a message to the society, expressing interest in all work planned, and her prayer was that the mind that was in Christ Jesus might be in her; and it was reflected in her life of noble deeds. What a beautiful legacy she has left us nnd her family of splendid children! The Missionary Society gives to tho family of our deceased sister our prayers and our sympathy.

FROM GLENMORA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been returned for the fifth year to the Glenmora charge. Our work has been hard, yet it grows and is ready for larger development than we havo yet reached. Our membership has been increasod and the value of our property has beon doubled. We now have a comfortable new parsonage, but other improvements are needed before the preacher's home is all that it should be. We are planning for them, as well as other improvements to our church building. Our Sunday school, prayer meeting and preaching services are good nd helpful. We are anxious to see them much better, and by prayer and cooperation we expect to seo them better. During our four years' stay the charge has raised more than $17,000 for all purposes and received about 130 members. We crave your prayers for our work. Fraternally,

W. W. PERRY.

SOUTH MAGNOLIA MISSION.

To the people of tho Mississippl Conference and whom it may concern:

Now that starts off liko some appeal from a people in distress, doesn't it, Brother Carley? Well, just feel safe, free, and easy, for this is only a resume of a whole year's work.

As you know, this naiue never appeared on the minutes of our Conference record before and it was only through the offer of the manager of the cotton mill hero that our church undertook the servlco of ministering to this people via an appointiuent. All due credit for the timo being should be given to Mr. A. K. Landau for agreeing to pay $300 to a Methodist preacher for his employees. This man is a Jew. He has attended services here with us three times during tho whole year. Even that is more than a great many of our communicants could say. In addition to the $300, this man proposed to glvo tho preacher a house, water, lights, and fuel free of charge, but as the ono sent here had no need of a house, advantage of this could not be taken. His room rent at one of the finest, most intelligent homes in Magnolia is pald by tho company.

As to the work of the church: It is union. We have a Baptist Sunday school, singing out of Presbyterian books, and Methodist preaching. The former two were already here; the latter (what there is of it) came with the preacher. Soon after coming I organized an Epworth League with fifteen members. Only lately has it started forward by leaps and bounds. The Sunday school has been organized so that the classes are more ellicient in their work. We desired to securo the Graded Course for the entire school, but as some did not want it we only have two classes graded. Eight have been received into the church by letter. All cases like this are given to the respective churches up town. One has been secured for the Baptist church.

About the people: Soon after getting here from collego I got some startling information from a census: 328 were members of some church; 383 members of no church; 65 per cent of population exceedingly transient; 10 per cent of whole enrolled in Sunday school. Many of tho people here are good; many are as mean as the devil would have them. Their chief sins: profanity, gambling, and Sabbath desecration. Are we, at least, on the average? Many of the peoplo are intelligent; many are ignorant. It is amazing, the number who are unable to write their names—employees I mean. Tho things I have tried to impress upon them aro: responsibility and duty. They (the people) have paid the preacher only $21 this year. Next year unless things change thero is likely to be no work here as our Jew mentioned above does not desire to offer the same inducement to the church. Let us hope, though, that the way will open and that God will send a laborer here.

Fraternally,

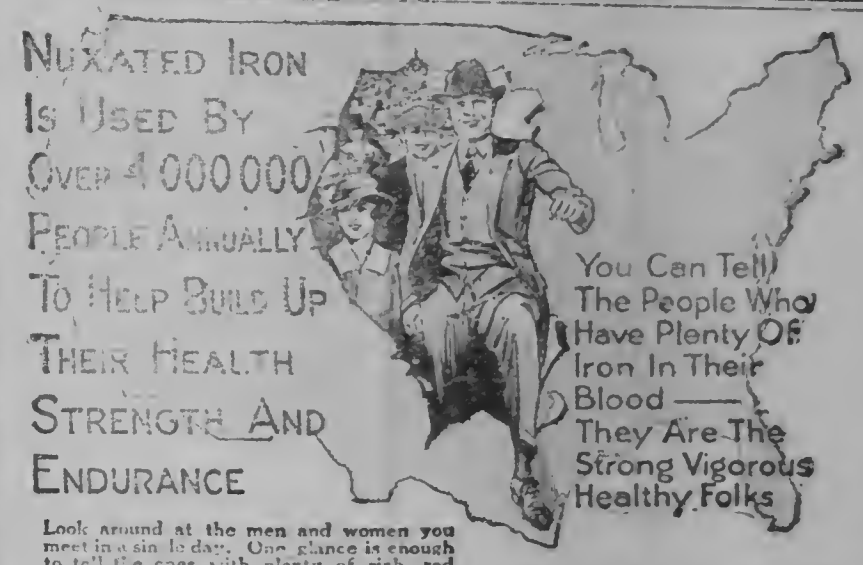
R. E. SIMPSON.

TREE PLANTING.

The Government is making an earnest effort to induce many of the States to plant trees on a wholesale scale and in some measure restore their original wealth. There are thousands of acres lying idle, even in such populous States as New York and Pennsylvania, which can be made to yield millions of dollars every year if planted with trees. It is pointed out that although the eastern States once possessed more than enough trees for their own use, they must now import lumber from the Pacific ceast, of course, at great expense.—October Boys' Life.

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.



Look around at the men and women you meet in a single day. One glance is enough to tell the ones with plenty of rich, red blood, strength and physical energy to back up their mental power and make them a success in whatever they undertake.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician at Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says that to help make strong, healthy, red-blooded Americans there is nothing so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron. It often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time.

It is conservatively estimated that Nuxated Iron is now being used by over four million people annually, and it has been used and endorsed by such men as Ignace Jan Paderewski, Ex-Premier of France Rene Viviani, United States Judge G. W. Atkinson, of the Court of Chancery of Washington, also former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, and others. Nuxated Iron is dispensed by all good druggists everywhere.

Indigestion

DO YOU KNOW that indigestion can be cured, permanently cured, so that you can eat any kind of food that you crave? It has been done not only once, but in almost every case when Chamberlain's Tablets are used. An instance: Mr. J. Pominville, Stillwater, Minn., who had spent over $2,000.00 for medicine and treatment was permanently cured by these tablets.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

From October 31 to November 5. a Standard Training School at Gulfport was in progress. Thirty-nine enrolled in this School and seventeen will receive certificates. Perhaps more will receive certificates as more were to send in their papers later. Miss Nell Richardson. of Baton Rouge, La., gave a course on Junior Methods. Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Jackson, gave a course on Organiaztion and Admlnistration. Prof. D. M. Key, of Millsaps College gave a course on Learning and Teaching. Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, with the assistance of Mrs. W. C. Hathaway, gave a course on Primary Methods and I gave a course on the Bible. Many of the pupils expressed their delight at the courses offered them, which led us to feel that the School was worth while. I am hopeful that we will be able to have a Standard Training School in each presiding elder's district with a Central School for the whole Conference at Jackson next year.

One event of interest was the services held at Gulfport on the 31st, when about thirty-five pupils of the Sunday school were received into the church, and the Sacrament of the Lords' Supper was administed. On this Sunday five hundred and ten were present at Sunday school.

About twenty-five years ago the first Sunday school held in Gulfport was held by Brother S. A. Tomlinson In a box car. From that small beginning to the magnificent Sunday school of First Church, Gulfport, is a long step; and yet without that beginning this step could not have been made. The work at Gulfport moves well.

From Gulfport we went to Bayou Pierre charge, Pleasant Valley church, where we held the fourth quarterly conference for Brother Leggett. The affairs of this circuit are in good shape and the pastor, Brother Allums, will be enabled to make a good report at the Annual Conference.

Sunday we were at Barlow, holding the fourth quarterly conference for that charge. The work there is moving well. Good reports from church activities were made. In spite of the unsettled condition of cotton, the salary will be paid. Brother Wecms has done a good years' work.

Sunday night we preached at Hazlehurst. The people of Hazlehurst have reworked their church, making the interior very attractive indeed. Brother Graves reports the affairs of the church in good shape.

Just a few days until Annual Conference. My prayer is that each day shall be a day of victory for our pastors.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Field Secretary.

Treasurer's Report.

Our next report will he in the Advocate that will appear during Conference. We trust that every name will appear in this list. We thank the brethren who have been so kind as to send in their money early and all who have taken an interest in the work. We trust that you have received blssings in return for your interest. We trust that next year the work will be better, bigger and more abiding.

A LETTER FOR WOMEN

From a Woman Whose Serious Illness Was Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Garnett, Kas.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a complete nervous breakdown following the birth of my oldest child. I got up too soon which caused serious female trouble. I was so weak that I was not able to be on my feet but very little and could not do my housework at all. I had a bad pain in my left side and it would pain terribly if I stepped off a curb-stone. One day one of your booklets was thrown in the yard and I read every word in it. There were so many who had been helped by your medicine that I wanted to try it and my husband went to town and got me a bottle. It seemed as though I felt relief after the second dose, so I kept on until I had taken five bottles and by that time I was as well as I could wish. About a year later I gave birth to a ten pound boy, and have had two more children since and my health has been fine. If I ever have trouble of any kind I am going to take your medicine for I give it all the praise for my good health. I always recommend your medicine whenever I can."—Mrs. EVA E. SHAY, Garnett, Kansas.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

Cut This Out—It Is Worth Money.

Cut out this slip, enclose with 5c and mail it to Foley & Co., 2835 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, for coughs, colds and croup; Foley Kidney Pills for pain in sides and back; rheumatism, backache, kidney and bladder ailments; and Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic for constipation, biliousness, headachs, and sluggish bowels.—Adv.

organized classes in the Conference.

Several of our schools have made great progress, others are still marking time in the good old way. We want to help them go forward and take the land.

Seventy pastors have sent in their Sunday school reports. Fifty-six of these have received 753 in the church from their schools. Rev. B. F. Bullard received 85. This is the largest number reported from any school. Amount raised for missions from thirty schools, $4890. Of this amount the Tupelo school reports $2649.50. The church at this place paid for the literature of the school. Fifty-five schools raised for other objects, not including literature, $4853. Forty-seven schools report $670 raised on Sunday School Day. Byhalia charge reports $60. Do these figures mean anything? If the Sunday School Board does the work expected of it, either the Sunday schools or the church will have to take religious education more seriously and make a larger investment of time and money.

Intercession is not an effort to overcome any reluctance of God to help those who need him. He is ever yearning to reveal himself. It is not importunate asking, but the whole-hearted co-operation of mind and spirit in the purpose to be a channel of life and power. It is the sympathetic partnership which releases a divine force, operating through natural laws. We must not forget the fact that "we love, because he first loved us."—Selected.

JESUS AND THE SEA.

By Willis H. Germany.

It is probable that Jesus strolled often from Nazareth down to Capernaum during those days in his father's workshop, there to give His soul up to the spirit of the sea. We do know that immediately after His baptism and entrance upon His public ministry, He established headquarters in the town of Capernaum. This couldn't have been by accident. Everything was in common between Jesus and the sea. The break of day found Him often drinking in the richness of its cheering breeze. Evening came, and with it our Lord Christ, wandering back and forth, meditating on His mission.

One day as He leisurely strolled along, safely confident of the method of His public ministry, He came upon some fishermen, and upon the recommendation that they lived beside the sea, He called Peter and Andrew to become fishers of men. A few paces further He caught the guileless eyes of the sun-browned sons of Zebedee, and forthwith James and John left all and followed Him. Walking down to the water's edge one day, He looked deep into the soul of a customs collector who sat there, despised and rejected by the Jews, the breeze from off the sea playing havoc with his oriental locks, gives the nod of His head, and Matthew follows the Master of men. Judas! Poor fellow. One thing is certain. He never lived beside the sea.. or his was an abortion of that spirit which our Lord saw in those noble men whom He called from beside the sea to follow Him.

How natural for some follower of our Lord to conceive the thought of Christ's redeeming work in that phase. "Fishin' fer men." No theological or doctrinal equivocations to shade the language such as all can understand. Mrs. Annie Trumbell Slosson presents "Fishin' Jimmy." Says she, "To his simple intellect the fisherman's art was a whole system of morality, a guide for every day life, an education, a gospel. It was all any mortal man, woman or child needed in this world to make him or her useful, happy and good. And he always spoke of his pursuit as something very dear, very sacred." The effect of his learning of Jesus upon his unsophisticated soul is expressed in his words. "Some one that was dreffle fond of fishin' and fishermen. Some one that sot everythin' by the water, and uster go along by the lakes and ponds, and sail on 'em, talk with the men that was fishin'. An' how the fishermen all liked Him, 'nd asked His 'dvice, an' done jest's he telled 'em about the likeliest places to fish; an' how they allus ketched more fer mindin' Him . . . An' so, fust thing I knowed I says to myself, 'That's the kind o' teacher I want. If I could come acrost a man like that, I'd jest foller Him, too, through thick and thin . . I tell yc, His r'liging's a fishin' r'liging all through.'"

O! the sea, the sea! Jesus and the sea! Times when those waters were as placid as a sea of glass, gently singing their lay as the little waves caressed across the sands of the shore, or splashed some message intelligible to the Christ, as they whipped in some little nook where the shore was rough. Then again, on that sea could arise tempests, playing havoc with men and things, yet, Jesus, the storm center of many a controversy then and now, would ne'er seek shelter, but stand bareheaded on the shore, drenched by wind and rain, giving His soul up to the majestic splendor unparalleled otherwhere.

On to Nazareth, and other points of His itinerary, seeking and saving the lost, the Scribes and Pharisees coming out from their sequestered silence railing upon Him, the poor and needy and suffering drawing upon His pent up powers, giving and giving and giving until exhausted, He would turn again to Capernaum to recharge His soul before God in the environs of the sea.

The sea could never be more placid than Jesus' benign countenance. Its ocean depths never more unfathomable than His sympathetic character. Those waves were never more restless nor resistless than was Jesus' unceasing interest in men. Never floated o'er its bosom cargo more precious than across Christ's soul to men. Its vastness was akin to that of eternity, of which Jesus taught, and urged them prepare.

O! the sea, the sea! Jesus and the sea!

"There's a wideness in His mercy,
Like the wildness of the sea."

No wonder Jesus and the sea were at home, one with the other.—Central Christian Arvocate.

50 Years Ago

a young man who practiced medicine in a rural district became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce who afterward moved to Buffalo, N. Y. He made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and he put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription," and placed it with the druggists in every state in the Union.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has sold more largely throughout the United States than any other medicine of like character. It's the testimony of thousands of women that it has benefited or entirely eradicated such distressing ailments as women are prone to. It is now sold by druggists in tablet form as well as liquid.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—"From the time I was a very young girl I suffered with severe backaches and nothing I took gave me any relief until I began taking 'Favorite Prescription,' and just a few bottles completely cured me. I have never suffered with backache since."—Mrs. T. H. PATTON, 764 Clayton Street.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

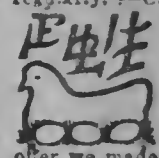
Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Gets 28 Eggs A Day Now, From 34 Hens

C. C. White, Well Known Breeder, Tells How. Costs Nothing to Try.

"I gave Don Sung to 34 utility Buff Orpingtons and the egg yield increased from 7 to 28 a day. Don Sung is a wonder and I am now giving it to all my hens regularly."—Chas. C. White, Mgr., Cherry Hill Farm, Blackville, Ind.



Mr. White is the well known breeder and exhibitor. He wrote the above letter in December, after his test had shown a gain of 21 eggs a day from 34 hens. We will make you the same offer we made him. Here it is:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Purrell Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess colomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

DODSON TELLS THE HORROR OF CALOMEL

You Don't Need to Sicken, Gripe, or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Polish Relief.

To all Missionary Societies in the Mis- for Third Quarter.

A letter from Miss Daisy Davies, who has charge of the special work for Polish Relief throughout Southern Methodism, says that only about twenty churches in Mississippi have responded (up to November 3) to the many appeals for soap and clothing which have been sent to every pastor and president of a missionary society in the two Conferences.

This is a work which appeals to every one because of the dire need in Poland for any kind of clothing, and for soap, as there is a famine of the latter article throughout the whole land. Cold weather is already upon them, and what we do must be done quickly. Now, if ever, the King's business requires haste.

Let every one who reads this appeal see to it that her church or society gets busy at once. Clothing of any kind is acceptable if it is wearable at all. If the children are enlisted, each one will gladly contribute one cake of soap. Some Sunday schools and Junior Societies are setting aside one day as "Soap Day for Poland."

Send the bundles by parcel post if possible, otherwise by express direct to Newport News, to Methodist Polish Relief, and avoid delay.

MRS. H. L. McCLESKEY,
Conf. Cor. Secretary.

Another Auxiliary Active.

The auxiliary at Wesson, Miss., is active, finding many good things to do. Some interesting meetings have been held; one of special interest was the celebration of the eightieth birthday of Mrs. Drummond, our pioneer worker for missions in the former missionary organiatzions, both home and foreign. The party was given as a surprise to Mrs. Drummond at the home of her ganddaughter, Mrs. M. M. Lyell. After words of birthday greetings, a beautiful talk on "Women of the Bible" was given, followed with prayer by the pastor. An original poem was read by Mrs. Little, enumerating in a beautiful way Mrs. Drummond's services in the society. Then the lovely birthday gift was presented. After refreshments were served and favorite hymns sung, all went home feeling that it is good to encourage one of God's faithful ones.

We are studying "Working Women of the Orient." At one of our meetings our leader assigned six different countries to as many ladies, asking that they gather information about the domestic lives of the women and at the next meeting impersonate the character assigned them. When the time arrived, each dd her part well, depicting the home life of the women and drawing a fine contrast between their lives and ours.

An interestng feature of this program was the story told by one of the women who impersonated a returned missionary. In many little details she showed us how missionaries are changing the manner of living which has cursed our Oriental sisters for centuries. This program was repeated, on which occasion we entertained the Presbyterian ladies of the town.

Our Young People are interested and diligent. At one of their recent gatherings, after a good program and a social hour, they packed a box for Miss Mazie Hall.

We realize our need of a broader vision and deeper prayer, but we are trying to press onward and upward.

Mrs. B. F. YOUNGBLOOD,
Publicity Superintendent.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Important—Polish Relief.

Dear Conference Officers: I have been looking over the records of supplies sent for Polish Relief up to November 3. The response from some churches has been splendid, but I have wondered that no word has come from some of our strongest ones. Of course new lists are coming in every day, yet I think some places need urging. I am sure you will do all you can to get every church in your territory to have a part in such beautiful work. I am depending on you.

The need is desperate and when the right appeal is made people always respond to a call of this kind.

We realize parcel post is an expensive way of sending, but it is a question of time. Cold weather is coming and we must get the supplies overseas as soon as possible. Large shipments, of course, can be made by express.

The statement on the back of "The Voice" is misleading. Mr. Eleazer wrote that announcement and did not realize how people would interpret it. He meant expense in getting it shipped from New Port News. Each church pays its own postage to that point. I regret this misunderstanding very much; try to make it clear through your secretaries. Also make it clear that all packages should be sent to New Pork News, not to Nashville.

A list of all places contributing will be published as soon as the work is over. Up to the present, contributions have come from six places in Louisiana: Lake Arthur, Jackson, Howland, Slidell, New Orleans, Athens.

Send all packages to Miss Daisy Davies, Director Methodist Polish Relief, New Port News, Va.

Yours sincerely,
DAISY DAVIES.
Director Methodist Polish Relief.

SHALL WE HAVE FEWER OR MORE DISTRICTS?

Smaller or larger? There seems to be a sentiment in some parts of our Zion to make fewer and larger presiding elders' districts. Once in our North Mississippi Annual Conference, our districts were cut from nine to eight. The reason assigned was, "To give the P. E.'s a better support." That plea cannot obtain now, for in 1919 the smallest salary paid a P. E. was $2599, the largest was $4231, and the average was $3100. The smallest pastor's salary was $255, the largest $2750, and the average $1168. Surely there is no plea for larger districts to increase the P. E.'s salaries.

It seems the plea now is to economize in men—preachers are so scarce we cannot spare them from the pastorate for P. E.'s. My observation now is that our church is suffering more from lack of P. E.'s than for lack of pastors. Why are our quarterly conferences not the power for good they were in days of yore? When the quarterly conferences were held on Sunday, crowds would go and stay all the time; and they were great times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Officials and others would go because it was thus. Now our quarterly conferences are held, one service one day in the week, the P. E. having to hurry on to the next. He preaches a short sermon, conducts the conference, collects the salary, exhorts and gives direction concerning general finance, and is gone. So one official can make the report, and sometimes the report is handed to the pastor to announce for the record. Thus sometimes the P. E. and the pastor are alone.

A good presiding elder gave me this circumstance: He and the pastor were waiting at a church to hold a quarterly conference in the week; no official came, and no congregation. After a while, two or three young men passing by stopped to see what was to be done. The presiding elder made this observation: "If I had announced that I would give every one who would be here to-day $5, the house would not have held the people." One of the young men said, "Parson, is that why you are here?"

When the quarterly conferences were held on Sunday and were great times of refreshing from the Lord, the churches would not hold the crowds of eager listeners and devout worshipers.

A great old local preacher in Galveston, Texas, told me he had quit going to his church because they quit feeding him. Our people are still hungry for "the bread of life."

This year I know a church that almost repudiated a quarterly conference because it was not to give them Sunday services. And this, too, a good church in a good town where there is a good high school and an agricultural college.

Let us have smaller districts and more presiding elders, and restore the old-time life and power to our churches. Thus

"Let us travel on to God
In the way our fathers trod."

Yours in word and work for souls,
J. H. SMITH.

Pickens, Miss.

FROM TOCCOPOLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am closing out a very successful year at Toccopola, Miss. We began our summer revivals at Salem church. God was with us in great power. At the close of the meeting we received a class of 33 into the church, with 5 additions later on, making a total of 38.

At this place we have purchased a new parsonage with 75 acres of land adjoining the school ground. It will be a pleasant home for some preacher. We will form a new work there.

From there we went to Lafayette Springs. God was with us. We had a great revival, with 6 additions to the church.

From there we went to Liberty Hill, where we had an old-time revival. Results at the close of meeting: 9 accessions to the church, with 4 others later.

From there we went to Toccopola, and had a great meeting. The church was greatly revived, there were 6 additions to church, 3 went to the Baptists, 3 to the Presbyterians, and others have not identified themselves with any church.

From there we went to Tulsa. We had a good revival and the church was greatly built up spiritually, with 8 accessions to the church, and 2 previous accessions by letter. At this place we have the best rural Sunday school I ever saw. The average attendance for the year is 92. We are doing a general repair work on the church, adding 3 Sunday school rooms.

From there we went to Oakdale, a newly organized church. We had a good revival, with two accessions.

The finances are in advance of previous years at Toccopola. This church paid more the last quarter than its full assessment for the whole year. It had made a respectable report each quarter. At Liberty Hill they not only met their obligations, but presented the pastor a real nice present.

The Toccopola work is a live wire. Much credit is due our presiding elder, J. H. Hobler, and our local preachers, Rev. J. H. Nelson and Rev. G. W. Bissell. They are all men that know God. All glory belongs to God.

R. M. PAPASAN, P. C.

FROM FLORENCE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We find ourselves within three weeks of the Annual Conference, which meets at Brookhaven, Dec. 1. We had pledged and planned everything in full, until this wave of financial depression came. We may not be able now to do all we had hoped and planned, but we are doing what we can, in spite of the opposition.

We have had good meetings on the work this year. Brother D. H. Kelly and Brother L. L. Roberts helped us, and the preaching was well done. We are serving a fine and appreciative people at both Florence and Braxton.

On Oct. 9, we were invited to a "parsonage round party," at the home of Brother W. P. Mangum, at Braxton. After an hour of social games, etc., refreshments were served; then it was made known to the preacher that, in spite of high prices, he had a Ford load of good things to carry back to the parsonage. It does make a preacher feel good to know his people love and appreciate him. May God bless every one who contributed.

Brother Carley, I hear some good things about you at Braxton, where you were pastor once. You must come back to see us some time. Sincerely,
C. H. STRAIT.

FROM FOREST, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am drawing near to the end of my fourth year on the Forest and Morton charge. The work has steadily advanced every year, becoming better organized and more satisfactory work done both in the Sunday school and in the church.

And now, the fourth year, a month before Conference, all assessments have been paid. No great struggle and anxiety in trying to bring up everything at the last moment.

We have a loyal people, a faithful and efficient Board of Stewards, men and women who love the church and look after her interests, and it has been a great pleasure to be associated with them in the work here.

I could wish that this was my first, instead of fourth year.

Some preacher will fall heir to a most delightful home among some of the best people of earth on this charge. Blessings upon them and the pastor who comes to serve them.

We hear words of appreciation from preachers and laymen all over the district of the services of our faithful presiding elder. I am sure he will make a good report at Conference.

Yours faithfully,
JAS. G. GALLOWAY.

FROM WEST, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are now near the close of a gracious meeting here. This is our thirteenth meeting for the year. This year has been one of our best. The meeting here is one of power. Quite a number of strong men have been reached, and many of the young people converted. This is our second meeting with Brother Patterson, and we find him to be a man of strong convictions and thoroughly consecrated to the service of his Lord.

We have no engagement for the latter part of November. Any one wishing to engage us may write us at Iuka, Miss. Yours fraternally,

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the Spring of 1896 I was stricken with Muscular and Sciatic Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have had it can, for over three years. I took treatment after treatment, and doctor after doctor, but got no relief as I received with each. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and I have never suffered given it to others who were afflicted and even some of them 70 to 80 years of age. In some of them 70 to 80 years of age. In all cases it has proven itself to be the best and quickest means of getting rid of your rheumatism you may send the price of it, a dollar bill, but understand I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to keep it. FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On the night of Nov. 5, there assembled at the parsonage in Gloster twenty-nine youngsters, with four older ones, to have a "good time," and they had it, playing different games, unraveling riddles, seeing by a liquid illustration the five kinds of persons the church has to deal with—Mr. Christian, Mr. Moralist, Mr. Hypocrite, Mr. Passion, and Mr. Sinner—some of them guessing some of the fellows without being told, which indicates that the youngsters know "who's who," and then the cakes, apples, drinks, etc., were soon consumed. It was rather an enjoyable occasion—the beginning of a forward movement among the Methodist young people of Gloster, I hope.

Since my last communication to these columns I have spent almost two months at Hot Springs, Ark., in search of health for Mrs. Wells. She suffered intensely here for about six weeks, and then the doctor advised the Springs. The specialists at Hot Springs say the fundamental cause of most of her trouble is malaria in the chronic form. She is still there under their treatment and bathing in God's wonderful healing fountain. While I was there I assisted in one two weeks' meeting in one of the Methodist churches, leading the choir and preaching some. I preached twice at this church the Sunday the meeting closed and twice the following Sunday. Held an eight-day meeting in another Methodist church and preached twice in a hotel, at the solicitation of the proprietress. All these doors were opened of the Lord (II Cor. 2, xii). At these meetings I preached to people from different parts of the nation, and some real good was accomplished. I never received better treatment at the hands of strangers in my life. The last church I was in unanimously asked me to come back next spring for a three weeks meeting. While holding these services I also, with our little boy, took the prescribed course of baths. Found we had some malaria too. It was a wonderful trip, even though it was made there under such suffering and pressure—Rom. 8:28!

What shall I say more? Brother L. P. Anders, our lay leader, did a noble work undertaking to hold the work together while I was away, the assistants having their own fields of labor. Brother Ira B. Robinson preached once for me. God bless him! I was glad to find the work in as good condition as it is on arriving in Gloster. Some of the other laymen were more active than usual, too. I have a hill to climb before Conference, for I have been out of the field just about three months when the need was greater, perhaps, than at any other time, yet the God of Jacob is with us! I shall do my best and leave the record with God. Hope to meet you at Brookhaven, December 1. Undismayed,

J. A. WELLS.

FROM COLUMBIA, MISS.

One of the happiest events in the history of the Columbia Methodist Church was the completion of a magnificent pipe organ by Mr. T. J. Williams of the M. P. Moller Company, of Hagerstown, Md.

This organ was contracted for more than a year ago, during the pastorate of Rev. W. M. Sullivan, but, owng to various difficulties, the contract was not completed until the present time. The organ company informs us that the present value of the organ is six thousand dollars. More than three weeks were required to install the organ, which was completed November 4, and on that evening the church was taxed to its utmost capacity to hear an organ recital, which was rendered by Dr. J. E. W. Lord, organist for the First Baptist Church, Meridian, and Director of the Organ Department, Meridian College. Dr. Lord is, indeed, a master of his art and his superb rendering of the various selections brought out fully the capabilites of this splendid instrument.

During the summer, electric fans were installed in the church and the good people of Columbia have one of the most beautiful and best equipped houses of worship to be found anywhere. Irprovements have ben made in the parsonage.

Recently we closed one of the most satisfactory revival meetings ever held here. The preaching was don by our Conference evangelist, Rev. J. V. Bennett, and the singing was led by Rev. J. M. Lewis. These two consecrated men of God make a strong team, working together with the utmost harmony. All the people here fell in love with them. As an evangelist, Brother Bennett is peculiarly fitted. He employs no sensational methods. His preaching is clear and plain, forcefully delivered, carries conviction of the truth, and produces results. Not only our own church, but the other churches which heartily co-operated with us, feel the uplift of the meeting. There were many conversions and several accessions to the church. There would have been more of the latter but for the splendid meeting held here last fall by the Lewis brothers, which gathered in nearly all the available material.

The attendance upon public worship during the year has been excellent, sometimes filling the Sunday school auditorium. Also the attendance upon our mid-week prayer service has been most gratifying and has increased from time to time, frequently numbering seventy-five or one hundred persons. All along during the year there have been conversions and accessions to the church, numbering sixty-five to date. All financial obligations have been promptly met and the entire amount of our Conference claims was paid early in the year. All departments of the church are working harmoniously. We have a splendid Sunday school, under the efficient management of Brother W. E. Lampton, who rounds out his thirtieth year as its superintendent. He is greatly beloved by all the people. In addition to our Senior Epworth League, we recently organized an Intermediate League. Both are doing well.

The writer, in closing the first year of his pastorate here, records one of the happiest and most satisfactory years in his ministry. It is indeed a great pleasure to serve a people who are so kind to their pastor and who both love their church and are loyal to its every interest. I doubt, however, if they have ever loved any pastor as mush as they do their present presiding elder.

Sincerely and cordially,

C. F. EMERY.

FROM WESSON, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: We are closing out our fourth year on the Wesson charge, and, in some respects, it has been the most fruitful year of the four.

Good work was done at each church on the charge in our revival meetings and our people are wiser and stronger spiritually for having had these meetings. God bless the men who so faithfully labored with us!

Our Sunday schools are progressing nicely. Our Sunday school at Wesson carries two missionary specials. The average yearly attendance of this school is over one hundred; it is well graded and is doing splendid work.

I don't think any pastor can boast of a more faithful board of stewards or a more loyal missionary society than we have at Wesson church. In fact, the stewards of all the churches are loyal to the pastor and falthful in the work.

I commend them to the next pastor and pray God's blessings on the people of the entire charge, for they are dear to my heart. May they "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace;" and may the God of love and peace be with them.

J. W. THOMPSON.

God has so arranged the chronometry of our spirits that there shall be thousands of silent moments between the striking hours.—James Martineau.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1920. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

(We are indebted to Rev. E. H. Cunningham, a gifted member of the North Mississippi Conference, and to the Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn., one of the really great newspapers of the nation, for the substance of the following report of the daily proceedings of the North Mississippi Annual Conference.—Editor.)

First Day.

The fifty-first annual session of the North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the First Methodist Church of Charleston, Miss., on Wednesday morning, November 17, at nine o'clock, Bishop W. F. McMurry presiding. After appropriate devotional exercises conducted by the Bishop, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, in keeping with a standing rule of the Conference, the Bishop being assisted by R. O. Brown, J. M. Wyatt, J. H. Felts, and Chaplain J. A. Randolph.

The roll was called by the secretary of the preceding Conference, J. R. Countiss. Most of the members of the Conference responded to their names. On motion, J. R. Countiss was unanimously elected secretary of the present session. On his nomination, R. A. Tucker was elected assistant secretary, A. T. McIlwain and W. R. Lott were elected statistical secretaries, and R. G. Lord, S. H. Caffey, N. J. Golding, A. S. Raper, and J. H. Brooks were elected assistants to the statistical secretaries. The hours of meeting and adjourning were fixed at nine o'clock and twelve o'clock, and the main auditorium of the church was fixed as the bar of the Conference.

The Nominating Committee named the usual Conference committees, which were elected, and various communications were referred, without reading, to appropriate boards and committees.

The following visitors were presented to the Conference: Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Dr. P. H. Linn, president of Central College, H. T. Carley, editor, and Chas. O. Chalmers, business manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, R. P. Wilson, representative of the Publishing House, Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, W. E. Thomas, representative of the Memorial Home, New Orleans, and Earl A. Tucker, of Sommerville, Tenn. Later in the day, Dr. Burgin delivered a stirring address concerning the work of the Board of Church Extension.

On motion of Thos. H. Lipscomb, the secretary was instructed to send a telegram of esteem and sympathy to Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo, who presided over the Conference last year and who is ill at his home in Charlotte, N. C.

The Bishop called Question 17, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The eight presiding elders answered to their names, their characters were passed, and they reported their districts as follows: T. H. Dorsey, for the Aberdeen District; W. L. Duren, for the Columbus District; W. W. Mitchell, for the Corinth District; A. C. McCorkle, for the Durant District; V. C. Curtis, for the Greenville District; J. H. Holder, for the Holly Springs District; R. A. Meek, for the Sardis District; S. L. Pope, for the Winona District. Their reports showed that there may be a falling off in the collections for the year, due to the prevalent financial depression, but that there has been a larger number of additions to the church than usual.

The names of the superannuate members of the Conference were called, their characters were passed, and they were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the same relation. Rev. John Ritchey and Rev. A. W. Langley, two veterans of the Conference, asked that their names be referred to the committe for the superannuate relation. It developed that this was Brother Ritchey's eighty-second birthday, and that it marked the close of his fifty-fourth year in the ministry. Appropriate notice was taken of these happy events, and the Bishop appointed a committee to select a suitable present and give it to Brother Ritchey in the name of the Conference.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, presiding elder of the Durant District, asked for an offering for J. C. McElroy, who has been ill in a Memphis hospital a large part of the year. The offering amounted to $122.

On motion, the educational program was made the order of the day for Thursday, beginning at ten o'clock.

Announcements were made, and the Conference stood adjourned with the benediction.

Afternoon and Evening.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, a semi-centennial sermon was delivered by Rev. A. W. Langley, one of the oldest and most greatly beloved members of the Conference.

At the evening hour, the Board of Missions celebrated its anniversary, the principal address being a thought-provoking and inspiring address by Dr. R. L. Russell, one of the secretaries of the Home Department of the General Board.

Second Day.

The Conference convened at nine o'clock, Bishop McMurry in the chair. After devotional exercises, the minutes of the preceding day's proceedings were read and approved.

The Bishop called Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" J. R. Murff, of the Columbus District, who has been serving the Mathiston charge as a supply, was admitted, the two-thirds vote of the Conference being necessary on account of the educational requirement. One other name was presented, but was withdrawn until the applicant could appear before the necessary committees.

An interesting feature of the morning session was the presentation of tokens of esteem to two honored members of the Conference. On behalf of the Conference, J. B. Randolph presented to Rev. John Ritchey a rare coin, suitably mounted on a pin, and on behalf of the preachers of the Greenville District, Rev. E. S. Lewis presented to V. C. Curtis, who is completing a four-year term as presiding elder, a gold watch, beautifully inscribed, and a set of silverware, the latter being especially intended for Mrs. Curtis. Brother Ritchey and Brother Curtis made appropriate responses.

On motion, W. W. Jones and D. H. Hall were elected to fill vacancies on the Board of Church Extension and the Commission on Finance, respectively.

On motion the names of A. F. Moore and H. G. Roberts were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

The hour for the order of the day having arrived, the educational program was taken up. Stirring addresses were delivered by Bishop McMurry, Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, and J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College.

Announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference convened in afternoon session at 2:30 o'clock. After devotional exercises and the reading and approval of the minutes of the morning session, the educational program was continued. Two inspiring addresses were delivered, one by Dr. R. L. Russell, and the other by Dr. Paul H. Linn.

The Board of Education presented its Report No. 1, endorsing the Educational Movement, pledging the Conference to its hearty support, and accepting the quota assigned as its part of the total of $33,000,000 to be raised. The report was unanimously adopted.

The session was adjourned after announcements and the benediction.

Evening.

The features of the evening meeting were a splendid address by Mrs. J. H. McCoy, widow of the late revered Bishop J. H. McCoy, and a most interesting and instructive stereopticon lecture by J. L. Neill, illustrating the educational needs and present equipment of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Third Day.

The Conference convened at nine o'clock, Bishop McMurry in the chair. After devotional exercises the minutes of the preceding day's session were read and approved.

The Board of Christian Literature submitted its report, dealing especially with the problem of proper financial support for the Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The editor of the Advocate, Rev. H. T. Carley, addressed the Conference, calling attention especially to the serious financial situation brought about by the high cost of production. After considerable discussion of the situation, the report of the Board of Christian Literature was withdrawn, by unanimous consent, in order that a recommendation for an assessment for the support of the Advocate might be incorporated. This action was in keeping with the action of the Louisiana Conference, which levied an assessment for the same purpose at its recent session.

A telegram from Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo, in response to the one sent him by the Conference, was received and read by the secretary.

Rev. J. A. Poe was readmitted into the Conference.

L. H. Floyd, N. D. Guerry, Jr., W. O. Hunt, W. R. Liming, Stanford Maxey, D. R. Wasson, and W. A. Wilson made their reports, their characters were

THE BIRTH OF A SOUL.

As the sun was rising red in the East
And most all the world was still in slumber,
A robin sat on an ice-bound fence
And sang a song to his Maker.

He sang a song of thanks for the spring so near,
And one for the spring that had gone;
For all the joys in memory dear,
And those of the days to come.

He flew away—and the ice-bound fence
Knew him (nor was itself known) no more that spring—
Then in the fast approaching day
I, too, to my Maker did sing.

I sang a psalm of thanks for the gift of a soul, new-born,
I thanked Him for keeping me through the sick years so long,
For the joys of the life I once had known and hoped again to know.
For a heart really awake to feel the joy in a robin's song.

TRUSTEES OF LIFE: THE MIRROR TEST.

By George Clark Peck, D.D.

I was in a sick-room recently where they had just used the mirror test. The pilgrim's journey was seemingly over. No pulse, no motion of chest, no flicker of eye. But on the mirror which the nurse held close to the patient's lips there spread a tiny film of vapor. And how they fought for extension of the hope that inevitably raised its head with appearance of that momentary cloud on the glass! One might easily fancy that St. James had watched that experiment tried, with his own heart in his mouth and his own breath almost stopped.

"What is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."

Frankly, I like the question he asks a good deal better than I like the answer he gives. The answer is not big enough to match the question. Somebody says that "Jesus loved every little thing except a little answer to a big question." Most of the answers we give are smaller than the question they attempt to meet. When I asked a man recently where he was going, he replied, "Down town." Except for the discourtesy involved, he might as well have told me that his direction was none of my business. Suppose he had said, instead, in Browning's great line, "I go to prove my soul?" Or, I ask a student why he goes to college. And if he is an average student he will probably inform me that his motive is to secure an education. But he might as well tell me that he wants a new knife. The question remains as to what he wants it for—to whittle with or sharpen lead pencils, or as a pocket furniture. When I ask him why he goes to college, I am trying to find out how much of a man he wants to be; how big his dream is; what supreme voice is calling him. Is his answer large enough to chime with my question?

Or, I ask my neighbor what his religion is. And, very probably, he replies that his is the "Methodist religion." It might, of course, be Baptist or Lutheran, or what you will. But the same objection applies to all such answers. There is no such thing as a "Methodist religion," or a Baptist religion, or a Lutheran religion. These all are merely windows toward the same Sun of Righteousness; doors into the same holy presence. Seriously, I believe there is but one religion on earth; and whoever is really religious has warmed his soul at the One Fire. To use Lyman Abbott's beautiful definition: "Religion is the life of God in the soul of man."

The Sanctity of Life.

So we come back to the question with which we started, the pungent question of the brother of our Lord, "What is your life?" And I repeat that the answer of James is too small. Sometimes, indeed, "life is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." One often feels that evanescence in sick-rooms and cemeteries. James might have written his answer across the blood-drenched fields of France and Flanders, where, indeed, lives were wiped off, by the hundred thousand, like flecks of moisture on a glass. Ah, but that is merely part of a just description; for those same wiped-out lives, in their transciency, helped do a greater thing than to change the orbit of earth. They helped alter the stream of history.

"What is your life?" First, life is a sanctity. I do not think we can hope to take the best out of life except as we invest it with sacredness. As I sat beside a woman, in the hospital, and she cuddling her first-born, I found myself trying to differentiate the new light in her eyes. It was more than gladness, though it was obviously that. It was more than wonder, though it was touched with that sort of solemn surprise. Despite its frustrations, and our sins against it, and our mawkish sentiments concerning it, maternity is easily the first wonder of the world. But the light I beheld was softer and holier than the light of surprise. It was worship. That morsel in her arms was a veritable shrine. Forgive her if, for a few days, she pours all her adoration at that altar. And then God help her to invest that growing life with sanctity for the child as he grows.

That is one part of the "fear of the Lord" which is the "beginning of wisdom:" to hold life venerable. Never could we take our lives where we sometimes take them if we held life sacred. Never could we treat life as we often treat it if we felt toward it as toward an altar. 'Tis the sanctity of life itself that lends sacredness to its holiest experiences. Work is a hallowed thing because the life which wreathes itself in it is holy. Love is an ark of the covenant because love is the expression of life at its flood. Friendship is too sacred for the treatment often accorded it, because friendship is the call of temple to temple in man. And the altars of the church command our reverence because life gets its tone and touch of sanctity there. Let life be anything and everything except sacred—interesting, industrious, enjoyable, and what you will—and life has lost its seal and significance.

Life a Trust.

That is my first answer, then, to the question of James; life is a sanctity. Second, life is a trust. It is never given; it is merely entrusted, as I commit my treasure to my friend for his safe-keeping. And when I commit my treasure to my friend I do not expect him to reach the pass at which he imagines that he owns it. I shall want it back; I shall expect it back. Meanwhile I am asking him to guard it for me. So with the life which God commits to our care for a season—twenty years, or threescore and ten. He does not give it, outright. He merely entrusts it. And woe betide the man or woman who violates the trust. Our courts, backed by the best sentiment of the commonwealth, hold in special detestation and visit with condign penalties the violation of a trust fund. We can be patient with a horsethief or a highwayman sooner than with a custodian of money or confidence or love who plays fast and loose with his commitment.

Life a Treasure.

So much for my second answer to the quivering question of James. But let me give still another answer. Life is a treasure for investment. 'Tis never enough to keep it; you can not, in any adequate sense, keep it unless you invest it. This was the fatal mistake of the unfaithful servant who buried his Lord's pound. I have never believed that he gave the real reason for his conduct. Of course, he blamed his master, as we always incline to shunt off to others the blame for our failures. He evidently fancied, if he may be credited with considering the matter at all, that 'twas to keep his pound undepleted and snug. But every such buried treasure defrauds its real owner and the world. No vital important part of life can be kept—apart from use. God lends it for use. And unless we use it, he takes it away.

Immortality an Achievement.

But remember also that real use always means the highest use. You recall that in the parable the nobleman who owned the pounds gave the amplest reward to the best investor—and was called hard names for it. But no other sort of master of life is a worthy master. Life poorly invested, life spent in pleasure and vanity and commerce only, is but a step removed from life uninvested. God insists that we put life to the maximum, and particularly to the holiest use. He demands the fullest return, both for his sake and for our own. When Tissot turned his wonderful brush from the painting of nudes to the portrayal of Jesus, he simply reinvested his gift in a better bank. When Mozart declined to lower his talent to the cheap tasks of the crowd, he was merely reserving his talent for the largest return. When the man who afterward became Bishop of Uganda realized the unfairness of playing with life, he turned a new page for the Dark Continent. When Theodore Roosevelt set his face, like a flint, to certain public ideals, he sowed for a harvest of appreciation such as has been granted to few of his countrymen. And when you and I——?

But I need not prolong the list of examples. Suffice that I call attention to the shame of investing life poorly. Merely to earn dollars for yourself with your commercial talent; merely to win popularity when you might be winning hearts to your Lord; merely to get through the world with a good name and clean record, when there is so much Kingdom work to be done; merely to "dream and drift" when you might, if you would, dream and drive—this is a tragedy for the soul. Sang Browning once: "I count life just the stuff to try the soul's strength on." We can not justly try our strength on easy tasks. To thy best, to thy best! Insist that your life be so invested as to yield the maximum return. Only so can you hope to hear the divine "Well done."

Just one further answer to James' question, "What is your life?" I reckon that life is the material out of which we build for eternity. Even heaven is no gift—though the gift of God may be eternal life. Heaven must be earned. Heaven must be built from life here. It is a result. It is a fruition. It is the final, beautiful dividend on a well-invested life. God does not give heaven to folks to make them happy; we must take happiness with us if we expect to speak the language they speak yonder. I heard a boy say, once, "Heaven is where mother is." If that is true, it is because heaven always was where mother was while she lived; whether in the kitchen or the sitting-room or making a bed. God does an unspeakably finer thing than to promise to give us heaven; he offers us the material out of which to build heaven, as stewards of his manifold mercies. —In Western Christian Advocate.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

When I was living at Lumberton, Miss., some years ago, I received a letter from Bishop John H. Vincent to come to Chautauqua, New York, and spend some time with him as his guest. (By the way, I wonder if any of these frisky chaps who accuse me of being "narrow," and "sectional," and lacking in "fraternity" because I opposed "Unification," was ever invited to be the guest of as stanch a Northern magnato as was Bishop Vincent. But Vincent was no mollycoddle, and had little use for one. I knew where he stood, and he knew where I stood on certain subjects, one of which was the very question of the union of the two Methodisms. We agreed on that, but the fire flashed when it came to North and South!) I accepted the invitation, and you may be sure I had a good time. At his table in the Atheneum Hotel I met all the prominent people who came to Chautauqua while I was there, and some of them were men of international renown.

The great service at Chautauqua is the morning devotional service at 9 a. m., and it was under the special charge of Bishop Vincent. Bishop Vincent was held in very high honor as the patron saint of Chautauqua, and respect for him, as well as the attraction of the service, usually brought out a large audience. One morning he said to me: "I want to introduce you to the Chautauquans this morning. We won't have time for a speech, but make them a few remarks on any subject you please." He and I were alone on the big platform and a vast audience in the big auditorium. As he rose to introduce me, he asked me which was my native State. I replied, "Mississippi." He presented me in his happy manner, saying some things that might have made a modest man blush, telling them, "He is a native of Mississippi." Then in an aside which no one could hear but me, he mischievously added: "That was not his fault."

As his guest, I received the Chautauqua salute. I told them I was glad to be there, and especially to be presented to them in such a flattering way by Bishop Vincent. I told them they did not hear what he said, but I would repeat it for them, that it was not my fault that I was born in Mississippi. "Now," I said, "I know it is not the thing to do here at Chautauqua, to take issue with Bishop Vincent on any subject, and I do not intend to violate the proprieties of this occasion by doing it; I will say this, however, that when he says it was not my fault that I was born in Mississippi, he ought to know what he is talking about; because he was born himself at Tuscaloosa, Ala., just across the line from Mississippi!"

If a bomb-shell had burst above the auditorium it could hardly have produced a greater sensation! I saw hundreds of heads grouped together, and I knew they were saying, "What? Can that be so? Bishop Vincent a Southerner!" That evening at dinner he said: "I don't intend to introduce you again up here." (But he did) "Why?" I asked. "Because I can hardly get across these grounds for people stopping me to ask if what you said about my being born in Alabama is true," he replied. "Well," I said, "you ought to have better sense than to make a fling at Mississippi where I am. If you don't behave yourself, I'm going to tell them something else on you." "What are you going to tell them?" he asked. I replied, "I am going to tell them that when your father left down there, he sold Bishop Hargrove's father a lot of slaves." He threw up his hands and exclaimed: "Steel, have mercy!" Mississippi was the State of Jefferson Davis, and that was enough for him. He didn't shake the red rag any more, and we had a delightful time.

So I had recently at Laurel with Rev. L. L. Roberts. He went to Laurel under circumstances that tried his mettle. The Laurel folks, of all the denominations, wanted and expected Tolle back. They had nothing against Roberts, just wanted Tolle. If the Lord himself had offered them the choice between that eloquent angel, Abdiel, and Tolle, they would have said "Tolle." Abdiel was single, but Tolle had a wife, and to hear those Laurel people tell it, such a wife as is not found in a million. All of that speaks mighty well for Laurel, and for Tolle, and his evidently in this case, better three-fourths. (I put that proportion from personal experience). And it also speaks mighty well for Roberts that he went like a man, bore himself with dignity, and has done a fine year's work. He treated me like a Mississippi gentleman, and it was a pleasure to be briefly associated with him in his work. Then I enjoyed being on my native heath again.

But, perhaps, most of all I enjoyed meeting Mrs. R. W. Jones and her son, Mr. Stuart Jones, one of the prominent business men of Laurel. Fifty years ago, when I went to Emory and Henry College, in Virginia, Major R. W. Jones was the President of Martha Washington College, located at Abingdon, only ten miles away from Emory. I had not been at Emory and Henry long when the health of the pastor at Abingdon failed, and I was asked to take his work. This brought me into close relation with Dr. Jones, who was superintendent of the Sunday school, and gave me a pleasant entry to the College. I had not been there long until I fell desperately in love with one of his teachers. It was a huge triple task I undertook, to go to college, to be pastor of a church, and to court a girl whose every reply was, "Na, na, I mun na, caan na, wi'na buckle to!" But she did in the end, and I have every reason to believe Mrs. Jones slyly helped me, for which may the Lord bless her; for no man ever won a nobler prize.

We called him "Major Jones," for he was with Lee to the end at Appomattox, and I have put him in my metrical story of the Passing of the Cavaliers:

> The youthful Jones there marches on,
> Like Aeschylus at Marathon,
> And bares his classic breast;
> And boyish Shands, a cavalier,
> Of any in the host a peer,
> And Claiborne with the rest.

Later, and throughout Mississippi, he was better known as Dr. Jones. I never knew a nobler man. Quiet, unassuming, learned, refined and cultured in the old classic sense, brave and devoted to his country, a Christian gentleman from his shoes to his crown. Carley, that was the kind of men we had when I started out to explore the universe. I am glad to know that his children walk in his steps, and I can wish for them no better fate than to acquire his virtues and emulate his career of noble citizenship.

Well, the election is over. It went as most of us expected, and many secretly hoped it would go. Oh, no, we are not Republicans in the Pelican Pines, but we are Americans; and somehow, wisely or unwisely, we distrusted the settlement of the fuss on the basis of the League of Nations as sent from Versailles. While they are settling international problems, I'm busy digging post-holes. Want a job, Carley?

A few items will indicate the Extraordinary Growth.

Number of appointments supplied with preachers in 1918, 35; in 1920, 52; number of local preachers licensed during the past two years, 24; number of missionary workers, including preachers, teachers, physicians, nurses, deaconesses, etc., in 1918, 26; in 1920, 58; profession of faith (2 years), 2110; number of members in 1918, 3682; in 1920, 4890 (the increase would have been much greater, but there has been shifting of population, and consequent loss of members, but notwithstanding such losses the increase is about 30 per cent); support of the ministry in 1918, $3927 (gold); in 1920, $10,215 (gold), an increase of 250 per cent; total for all purposes in 1918, $13,719 (gold); in 1920, $54,666 (gold), an increase of nearly 400 per cent. And the greater part of the increase in members and contributions was in the Mexico Conference itself, where the people have been disquieted by the political revolution.

Self-Supporting Churches.

There are now five pastoral charges which are entirely self-supporting, namely, El Paso, Chihuahua, Allende, Saltillo, Monterey. Texas is paying four-fifths of the pastor's salary. San Antonio, Durango, Torreon, Laredo, Eagle Pass, Piedras Negras, Del Rio, Houston, Marfa and Fort Worth are paying from $300 to $600 toward pastoral support, and other small charges are paying in proportion. This development of the idea of self-support has been accompanied with a realization of responsibility for helping others, and there has been a decided growth in the missionary spirit, manifesting itself in both contributions and work.

The Centenary Spirit

has been a decided factor in this program of advance. The emphasis placed on Stewardship, Life Service and Tithing has greatly stimulated the leaders and the members, and they have rejoiced in the effort to keep step with the Church at home.

Educational Growth.

The educational growth has also been extraordinary. At Saltillo, Monterey, Chihuahua, El Paso, Laredo, San Antonio and Durango (at which place the school has been opened this year under Miss Tydings) our schools are overflowing, and are pleading for enlargement, which plea is being answered even now by the aid of Centenary gifts. The new school at Pharr, Texas, costing about $50,000, will open in January. Our plan to open and to maintain good day schools wherever practicable, is being carried out as rapidly as suitable teachers can be found and school chapels erected. At Parral, Los Cuevas, Torreon, Piedras Negras, Villadama, Allende (N. L.) Ramos Arizpe, Herreros, Eagle Pass, Phoenix and other places schools are already in operation and others will be opened this year.

Schools are Recruiting Stations.

It is most gratifying to report that our schools are fulfilling their mission and are recruiting stations for Christian workers. Lydia Patterson, Laurens Institute and Wesleyan Institute (at San Antonio) have furnished about 20 applicants for local preacher's license during the past two years, and we may confidently expect that our travelling ministry will be largely increased from our schools within a few years. Truly there is reason to "thank God and take courage," and to "be not weary in well-doing, knowing that in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Conference is over, past, gone forever into the things men call history. With us in Louisiana it was a strenuous time, and occasionally portentous. The strain threatened at times to snap and there was no little creaking. The pastors were heard from, the laymen also, and there were petitions enough for a bonfire, aided and abetted by interviews by day and night. These all went to the head office of the chief executive. They were his food by day and his sleep by night. He even ventured a mild complaint of many strange bedfellows in the early morning watches. One preacher is enough and to spare to sleep with, but when they intrude into one's rest by the score, the poor victim is a subject for human and divine compassion. Democracy, which mostly means a chance to talk and tell and plan, both for one's self and the other fellow, was rather conspicuous and promiscuous—believe me. Not very surprising, for the chief is a Democrat, if you call life and expression democracy. There were some big things done and some little. Since men are big and little, this is not surprising also.

One day it seemed the Conferential heavens were black with lowering storm clouds, but some one prayed in the night surely, for with the coming of another day the spirit of Abou Ben Adhem ruled the heart of the brotherhood. This fact was fully emphasized in the list of appointments read. No man has a vested and continuous right to any one office in the itinerancy. Eventually the powers from above or below will effect a change. Bureaucracy is whole brother, or at least much kin, to autocracy. The atmosphere of either is stifling. Stewardship under God is the right view—willingness to minister rather than to be ministered unto. Frankly, I believe the office of presiding elder, if it be "the applied end of the episcopacy," should move pari passu with the duties of the bishop, and the P. E. should be paid out of the general fund, and cut out once and forever this per centum plan. It tastes bad to the folks and the preachers.

But some man will say, "Keep our rules and not mend them." Now wouldn't Methodism be a wonderfully outworn and tattered garment if none of its rules had ever been mended? Revolution does not always mean progress, but liberty is the very air in which progress lives, moves and has its being. In the name of our great church we salute our new presiding elders and advise them to get very close to the people and the preachers by diligent service in this high office whereunto they are called, etc., and leave the fulminating and fuming to the connectional officers. They will have time to revamp their annual deliverances between now and next year. In all earnestness, beloved, study our Discipline, especially as it relates to the duties of your office and the brethren with the flock of Christ committed to your care. It should not take four or five meetings during the year to direct the affairs of an Annual Conference. The people are yearning, hungering, dying for the bread of life. God calls men to preach more than to plan. The great spiritual movements of the past were begun and continued by preaching the Gospel, and ended by a failure so to do. Preaching has ever been at the top in Methodism—keep it there.

Grand Cane, La.

"WHAT THEY LEFT BEHIND."

Dear Brother Carley: Preachers are terrible fellows! I have been busy dealing with them since October 15, at first trying to locate them pleasantly so that they would enjoy the Conference which convened with us November 3.

Since they left our city, I have been kept busy returning the things that they left behind—laundry, watches, razors, ties, raincoats, overcoats and numerous other things. One elder left his hat, another his razor, but I think they were excusable, for they had a big bishop to face. The unusual happened. But, Brother Carley, the preachers left something behind of more value than wearing apparel. They inspired our people to live better lives and created a higher regard for the Christian church.

The messages of our connectional men were of a high order and were appreciated by our people. Dr. Luther Todd, representing the superannuates, held his audience spellbound for an hour. He was constantly interrupted by applause. It was one of the best addresses that we have ever heard. He had a great theme, and men, women and children heard him to the end. The Sunday services made a profound impression on the people of our town. The Bishop's sermon on "Josiah" gripped his hearers; at one time the audience was in tears.

The sermon of Dr. John A. Rice at the Baptist Church Sunday morning was greatly appreciated by them. We have heard much comment on the fact that Brother F. M. Freeman had a conversion at the Baptist Church Sunday night.

R. W. Tucker and W. W. Drake maintained their reputation at the Presbyterian Church. The Sunday school superintendent of the C. M. E. Church informed us that the preaching at their church was fine—much better than they were accustomed to. We were not surprised when we remembered that Brother H. S. Johns and Brother S. D. Howard did the preaching. It takes good gospel preaching to impress the negroes.

We believe the preachers and delegates should be entertained in the homes of the people. Some were placed in the hotels in De Ridder, but this was not ideal and not satisfactory to the committee. The preachers, as well as some of the laymen, did not forget to do the Lord's work. They were true to their commission. They were about their Master's business, workmen that need not be ashamed, setting forth the truths of the gospel and telling the joy of redemption.

Our church here in De Ridder will be stronger because the Louisiana Conference spent a week with us. Methodism will henceforth have a recognition that it has not had heretofore. We are opposed to the plan advocated by some that our Conferences should be lodged in hotels in some of our big cities. The old custom is the best because it will bring greater results, and our work in this world is to honor God by making His glory known.

The Louisiana Annual Conference will always find a welcome in De Ridder—come again.

THE CHURCH AND COUNTRY LIFE.

By R. L. Russell, Secretary, Home Missions.

The country church is receiving a great deal of attention. It is time. Nothing could so completely work our undoing as its failure. We are working on a policy. Let the brethren keep up their writing on this subject. They are helping immensely.

The Home Department of the Board of Missions is practically a new venture of this Board. We have only this year worked out a policy for our city mission work. Our next move is to draft a policy for our rural work. If any believe it is easy, try it. We are, therefore, grateful for all the suggestions and criticisms of any of the brethren. Recently a query on this subject was sent to every presiding elder in the connection. About one-third of them have made answer to our inquiry. For the most part these answers have been dignified nd serious. One or two have thought nothing was wrong with the country church, while a like number have considered the matter in a very light way. But these have been such a negligible quantity that we have considered there might be something wrong with a few presiding elders, as well as with some country churches. We have gone far enough to see that there are a number of our country churches closed and a large number also that are practically closed. We have further found that many of them should not be reopened—so these presiding elders say.

In answer to the query: "What has contributed to the failure of these churches?" many answers have been given, but mainly these: circuits too large, preaching too seldom, people moved to town; but invariably is given the lack of adequate leadership, and also the hurry of the capable preachers to get away to station appointments; and inadequate pay. There is no doubt that some of these have contributed to the failure of all our closed churches.

Our pastors on rural charges have not had adequate support, and, therefore, they seek a station, or will go into secular employment. We are not going to be able to hold adequate men on inadequate pay.

After a casual consideration of this subject, I have reached some well-formed convictions:

1. Some country churches should be closed. In the days of bad roads, community group churches sprang up every two, three and four miles. With good roads coming, the time is here when we should consolidate many of our churches and have better ones. Public schools are consolidating; why not churches do the same, and, as a rule, erect a modern and adequate building, with a parsonage, near the consolidated school building?

2. The village church should in most cases be the church center for a radius of three or four miles. Every village pastor should consider that community his parish just as the city pastor has certain metes and bounds set for his pastoral oversight. In this way the country people could have, and support, as good church and pastor as the city churches. To do this, every pastor will need an automobile and an adequate support, and an enlarged and well defined program.

3. Every country pastor should start a campaign for good roads. There is no need to build churches if the roads are impassable a good part of the year. This gospel of good roads is a righteous gospel, and no preacher should fear to declare it, wholeheartedly. Good roads will mean better farms, better homes, better schools, better churches and a more permanent citizenship.

4. We must have better schools in the country. Hundreds of small schools in the South are now closed for the lack of teachers. Consolidated schools would largely remedy this. People are no longer satisfied with the old-time country school. The children of the farm are, as a rule, the brightest children in the world and appreciate adequate facilities for a modern education. Better schools will lead to better sanitation and habits of living. The wise country pastor will ally himself as closely as possible with the country school. He should be to it what the Catholic priest would be to his parochial school. He should be ready to assist in securing sompetent and religious teachers for his schools.

5. We should have a better trained ministry for this peculiar and interesting work. We readily admit the necessity of a better aducated ministry. But I mean more than that. I mean we should have men peculiarly trained in all the arts and sciences of rural life and rural church work. To do this, there must be a larger program for the rural pastor. He must do more than preach once or twice a month at each church—hold a protracted meeting and children's day service at each church once a year. He must live among his people, identifying himself with their life, raising their standards of living, righting their wrongs and in every way advancing the best interests of his constituency.

The country church is no sleepy man's job. After all, the major part of the successful policy for your country church is in the man in your pulpit. "There is more in the man than in the land." We will get the man when the church produces a winning program. That must be a new program. The methods of fifty years or even twenty-five years ago will not suffice. There must be something different. There must be a different interpretation of the old-time gospel. The Christ, the crucified Christ, the risen Christ must be lifted up until men, women and children living in God's great country shall be drawn to Him. THE MAN MUST DO IT. Where are the men?

One presiding elder has made the following statement: "The fundamental difficulty with the country church is economic. At bottom it is not the decay of religion, but the decay of life we face in rural sections." If our religion is in any sense affected by our environment, the elder is correct in this far-reaching statement. A plentiful bounty will not make people more religious; and yet we cannot build a vigorous church out of people impoverished in soul and body by bad conditions. What shall we do? Change the conditions, of course. We must come to see that all things that build life and character are a part of the program of the Kingdom of God. The same presiding elder further says: "The church must be the friend of such movements as help the farmer secure a profit on what he produces; she must labor to build the community life; she must be the friend of country schools and good roads, and where we have established good living conditions, we may hope for good country churches." The problem, then, is not so much that of the country church, as it is that of country life, which involves everything of human interest. The pastor of a rural church must reach further than his church if he would make his church the center of every good influence. His program must be to sanctify the whole of the community life, or he and his church will be lost in the confusion of conflicting calls. He should feel his community is his kingdom, and that all souls in his parish look to him for spiritual guidance and protection. The only way we can ever keep the rural church from decay is to keep rural life off of the scrap pile. Real leadership in this direction is the one big demand of the hour. Let no man then despise an assignment to this task. Rather let men volunteer for it. Boys from the farms and villages are dominating to-day all the programs of all occupations and professions. Bankers, merchants, doctors, lawyers, teachers and men of all classes of work in our cities are largely from the farms. It must be so for many years yet. What a misfortune for society in the city if the country boy should go to town without a deep religious conviction! It would be hazardous. The church in town and city must keep the church in the country going to grind out grist for them. They can well afford to put up large sums of money to do it. It means their life.

Keep up the talk, brethren. Help us find an adequate program to meet the needs of NOW. Help in directing strong men to this important work. The rural church is not going to fail unless we fail humanity in the country.

DEPARTMENT OF SPIRITUAL RESOURCES.

By Rev. P. L. Cobb.

The origin of the Department of Spiritual Resources is to be found in the earnest desire of the directors of the Christian Education Movement and the Centenary Campaign to be of greater service to the church than a mere money-raising agency. The money is an absolute necessity in the development of the work of the Kingdom, but of far greater importance than this is the development of the individual, the family and the church in spiritual life. In other words, the individual, the home and the church are a part of the sum total of Christian education represented by the colleges.

With this purpose in view the Department of Spiritual Resources under the Christian Education Movement and the Centenary Campaign will have as its objectives:

1. The Development of the Spiritual Life of the Individual Through Daily Bible Reading and Prayer.

An earnest effort will be made to induce every one of the 242,000 who enrolled in the Fellowship of Intercession under the Centenary Campaign and all others possible, to enroll for daily Bible reading and prayer. This is a distinct step in advance. The pledge in the Fellowship of Intercession was a promise to pray. The present enrollment will he for daily prayer and as all prayer is more intelligent when connected with the reading of the Word, daily reading of the Bible has been added. As a help to all those who enroll, a list of daily Bible readings and suggestive prayers will be furnished. It is hoped that all that is being done in the various departments of the church to secure daily Bible reading and prayer will be supplemented by the Department of Spiritual Resources, as it is not the purpose of the Department to form any new organiaztion, but to work through channels already established.

2. The Enlargement of the Family Altar League.

Under the efficient management of Dr. S. A. Neblett, 3,500 family altars were registered in this department and probably as many more set up of which no record reached the office. The family altar has the greatest potential power of any organization in the world. It is the hope of the department to increase greatly the number of homes in which family altars are established. Helpful literature will be prepared and sent out regularly to assist in the conduct of these family altars.

3. Promotion of Mission Prayer Specials.

The cards and most of the literature for the Mission Prayer Specials will he with the Bureau of Specials, but the Department of Spiritual Resources will promote in every possible way the Mission Prayer Specials.

4. The Improvement of the Prayer Meeting and the Establishment of Prayer Meetings in Rural Churches.

We have never yet realiezd the possibilities of the prayer meeting except individual churches where the program has been carefully prepared and an earnest effort made to have it carried out in the most thorough manner. The Department hopes to be able to prepare helpful suggestions and programs that have been successfully carried out for the use of pastors who desire such aids.

5. Re-Enforcing Other Agencies.

No new organization is contemplated. An earnest and sympathetic effort will be made to assist in every way possible the agencies already at work for the development of the spiritual resources of the church.

Program for January.

The month of January has been designated as the time when the church services are to be directed to the development of spiritual resources, as the months of February and March, respectively, to Life Service and Stewardship.

Topics and suggestions for four sermons during January will be prepared and sent out. Pastors are earnestly requested to use these or related topics, but especially to lay emphasis on the subjects set forth. Naturally these topics will emphasize Bible reading, prayer, the prayer meeting, religious expression and lay activities.

BEAVER PIONEERS.

"Let us presume that a pair of beavers have sallied from the home colony to establish new quarters," writes Raymond L. Ditmars of "Animal Engineers" in Boys' Life for December. "Wandering along a sluggishly moving stream, which is but a few feet deep, they pause at a location where the waterway widens a bit, possibly to a breadth of about thirty feet, and here they do surprising things. Small saplings near the water are quickly gnawed down, each beaver squatting in easy fashion, turning its head to one side, while the adz-like teeth gnaw quickly through a trunk from one to two inches in diameter. It requires but a few minutes to gnaw through the latter thickness and but a few passages of the keen teeth to fell a young tree as thick as a broom handle. As the growth topples over the beaver tugs and pulls to note how heavy it is. If the upper growth is thin and the sappling in consequence is light it is at once dragged to the stream and then towed to the center. Here the beaver dives, imbedding the upper, brushy portion of the sapling in the mud. The animal immediately returns to the shore. The thicker trees too heavy to be towed, are gnawed into sections, the brushly upper portions are towed out, firmly gripped by the powerful teeth, thence imbedded by diving and shoveling the muddy bottom. Progress is rapid. Waterlogged sticks are also gathered to form the base of what soon appears to be an island of circular form and about eight feet in diameter. The tireless labor continues, day after day.

"Within three to four days' time the island has assumed a substantial and permanent appearance. Its base is now composed of brush well jambed and woven, the interspaces are generously filled with water-soaked debris from the bottom, while quantities of mud have been deposited upon the top. The method of carrying the latter is particularly skillful. Each beaver works at the very edge of the stream, gathering in its jaws a bundle, crossways, of wet and dead twigs, then by scooping process it heaps the bundle with mud and burden braced by the forelimbs. It swims with head carefully reared and this means a great number of quick trips and the animals work feverishly pushing the material into place with the snout.

"When the island, flat and of solid appearance, is a few inches above the level of the water the beavers change their tactics and commence a great number of trips with quite smooth sticks. These are gnawed and trimmed with precision, in lengths of from two to three feet, from one to two and a half inches thick. At first these, a great many of them, appear to be scattered over the island in confusion. Areas near the stream are now well cleared of smaller saplings, the stumps protruding in all directions, the base sharpened to a point in the characteristic fashion of beaver work.

"From the confusion of tangled sticks on the island there gradutlly appears the form of a carefully braced and mound-like structure. It rises to a height of about four feet, is hollow within, and once its outer wall is completed the floor is built up about a foot and a half higher—or safely higher than the level to which these animal engineers intend to raise the stream. On one side of this beaver house is a circular opening, which at present is close to water level."

THE PERAMBULATOR "LOGS."

Tuesday morning, September 21, found our ship sailing upon the Pacific, but because of the "swell" the waves were causing, only about 60 of our 110 delegates to the Tokyo Convention were able to report "ready for duty" at the breakfast table. Among the missing was the Perambulator and another member of his party—for somehow or other, the motion of the ship was so contrary to the calmness of our stomachs we found it to our advantage to stay abed and refuse all offers of things to eat. So many being "slightly indisposed" broke into the plans of the ship's committee of arrangements; so that all affairs for pleasure and recreation were called off and those who were out got acquainted with one another in a less formal way. The men folks weathered it as best they could, but the ladies of the party had the nurse giving them medicine to quiet their nerves and urging them to take nourishment, which most could not do. Those of us who had brought along "seasick remedies" put them into play and waited, hoping they would prove effective.

Wednesday, September 22. Many of us still seasick and a few realizing there is no place like terra firma. Program of activities for day not yet regulated because of the missing.

Thursday, September 23. Sick list greatly diminished and so the order of the day as arranged by the committee on arrangements becomes effective by devotional service each morning at 10:30 and each evening at 8:30, a lecture or address from among the many of talent aboard. The Perambulator recovers sufficiently to inquire into the personnel of the ship's passenger list and finds there are eight nationalities aboard—Argentinian, Brazilian, Indian, African, Canadian, English, Dutch, Irish, and American. Among all these may be found the following classification: Missionaries, ministers, Sunday school association workers, denominational Sunday school secretaries, Baptist and Foreign Bible Society Field Workers, physicians, business men, dentist, farmer, temperance lecturer, school teachers, architect, stockman, and lawyer. Nineteen members of the Monteagle party have 42 places on the Tokyo Convention program. Thus you see the Perambulator and his party are among the elite!

To night's program consisted of a Gospel song service participated in by most of the passengers— thanks to the calmness of the sea!

Friday, September 24. On Monday a complete newspaper staff was appointed to issue a paper on Friday, giving the news and items of interest among the passengers. Promptly at eight thirty the passengers assembled in the salon and after a few preliminary remarks the editor-in-chief began the reading of the paper which contained "who's who," limericks, jokes, marconigrams, acrostics, conundrums, etc., all of which was related in some manner to the passengers in a funny vein. After the reading, the paper, which was made in copies, was sold to the highest bidder and the money was to be given to the World's Sunday School Association for Sundays in the world field. The papers brought $54.

Saturday, September 25. Nothing out of the ordinary to-day except a high sea in which the ship rose and fell at times as if the bow or stern was to be swamped by the tremendous waves. All we could do was to sit on deck in a sheltered corner or remain in the ladies' parlor or gentlemen's smoking room and read or talk. No sunshine was ours! At night Dr. Grierson, a medical missionary to Korea for twenty-two years, on his way home after a furlough of twelve months in America, gave us a very instructive and interesting lecture on Life in Korea.

Sunday, September 27. Weather again rough but not enough to keep the passengers from church, or else, by this time we are all so accustomed to a rough sea and dark, drear days, that we do not let them interfere with our pleasures or worship or study. Dr. Chas. W. Brewbaker, secretary of the Sunday School Board of the United Brethren in Christ, preached at the 11 o'clock service. A very interesting Sunday school, with three divisions, as there are just three children on board, was conducted by Mr. J. H. Engle, secretary of the Kansas Sunday School Association, at 3 o'clock. At night the sermon was given by Rev. F. L. Longford, secretary of the Canadian Methodist Sunday School Board.

Monday, September 28. We awake to find the sea was very rough and again our passengers had the privilege of remaining in bed—which quite a few did. However, at noon it began to clear and the sea to subside, and this, augmented by the announcement that the Empress of Russia, the largest ship in the Pacific trade, which had not left Vancouver until Thursday, September 23, four days after the Monteagle had left—would pass out within two miles of our starboard. This was given to us through the wireless operator, and consequently there began to appear watchers on our ship for the first sight of the Russia. About 3 p. m. the cry was heard, "Here she is," and there was a rush to the side of the ship from which, away in the distance, could be seen the smoke and outline of a ship upon the horizon. Gradually it came closer and in about 45 minutes it was abreast of us and within 300 yards. The passengers on each ship lined up and waved to each other, for the Russia, too, had 42 delegates aboard for the Convention. In a short while our ship was left far behind as the big Russia plowed her way through the ocean towards the west, and our last view of her was when she was silhouetted against the setting sun—a mere speck upon the horizon.

At the night service, after Mr. Priestly, of Seattle, gave his lecture on Alaska, the wireless which had passed between our delegates and those on the Russia, were read. They were as follows:

"Monteagle delegates to Russia delegates, Titus 3:15: 'All that are with me salute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all—Amen.'"

Russia delegates' reply, "2 Tim. 4:21: 'Do thy diligence to come before winter.' 3 John 1:14: 'But I trust I shall shortly see thee and we shall speak face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.'"

Tuesday, September 28. Ocean calm. Gordon Bryce, the six-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Bryce, who are returning to India as missionaries, was given a birthday party by the passengers. The affair was quite unique in that the guests came dressed as representatives of some Mother Goose rhyme. Mother Goose, with Gordon by her side, welcomed such characters as Little Bo-Peep, Humpty Dumpty, old King Cole, Tommy Grace with a pain in his face, Beauty and the Beast, Jack and Jill, Dr. Foster, Little Nancy Eddie Coat, as well as Charlie Chaplin, the Siamese Twins, Dolly Dimple, Pocahontas, Harry Lauder, and many others who took keen delight in making the party a real joy for Gordon. The cook made a birthday cake and the women gave the lad a $10 gold piece. The lecture at night was by Geo. P. Howard, General Secretary of the Argentina Sunday School Association, a man of strong personality who brought a wonderful view of that great American country to the south of us. Mr. Howard has the advantage of having been born in Argentina, the son of a missionary, reared among the natives, educated in the States, and now for ten years having been in active Christian service in both the ministry and Association work. He thus has not only the native touch, but the viewpoint of both English and American Christians, and is quite able to give the real reasons for the seeming slowness in bringing Christ to the Southern Hemisphere.

Wednesday, September 29. The day was calmer and much time on board was given to deck games, such as checkers, chess, quoits, hockey, shuffle board and physical exercise in the setting up exercise under Miss McCallam for the women and Dr. Brewbaker for the men.

The night's doings were a mock trial, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. Penniman, the leader of the Convention party, was charged with stealing a boiler from the Monteagle while at Vancouver, which delayed the ship's sailing four days. Witnesses for and against were had in the persons of a real Chinaman, a burlesque boiler maker, William Hardtack, a "nut" Wee Willie Winkle, an Irish hired girl, Bridget O'Toole, a pawnbroker to whom the boiler was sold, and a cabaret singer. Just as the trial began an Englishman rushed into the court and called attention to the fact that we were on a British ship and, therefore, under British law, and we could not "mock" at justice. Our American judge was quick to call attention to the fact that we were passing the Aleutian Islands which are at the extreme southern point of Alaska and being within three miles of them we were in American waters and, therefore, under American jurisdiction and the case would proceed. The trial was fair and for the first time the jury was composed of women, who brought in a verdict of guilty, despite the fact that counsel for the defense made a most worthy plea to them to remember his clients' 17 children as the hope of his home and life.

Thursday, September 30. On arrival at the breakfast table this morning, we were informed that Thursday had been lost and that to-day was Friday, October 1. When explanation was given, we were told that since leaving Vancouver, each day we had gained time, or that each day had become longer because we were going with the sun and in order to keep in time with Japan on our arrival we dropped a day and would pick it up when we returned; so we counted it Friday and went ahead with our work of picture taking, for it was the first real day of sunshine we have had on the trip across.

It may be these lines, credited to our captain, may set more clearly before our readers the mystery of the last day.

"In sailing West to Orient lands
The fickle clock turns back it hands

"Thus as you cross the stormy main,
Each day a little time you gain;

"The time you gain you must repay,
And bye and bye you owe a day.

"But this I'm sure will never do,
So one whole day they take from you.

"They take this day from you and me
On reaching one, eight, 0 degree.

"Although it seems a funny notion,
It's done on this Pacific Ocean.

"But when you have fulfilled your quest,
And changed your course to East from West,

"And navigate the wintry sea.
Your watch goes forward, they decree.

"Thus time is dropped till 'Tho Line' is crossed
And they give back the day youv'e lost.

"This may seem rather odd to you,
But that's exactly what they do.

"They give it where you mind it least,
Where East is West and West is East.

"From Greenwich, West is one, eight, 0.
And just tho same if East you go.

"Thus this meridian's just half way,
And it is called 'Meridian Day.'"

Well, we have been on this voyage since September 18, and now it is October 1, and in these 13 days we have seen nothing except water and sky, except the day we passed the Alloutian Islands, which were ten miles to the north of us, but whose mountain peaks could be plainly seen even though the day was dark and dreary; and the day the Empress of Russia passed us. Every day we have scanned the ocean for vessels, and while we can communicate with them by wireless, some being miles away, not a one have we seen—and only one day of real all-day sunshine have we had. However, our passengers are happy and have grown to know one another and to appreciate each other's point of view. But more in our next.

The Home Circle

THE STATESMAN.

The statesman throws his shoulders back and straightens out his tie,
And says, "My friends, unless it rains the weather will be dry."
And when this thought into our brains has percolated through,
We common people nod our heads and loudly cry, "How true!"
The statesman blows his massive nose and clears his august throat,
And says, "The ship will never sink so long as it's afloat."
Whereat we roll our solemn eyes, applaud with main and might,
And slap each other on the back, the while we say, "He's right!"
The statesman waxes stern and warm, his drone becomes a roar,
He yells, "I say to you, my friends, that two and two make four!"
And thereupon our doubts dissolve, our fears are put to rout,
And we agree that here's a man who knows what he's about.

THANKFUL HEARTS.

By Willie Conger Page.

Now that summer with its spirit of gladness, its dreams and memories, has wrapped her mantle of sunshine, soft winds and azure skies and silently departed; and November with its tang of frost, its golden fruitage, its abundant harvest, has come, are we thankful to our Father for the blessings and privileges that have been ours since last Thanksgiving Day?

We have gone another year on life's voyage; we do not understand the roar of the storms, the buffeting of the high waves or the darkness of the nights that fill our hearts with fear; but we do trust the Pilot whose hand is on the steering wheel, we do know that our ship is being safely guided over life's drifting foam to that far-off haven of rest, that port from which no traveler returns.

Are we thankful that the sorrow and unrest of men have not availed to dampen the courage of humanity who struggle on with hope of high attainments and better living?

Are we thankful for peace and plenty, the cheering note of the song-birds, the companionship of little children, the gladness of youth, the loyalty of friends; for forgiveness, unselfishness, for high faith in the goodness and generosity of our fellow-creatures?

Are we so thankful that the dark, bleak days of the coming winter, the falling leaves and sighing winds of November, bring no dismay, but find our souls calm and serene? Let us ponder these questions as we go about our daily tasks. Are we thankful to God?

TAM'S PLACE.

Margaret nibbled daintily at the walnut on the little frosted cake. Then she sighed.

Daniel finished the fourth slice of bread and a generous allowance of raspberry jam. Then he scowled.

"Are you sick?" demanded father.

"I was just thinking," said Margaret, "that there wasn't really room for another place at this table."

"So was I," Daniel chimed in hopefully.

The twins' faces fell as mother answered cheerily: "Father and I must put in another leaf to-morrow. It will never do to crowd Tam when he comes to live with us."

Then mother rose to her feet and the twins deftly assisted in clearing away the tea things and washing the gold and white china dishes.

When their father laid his paper aside, Margaret fluttered to the right-hand side of his armchair while Daniel perched on the left-hand one. Father was full of stories that night. Burly Saint Christopher, Una and the lion, and last of all David and generous Jonathan were listened to approvingly. As the children were tearing themselves away, suddenly Margaret nodded gravely to Daniel, who scowled and nodded, too.

But mother seemed to look away down into little people's hearts. "I'll have to hunt for grandmother's green hassock to-morrow, so Tam will have a place at story time."

The twins grew very red and hung their heads, for they had been thinking they were glad that father's chair had only two arms!

In the morning Cousin Tam came—twenty-four hours earlier than he was expected. Father had to drive over the mountain to call on an old lady that had rheumatism and mother had promised to go to the city with some other ladies to buy a carpet for the church.

"This will be a fine chance for all of you to become acquainted," mother said in her calm, silvery voice, but she held Margaret off at arm's length and looked for a minute into a pair of cloudy blue eyes. "You shall be little mother to-day," she said as she kissed her.

"We'll go to the croquet ground first," announced the reluctant little mother, when they were left alone. "We have only two good mallets left, so only two can play at once."

"Do you know how to play, Tam?" asked Daniel. Tam nodded without speaking and walked over to the box where the mallets and balls were kept. Margaret's conscience pricked her. "You boys play the first game and then I'll play next time."

"No," Tam spoke suddenly, "I want to look at this mallet. I'll play after you have had a game or two." He pulled a bit of wire out of his pocket. He had his knife already in his hand. Daniel and Margaret slowly began to play, but they left off before the game was half over to admire the mallet that Tam had skillfully mended.

"If you cut off the ends of these, we could make two short ones," Tam proposed briefly; "some of the fellows like to play with short mallets."

"Let me do one," Daniel begged, and the two boys were soon hard at work.

"I'll skip over and get the Ewarts," Margaret said joyfully. When Harry and Ethel Ewart came, there were mallets for every one and the children had a merry game. Tam wasn't used to the sloping ground. At first he was greatly at a disadvantage, but as he learned to reckon on the distance the balls rolled, he beat the other players.

"This isn't a suitable place for croquet," apologized Margaret. "You see, Tam, we have lived in this house only a little while. Next summer we are going to have the grounds graded and then mother can have her flower beds near the house. This year we will have to plant them away down at the end of the garden. We'll have to walk about a mile to get a bowl of nasturtiums."

"Too bad," said Tam in such a nice voice that Margaret wondered if she was going to like her new cousin after all.

The Ewarts went home for dinner. In half an hour they came trooping back, ready for more croquet. But Tam had other plans.

"Who owns that old boat in the barn?" he asked.

"It's mine," Dan said promptly. "Uncle Elmer gave it to me to play in."

Tam hesitated. "If it was my boat," he said at last, "I would fill it with good earth and plant flowers in it."

"And you let vines trail over the side," explained Ethel Ewart. "I know a lady that had one at Silver Lake, and it was pretty!"

"Huh!" said Dan, "It isn't as pretty as ours is going to be. Tell us what to do, Tam."

"I love to garden," Ethel Ewart laughed, quite ignoring Dan's challenge, "and I'll help!"

"Me, too," put in Harry. "I won a prize for corn last year."

"All right," approved Tam. "Go home and get your shovels and wheel-barrow."

Off rushed the Ewarts while Tam, Daniel and Margaret cautiously dragged out the old row boat.

"Now we'll dump some earth in." Daniel sang out as the boat was put in a sunny spot.

"Pebbles for drainage," protested Harry, the corn farmer.

By the middle of the afternoon the five had started upon the tremendous task of drawing up the loads of good soil. Although they were hot and tired, no one mentioned giving up. Just at sunset the old boat stood ready to be filled with seeds and roots of vines.

Five dirty but jubilant gardeners shouted hoarsely as father and mother arrived at the same moment, "Look at the garden boat!"

"Well, well," father laughed, but mother was too happy looking into the twins' faces.

"Tam showed us how," declared Daniel.

"Three is better than two," said Margaret wisely, "only we didn't know it."—The Congregationalist.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

passed, and they were advanced to the Class of the Second Year. J. A. George, N. J. Golding, C. L. Oakes, Seamon Rhea, J. F. Watson, and S. C. Yates made their reports, their characters were passed, and they were advanced to the Class of the Third Year. A. R. Beasley, J. S. Duncan, A. F. Moore, E. E. McKeithen, J. W. Robertson, and M. E. Scott made their reports, their characters were passed, and they were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year. W. W. Bruner, S. W. Bryant, S. H. Caffey, W. R. Lott, and W. I. White made their reports, their characters were passed, and they went on record as having completed the required four years' course of study.

J. A. George, N. J. Golding, C. L. Oakes, Seamon Rhea, J. F. Watson, and S. C. Yates, having completed the two years of probation, were admitted into full connection, and the Bishop announced that he would receive them on Saturday morning.

Rev. W. A. Wilson was elected to deacon's orders, and Rev. J. H. Vance was elected to local elder's orders.

The Committee on Hospitals and Orphanages made its report No. 1, dealing especially with the Memphis Methodist Hospital. It was shown that splendid progress has been made on this great undertaking, and it is confidently expected that the institution will be open for the reception of patients by next spring if all the patronizing Conferences respond promptly with the financial pledges made by them. The quota of the North Mississippi Conference is $150,000, and steps were taken to raise the full amount as soon as possible. R. A. Meek, R. A. Tucker, J. H. Sherard, Thos. James, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt and T. C. Reeves were elected as members of the board of trustees of the Hospital.

J. D. Turley, Conference Treasurer, submitted his report, showing that he has handled about $65,000 of Conference funds during the year.

G. L. Jones, Conference Lay Leader, submitted the report of the Committee on Lay Activities, which was adopted by the Conference. The report stated that tithing is on the increase among the laymen, and urged the laymen to take over the management of the material interests of the church in order that the ministers may be free to devote themselves to their spiritual functions.

After announcements were made, the Conference adjourned with the benediction.

Afternoon and Evening.

The feature of the afternoon was the laymen's meeting, presided over by G. L. Jones.

The Sunday School Board observed its anniversary at the evening hour, the principal address being made by Rev. J. L. Neill, of the Department of Missionary Education in the Sunday Schools, Nashville.

(EXPLANATION—We regret exceedingly the fact that we are unable to give in full the proceedings of the North Mississippi Annual Conference in this issue of the Advocate. We had made arrangements by which we expected to receive the account of each day's proceedings by noon of the following day, which would have allowed us ample time for getting the matter in type and ready for the press; but, as it so frequently seems to happen when the need is most urgent, the post office seems to have failed to function properly and we are without the proceedings of Saturday and Sunday, the appointments only being available. We hope to have the completed report in next week's issue.—Editor.)

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

The editor of the Advocate was most delightfully entertained in the home of the popular pastor at Charleston, Rev. John Tillery Lewis. It was an unmixed pleasure to renew the associations and intimate fellowship of other days when both were students and roommates at Millsaps College. The mistress of the parsonage is as gracious as a hostess as she is charming in all the relationships of an itinerant's wife. The two splendid young sons of the home, John Tillery, Jr., and Henry Barton, were models of thoughtfulness and courtesy. The fellow-guest of the editor was Henry Pope Lewis, the worthy namesake of an honored father who, for many years, was a member of the Mississippi Conference, and a long-time friend.

We have never seen a more capable Conference host than was Brother Lewis. He was never at a loss to know what to do, and his good humor never failed under the most trying circumstances. He was ably assisted in entertaining by a fine committee from the church, and by the generous cooperation of the citizens of Charleston generally.

We doubt if any Conference in the connection has a more efficient secretary than J. R. Countiss. He is as great as a secretary as he is as president of a college—and that is saying a good deal.

The members of the Conference felt from the beginning that they were under the administration of a great presiding officer. Bishop McMurry has the happy faculty of keeping everybody in a good humor—and dispatching business at the same time.

Among other "biggest things in the world" that Charleston boasts of, is "Scissors," the Duroc Jersey hog reputed to be worth $65,000. We fain would have plucked a bristle from his back as a souvenir of his porcine greatness—but a punctured tire prevented our getting so much as even a glimpse of him. In popular pariance, be must be "some hog."

One could not but be impressed by the character of the lay delegation to the Conference. North Mississippi Methodism has reason to be proud of the men and women who have enrolled themselves under its banner.

It was a great personal pleasure to the editor to meet Brother F. A. Howell, of Durant, Miss., who has shown his friendship for the Advocate by many unmistakable tokens.

It is no reflection upon the gifts and graces of Rev. R. P. Neblett to say that his good wife deserves (as all good wives do, for that matter) the appellation, "better half." Mrs. Neblett was a delegate to the Conference from her district.

The editor is especially grateful to the Board of Christian Literature, of which Rev. J. W. Dorman is chairman, for its courteous treatment of him personally and for its earnest interest in the cause he represents. Its only concern was to discover the most practicable and effective way of promoting the welfare of the Conference organ. Both as a board and as individuals the members were eager to do the best thing for the paper in the best way possible.

The decision of Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, who has been a professor in the Candler School of Theology of Emory University, to re-enter the pastorate, has put back into the local work of the Conference one of its most distinguished and capable members.

The North Mississippi Conference has in its membership more than fifty graduates and former students of high-grade educational institutions, most of them, of course, from Millsaps College. There is probably not a Conference in the connection which ranks higher in this respect.

It was a great disappointment to his brethren that Dr. Jno. W. Boswell was not able to attend the sessions of the Conference this year. Methodism has no truer servant than this veteran, whose bow still abides in strength.

WORTH READING.

We have had occasion recently to read a volume of essays by F. W. Boreham, the distinguished Tasmanian writer, "The Luggage of Life" being the particular collection that fell into our hands. We read it with pleasure and profit, charmed with the piquant style of the author and benefited by his suggestive reflections upon the problems of life. We commend these essays to our readers—they will stimulate the mental processes and brighten the outlook upon life. Whether these essays appeal to our readers as strongly as they do to us or not, one thing is sure—they will not "bore 'em."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., has reached his new charge, Haynesville, La., and has been royally received. He writes that the outlook is good for a fine work.

Mr. J. G. Hancock, of Good Pine, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, takes occasion to speak in very high terms of his pastor, Rev. A. M. Shaw.

Dr. W. G. Henry, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, was appointed to Eleventh Avenue Methodist Church, Birmingham, at the recent session of the North Alabama Conference.

Last Sunday, at 8 p.m., Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer occupied the Rayne Memorial pulpit, a good evening congregation being present. His text was Matt. xxv, 34, and his subject "The Exaltation of the Righteous.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, writing from his new charge, Queensboro, Shreveport, La., says: "I spent Sunday with my folks in my new charge and was very kindly received. I am well pleased with my appointment."

Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs, formerly dean of the Theological Department of Southern Methodist University, which position he resigned last year on account of ill health, has recently been appointed pastor of First Church, Anniston, Ala., one of the leading charges in the North Alabama Conference.

Dr. and Mrs. Paul H. Linn spent last Saturday in New Orleans. Dr. Linn, who is president of Central College, was on his way from the seat of the North Mississippi Conference to Houston, Texas, where he had an important engagement in connection with the Educational Movement.

Dr. S. A. Steel is booked to give a course of lectures on the great characters of the Bible in the near future at Broad Street Church, Richmond, Va., Centenary Church, St. Louis, Mo., McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn., Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, Denver, Colorado, and other places. These messages are very highly commended.

Our church at Franklin, La., under the leadership of Rev. Jno. F. Foster, made one of the best reports in its history at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference. All assessments were paid in full, and a comfortable balance was left in the bank for the beginning of the new year. Brother Foster is greatly beloved by all the people of his charge.

A regrettable error occurred in the appointments of the Louisiana Conference as they appeared in the Advocate. Rev. H. W. Ledbetter was reappointed to West Monroe, where he has done a magnificent work, and not Rev. H. W. May, as we had it. Brother May was appointed to Winnsboro. We beg the pardon of all concerned for this mixing of the types.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, who was appointed to the Abbeville and Kaplan charge at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, has been transferred to the West Texas Conference and stationed at Alamo Heights Church, San Antonio. Brother Townsley has unusual intellectual endowments, makes friends quickly, and is an indefatigable worker. We predict that the San Antonio Methodists will soon know that he is "in town."

In response to a request from the Educational Commission, President W. R. Bourne, of Centenary College, has been granted an indefinite leave of absence to assist in the work of the Educational Movement. His special function will be to assist the alumni and the college presidents in their organization and work. The board of trustees of Centenary has elected Professor R. E. Smith to serve as acting president during Dr. Bourne's absence.

On November 18, the deed was signed and delivered transferring the King's Daughters' Hospital, of Hattiesburg, Miss., to the Hospital Commission of the Mississippi Conference; and on the following afternoon formal possession was taken, in the name of the church, by the Executive Committee and the Superintendent, the Methodist pastors of the city also being present. The Hospital Commission is called to meet in Brooklaven, Miss., on Tuesday evening, November 30.

Rev. J. D. Harper, a veteran in point of service, and eminently successful throughout his ministry, was appointed pastor of our McDonoghville church, just across the river from New Orleans, at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference. Not only will his son, Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Church, this city, be blessed by having him near, but all the preachers of the city, including this editor, will also count it a rare privilege to be brought into close touch with this great and good man.

At the fourth quarterly conference of the Main Street Methodist Church, Biloxi, Miss., held November 17, the pastor reported ninety members received during the year on profession of faith, with enough by letter to give an actual net gain of one hundred. The stewards reported all assessments in full. The trustees reported valuable land acquired adjoining the church, at a cost of fourteen hundred dollars, most of which has been raised. The Ladies' Aid Society has raised and spent more than seven hundred dollars for the completion of the parsonage.

On the eve of his leaving for the North Mississippi Annual Conference, held at Charleston last week, the Oxford Eagle, of Oxford, Miss., had this to say concerning Rev. L. M. Lipscomb: "Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, pastor of the local Methodist church, is rounding out his first year in this pastorate, and has made a host of friends and admirers by his splendid gospel ministry, his strong Christian character, and his cordial, friendly bearing. He and his interesting family have proved a helpful addition to our community, and, with many others, we add our sincere wish and prayer that Oxford may continue to be favored with his ministry and influence. Brother Lipscomb easily ranks with our greatest ministers who are in demand for the choice pastorates, and Oxford should consider herself fortunate indeed to retain him. His sermon on last Sunday from Luke 2:49 was pronounced by many to be a masterpiece."

The following, which will be of interest to the Louisiana friends of Brother Coleman, appeared in a recent issue of the Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn.: "Dr. W. H. Coleman, of St. John's Methodist Church, preached his farewell sermon to an audience that filled the church, Sunday morning, November 6. In the two years he has been pastor, the church has enjoyed the most prosperous period in its history. Dr. Coleman's leaving is the cause of general regret among the members of his church, who presented him with a beautifully bound Schofield Bible, a gold watch, and a purse made up by the entire congregation as tokens of their love and esteem. The Mothers' Class entertained for Mrs. Coleman last week. Dr. Coleman will leave next Thursday for the Central Texas Conference and will probably be assigned to some church in Fort Worth, though no definite notice has reached him yet." Brother Coleman was appointed to Central Methodist Church, Fort Worth, a charge with about twelve hundred members, located in the finest residence section of the city.

J. M. GEORGE was born in Alabama, February 13, 1878, and died in the sanitarium at Meridian, Miss., May 6, 1920. At the age of twelve, Brother George joined the Methodist Church at Old Sharon Camp Ground in Alabama. It was not the writer's pleasure to know him, but all who knew him said he lived a true Christian life, and was ready when the summons came. He spent most of his life in Mississippi. On June 1, 1896, he was married to Miss Susie Eaton, of Wingate, Miss., who preceded him to the Heaveniy Home twelve years. He leaves two sisters and one brother in Alabama, and one sister, Mrs. Brown, at Petal, Miss., and a host of friends. For a number of years he had made his home at Petal, where his membership was at the time of his death. His body was laid to rest in Sharon cemetery, near his birthplace. May God's richest blessings rest upon his loved ones.

S. C. MOODY.

MRS. EDNA HACKLER SCOTT died June 16, 1920, at the residence of her son, E. J. Scott, at the ripe old age of ninety-three. She was born in August, 1827. In 1849 she was married to John W. Scott, and to this union were born eight children. In her early teens she united with the Methodist Church and at the time of her death held her membership at the old Ebenezer church, which is a landmark in the community in which she lived, the church being over one hundred years old. She was, in the active period of her life, a faithful member of that church. About twenty years ago she lost her sight and for the last several years had been confined to her bed; but even in her infirmity she was ever true to her faith and proved a blessing to the members of her household. She leaves behind one daughter, three sons, thirty grandchildren, and thirty-seven great-grandchildren. She was laid to rest in the family cemetery by the side of her husband and children who had gone before.

CLAUDE P. JONES, Pastor.

Mrs. OLIVE McDONALD McBRIDE, the wife of J. H. McBride, passed away very suddenly at her home in Fayette, Miss., July 28, 1920, at the age of fifty-nine. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. McDonald, and, under the influence of these Christian parents, she grew into a strong and faithful member of the Methodist Church having united with the church at about ten years of age. Later she moved her membership to Fayette, where she remained a member until her death. For nearly fifty years she was active in all church work, taking a leading part in the Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society, and the Ladies' Aid. She expressed by her life the love and devotion she had for God and His church; never shirking a duty, but always seeking to do an act of kindness for some one. She was a home-loving woman—true to all the demands of her home and a most faithful wife. Her loyalty and kindness to her mother, who was so dependent upon her, was beautiful In the going of this most worthy character the home, the church, and the community have suffered a great loss. She is survived by a devoted husband, mother, and four brothers. Her remains were laid away in the cemetery at Fayette, to await the resurrection of the just.

CLAUDE P. JONES, Pastor.

ONE PREACHER MOVED BEFORE CONFERENCE.

Ordinarily it requires the wise counsel and godly judgment of the Bishop and his cabinet to move a preacher, and it is not infrequent that days are spent in prayerful consultation before a man can be placed satisfactorily to all parties concerned. But Logtown church seems to be a law unto itself, or would take the law into its own hands and do things when, and as it sees fit.

Recently compiaints were made by the official board, and the entire membership; a church conference was called, and an investigating committee was appointed. The report of that committee said the preacher must move at once.

Without delay, conveyances were furnished; the preacher, his family, their belongings, and such furnishings as belonged to the parsonage were furnished; the preacher, his family, order. It can be said that the preacher and his family are comfortably domiciled on the eastern border of the town.

The old parsonage has been sold and is being removed. A new building will be in course of construction as soon as the contractors can get to it, which, when finished, will compare favorably with the most convenient and best equipped parsonages in the Conference.

The church, also, will get a new roof, a fresh coat of paint on the outside, and some improvement inside. Other matters of interest to the church are progressing splendidly.

H. L. NORTON.

FROM FAYETTE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Having seen nothing in the Advocate this year from Fayette, I take the privilege of sending a few dots to let you and the readers know that the pastor, C. P. Jones, is winding up the year with gratifying results. Collections will be in full, and pastor's salary running over. The Sunday school is on a boom, and the Woman's Missionary Society is doing big things. The congregations are large, and appreciative. It is a feast to the soul to worship with this people and to hear the earnest appeals of the young pastor, urging every one to live a pure, clean life. He attacks sin of all forms and places boldly and openly, yet he loves the sinner and deals with him fairly. I voice the wish of the church in saying I hope he will be returned next year to carry on the good work so well begun.

W. W. CAMMACK.

KNOWING AND BELIEVING.

As between knowing and believing, the latter is much more essential to the joy of living. In fact, the things which we know by the evidence of the physical senses are comparatively few and relatively unimportant.

I do not know that the sun will rise to-morrow morning, but I take great comfort in believing it. I do not know that the bank where my funds are deposited is safe, but I should be unable to sleep if I did not believe it. We do not know that the beams which support the church roof are secure, but there would be a panic in the congregation if we did not believe it. We do not know that our Chief Executive is an honest man, but the whole country would be up in arms if we did not believe it.

The great body or facts which we possess come to us, not by knowledge, but by faith. And they are none the less substantial and trustworthy on that account. For faith is substance, and it is founded on evidence; only it is "the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen."—The Intelligencer.

DOING YOUR BEST.

Throughout recent months one has heard oft repeated the slogan, "Do your bit." Modesty forbids most of us from claiming that our best is more than a bit! But if we want the really worthy incentive, we will cast that piece of outworn jargon in to the discard and cry aloud for men and women who will do their best! Too much of life is lived in terms of "bits" rather than "bests." Can you imagine what a delightful world this would be if a higher percentage of us really did our best—at least occasionally? Of course we should always do our best, under whatever circumstances. Do we? Alas, no. The minister goes into his pulpit less than at his best and the congregation suffers—if his people have not long since given up in despair of ever hearing their dominie at his best. The church member comes a bit late, or forgets to pray for a blessing before he comes, or brings along a load of care, or a captious spirit—and again some one suffers for it. Of course your church and mine are "different." All churches are! Let us thank God for that. No two fields present precisely the same problems. But the root problem of all is to get at our individual tasks with our best. Neither the size of the field nor the apparent difficulties in the way are the real problem. The real problem is to get at the work God gives us to do, with an unconquerable determination to do our best. Our very best may seem but a small bit, but it contains the seed of immeasurable riches. Who but God can foresee the harvest? Suffer a single illustration. Suppose when the collection plates are passed we all did our best? Can't you see the treasurers and their assistants joyfully postponing their Sunday dinners to count the results? And the missionaries on the field holding a praise service over the returns? Wouldn't it make you and me happy to know that was possible because we did our level best?—The Intelligencer.

Simple Mixture Makes Hens Lay

By W. S. Burgess.

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A life long study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Combs' Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 158 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.—Adv.

PAINS NEARLY DOUBLED ME UP

Nothing Helped Me Until I Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wyandotte, Mich.—"For the last four years I have doctored off and on without help. I have had pains every month so bad that I would nearly double up. Sometimes I could not sweep a room without stopping to rest, and everything I ate upset my stomach. Three years ago I lost a child and suffered so badly that I was out of my head at times. My bowels did not move for days and I could not eat without suffering. The doctor could not help me and one day I told my husband that I could not stand the pain any longer and sent him to the drug-store to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and threw the doctor's medicine away. After taking three bottles of Vegetable Compound and using two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash I could do my own housework. If it had not been for your medicine I don't know where I would be today and I am never without a bottle of it in the house. You may publish this if you like that it may help some other woman."—Mrs. MARY STENDER, 120 Orange St., Wyandotte, Mich.

FROM WILLIAMSBURG, MISS.

Our fourth quarterly conference for the fourth year for P. E., Rev. W. B. Jones, and pastor, was held at Santee church the 10th inst. Attendance, interest, and reports were good. During these four years some results are: 97 accessions; pastor's salary and Conference collections doubled; Contributions for the Centenary and hospital; two of the four churches built anew, and a new and much better parsonage location. We have many good, loyal people. This is getting to be one of the best country charges.

This year, besides receiving his salary, the preacher is being dressed up for Conference, and the parsonage fitted up for the new one.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Thursday I was out on the Rocky Springs charge at Willows. The weather was so bad I only had the opportunity of speaking to the High School.

Sunday I visited Henry's Chapel, on the Deemer charge, and Philadelphia. The school at Henry's Chapel has a fine opportunity if the members of the church would rally to it. They have a fine body of young boys and girls that can be reached and blessed by God if the proper pains are taken in the matter. Philadelphia is a good school. They are well organized. They need more room and I trust will shortly have all the room they need. Their school shows a large average over last year, and many other things indicated life and growth.

The following is the percentage of the Sunday schools that have observed Sunday School Day in the various districts:

Jackson	....50 per cent
Port Gibson	.....47 per cent
Brookhaven	.....43 per cent
Newton	.....41 per cent
Hattiesburg	.....37 per cent
Seashore	.....36 per cent
Meridian	.....31 per cent

I trust that each district will show a marked increase by Conference.

Don't forget, the Sunday School Board is looking for the report that is due them. It will mean much to us if you are prompt in this matter.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Bishop W. F. McMurry has answered the request of the Conference Sunday School Board and appointed me to be your Field Secretary. I was pleased to receive this honor to serve you another Conference year, and shall endeavor to do the work in the best possible order. The co-operation of presiding elders, pastors, and Sunday school superintendents is urgently desired.

The touring of the Conference in the interest of Men's Bible Classes will be put into effect during January and February. We will advertise the Wesley Bible Class Federation for March 15, 16, 17, at Lake Charles, at the same time. Watch these notes for announcement of "Men's Bible Class Tour."

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.

FROM GIBSON MEMORIAL.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you allow me a final word from Gibson Memorial? I am nearing the end of a four years' pastorate at this place, and in many respects it has been the best of the four. We expect to make a good report at Conference. Not all has been done that I had hoped, and I am not satisfied with my part of it, but I am gratified for what has been done.

Besides increases in finances and a large membership gain, the chief feature of this year's work has been the growth and development of so many members in Christian character and efficient service. Especially is this true among the men and boys. A larger per cent than ever before attend church and Sunday school.

The work is better organized than at any time since I have been here, and the future looks good for Gibson Memorial. The four years now closing have not been easy years, but they have been happy in many ways. Never have I seen greater visible results of labor, prayer and faith. The labors of the earnest, self-sacrificing men of former years are bearing fruit more and more abundantly. Gibson Memorial has long since passed the experimental stage, and henceforth will be a big factor in the religious and civic life of Vicksburg and Warren County. Keep your eye on Gibson Memorial.

Brother Carley, I do not know who will be my successor; perhaps you know, or can guess; but will you please whisper to the brother that he will have big work to do? Many heavy demands will be made on his time from all sorts of sources. "A great and effectual door will be open unto him, and there are many adversaries," but O, what wonderful opportunities; what a mighty schooling and training in the great experiences of life! Tell him about the practical training he will get, and to come with the prayer of one of America's great preachers, "Lord, do not give me tasks equal to my powers, but powers equal to my tasks." Is the brother weary and wants to sit down in an easy place? Tell him not to stop here, for the devil works all day and night in Vicksburg, and on every day of every month in every year, including leap year. In order to make any sort of progress, the pastor here must work. He needs to make sacrifices, "keep humble and sweet" as my dear father so often has told me, be prayerful, patient, not easily discouraged. Be sure to remind him, however, that he will have a noble band of men and women to labor with, people who love God and will love a man of God, and who are willing to make sacrifices for the good of the church more than the average Methodist. His hands will be greatly strengthened by their prayers, sympathy and service. If Brother N. B. Harmon is sent back to Crawford Street, he will have a true, brotherly, appreciative associate pastor.

There are lots of other good things I want to say, but print paper is too expensive and time too precious these days.

Come to see me some time, Carley. You haven't been to see me since your courtin' days and could talk about nobody but that good lady you won.

Your brother,
OSMOND LEWIS.

FROM GULFPORT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: There seems to be such a splendid interest in our church here, I feel that it would be interesting reading for the Advocate family. Brother Linfield has been such a wise, consecrated, diligent pastor and preacher that every interest of the church is moving finely. The choir gives excellent music, the congregations are large and interested, the preaching is pointed, helpful, and spiritual.

The stewards are harmonious and active, and have the finances well in hand and have announced to the congregation that everything would be up in full. The mid-week prayer meeting is well attended and full of interest.

Col. Hardy, the superintendent of the Sunday school, has one of the best equipped Sunday schools in Mississippi. His school is splendidly organized and thoroughly systematized in the management. October 31 was Decision Day, and was a great day for our church here. The attendance was 510, the collection was large, 13 children were baptized, 8 youths and 6 adults were baptized, 14 were received by profession, 20 by vows, and 8 by certificate. Thirty of this number were from the Sunday school. The total number of members so far is 150. Col. Hardy spoke encouragingly to the class from the Sunday school, and gave to each a Discipline. Brother Linfield, after receiving the class into the church, administered the sacrament, and invited those received into the church with their parents to come forward first and take their first communion. It was a fine service and will never be forgotten.

Brother Linfield is held in high esteem and is much beloved by the church and community. He will make, the stewards say, the best report from this church in many years.

Brother Chambers, on Monday, began an institute for the training and improvement of teachers. There were several good classes and it will mean improvement in Sunday school. Now it would be a great blessing, just after Sunday school if, by some means, there could be a special service adapted to the needs of the children, with special effort to lead them to Christ.

W. D. DOMINICK.

A FINE BEGINNING AT LOGANSPORT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have been received royally. A large congregation greeted us last Sunday morning, despite very inclement weather. Several hundred dollars worth of furniture has been placed in the parsonage and an increase of $500 made on pastor's salary over last year. The second Sunday in January will be "Christian Literature Day." Faithfully,

LELAND CLEGG.
Logansport, La.

FROM KINGSTON, LAUREL, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a short report from Kingston Church, Laurel. I am now closing my second year of my second pastorate here. When I came almost two years ago, the absolute need was a new church. The old building was inadequate and almost ready to fall down. With prices of material and labor high and going higher, it looked like an almost hopeless task, but with the co-operation of practically all our members and faith in God we set ourselves to the task. The two years have been the hardest of my life, but we are glad to report a neat and commodious building nearing completion without a big debt hanging over us—and if the approaching Conference does not upset present plans, the building will soon be finished and ready to be dedicated. We have put about $6000 into the building, besides utilizing most of the material of the old house, which gives us a plant well worth at least $7500. We have facilities for all departments of church work, especially the Sunday school and Epworth Leagues. Seventy names have been added to the roll, and the assessment for presiding elder and pastor has been raised from $570 to $1200. The Conference assessments have been raised considerably, yet we feel that we will be able to report everything in full at Conference. All departments have done good work and I feel sure that the church was never better organized than now. Many things have arisen that would discourage, some hard battles have been fought, but we feel that the good Lord has been our "present help in every time of need." We thank God and take courage.

L. F. ALFORD.
Laurel, Miss.

RHEUMATISM—RELIEF

From Its Dreadful Pains and Aches, Stiffness, Soreness—

Is properly to be sought in a good blood medicine, because authorities say rheumatism is a blood disease; acid has entered the blood, settling in the muscles and joints. That's what makes the sharp, sudden, shot-like pains, causing you to jump and cringe in agony.

Hood's Sarsaparilla comprises remedies that every physician prescribes for rheumatism, combined with other blood-purifying, tonic and strength-building ingredients in a formula vastly superior in make-up and in curative power. It does give positive relief. Thousands say so. So will you. For a fine laxative take Hood's Pills.

NUXATED IRON

For Red Blood, Strength And Endurance

LEMON JUICE FOR FRECKLES

Girls! Make beauty lotion for a few cents—Try It!

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless and never irritates.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

An Enemy to Good Health.

Good health has no greater enemy than constipation. You cannot "keep fit" for work or play if the bowels are irregular or clogged with a decomposed mass of undigested food from which the blood picks up disease-causing impurities and carries them throughout the entire system. Foley Cathartic Tablets are mild but sure in action. They banish biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach and other ills caused by indigestion. Take one to-night and you will feel better in the morning.—Adv.

A CHRISTIAN CHINESE GENERAL.

By W. B. Nance.

Twenty-five years ago the province of Hunan was known as the hotbed of anti-Christian influence. Possibly that made Hunan especially attractive to the more adventurous spirits among missionary pioneers. It was a favorite field for itinerant expeditions of the great London missionary, Dr. Griffith John, who sent forth tracts into that province from nearby Hankow throughout the long years of his missionary service. Perhaps it is due largely to the work of Dr. John that Hunan is to-day one of the most progressive and modern provinces of China. The Yale Mission, a Christian college known as Yale in China, is located in the provincial capital, and many missions now occupy Changcha as well as Changte and Siangtan. In Changte is located the mission established many years ago by the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Dr. Logan, of that mission, has for many years been winning the friendship of the Chinese by healing their diseases, while his wife, a sister of our own Dr. Manget, has been his first assistant as a trained nurse. At Changte has been located for a number of years a small army of 7000 men commanded by Feng Yu Hsiang. How General Feng became a Christian I do not know, but the character of his Christianity is well known among the missionaries of China. So much in earnest is he that he feels himself personally responsible for the spiritual, as well as the physical welfare of every soldier in his army. He has established the most rigid sanitary regulations for his camp, and the whole life of his soldiers is regulated with the supreme aim of making them not only physically fit and good fighters, but good men and good Christians. He takes every opportunity to secure the most gifted evangelists to conduct revival services for his camp. It is not much wonder, therefore, that 5000 of his 7000 men are Christians. Visitors to this camp say that it is almost as if one should go back three centuries and step into the camp of Cromwell and his Ironsides.

A very sad tragedy occurred within the past year in this camp. Dr. Logan was on terms of close intimacy with General Feng and was consequently called in to treat officers and men in the army. One day General Feng sent for him to see one of the men and, as usual, accompanied the doctor to the room of the sick man. Dr. Logan leading the way, stepped into the room and was immediately shot through the heart by the supposedly sick man who was really crazy. General Feng was just too late in his attempt to interpose his own body between the lunatic and his beloved American friend. Mrs. Logan, having sent all of her children to America to school, has joined her brother at Huchow, and is there giving her services as a trained nurse in the Huchow Union Hospital.

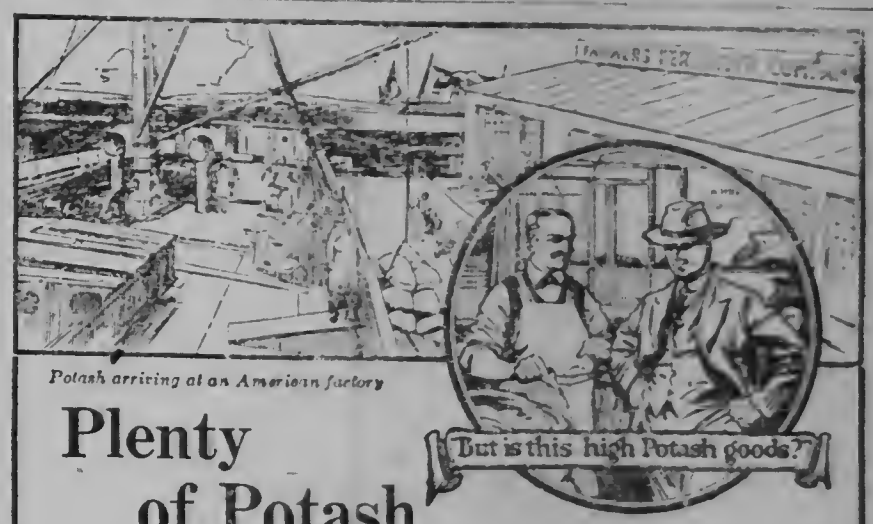
CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

American civilization is the product of intellectual and moral culture. In the days when the Puritan colony of Massachusetts did not number over 4,000, the universities of England and Scotland were represented among them by over 100 graduates. A catalog of the founding of our historic colleges and universities would best reveal our fathers' interest in higher education.

Harvard	1637
William and Mary	1693
Yale	1701
Princeton	1746
University of Pennsylvania	1749
Columbia	1754
Brown	1764
Dartmouth	1769
Queen's Rutgers	1769
Hampden Sidney	1776
Washington and Lee	1782
Washington University	1782

Even before our national independence had been won, colleges and universities had been established which have stood unshaken until this day. No human brain can compute the influence of these institutions in the making of our government and in her struggles for freedom. No wonder Professor Huxley declared that if a nation could purchase a potential Watt, or Davy, or Faraday at a cost of five hundred thousand dollars down, he would be dirt cheap at that money.—Central Christian Advocate.

"Every temptation that is resisted, every noble aspiration that is encouraged, every sinful thought that is repressed, every bitter word that is withheld, adds its little item to the impetus of that great movement which is bearing humanity onward toward a richer life and a higher character."



Potash arriving at an American factory

Plenty of Potash

AFTER five years of Potash famine there is now plenty of Potash to be had at prices that will permit it to be used at a good profit.

When Potash in mixed fertilizers was sold at five dollars per unit, everybody exclaimed that the price was "prohibitive." This was a state of mind. As a matter of fact, when the records of long continued experiments, east, south, and west, were carefully gone over it was found that there were plenty of cases where the crop increase from the use of Potash on corn, wheat, oats, cotton, tobacco, potatoes, vegetables and fruit returned over five dollars per unit, even valuing the crops at prices current before 1914.

Now prices of Potash are less than one-half of these "prohibitive prices," and prices of farm products are still high enough to make the purchase of the five to ten per cent Potash fertilizers a very profitable investment when yields alone are considered.

But this is not all. The shipping and keeping quality of many of our truck, fruit and special crops has suffered from lack of Potash.

Plant diseases have increased for the same reason.

Our best lands have been overworked to the limit and need restoration.

The fertilizer manufacturer who really has the foresight to understand that he serves his own and his customers' interest best by furnishing what his community really needs will return to the formulas that were found most profitable for his community before the Potash famine upset things. Indeed this is putting the case mildly, for provision should be made not only to restore the old high Potash formulas, but to use additional Potash to restore the drain on the soil during the past five years.

We never advised the use of Potash on soils where we had reason to believe it would not prove profitable, and never shall do so.

There is not a single crop on which Potash has not been found profitable on many types of soil.

In the readjustment period when farmers must use every means to assure success it is of utmost importance that they should not be turned aside in their efforts to buy fertilizers with a reasonable (five to ten) per cent. of Potash.

Potash Pays

and after five years of Potash famine it will pay better than ever.

It takes time to produce and ship Potash and large stocks are not carried at Potash works.

Therefore it is imperative that you notify your dealer at once what brands of fertilizer you will require and that you should not be induced to change your order on any claim that the right kind of goods cannot be secured. Stick to it and you can get what you know you want.

Rosy Cheeks & Satin Skin

Because of her rosy cheeks and satin skin a woman attracts the admiration of all men. When the

"Your Medicine is O. K."

Mrs. Chas. Rule, New Diggins, Wis., writes: "Your medicine is O. K. I think Foley's Honey and Tar is the best for coughs. I think your medicine is all you say it is. I know I would never be without it. You may use my name." Foley's Honey and Tar acts quickly, checks coughs, colds and croup, cuts the phlegm, opens air passages and allays irritation. It stops sleep-disturbing coughing at night. Children like it. Contains no opiates.—Adv.

Headache

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN suffer miserably from periodic attacks of headache, never dreaming that a permanent cure may be had. Headache nearly always results from some disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will correct these disorders and there will be no more headache. Many have been permanently cured by Chamberlain's Tablets.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

To abort a cold and prevent complications take

Calotabs

The purified and refined calomel tablets that are nauseless, safe and sure.

Medicinal virtues retained and improved. Sold only in sealed packages. Price 35c.

EXCERPTS FROM LEAFLET.

What Has Your State Done?

Thirty-one States have established bureaus of child hygiene through their departments of health.

Twenty States have a birth registration system which is considered adequate by the Census Bureau.

Seventeen States have laws requiring treatment of the eyes of new-born babies to prevent blindness.

Twenty-eight States have laws providing for some form of public nursing.

Sixteen States provide medical inspection for school children (see the Woman Citizen charts, March 13, 1920.)

The Child's New Day.

Mrs. W. J. Piggot.

There can be no mistake about the Christ estimate of child welfare. On one occasion he took a little child and, setting him in the midst of disputing disciples, gave clear and pointed pronouncement against the individual or the social order whose practices created conditions which denied his benediction to the little child.

No thinking person denies that every child is entitled to a fair chance in his life's race, but society has often permitted the creation of harsh conditions and benumbing environment to interfere with the fruition of these rights, though the claim thereto is reaffirmed every time a child is born.

Our man-ruled world has been slow to get the Christ-estimate and to sense the things which militate against the safe development of child life. Raymond Fuller, of the National Child Labor Committee, says: "The nation that accepts the leadership of little children and sets them in the midst of its counselors, that nation will lead all others in the health, happiness, intelligence, morality, and efficiency of its citizens, and in national prosperity, both material and spiritual."

The same idea is expressed by William Chenery, associate editor of The Survey, who states that "nothing illuminates more clearly the character of a State than the method it utilizes in the upbringing of its young; as the progress which every nation makes or fails to make is faithfully recorded in the history of the rearing of its children."

It is undeniable that neither church nor State has put enough scientific study on the vital question of child-saving and development. The State will spend millions through its Bureau of Animal Husbandry for the protection and scientific nurture of its live stock as contrasted with the thousands spent through the Children's Bureau for the protection and nurture of its children. "How much better is a man than a sheep?"

Legislation Against Child Labor.

Many States have created child welfare commissions and are working to bring child labor laws up to the standard which is set forth in the Federal child labor law that went into effect in April, 1919. The provisions of the bill are: no employment of children under fourteen in mills, factories, and manufacturing establishments; no employment of children under sixteen in mines and quarries; an eight-hour day and no night work for children under sixteen. The constitutionality of this law is yet to be tested, however.

The Dawn of a New Day.

As a corollary to the Federal Child Labor Law there was introduced into the last Congress an educational bill which provided for a Federal Department of Education with a Secretary of Education to sit in the President's Cabinet. The bill called for an annual appropriation of one hundred million dollars to be applied toward the equalizing of educational opportunities in the States. The States desiring such aid must take the initiative, the plan to be financed on a fifty-fifty basis. The bill was indorsed by all organizations working for child protection, including the Woman's Missionary Council. Both great parties are committed to the plan of Federal aid to education, being assisted thereto by women voters.

Though much remains to be accomplished, the American child is at last coming into his own. Society has a clear idea of the future problems which the children of this generation must solve and a new sense of the menace of the overworked, under-developed, and under-educated child—all of which quickens the determination to give them a better preparation for the adventure of the new life before them.

The Need of Prayers.

"Lord teach us to pray," means not teach us how to pray but teach us the habit of prayer. As women in the Master's work, we need to bring this petition first of all; remembering that we already have the answer fully and clearly given even before we ask.

FROM FAYETTE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As we are approaching Conferenco time and as we have not appeared in the Advocate this year, I wish to tell you about our work. We find this a delightful people. They have been extremely kind and thoughtful of tho pastor and his family.

We have threo missionary societies in our church here—the Woman's Missionary Society, the Young People's Society, and the Junior Society, all of which have done good work this year. These societies have raised over $800 this year. The Woman's Missionary Society will be able to liquidate a debt of long standing on tho parsonage; and, notwithstanding this burden, much has been done by them in the way of making the parsonage more comfortable.

Our Sunday school, with its faithful superintendent, is proud of this year's record. Beginning in debt and with an attendance of about fifteen, we have reached the mark of sixty in attendance, with no indebtedness and money in the treasury. We have not finished yet, but hope to have every member of the church a member of tho Sunday school.

In the beginning of the year we put into operation the envelope system and the co-operation of the members of the church made it possible for the treasurer to meet all obligations as they fell due. This plan has taken care of tho pastor's salary regularly every month, and it will enable him to say, "Everything in full, Bishop."

We have made quite a few improvements on our church, such as painting the interior, and installing a new system of lighting, at an expense of several hundred dollars. The men have taken on new life and are planning for greater things. Next year they expect to be a station.

We had with us, during the month of May, Brother W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, and Brother M. K. Miller, our pastor at Holly Bluff and Louise, who conducted our revival. Brother Sullivan did the preaching and Brother Miller led tho singing. The meeting was a time of great spiritual blessing and the coming of these men of God was a benediction to our church and community.

We are grateful to God for any part we might have had in the upbuilding of His church and the advancement of His kingdom in the charge in which it has been our pleasure to serve in His name. CLAUDE P. JONES, P. C.

ALL WRONG WAS HER LIVER

Before Taking Black-Draught, Missouri Lady Was Troubled With Constipation, Headache and Bad Taste in Mouth.

Grandin, Mo.—Mrs. Susa Brooks, of this place, writes. "Some time ago I was in a bad fix, with stomach and liver trouble. I did not feel good at any time. I was very constipated, and had headaches from this condition, and had a continual hurting in my stomach, and bad taste in the mouth. Could tell my liver was all wrong.

"I had known of Black-Draught, so decided to try it myself. I began with a large dose or doses, gradually getting to smaller doses. It regulated my bowels, relieved me of the hurting in my stomach, cleansed off my liver and made me feel like a new person."

If you get up in the morning feeling as tired as you did when you went to bed—achy, coated tongue, bad taste in mouth, sallow complexion—then your liver has not done its full duty, and your system has absorbed the poisons which your liver should have taken away.

An occasional dose of Thedford's Black-Draught will help this important organ to function properly.

SOMETHING THAT BEATS A FOOTBALL GAME.

By J. W. Cline.

Just a word about the opening. It is fine. The largest crash we have ever had, and no other word will express it. We have students almost literally hanging out by tho legs. We rented a big house outside and have that full. Our classes are bursting open.

Last fall (whole term) we admitted here, not counting Law Department at Shanghai, 369—of these 128 were in college and others in Middle School. Now we have actually in class 455, of whom 171 are in college classes. The highest enrollment we have ever allowed ourselves to take (last spring term) was 410.

This is the first time we have ever registered women; we have now two taking courses—Mary Cline and a Chinese teacher in Laura Haygood Normal.

Counting the Law School, our college enrollment will go just about 200.

The opening term of 1911 we had enrolled 22 in all college classes; and in all grades, college and preparatory, 159. Then we had in Senior Class of the college two; now we have in Senior Class of Arts and Science (do not know just now how many are in the Senior Class of Law) twenty-seven.

We have a fine class of Student Volunteers, numbering 16 so far. I meet these once a week in class. Most of them are in the college and I think in two years more we shall have perhaps ten of them in the Theological Department. I am making this one of the special features of my work this year.

The Language School (for teaching Chinese to the foreigners) opens in a couple of days. There will be some twenty students.

One interesting thing about the ministerial candidates is that several of them are of other denominations. One is being supported specially by a Presbyterian body, sent here purposely, and another is of the same faith and membership. We turn them back to their churches. The first ordained Chinese missionary sent to Yunnan by the Union Movement of Chinese churches is one of our graduates and is ordained in the Church of England. I advised him to stay in his own church and he is a most loyal member of our alumni. Recently he sent two young men here to enter school, relatives of the governor of that province.

The religious activities are starting out well this fall. We had a fine opening service last Sunday, when one of our former students preached to over 600 students, boys and girls. That is our regular church-attending student body now. Our church is getting too small already. You ought to see it.

We are all very busy; scarcely time to write. It beats a football game.

Soochow University, Soochow, China.

FACING THE NEW CONGREGATION.

Whatever our gifts, in speech, in memorizing, in argument, whatever the flattery or applause we receive because of them—whatever achievements people may think are due to us and forget the part of Christ and Calvary, let not us, ourselves, be so forgetful. Our glory should be in the Cross, its redeeming and saving present power. Said the great apostle, he who could write the XIII of Corinthians or the Epistle to the Hebrews, or the argument of Romans of Galatians, or matter in argument as well as beauty: "And I, brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, proclaiming to you tho testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. And my speech and my preaching were not in persuasive words of wisdom but in demonstration of the spirit and of power; that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men but in the power of God."

God grant that this may be the uppermost, the all-controlling thought as any amongst us faces a new congregation in any new pastorate, ayo, in all our pastorates this new conference year. Let us glory in tho Cross. Let us make that our message.—Central Christian Advocate.

He who simply trusts the Savior, he who faithfully performs every known duty, he who keeps a clear account with conscience, is always ready to enter heaven. As Ruskin says: "The only place where a man can be nobly thoughtless is on his deathbed. There ought to be no thinking left to be done there."—Selected.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Side by side with a great enrichment through the Centenary, and through a large apprehension of world unity, there is a corresponding sense of poverty, and while we rejoice at our gain we mourn over our lack. We are profoundly conscious of lack. All Christians bewail the dearth of conversions, and we are often painfully conscious of the languishing missionary spirit; and we wonder about there being everywhere a double sense of powerful paralysis. Where is the lack? This is such a large question that one brief article cannot attempt a discussion; nevertheless a few broad statements can be made.

"Pray ye," is the A, B, C, of our Christian living—and the majority of us are not praying. This does not mean that there is not a great deal of prayer on the very highest plane, for many women have learned the secret and are channels of blessings; but they are in the minority. The greater number of us do not pray in reality. We think of prayer as a duty to be done, an obligation rather than a privilege. Fosdick says, "There are some who still think of prayer in terms of childish supplication to a divine Santa Claus." Thus we may confuse childishness for childlikeness.

Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." That was His order of life and it is also His order for prayer. Prayer must begin with God's interests and follow with individual needs. I wonder if we do not often pray for all our own needs and close with a sentence or two for the coming of the kingdom? Christ in His wonderful pattern for prayer taught us that our first business in prayer is to seek with God His victory in the world. "Thy kingdom come, and Thy will be done," teaches us the importance of the purpose of God for the world; and too we must take the whole world into our praying if we are to pray aright.

The teachings of Jesus are full of instructions about prayer, and a study of the whole field will result in blessed helpfulness, but two main lines of responsibility seem now to stand out for special mention. "Enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut the door, pray to the Father." A special place, a special time, a special method. In quietness and loneliness each one should pray. If the whirl of a busy life has crowded this prayer time out of our lives, all else may be in vain.

Then—"If two of you shall agree * * * they shall ask * * * for where two or three are gathered together in my name * * * there am I." This provides for fellowship in prayer. Thus we have the idea of the practice of prayer personally and the practice of prayer collectively both necessary and important.

It is the duty of the vice president of each auxiliary to promote the prayer life of the women of the auxiliary. It is the one definite thing that the Council commissioned her to do. She should organize prayer circles, suggest books on prayer for reading, take pledges for morning watch, and for family prayer circles. She should present the "Prayer Reminder" which appears from month to month in the Council Bulletin. She should arrange for definite prayer in keeping with the topic of study in the program, and in short should have charge of this department of work, stimulating the practice of prayer in every possible way. Than this, there is no more important work in our whole program. This is the need, this is the lack and this is the hope of the coming of His kingdom whose name we adore.

C. L. FANT,
Vice President.

GREAT ADDRESSES BY DR. STEEL.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me space in the Advocate to speak a word about Dr. S. A. Steel's work in Laurel, First Church. He came to us for the fourth Sunday in October and continued through the fifth Sunday. He brought a great blessing to our church and community. Every morning at 10 o'clock, Dr. Steel brought us a message on the work of the Holy Spirit, and at night a lecture on one of the great prophets of the old Testament. All of his discourses were both edifying and instructive—a feast to the soul and to the intellect. I have never listened to quite so great a course as Dr. Steel brought to us during that week. I do not know anything that would have meant quite so much to my church, the community and myself as the work of this great man of God. No preacher will make a mistake to have him in his church for a week, and I think that no preacher could do his church a better service than to have Dr. Steel.

With best wishes,

L. L. ROBERTS.

Hyomei

THE BREATH of the FOREST

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to Inland Australia, where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment,—Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating cold in the head, spasmodic croup, clergyman's sore throat, hay fever and all forms of bronchial catarrh. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

Sold on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. Complete outfit $1.00; extra bottle inhalant 75c. At druggists or by mail, if your druggist cannot supply it.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A CAROL IN A CAGE.

Not long ago, we were seated in a hotel lobby where two or three cages of canary birds were hanging. While we were thinking about the apparent cruelty of keeping the birds confined in such close quarters, several of them burst into song. Their little throats seemed almost to be bursting with the melody in their hearts as they poured forth the notes of ecstasy. We learned a lesson—the lesson that "stone walls do not a prison make" if the soul is free, and that happiness is by no means conditioned upon outward circumstance. If a little bird can sing its sweetest carol from a swinging cage, surely we who are linked with the Divine by the strong ties of infinite love can sing a song of praise and thanksgiving even in the face of disappointment and discouragement. "Is thy heart right with God?"—then sing in spite of all the difficulties without.

HARD TIMES FOR ENGLISH CLERGYMEN.

According to current reports, English clergymen are having a hard time making their incomes cover their expenditures. The Bishop of London, whose salary is $50,000 a year, has already given up one of his official residences, and announces that he is prepared to give up another one because he is unable to maintain them at the present high cost of living. His personal expenses are small—not more than $1000 a year—but the requirements of his position call for more than he receives. We do not know of any cleryman in this country who has difficulty in getting along on $50,000—but we know a good many who are having a hard time to make "buckle and tongue meet" on their meager stipends.

THE PREACHER'S VOICE.

The voice is not the preacher's stock in trade, but it is the medium through which he reaches the people with his message, and upon its quality and use depend largely the success with which he meets. Unfortunately, however, some preachers seem never to realize that the voice has any part in their equipment for service; consequently they yell, shriek, scream, grunt, growl, etc., etc., without rime or reason, apparently never thinking of the handicap they have imposed upon themselves by their failure to make proper use of an instrument that is perfectly adaptable to the emotion it is intended to express. A sermon may break a man's heart—but it ought not to split his eardrums.

WHAT IT IS NOT.

Christmas ought to be, and it is supposed to be, the most joyous season of the year. Commemorating as it does the supreme gift of God to man, it is a time when our thoughts ought naturally to turn to a consideration of God's goodness to us, and to a suitable expression of our gratitude to Him for His manifold mercies. Simple gifts to friends and loved ones are not out of keeping with the spirit of the day, especially those remembrances to our children that carry with them the suggestion of yearning love; and joyful gatherings of families and friends are altogether appropriate in commemoration of that joyful day in the long ago when angels announced the birth of the Christ. But to many people Christmas has come to be a season to be dreaded because of the difficulty of meeting the expectations of those who themselves give and are accustomed to receive gifts. So great is the financial burden in many cases that the banks have actually established special departments for "Christmas savings," in order that their patrons, by setting aside a little each week throughout the year, may have, when Christmas comes, the money with which to buy presents. In effect, this means that the giving of presents has reached such a stage that it is recognized as a tax on a whole year's earnings. And then, for several weeks before Christmas, little else can be thought of but Christmas shopping—a nerve-racking, soul-trying experience that takes much of the joy out of what would otherwise be a happy anticipaton. Even the daily newspapers carry prominent announcements of the number of shopping days left before Christmas, which means that the most sacred day in the Christian calendar has been thoroughly commerclalized. Christmas ought to be a day of holy joy, marked by the appropriate celebration of the supreme event in human history; instead, it is too much a day of useless and extravagant giving and of social dissipation. The Christian world is having a hard time saving its Sunday; the first thing it knows, it will have no Christmas.

AS TO JOINING THE CHURCH.

As to joining the church, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says: "In the church you will find the fellowship of sympathy and strength that you need. Man is made for comradeship with man, and the friendships that are purest and brightest are friendships formed within the church of Christ. The church cannot help you (nor can you help it) as long as you stand outside and criticize it. Join the church, and that immediately. Do not wait until you have found a church in all details perfect, for if you do, you will have to wait until the first morning after the resurrection. The principle of selection is a very simple one. Find the church in which you will most easily have communion with your Lord, the church in which your spiritual life will be strengthened most. I care not for its ecclesiastical polity, nothing for its form of worship. Neither magnificent ritual nor Puritan simplicity should attract you in itself, but the enthroned and glorified Christ; and wherever you find you can come into communion with Him in worship most easily, there settle."

THE PROFIT IN TAKING A LOSS.

Good business men sometimes conserve their own interests by taking a loss. If there were never anything to interfere with profits, success would be merely a question of opening a shop and running it long enough to accumulate a fortune. As a matter of fact, no wise man will ever assume that losses are not to be incurred. Under favorable conditions, they can be reduced to a minimum and their sum total lost sight of in legitimate profits—but they cannot be eliminated. It is probably true that a good many men are now facing a loss on account of the rapid downward trend of prices; but if they are far-sighted and fair-minded, they will spend much less time in bemoaning their fate than in adjusting themselves to a new order of things. A determined effort to maintain high prices in the face of falling costs may save a few dollars to-day— but it will lose the good will of many who will have plenty of money to spend to-morrow. Anyhow, the buyers have been on the losing side a pretty good while—and "turn about is fair play."

PROHIBITION AND REVENUES.

One of the objections urged by its opponents against prohibition was that the falling off in municpal revenues would put many cities on the verge of bankruptcy. Most cities are chronically short of funds—but we have not heard of one to date that has not managed to get along somehow since the liquor traffic was abolished. Even New Orleans seems to be faring about as well financially as it did when the saloons were flourishing. One of the most interesting results of the actual coming of prohibition is the demonstration of the inherent weakness of all the arguments against it.

AN INVOCATION.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Above the tumult and the strife,
Of issues born of civic strife,
Where lurid passions snarl and bite,
As looting wolves of gloomy night,
And sad, low voices cross the seas,
Are calling with insistent pleas,
Be thou our stay,
Oh God, we pray,
In this our day.

Too vain are we of garnered pelf;
We center thought on pampered self,
Forgetful of the immortal soul,
And fix our hearts on greed's vain goal.
To meet the cry of Nature's want,
We hurl the dart of sneer and taunt.
Teach us thy way,
Oh God, we pray,
To-day, alway.

THE MINISTRY OF THE HIDDEN LEAVEN.

By Richard Braunstein.

In these days of the spectacular and theatrical, of press agents and publicity experts, we are accustomed to big names and deeds in almost every department of human thought and action. This is true not only in the secular but also in the religious world. Nevertheless, there are men and women in every community expressing their lives in helpful ministry and constructive service without ostentation or garish display. Like leaven, they are influencing their environment and manifesting a righteousness without conspicuous endeavor.

Some of the greatest and most potent forces in the universe are silent. The sun does not ring a bell to let us know it is ripening a harvest. The moon does not trumpet the fact that it is controlling the tides. The frost can crumble a mountain as efficiently as dynamite. The planets swing in their courses with mathematical precision, and the seasons come and go without jar or friction. Here and there are individuals who are building the walls of the kingdom without sound of saw or hammer. The "Silent Thunder of Fidelity," and the "Might of Mediocrity" are the daily commentary on the words, "Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?"

Christian living is not a matter of dimension but comprehension. It is not always the doing of a big thing, but it is always the doing of a little thing well. It is doing the little thing so well that in the last analysis it means bigness in results. It is faithfulness to the next duty, fidelity to the task that lies nearest, loyalty to the so-called commonplace. It is abiding in one's place, high or low, giving an excellent reason for the faith that is in us. It is not a matter of location but of consecration.

There is nothing very big accomplished but has a small beginning. "The kingdom of heaven is like a grain of mustard seed." It often involves nothing more spectacular than the proffering of a cup of water to a thirsty soul. Savonarola in speaking of his conversion said, "A word did it." The Master broke the heart of Peter with a look. One of the greatest compliments ever given to anybody was: "Thou didst well that it was in thine heart." Jesus had great regard for the woman who "did what she could." The small store of the loaves and fishes of the lad's lunch basket when brought to the Creator of all loaves and fishes for His blessing furnished a repast for a multitude on a mountainside. Isolated pulse-beats and wayside heart-throbs often make for the redemption of communities. If the world is beautiful in its vastness, it is because, first of all, it is beautiful in its atoms. The mountains can be reduced to grains, the oceans to drops, and the oaks to acorns.

Some of the outstanding personalities of the kingdom are Paul, Luther, Wesley, Carey, Judson, and a host of others whose names and deeds enliven the record of the printed page and enrich the memory with their heroisms and sacrifices. But who can name the great host which no man can number who contributed their humble share to great reformations and decisive turning-points? We recall the names of Richard the Lion-Hearted and Peter the Hermit, who with hearts on fire spoke with tongues of flame and started that conflagration called the Crusades. But who can name the scores and scores who lost their lives in that splendid attempt to snatch the sacred sepulcher out of the hands of the infidel? We easily remember the names of Pershing, Foch, Allenby, and Petain in connection with the late war. But who is so expert that he may name the great multitude who fought in the army of the heroic ideal so that the world might be made safer for democracy?

We are familiar with the great personalities and brilliant leadership of our denominational life and ecclesiastical statemanship. Nevertheless, there are thousands of men and women who are perpetuating the plans and programs of the generals and captains in obedience to their world-vision in the local society or organization. Mr. Somebody gives half a million of dollars to foreign missions. Mrs. Somebody gives an equal amount to home missions. We do well in stressing such generosity and advertising such benevolence. We must not, however, forget Mr. and Mrs. Anybody, everywhere, who are doing their bit, which happens to be their best, for the same cause. The church needs its pathfinders and pioneers. It cannot exist without its humble followers. Our denominational sky-line may be ablaze with brilliant stars, but the heavens are not made bright alone by stars but also by the satellites. We know Peter, but let us not forget the fact that it was Andrew who brought Peter to the feet of the Master. The greatest spirit is often led to its mission by the humblest hand. Even Cicero must build a monument to the memory of the slave who had assisted him in his studies. Henry Ward Beecher late in life and at the height of his success paid tribute to a teacher of his early youth, giving her as one of the contributors to his success. When the professor who gave light and leading is forgotten the student who attended his classes is praised and paragraphed by an appreciative public. When the circuit rider has gone to his merited "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," he being dead yet speaks in the career of the now famous missionary who was his convert in the beginning of his ministry.

Many years ago a severe snow storm prevented the presence of the pastor and most of the congregation of a little chapel in Artillery Street in London. Among those present was a little boy seated in the corner of the gallery. There were whisperings and hasty consultations among the handful of those who had braved the storm, and one was chosen to be the preacher of the morning. "A poor, thin-looking man, a shoemaker, a tailor, or something of that sort." It was not much of a sermon he delivered, judging by the usual standards. But the text was worth while. It was "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." It was enough to convert the boy in the corner of the gallery, whose name was Charles Haddon Spurgeon. The preacher's name is forgotten. Who shall forget the name of Spurgeon?

The service that is done in the limelight to-day is often the result of the service that was done in the candle-light yesterday. The ministry of the foreground is often the afterglow of the ministry of the background. "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." A poor, humble woman whose name has been lost to history gave a religious tract to a man named Richard Baxter. He read it and was led to Jesus Christ. Years afterward he wrote a book called "The Call to the Unconverted." This book in turn was the means of leading many others into the kingdom of truth. Among those who read it was Philip Doddridge, who wrote a book entitled "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," which also had a powerful influence among those who read it, among them being William Wilberforce, who wrote "A Practical View of Christianity," which had a great vogue and gave an impetus to Christianity that was felt especially by Leigh Richmond, who wrote a tract under the caption, "The Dairyman's Daughter," which was translated into many languages, extending the gospel wherever it found a reader. This book found its way into Scotland and fell into the hands of a boy named Chalmers, who entered into the apostolic stride and thrilled his age with his ministry.

In the gracious economy of God nothing is lost. Not all may be given the gift to adorn cathedral walls with angel forms and the faces of Madonnas, but even the doorkeeper in the house of the Lord is on the pay-roll of the Almighty. Not all may plan campaigns and map out the intricacies of attack, but there never was any conquest without the devotion of the common soldier. No army is complete without its generals and captains. Neither is it very efficient without its hewers of wood and drawers of water.

During the recent World War one of our metropolitan newspapers kept an eager public informed as to the movements and positions of the Allied forces by means of colored buttons placed on a large map spread before the office of publication. One of our citizens, a man of poetic imagination and romantic viewpoint, regretted that the flower of the world's manhood could find no better representation than a round disc. But the rarest and most significant values in the history of human progress have always been represented by a symbol. To feel, however, that we are in a thing, playing our part in some great drama, identified with some burning cause, is worth while whether our names are flashed in electric letters across the horizon or merely marked by a counter. To be cognizant of the fact that we are making the world richer and better should be a source of satisfaction to heart and conscience. That we are one among a thousand, a unit in some great collective mass, an integral in the midst of the innumerable, should be a means for our gratification whether we are in the "public eye" or only a portion of the unseen leaven that is used of God for the establishing of the reign of His love. To be unknown may be our disappointment. To be unfelt is the world's loss.

This submerging of self, nullification of the ego, inconspicuous function and unadvertised ministry, is going on every day. It is the logic of our splendid civilization, the data of all noble biography, the subject matter for some future historian, of the energetics of the Holy Spirit employing the time and talents of a devoted disciple band. It is the romance of missionary conquest, and the explanation of sweeping reforms. It gives the purple patches to the record of human regeneration and emancipation. It inspires our art and literature and composes our epics and frames our ideals. It is the creator of the medicinal boons and tonic blessings of the hour. It is the heart of Mary Jones and John Smith used as the pathway of God to other hearts. It is the Son of God making Himself felt in the sons of men, the Man of Calvary incarnated in the man on the street. It is that which finds a glory in the commonplace, every bush a burning bush, the dusty highway a Bethel, and the "crowded ways of life" a rendezvous for God and democracy.

People passing along a dimly lighted street at night are scarcely more than moving shadows in our sight, one differing little from another as they hurry by. But out from some great window pours a brilliant light, and as the forms pass one after another within the sphere of its radiance they change and for one illuminating moment take on striking individuality. There is a great soldier, a remarkably beautiful woman, a noted statesman, a successful teacher. The brilliant light focused upon them lifts them out of the drifting mass and reveals them as they are. Thus do the supreme moments of life throw such a revealing light upon inner personality. The tramp becomes a hero in risking his life to save a little child. The giddy girl stays at her post and rings the alarm in time of flood or fire. The indifferent man next door becomes a friend indeed in time of need. The autocratic woman across the way becomes democratic in the hour of epidemic. The butcher, baker, and candlestick-maker become angels unawares and head a popular subscription list. Draymen and stevedores play Santa Claus to the children of the settlement. When the hour of crisis comes, the psychological moment arrives, humanity takes its cue and plays its part and is not found unprepared to perform the function of sterling manhood and womanhood. Or shall we say that when the hour and moment challenge, that which we see is only a manifestation of lives we thought hitherto impervious to the refinements and obligations of world brotherhood? History has proved through the ages that crises reveal character. When one was needed to carry the beam of the cross of the Christ as He traveled toward Calvary, the record says, "And they found a man."

In one of our magazines there appeared recently a story entitled "Cold New York." It was the old, old story of how youth felt the call of the great metropolis and turned its back on the monotony of the village life and home. A brilliant young woman feeling the urge of her ambition migrates to New York in quest of fame and fortune. In the give and take of office routine and the bread-and-butter struggle of the mart of trade she thinks she has found a justification of the phrase "man's inhumanity to man" and regards her fellow-beings as cold and callous to her bleeding battle and heart-weary loneliness. The death of her small invalid brother teaches her that cold New York is warm beneath the mantle of its business and industrial strife. The cloud and shadow reveal the fact that office puppets and the automata of adding machines are creatures of real flesh and blood, men and women of sympathy and understanding, brothers and sisters under the skin, with a smile under the fighting mask, and a warm hand-clasp under the iron glove. Going down into the valley of the shadow we look up and gain the right perspective of human thought and action and with the young lady of the story we reverse our verdict and say, "I never knew the world was so kind." The darkness brings out the stars. The crushed flower sends forth the sweetest perfume. The fulcrum of the cross lifts the world to a common height. Existence is not a question mark but an exclamation point. Life would be poor indeed without its Gethsemanes and Calvaries.

So the epic of redeeming love is written day by day. Its theme is the angel in the rough stone, the jewel in the mire, and the lily in the muck. It is eloquent of the fact that "in the mud and scum of things, there something always, always sings." It teaches us the great definition of democracy, as being not a form of government, or a method of electing some candidate to office, but as the fine art of having faith in one's fellow men. Jesus loved the common people uncommonly. To them He went for kingdom-builders and disciples. In wavering Peters He saw rock-like qualities and in doubting Thomases He saw stanch confessors of His Messiahship. No epic, however, can be written without its commas and semi-colons and humble periods. To change the figure, we say that the symphony of life may not be melodious without its rests and grace notes. "There is no music in a rest, but the making of music," said Ruskin. Rests and grace notes are as essential as the crashing chords struck in crescendo. In the energetics of the kingdom nothing is unimportant. A drop of water is as potent as the tides that bear our commerce. God Himself is not always in the strong wind, or the earthquake, or the fire, but in the still, small voice as often as in the mightier matters of His plan and purpose.—Zion's Herald.

REV. J. W. PRICE.

John William, son of Thomas and Elizabeth Baker Price, was born at LaGrange, Missouri, December 30, 1842, and passed to his reward from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Likens, at Somerville, Tenn., on the evening of June 22, 1920. While he was yet an infant his parents moved to Russellville, Kentucky, where he grew to manhood. He attended college at Bowling Green, securing an education far above the average for that time, and becoming fixed in habits of study which remained with him to the end.

In 1869, he was married to Miss Mary E. Valentine, who preceded him to the great beyond by some three or four years. To them were born six children, three of whom survive, Mrs. C. E. Wright, of Greenwood, Miss., Mr. Will Price, of Corinth, Miss., and Mrs. Margaret Likens, of Somerville, Tenn.

Though he was licensed to preach at the early age of twenty, his heart was set on the study and practice of medicine and he was for some six years a "beloved physician." However, there was constantly with him a vision of human needs which could only be met by the Great Physician and his loyal soul could not long content itself with merely ministering to the bodies of men. So, in the fall of 1868, he forever laid aside the practice of medicine and enrolled his name with the knights of the saddle bags, becoming a member of the Louisville Conference. Here he served Hopkinsville, Henderson, Auburn, and Bowling Green circuit. In 1879, the condition of his health was such that he sought a milder climate, coming to the North Mississippi Conference. In his new field of labor he at once took high rank, having been placed in charge of the Greenville District in his second year. He later served Water Valley, Columbus, Starkville, Greenwood, Holly Springs, the Grenada District, and other important charges, and was everywhere beloved for his genial, kindly spirit, and honored for his loyal devotion to the cause of righteousness.

His pastorates were notably evangelistic, gracious revivals attending his ministry of the Word. He was never happier than when engaged in leading souls to Christ. Only a few weeks before his death, he gave active assistance to a brother minister in a revival. His preaching was orderly, lucid, appealing. His pathos was deep and sincere, moving the hearts of those who listened. On occasions, he was genuinely eloquent. Few ministers excelled him in the knowledge and appreciation of music. He loved to sing, taught his children to sing in home and church, and always had the best choir in the town where he preached.

In the scope of his nearly four-score years there rose many a sunlit upland and stretched many a shadowy vale, but whatever the roads or the weather, his face was set forward, his eye was fixed on the goal and his heart beat with courage unflinching and optimism unfailing. His was a glad gospel, bringing peace to his own heart and joy to others. It made him cheery in the social circle and sweet and tender in his home. It fell to his lot to give battle in the contest of his State with the open saloon, and liquor men dreaded the mettle of his blade. Threats did not daunt him nor opposition discourage him. He was faithful and true.

He often spoke of the nearness of heaven. To him death did not mean a long journey and the crossing of a great river. In his own phrase, it is only "Good-bye here and howdy yonder. Life fades into immortality as twilight fades into evening, time and eternity blending as blend the river and the sea, so that none may mark the boundary where river ends and sea begins." Even as he had spoken, it came to pass and he quietly fell on sleep and woke up with God. May his mantle fall on his sons in the gospel and his benedictions abide with his children. J. R. COUNTISS.

OUR "PREACHER SHORTAGE."

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

It has been discussed and deplored. Never before within the memory of us, has there been a real, alarming shortage of preachers in Southern Methodism. There is now even here a shortage very inconvenient and perplexing, if not alarming.

In the Nashville Advocate of October 30, Dr. J. W. Boswell writes:

"The Wesleyan Christian Advocate reports Bishop Ainsworth as saying that he needs one hundred more preachers in his episcopal district than are now enrolled and sees but forty available. Another bishop says he could use seventy and not displace a single man now in service."

At the following Conferences, just held, shortages are evident as follows: Louisville, thirty more men needed; Pacific, a small Conference, sixteen; West Oklahoma, twenty-six; Northwest Texas, a small Conference, ten. At the Mississippi Conference held a year ago, nineteen charges were filled by supplies. The nineteen have grown to twenty-one, two of the regular pastors having dropped out since the Conference adjourned.

Some one may suggest that charges filled by local preachers do not indicate real shortages; but the presiding elders well know that very few local preachers, however well they may preach and however pious and faithful they may be—and there are many such—can meet well all that is required of a successful pastor—very few of them have been trained for pastoral work. It is also true that but few of our local preachers can afford to drop their business for a temporary pastorate. The farm will run to weeds, or the store will lose its customers. It is becoming increasingly difficult to find local supply men.

However inconvenient this shortage may be, it is not alarming. In our financial prosperity circuits have clamored to become stations or two-point charges—hence we have more charges. Added to this is the well-known fact that four years ago the most of the boys in training for our Conferences were called to the army. They have returned to training schools, not to the Conferences. A note in the last issue of the Nashville Advocate says:

"Reports from nearly fifty Methodist schools and colleges show that there are now in those institutions 509 candidates for the ministry and 414 missionary volunteers. The reports from some thirty schools not yet heard from will perhaps increase these figures by twenty-five to thirty per cent."

These boys will soon be knocking for admittance at the doors of our Conferences.

In the immediate present how are we to meet this shortage? I have a suggestion to make for my own, the Mississippi Conference: We have fine workers filling sundry positions other than pastorates and districts, as follows: Conference evangelists, 4; presidents of colleges and schools, 4; commissioners, secretaries, etc., 7. Total, 15.

Now, cannot we afford to recognize the growing tendency toward the old-time revival held by the pastor, his people and a brother pastor to help? Might we not do well to hasten a return to the old-time method? This would give us at once four exceedingly capable pastors. Might we not find thoroughly capable laymen for the presidents of some—maybe not all—of our schools? Might not such laymen be used as commissioners, secretaries, etc.? Might we not thus release for pastorates or districts at least seven or eight more very successful pastors and some well-tried and proved presiding elders? In some such fashion, with a few recruits, we might be able next month to reduce very smartly the number of forced supplies. This is a mere suggestion—not even a motion.

We cannot define God, but our lives can be the mirror of his life; and that is the very purpose of our being.—Exchange.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Concluded From Last Week.

Fourth Day.

Conference opened promptly at the appointed hour with Bishop McMurry in the chair. After devotional exercises, the minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

A resolution was adopted fixing the evening before the opening of each session as the time for the meeting of the Conference Historical Society, and requesting Rev. John Ritchey to preach a semi-centennial sermon on that occasion at the next Conference.

The report of the Committee on Spiritual Interests was read and adopted, as were two reports from the Committee on Temperance and Social Service.

The Rev. Mr. Mayfield and the Rev. Mr. Gordon, pastors of the Baptist and Presbyterian churches in Charleston, were introduced to the Conference. Rev. Robt. Selby, Commissioner of Emory University, thanked the brethren for their courtesies during his activities among them, and took leave of the Conference.

On recommendation of the Greenville District Conference, the credentials of Rev. D. R. Wasson were restored to him. A resolution commending the work of the Near East Relief Committee was adopted. The report of the Committee on Hospital and Orphans' Home was adopted and also that of the Committee on American Bible Society. The Examining Committees of the second and third years reported that D. R. Wasson had passed their examinations and he was advanced to the class of the fourth year. Reports were adopted from the Committee on Lay Activities and the Board of Missions.

The time having arrived for the order of the day, the Bishop called to the bar of the Conference the class to be admitted into full connection; and J. A. George, N. J. Golding, C. L. Oakes and J. F. Watson were unanimously voted into full connection after having answered the disciplinary questions propounded by the Bishop, who also made an appropriate address to the class.

Mr. Gauss made a brief talk on the work of the Anti-Saloon League, of which he is State Field Secretary. The Commission on Finance made its report, which was adopted. A resolution proposing an earlier date for the Conference sessions was debated, but was laid on the table.

The characters of Chaplains J. A. Randolph and J. M. Moose were passed and they gave brief reports of the work in the U. S. Army. On motion, the Conference resolved to meet in afternoon session at three o'clock. Announcements were made and the body adjourned with the benediction by Dr. L. E. Todd.

Afternoon Session.

Conference was called to order by Bishop McMurry and after a hymn was sung, B. S. Elliott led in prayer and the Bishop led a special prayer for the sick for whom requests had been made. The minutes were read and approved.

Rev. S. L. Pope asked the reference of G. W. McLain for the supernumerary relation. The request was not granted. He then asked that Brother McLain be located, and this was done after investigation of the case in open Conference.

The Conference roll was called and all the preachers found blameless in life and official administration. The reports showed a large ingathering with nearly twenty-five hundred net gain in membership for the year.

There was unusual rivalry in nominations for the place of holding the next Conference, Grenada, Amory, Durant and Water Valley, all inviting the body to meet in their churches. Amory secured the largest ballot and the vote was made unanimous.

The Board of Education made its report, recommending the appointment of J. H. Holder as Conference Secretary of Education. After a statement by Brother Holder, S. L. Pope offered a resolution pledging the full co-operation of the Conference with him in his leadership of the Christian Education Movement, and it was adopted by a rising vote.

The report of the Board of Finance was adopted. The report of the Commission on Finance was reconsidered and the amount apportioned for Conference Claimants was changed from $12,500 to $15,000 for the coming year. The report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance recommended legislation stopping all Sunday trains, Sunday mails, etc. The report was recommitted and was later adopted without these recommendations.

The Bishop announced the transfer of C. E. Downer, an elder, from the Mississippi Conference, and T. H. Mills, an elder, from the Louisiana Conference. The Committees on Conference Relations, Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues, District Conference Records and Evangelism made their several reports, which were duly adopted. The Statistical Secretaries reported, the Conference resolved to meet in Memorial Session Sunday at three p. m., and adjourned with the benediction by Bishop McMurry.

Memorial Session.

The Conference met in Memorial Session at the hour appointed, Rev. W. W. Woollard, by appointment of Bishop McMurry, in the chair. After worship consisting of song, Scripture lesson and prayer, the Committee on Memoirs made its report. The memoir of G. W. Gordon was read by N. G. Augustus, that of J. D. Newsom by John Ritchey, that of I. F. Holland by E. N. Broyles, that of J. W. Price by J. R. Countiss and that of T. C. Wier by J. T. McCafferty. Conference adjourned to meet at 7 p. m. for completing the business of the session.

Evening Session.

After a sermon by L. M. Lipscomb from the text "The Spirit and the bride say Come, and let him that heareth say Come, and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely," the Conference by a standing vote adopted resolutions of thanks to the citizens of Charleston for their generous entertainment and to the Commercial Appeal for reports of the Conference and to the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches for the use of their buildings. Bishop McMurry ordained the class of elders, addressed the Conference, announced the appointments and adjourned the body with the benediction.

CONCERNING THE ASBURY MEMORIAL IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

As some time must necessarily elapse before the Louisiana Conference Annual, a booklet of nearly one hundred pages, can be brought from the press, it is well to call the attention of those concerned, through the columns of the Advocate, to the following—a part of the report of the Board of Finance adopted by the Conference:

"There was presented to your Board for consideration the matter of the Asbury Memorial Fund relative to the fact that the allotment for the Louisiana Conference has not been met in full.

"Of the amount of $250 allotted to our Conference, only the amount of $18 has been paid.

"Therefore we recommend that the Conference request the presiding elders to divide the amount still due into equal amounts among the districts, save that the Houma District be excused from assuming any of this amount, and that the elders raise the same during their first round of appointments."

R. H. HARPER,
Secretary of the Louisiana Conference.

SOME OPPORTUNITIES OF THE COUNTRY SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

By M. W. Brabham.

We magnify the difficulties of the Sunday school teacher so frequently that it happens a great deal oftener than once in a while that the teacher becomes discouraged. It is wise to recognize the limitations and handicaps under which not less than 70,000 teachers in the circuits of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have to labor. This must be done if we are to get away from these difficulties in the future. But in this article we prefer to indicate some of the fine opportunities which come to the circuit Sunday school teacher—opportunities which do not seem to come so frequently to teachers who labor in city schools. The opportunities of the circuit teacher are more than theoretical. They are intensely practical. Every opportunity is an open door. Every open doos constitutes a challenge to us to enter.

1. The Opportunity of Touching Life. The large majority of the outstanding leaders of American life and thought have come from the open country. Preachers, teachers, lawyers, statesmen, merchants, and other big business and professional men and women have come from farms of the United States. This has been especially true in the South. The fact that sixty-five per cent of the population of the South continues to live in tho country, as contrasted with a smaller percentage in other sections of the nation, presents one of the open doors for the teacher in the rural Sunday school.

Whether these boys and girls go into the towns and cities to influence and direct affairs there, or whether they remain on the farms, the fact is that they will influence the life of this nation in a larger measure than other groups. What shall this influence be? Shall it be a constructive, upbuilding, Christian influence? Or shall it be an ignorant, careless, sin-loving, pleasure-seeking, and commercialized influence? Outside of the home and public school there is no set of people who will have an opportunity equal to that of the Sunday school teachers.

"The Sunday-school lesson of today is the code of morals of to-morrow." This is a tremendously significant statement and one which makes for a new value in the work we have set out to do.

2. The Opportunity of Leading Life. Not only will the circuit teacher be able to touch life, but the country boy and girl are open to leadership of people with ideas, perhaps more so than others who are being touched in so many different ways by many influences. The leadership of the country must come largely from the country. The Sunday school teacher who lives and has lived in the surroundings of God's out-of-doors has a speaking acquaintance with birds, flowers and other growing things and is in a positon to lead life far better than the one who has dealt more largely with machinery, mechanics, and other inanimate things. Life touches life. The living teacher is one whose life is in touch with life.

3. The Opportunity to Prepare Life. Haste is not one of the virtues of most people in tho country. Neither is it one of the curses. Fortunately the circuit Sunday school teacher has the great chance to touch the lives of boys and girls who are taking time to mature. There is no greater challenge than the call to take time to prepare. The boy or girl who hastens to become "grown up" will also hasten to become old. Happy is the community which possesses Sunday school teachers who can prevail on the growing life to "make haste slowly." The young trees which spring to maturity within a few years are not the trees which stand the storms; neither are they the trees from which the timbers are taken for the construction of great houses and vessels built for the years.

The example of the thirty years of preparation in the life of Jesus is a challenge for youth to take time. The country boy and girl more frequently do this than those of the town and cities. Not only do they and must they take time to prepare, but they must be led to take time to listen. They should listen when out in the woods, listen when in the fields, listen when in the home, listen when in the school, listen when in the church—listen, and then out of the fullness of knowledge, the fullness of spirit, the fullness of matured thought and inspiration, act and speak and lead and continue to grow.

4. The Opportunity to Do Better Than Others. The circuit Sunday school teacher has another open door of opportunity. This is in developing a new generation who will be able to do better than their fathers have done. When a teacher has done his best, there is only one better thing to do. That is to prepare some one else to do better than his own best. The good qualities of a teacher include the passing on to others of ideals which may have been unrealized in his own life for lack of opportunity, yet which may be realized in the oncoming life which he has aided by giving new chances for growth and self development.

5. The Opportunity of the Unreached Millions. That there are in the country sections of the South more than two million white boys and girls of school age who are not found as members of any Sunday school of any denomination is an opportunity for enlarged effort on the part of the teacher who really believes that what he is teaching is important and vital. The circuit teacher will not overlook the handicaps of bad roads, infrequent gatherings, and a frequent indifference to the things of the church so often found in the country as well as the town. But he will not let this deter him from regarding this task as an opportunity equal to that of any field anywhere.

6. The Opportunity of Leading Pupils to Christ. It is not our purpose to declare that the boy or girl in the country is more easily led to accept Jesus Christ as the Master of all life than boys and girls of other places. However, there are many voices supplementing that of the earnest teacher in the country which are either unheard or heard with difficulty in other surroundings.

When the teacher walks with the individual pupil along some country road, or through the quiet of the woods, and begins to talk definitely of the claims of Christ on the life, the voice of the bird, the whisper of the trees, the flowering of the plants, would seem to speak for the teacher and to tell of the presence of God in ways which would make it easier for the teacher to plead and for the pupil to accept. The circuit Sunday school teacher has a thousand tongues instead of one, and all of them speak of the same eternal truth and love of God and his Son Jesus Christ.

TELL ME WHERE YOU WORSHIP GOD ON SUNDAY AND I WILL TELL YOU THE KIND OF A CHRISTIAN YOU ARE.

By Charles H. Whelan.

You can worship God in your home Sundays—But you don't.

You can worship in the woods and in the fields—But you don't.

You can worship God on the lakes and on the rivers—But you don't

You can worship God on the road in the auto or in the buggy—But you don't.

You can worship God in a different church each Sunday morning—But you don't.

You can worship God in your lodge and neglect the church—But you don't.

You can worship God by sending the kids to Sunday school and staying at home—But you don't.

You can worship God by going to church and taking the kids with you—But you don't.—Exchange.

We are laborers together with God.—1 Cor. 3:9.
Because I spent the strength Thou gavest me
In struggle which Thou never didst ordain,
And have but dregs of life to offer Thee—
O Lord, I do repent.

FOR THE YOUNG PREACHER'S EYE.

By Rev. Marcus L. Gray.

If the eye of the more mature preacher should happen to catch these lines, he should remember that this article is not written especially for him. The young preacher who is just now forming his pulpit and other habits is the man that I have especially in mind, and none other.

Habits hang to young preachers as well as to physicians and lawyers. It is possible that some habits are matters of indifference, but the young preacher can form some habits very early in his ministerial life which may detract somewhat seriously from his effectiveness and his general acceptability with the churches which he serves. The easiest way to stop a bad pulpit habit is to nip it in the bud, and never allow the habit to get a good start. I now mention a few pulpit habits which should be avoided from your first entry into the pulpit to preach your first sermon.

The matter of using notes too largely is a pulpit habit which should be guarded carefully in the very beginning of your ministry. Some young preachers are so distrustful of themselves that they write out the sermon in full and then proceed to read it to the congregation. I am free to admit that a sermon thoroughly well written, and then well read, is better than a scattering shotgun sermon. A few carefully prepared notes do not go amiss for the young preacher, but the people who listen soon discover if their young pastor is tied hand and foot to his little book before him. Whenever they make that discovery a feeling of disappointment sets in. I once knew a young preacher who made up his mind that before he ever became a preacher he would attend the debates at the country school house, and form his speaking habits there. He resolved on this one thing, that if be did not speak more than ten words be would speak them without notes. Thus in one winter's time he formed the habit of speaking right out from his mouth; no crutches and no hobbles. So he formed the habit of extemporaneous speaking before he took out his license to preach. The masses of the people like to see a young preacher plunge into his subject and preach. This day of a troubled world is going to demand more of such bold preaching.

The mispronunciation of words is another small bad habit for a young preacher to take into the pulpit. The English language is pretty well patented and copyrighted, and Webster generally knows what he is talking about even if he does change the subject quite frequently. English words are entitled to correct pronunciation and Bible names and words should be enunciated properly. Does one say that this is too small a matter? No, it is not too small for the young preacher to bear in mind. Schools are now everywhere and dictionaries are in almost all homes. Eighth grade pupils and high school scholars are called down by their teachers for mispronunciations. The backwoods are no more and general education is abroad in the land. As a young preacher you have been called to preach the gospel and not to butcher Noah Webster. Many a family goes home from church on Sunday and looks into the dictionary. If the young preacher was right in his pronunciation his honor in that home goes up, and if wrong, it goes down.

Your facial expression as a young preacher is a matter of some importance. The young preacher's face may help him in the pulpit very much or it may detract very substantially from the effect of his sermon. A young preacher's face set habitually up to the ceiling of the church may be edifying to the wasps which have made their domicile up there, but such a face does not inspire the congregation. If the young preacher's face is rigidly and continuously set looking down to the floor immediately in front of him, the church mouse may get the benefit of the sermon, but the congregation will miss much of it. Sometimes a young preacher will set his face to his right and hold it to that side of the church till his sermon is done. Or it may be just the other way—to the left. I knew a young preacher once who had formed the habit while preaching his sermon of so drawing the muscles of his face that it made the white of his eyes show very prominently. At nearly regular intervals the white in his eyes would show up like full moons. In listening to him you would lose the thread of his thought every time those full moons appeared in his eyes. His facial expression detracted very largely from his pulpit work.

A young preacher is supposed to have hands, at least two of them. Having those two hands is no problem at all as compared with handling them properly. Even the speculative Plato among the Greeks could not have figured out a reasonable speculative guess as to what a young preacher will do with his hands, one right and the other left. I have seen the right arm shoot straight up in an instant as if it had been shot out of a gun, and possibly I was the young man that did it. I have seen the left arm take the same perpendicular fit, and all this was designed to edify the saints in waiting. The clenched fist, two clenched fists, clenched almost tight enough to snap the cords, also add interesting variety in placing emphasis on important passages of the sermon. The passage may be the poetic portraiture of the innocent dove—no matter, the clenched fist will impress it more deeply on the peaceful and innocent congregation. The innocent dove is naturally suggestive of the young preacher's pugilistic fist. I would not for my right eye even suggest that a more experienced preacher ever cut such capers before an intelligent audience. But here I am confronting another important question about the young preacher's hands. What were pockets in pantaloons made for? To hold a purse and a knife? Possibly so. But a young preacher is not supposed to have any money, so the purse is ruled out. Then what about the knife? Maybe some good old saint needs carving with the knife. Down goes the young preacher's left hand into his left pocket for the knife and it is not there. Then down goes his right hand into his pocket for his knife, and by that time he has repented himself about carving that dear old saint, and he leaves his hand in his pocket for the space of some five minutes. All at once his eye happens to fall on another dear old saint who needs carving more than any of his sheep and he jams both hands down into his pockets, down as far as he can jam them. Then he thinks of what a mess it would make in his church to carve that old saint up to the king's taste, and so he comes back again without the knife. Possibly the young preacher is not thrusting his hands into his pockets for his knife at all. It may be that he aims to remind his congregation that his salary is behind, and that he cannot find any money in his purse, grab his hands into his pockets as vigorously as he may. But let that pass. Refined people prefer to have the young preacher keep his hands out of his pockets.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT OF MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

In an endeavor to carry the college to those not able to attend, Millsaps College, of Jackson, Miss., announces the organization of an extension department. such as Western and Northern higher educational institutions conduct. Dr. Stuart G. Noble has been named director.

The college has a valuable equipment of books, buildings, and a corps of splendid instructors. These they place at the disposal of the people of Mississippi, to be used in the most practical way. The ways and means of placing these advantages at their disposal have been completed. They come under four main sections: Circulating library for preachers; correspondence courses; illustrated lectures on science; aid to high school pupils and teachers by giving aid on debates and public speaking, supplying lectures and judges and referees for high school contests, both literary and athletic.

The library has been opened since last spring to the ministers of the Mississippi Conferences, and the results are said to have been most satisfactory. A card will bring a book to any preacher in the State. No obligation is imposed except that the book be returned in a month's time.

The correspondence courses are open now. The courses are to be given by the regular members of the college faculty. Students will be placed in direct communication with the professors and will be given as close supervision as circumstances permit.

Each course will be the equivalent of a three-hour college course pursued for a quarter of a college year, and will be credited as a one-year hour toward the A. B. and B. S. degrees. It will take three months from the date of registering to complete the course.

Those for whom the courses are designed are: Persons who have been forced to drop out of college and who wish to continue their college courses out of residence; school teachers, whether graduates or under-graduates, who wish to fulfill the requirements of the board of examiners for State or professional license; preachers who wish to improve themselves while in service; prospective college students who wish to secure advanced credit before entering college.

Fourteen units of work in an approved high school are required for entrance. Courses of instruction will be offered in Latin, Psychology, Education, Romance Languages, English, Greek, and Mathematics.

The illustrated lectures on science will be available to any community which will defray the expense of railroad fare and local entertainment for the lecturer.

The extension department of the college means to live up to its motto, "Let us help you grow while you serve."

OBJECTIVES OF THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

Briefly stated, the objectives of the Christian Education Movement are:

1. To develop in the mind of the church an adequate conception of the place of Christian Education in the life of the church, of the nation, and of the world.

2. To promote the cause of religious education by bringing about a closer and more effective cooperation between our institutions of learning and the Sunday school, and by establishing strong departments of religious education in our colleges and universities.

3. To lead at least 5,000 young men and women to pledge themselves to devote their lives to the ministry, to missions, or to some other form of Christian life service, and to seek a Christian education as a preparation for effective life service.

4. To raise for our schools, colleges, and universities at least $33,000,000, the minimum sum necessary to enable them to send out the constantly increasing stream of educated Christian leaders required to carry forward the Christian work of the world, and to secure $1,000,000 to aid worthy students who are looking to some form of Christian service in their efforts to obtain an education.

5. To deepen the moral and spiritual life of our people and to promote the spirit of Christian liberality in all the efforts put forth to realize these objectives.

A MORNING LOOK GODWARD.

My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.—Psalm 5:3.

Happy is the man whose windows face the sunrise. The view which greets our opening eyes gives color and substance to the whole day. The wise man selects beforehand the point from which each morning be will look out upon life. "I will direct my prayer." "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. Hy help cometh from the Lord which made heaven and earth." This is the prearranged vision, expected and rejoiced in every morning. This is the upward look that exalts the heart's vision all day long.—Selected.

ON TO GRANDPA'S.

Mother had been talking for several weeks of going to grandpa's for Thanksgiving, and now at last, with the trunks packed and at the station, and with Helen and Gertrude and Baby Weldon by her side in a tiny room on the through express, they were on their way.

Helen and Gertrude had often ridden on the cars before, but then they had simply sat in straight-backed seats and ridden for a little distance; but here they had a beautiful stateroom all to themselves, and because there was Baby Weldon papa had arranged to have a berth made up all the time so that mamma could lay him down whenever he wanted to sleep.

At first Helen and Gertrude watched the cows that lazily looked at the train as it went by, or scampered away across the fields when the whistle of the engine startled them. But soon they both grew hungry and tired. Then mother said, "Let us have a little party."

In a few minutes she had a little table set up at one side of the stateroom, with napkins on it, and sandwiches and cake and fruit, and they had a very jolly party all by themselves.

But their eyes grew heavy at last, and after the porter had made another bed mamma tucked Helen and Gertrude safely in for the night, and the motion of the train rocked them to sleep; when they awoke it was morning.

"Is this grandpa's?" asked Helen, as the train stopped in a big city.

"Oh, no!" said mother. "We shall not get to grandpa's until seven o'clock to-night."

"Can't we make some rings and bracelets and baskets?" asked Helen.

"I forgot the beads," said mamma, "but there is something else that I didn't forget!"

Then from the big traveling bag she took a bundle of white paper and a bundle of brown crinkly paper and a box of water-color paints, a little tube of mucilage, some red and some dark-green sealing wax, some copper wire, a pair of pincers, and last of all two or three handfuls of big, fat English walnuts.

"Oh, what are we going to do?" cried both of the little girls at once.

"I think," said mamma, "that we can make a lot of little turkeys for the Thanksgiving dinner, so that every one at the table can have a whole one. I will make the first one."

First she twisted three strands of the wire together like a rope and cut off pieces just long enough for the turkey's legs. With a bit of the dark-green sealing wax, melted on the steam pipe, she fastened the legs to the under side of one of the walnuts. When the sealing wax was dry, she spread the end of the wires apart to make three toes, so that the turkey would stand up.

Then she took part of the paper and cut some of it into pieces of the right size and shape, some for tails and some for wings. With the water-color paints she drew brown stripes across the paper and then folded it up like a little fan. When she smoothed it out again, each piece was marked with brown and white just as a turkey's tail and wings are marked.

When the wings and tail were dry, mamma stuck them carefully on the sides and one end of the walnut. Then on the other end she made a neck and head of green sealing wax, with little dabs of red sealing wax for the comb and the wattles. At last they were done: the funniest little turkey the children had ever seen. It stood straight up on the table, with its head held proudly in the air, its wings outstreached, and its tail spread.

And how they worked after that to make other turkeys like it!

Not once did they ask for anything to eat or say they were tired, and when at last mamma said, "We must put everything away now, for in an hour we shall be at grandpa's," they counted, and found that they had a flock of twelve turkeys. They had only just time to put them all away carefully when the train stopped, and a tall man with a white beard came into the little room and kissed mamma, and said, as he stretched out his hands to the two little girls, "Come to your grandpa, you youngsters!"

The next day, at dinner, there was a proud little turkey at every plate, besides the big one, which did not look so proud, in the center of the table; and grandpa said that was the first time he had ever known any one to raise turkeys on a railway train.—Frank E. Graeff, in The Youth's Companion.

"POOR MAN, HE HASN'T ANY FEATHERS!"

It was a beautiful day, just before Thanksgiving. Father tucked all the children into the car and ran them into the country to the farmhouse, where mother wanted to get a turkey for the Thanksgiving dinner.

The farm-yard was filled with every kind of feathered creature. While mother was talking to the farmer about the turkey, daddy told the children of all the things that feathered creatures give to man.

"Your little soft pillow," he said to Wa-wa, who clung tightly to his hand as a flock of geese went hissing by, "is filled with little soft feathers from geese like these. So don't be afraid of them. They've been mighty good to you.'

"And women steal their feathers to stick in their hats," said Dan.

Father laughed.

"Do you know, my son," he said, "that men wore feathers in their bonnets long before women ever thought of it? And wear 'em to-day, in every country, in their military dress? And use them in arrows, and"—

A big gray goose waddled by, hissing.

"We've used his feathers," said father, "for writing our songs and poems and beautiful stories. They used to be the only pens we had."

"Hsss-ss-sss-hssss'" The gray goose called, then slowly he raised his black-and-gray wings, twisted his long neck, and, with his bill, touched the outer feathers of his left wing.

"That's a wise old fellow if he is a goose," said father, laughing. "He's showing you the five feathers that make the best pens."

"Don't we use the right wing-feathers?" asked Dan.

"Yes, oh, yes. But the curve of the left wing is better than the right for pens. For many centuries quills were our best instrument for writing. We used millions of them every year. And artists' finest brushes are made of hair from great big camels, held in the quill of a little goose."

The goose folded his wings close to his side, stood in front of the children, opened his mouth and hissed again. Then, turning, he waddled away, his funny little tail wagging from side to side, impudently.

Father burst out laughing.

"Do you know," said he, "I think that old gray goose is saying, with his tail, 'Poor man, he hasn't any feathers!'"—Louise H. Guyol, in Our Dumb Animals.

MY PURPOSE.

"To be sincere. To look life in the eyes
With calm, undrooping gaze. Always to mean
The high and truthful thing. Never to screen
Behind the unmeant word, the sharp surprise
Of cunning, never to tell the little lies
Of look or thought. Always to choose between
The true and small, the true and large, serene
And high, above Life's cheap dishonesties."

Editorial

THE MISSISSPPI CONFERENCE.

The one hundred and seventh session of the Mississippi Annual Conference is now in progress in the beautiful and progressive city of Brookhaven, Miss. Unlike the Louisiana and the North Mississippi Conferences, the Mississippi Conference is heing entertained in a community which has previously had this responsibility and privflege. While it is assured that Brookhaven will maintain the high standard set in former years in taking care of this large assemhly, it is not likely that she can surpass the royal hospitality of De Ridder and Charleston. All three Conferences are to be congratulated upon their good fortune in meeting in such enterprising and hospitable towns. Rev. W. H. Lewis, the efficient pastor at Brookhaven, assisted by a capable committee of arrangements, has spared no effort to meet every requirement of the perfect host.

The church in which the Conference is meeting is beautiful in appearance and thoroughly modern in its arrangement and equipment. Being a comparatively new building, it stands as a monument to the progressive ideas and far-seeing wisdom of its promoters in providing a church that is a credit to the community in which it stands, and an honor to the generous people who made its erection possihle. It is especially well adapted to the holding of a meeting where committee rooms and other conveniences are desirahle.

Just a short distance from the church is Whitworth College, one of the best known and most successful institutions for the education of girls in the connection. Under the presidency of Dr. I. W. Cooper, after an honorable history under previous administrations, it has reached a degree of prosperity and usefulness that makes it really the outstanding feature of the town. Brookhaven without Whitworth College would lack much of its attractiveness as a place of residence, beautiful as it is for situation and charming in the character of its citizenship.

Bishop W. F. McMurry, who has already impressed himself deeply upon the church in Louisiana and Mississippi by his vigorous leadership and forceful administration of church affairs, is presiding over the Conference. This is a guarantee that business will be transacted promptly, but without undue haste, and that the interests of the church will have the benefit of the judgment of one who has proved himself an executive of unusual ability.

We are sure our readers will remember to pray for the blessings of God upon this annual meeting of one of the historic Conferences of Methodism.

A FINE RECORD.

On last Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers completed his fifteenth year as publisher and business manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. If we had known this interesting fact in time, we should have made mention of it in the paper the date of which signalized the event; but Brother Chalmers, with his usual modesty, refrained from mentioning it until the paper was in the mails. Even now, we are going contrary to his expressed wish in calling attention to the fact, but we are exercising the editorial prerogative to pay well-deserved tribute to a good man and faithful servant of the church.

Publishing the Advocate has been much more than a husiness enterprise with Brother Chalmers. He has given to his work all the diligence and all the painstaking care that men usually devote to their peculiarly personal affairs, with the hope of suhstantial personal gain; hut he has done much more than that. Himself a life-long Methodist and an active official for many years in one of the leading Methodist churches of the city, his spirit of church loyalty and pride has made him jealous of the Advocate as an official exponent of Methodism, and he has worked literally day and night to bring it to as high a standard of excellence as possihle with the resources at his command. When sacrifices have had to be made—and the times have heen many—he has made them readily and uncomplainingly, always suffering personal loss and emharrassment rather than allowing the Advocate to face disaster. More than once he has thrown his private resources into the breach to stem the tide of maturing obligations that threatened ruin. This he has done, not hecause of any obligation arising out of his contract with the Puhlishing Committee, hut hecause of his intense interest in the welfare of an official organ of the church.

Brother Chalmers is to-day thoroughly devoted to the task of making the Advocate all that it ought to be as a denominational religious newspaper. Only those who have had to face the perplexing problems of newspaper production in these difficult times can fully understand the burdens he has been carrying for many months, and that are still resting heavily upon him; but all of us can realize that it has taken the finest kind of business management to maintain the publication at its usual high standard of mechanical excellence. His work has been especially trying during the past few weeks on account of ill health and a severe surgical operation. His friends have felt that he should have allowed himself a little more time for recuperation than he has been willing to take; but he has not been away from the office a day more than his physical condition required. It will be a source of gratification to all our readers to know that he is regaining his strength, with the prospect that within a few months he will be completely restored to health.

The Advocate has had many warm friends and strong supporters in the past, and to-day it is enshrined in the hearts of thousands of its readers; but it has never had a more faithful and devoted friend than its present efficient business manager, Chas. O. Chalmers.

It is fitting in this connection that we should make mention, also, of Henry Leon, the colored "handy man" of the office, who came to the Advocate at the same time as Brother Chalmers, and who has been a faithful employee ever since. He is expert in so many of the things that make up the routine of the mechanical department that we cannot undertake to enumerate his accomplishments. We do say this, however: for faithfulness, efficiency, and manly uprightness, we place Henry Leon in the first rank of those who do the world's work day in and day out, year after year. He fills an important place in the Advocate's working force.

NEW BOOK BY DR. JNO. A. RICE.

The friends of Dr. John A. Rice will be glad to know that his book "The Old Testament in the Life of To-day" is just out. It is published by the MacMillan Company and is gotten up in their best form. A competent critic says of the book: "The average church-goer and Bible student needs a more vital approach to the seeming upheaval to his heliefs involved in revising his old familiar points of view. Dr. Rice is a guide who makes this difficult road a fascinating one.

"Not with texts and verses, but with men and movements, leadership and great messages, does he spend his time. He traces the growth of the material in the Old Testament from the life of the Hehrew people. He transfers the great issues from their ancient setting to meet the needs of these stirring times.

"Thus the results of modern scholarship in history and theology are made available for laymen. They will see that the Bible student can accept their discoveries and yet keep all that is essential in vital Christian doctrine."

A SAD DEATH.

Just before going to press, we received the following telegram from Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., dated November 29: "Mrs. Seaman Mayo died this morning. She was the daughter of Rev. A. W. Turner. She was presdent of our Woman's Society, teacher in our Sunday school, member of the choir—a truly Christian woman." The Advocate joins in the sorrow of those who mourn the passing of this nohle woman, and extends to the friends and loved ones the deepest sympathy.

Rev. W. H. Lane has closed his fourth year as pastor of Rankin Street Church, Jackson, Miss., with marked success. The fourth quarterly conference asked for his return for the fifth year.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson and his family are now at home in the parsonage of Parker Memorial Church. Brother Atkinson was elected vice president of the Methodist Preachers' Meeting last week.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, writing from Farmerville, La., says: "We have heen very graciously received this year. We have been severely 'pounded,' but have fully recovered and are very comfortable."

The thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Baraca Class Movement was celebrated in Syracuse, N. Y., on October 20. The membership of the Baraca classes throughout the world has reached the million mark.

We regret to learn that Mrs. M. A. Ballard, of Kosciusko, Miss., who had been a suhscriber to the Advocate for many years, passed away on Novemher 8. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing friends and loved ones.

Brother T. A. Ledyard, of Shubuta, Miss., who has been a subscriber to the Advocate for more than fifty years, is visiting in Muskogee, Okla., where he will probably remain until February 1. By his instructions, the Advocate will visit with him.

Rev. W. M. Young, of Leland, Miss., spent several days this week in New Orleans, visiting his daughter, Mrs. Edward Alvis. It was the editor's privilege to be a guest at a dinner in his honor on Tuesday evening.

Rev. F. R. Power, formerly pastor of our Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La., has been transferred since the session of the Louisiana Conference to the Little Rock Conference and stationed at Wilmar, one of the leading appointments of the Monticello District.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., was one of the speakers at the meeting of the Vicksburg Rotary Club on Wednesday of last wek. The Vicksburg Evening Post printed his address in full, at the same time giving it high commendation.

Rev. J. R. Murff, writing from Vardaman, Miss., says: "The good people here gave us a cordial reception. They surely know how to make a preacher and his family feel at home. Good things to eat have been coming in ever since we arrived, besides a good supply found in the pantry when we came."

Dr. L. C. Branscomb, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, was appointed as secretary of the Christian Education Movement at the recent session of the North Alabama Conference. In order that he may have time for this important work, an associates editor, understood to be Rev. M. E. Lazenby, will assist him with his editorial duties.

A note from Rev. A. Inman Townsley, recently transferred from the Louisiana Conference to the West Texas Conference and stationed at Alamo Heights, San Antonio, informs us that he has been given a most cordial reception in his new field of labor. He is delighted with the situation as he finds it in San Antonio. His address is 301 Broadway, that city.

The Teacher-Training Class of Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, of which Miss Eddie Bently is leader, gave a most enjoyable entertainment in the auditorium of the Sunday school building on Thanksgiving evening. The program was interesting in itself, and it was most excellently rendered. An audience that crowded the house was present to enjoy it.

On Thanksgiving morning, Mr. R. R. Liddell, representing the board of stewards of our church at Fayette, Miss., presented Rev. Claude P. Jones, the pastor, with a gift of $100 as an expression of their appreciation of his efficient services. This fortunate pastor is in high favor with his people, the officials and members of his church being always thoughtful of him and his family.

The Centenary forces of the Louisiana Conference held a meeting in New Orleans on Tuesday of this week, the presiding elders and several other visitors being present, in addition to representatives from the Nashville office. Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, the efficient Conference Secretary, is working diligently to bring the collections up to the forty per cent standard for the first two years.

The presiding elder, Rev. C. A. Battle, has arranged to have a "Lake Charles District Leaders' Meeting" in connection with the district stewards' meeting at Lake Charles on December 7. A fine program has been prepared and the topics for discussion are such as will help the work throughout the year. This kind of meeting appeals to us as being a fine thing for the beginning of a Conference year.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Anguilla charge, Mississippi Conference adopted highly commendatory resolutions concerning Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, who has served the charge for the past four years. Splendid progress has been made during that time. The membership has increased from about 100 to more than 300, the pastor's salary has been advanced from $700 to $2000, and two churches have been built—a neat frame structure at Delta City and a fine brick church at Anguilla, this being the twelfth church Brother Ferguson has built during his ministry in the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. J. Early Gray has just completed his second year as pastor of our church at Magnolia, Miss. During that time there has been a net increase in the membership of seventy-five, the church has been repainted, a modern heating system has been installed, a beautiful pipe organ has been purchased, and considerable repairs have been made on the parsonage. The Sunday school is well organized, the Woman's Missionary Society is one of the best in the Conference, and the Centenary pledges have been more than paid for the first and second years. As a whole, the church is in a prosperous condition.

At the fourth quarterly conference of Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., strong resolutions of appreciation, signed by every member of the conference present, were adopted in connection with the completion of a four-year term as presiding elder of the Brookhaven District by Rev. J. T. Leggett. Attention is called to the fact that the Brookhaven District has reached a high state of development during his administration, and affectionate tribute is paid to him for his earnest, brotherly, and devoted leadership in the affairs of the district. The conference, which was largely attended, went on record as deeply regretting the severance of the relationship which has bound them so closely during these years. These resolutions are a well-deserved tribute to a man who has given himself unsparingly to his church.

Mr. Henry H. Ahrens has been appointed Secular Press man for the Christian Education Movement. He has recently taken up his duties in the Nashville office. Mr. Ahrens is a local preacher in our church. He is doubly interested in the Movement, having received his education in Methodist schools, Centenary College, at Jackson, La., and Vanderbilt University. He was a member of the Louisiana Conference for eight years, serving as a pastor during that time. For twenty-three years he was connected with the New Orleans Times-Picayune. He was also reporter for the Associated Press. During his service for the Associated Press he reported eight General Conferences of our church. He has seen each of our living bishops elected and ordained, with the single exception of Bishop Hendrix. Mr. Ahrens left the Picayune on the nomination of Bishop W. A. Candler to the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., where he worked on the Religious Census. From this government work Mr. Ahrens went into the Publicity Department of the Centenary. After that work was completed, he was engaged in important war work. The Commission is indeed fortunate in securing his services.

THE ART OF DOING WITHOUT.

By Ralph W. Wyrick.

The art of doing without is like art in anything. The master artist so paints that the painting is far beyond being a painting. It comes to be the real thing it would memorialize or represent. You want to smell that rose on the canvas. You want to run up to that house on the wall. You want to speak to that person in the frame. Likewise with the art of doing without. The art of doing without is not to seem to do without.

Christ, Himself, advised against seeming to do without, against the show of self-denial, especially in religious matters. For, He said, "when you fast, be not as the hypocrites, of sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may be seen of men to fast" (Mt. 6:16-18). And this taken-for-granted act of religion He includes in His several devices against persons doing their "righteousness before men, to be seen of them," rather than quitely and secretly, unto the invisible God.

But in the Christian religion how would you proceed to acquire the art of doing without? You do not proceed. The Pharisees proceeded, and their proceedings were in the main circus proceedings. So, we do not want to proceed. As to the art of doing without, one has to be "to the manner born." That, you of course know, is not a singular and exclusive privilege, like one's being born a poet. It comes from being "born from above," "being born anew," as Christ urged on Nicodemus.

And when one is born anew, "of the Spirit," his doing without, his fasting, will not be an end in itself. Christ did not make a virture of His own lifelong fasting, His sacrificing, His eternal riches. Without seeming to do without (He was full of grace and truth), He did without. Though He was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that we, through His poverty, might become rich. And yet, who thought of His being poor, of not having where to lay His head?

Hence, the virture to which Christian doing without looks, on which lifelong fasting fixes its purpose, is the joy and heaven it contributes to others. All the while, without knowing it at all, the Christian's countenance is transfigured. And all the while he, like Christ, has anointed his head with the oil of others' own gladness he has made possible, and washes his face in the joys to which he has led them.—Central Christian Advocate.

Quench thou the fires of hate and strife,
The wasting fever of the heart;
From perils guard our feeble life,
And to our souls Thy peace impart.

—J. H. Newman, Tr. from Latin.

We require a certain firmness in all circumstances of life, even the happiest, and perhaps contradictions come in order to prove and exercise this; and, if we can only determine so to use them, the very effort brings back tranquility to the soul, which always enjoys having exercised its strength in conformity to duty.—Humboldt.

On Sunday morning, March 28, 1920, the gentle spirit of MRS. B. F. CURTIS, mother of Rev. V. C. Curtis, broke loose from its moorings—from earthly ties and souls akin in love—and drifted to eternity's shore. Mrs. Curtis was a woman of rare endowments of mind and heart. She was loved by all who knew her. Her Lord loved her and chastened her till naught but pure gold was left to reflect the Master's image. Possessed of a cheerful nature, she brought comfort wherever she went. But her light shone brightest around her own heartstone. No service was too lowly nor sacrifice too great for those she loved best, and her family in turn held her in the highest affection. She loved and was loyal to her church and her pastors. Like the Shunammite woman of old, the prophet's chamber was always ready for his coming in her home. Her body was tenderly laid to rest in the Noxapater cemetery, March 29. The large concourse of friends, and numerous floral offerings bore eloquent testimony to the love and sympathy of those who knew her. The funeral services were conducted in her church by Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., assisted by her pastor, Rev. J. A. Goad. We lift our eyes to the hills whence cometh our help "and wait for the morning time when the parted veil shall lift; when the films fall from our weary sight—our eyes meet clear in the morning light, as the night clouds eastward drift. So believing in the guardianship of God, we leave her secure in his eternal love."

MRS. J. G. GUNN.

Noxapater, Miss.

ELONA JOSEPHENE ROUSE ELLIS, wife of John C. Ellis, was born February 11, 1861, and died November 16, 1920. She and Brother Ellis were married December 22, 1886, and to this union were born four children, who, with the father, still survive her. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from her early girlhood; a devoted wife and a loving mother. She had great faith in the religion of Jesus Christ, which gave her much comfort during her last days of illness. She met death in the strength of the faith that sustained her while she lived; a more beautiful testimony one never heard than that given by her before she went away. After years of continuous suffering and afflictions, she came to the end of the way conscious till the very last moment and in perfect peace. The "sting of death" left no trace of defeat, for the smile left upon her face seemed to exclaim with the Apostle Paul, "O grave, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?" Mother is gone but not forgotten; her influence will live on in the hearts of loved ones and friends. We will say good-bye for a little while, but we will join her on the other shore in the "sweet by and by." Her pastor,

WILLIAM E. BAILEY was born in Whitwell, Tenn., October 1, 1874. On Sunday morning, August 22, 1920, the death angel claimed his spirit. On December 20, 1905, he was married to Lillian L. Smith, in Little Rock, Ark. In 1907 Brother and Sister Bailey moved to Vicksburg. The following year he joined the Washington Street Methodist Church, now known as Gibson Memorial. Both he and his wife took an active part in the work of the church. His great delight was to provide for the comfort and well-being of his family. He was devoted to the only daughter, Jewel, now left fatherless at the age of nine years. He was an enthusiastic member of the Masonic Lodge and at the time of his death was Junior Warden of the W. H. Stevens Lodge, Vicksburg, Miss. He had also taken the Royal Arch degree. Brother Bailey was a victim of influenza. A month before his death, he told a friend that he would not mind dying if it were not for his family. He told his wife and sister, while in the hospital, that he was willing to die if it was God's will, and that he felt as if he had been with his father and mother who died several years ago. A large number of friends attended his funeral in Vicksburg, and deeply sympathize with the stricken family. May the Author of eternal comfort ever abide with the dear loved ones.

THE "GOOD NEWS" TO PEOPLE AT OUR DOORS.

Our sphere of influence is ever widening, and there are increasing calls on our time and ministry. It looks as though we are to work this borderland more systematically and intensively than heretofore; at least, this seems to be the program of our leaders. This is a good sign. In spite of the fact that the Romanists are making a special effort these days to arrest our progress in the Mexican Republic, their plans are doomed to failure. The people generally receive our literature and read it very readily, and listen attentively when we present the Gospel. In the past few months many thousands of contract laborers, going to the cotton fields of Arizona, California and other points, have passed through this port of entry. We have been able to place literature in their hands. Many of them very likely never saw before a Bible, Gospel, or religious tract. The whole thing is something entirely new to them and becomes the "Gospel" or the "Good News" indeed.

OUR EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, contains 88 educational institutions, exclusive of those missionary institutions which are operated by the Board of Missions at home or on the foreign field. In that number there are two universities, thirty colleges, twenty-two junior colleges, twenty-six academies, and eight missionary and training schools. Our church owns a larger number of schools than either the Congregational, the Northern Baptist, the Northern Presbyterian, or the Methodist Episcopal Churches. However, we have put less money into educational institutions than has any one of the churches named.—Bulletin.

There is something finer than to do right against inclination, and that is to have an inclination to do right. There is something nobler than reluctant obedience, and that is joyful obedience. The rank of virtue is not measured by its disagreeableness, but by its sweetness to the heart that loves it. The real test of character is joy; for what you rejoice in, that you love; and what you love, that you are like.—Henry van Dyke.

Cuts and Bruises,

burns, stings, sores, boils and the numerous other mishaps amount to little. If left alone, however, and if aided by the careless touch of a dirty hand, an ugly sore will result and frequently blood polson. It is dangerous. Don't trifle. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately. It will instantly soothe the wound, cleanse the sore, kill the germs and put it on a steady road to recovery. Keep it on your shelf for every emergency. Its constant use for a hundred years has made it a family word in every household. Ask your druggist. If he can't supply you send his name to W. F. Binghamton, N. Y.—"I was in a very nervous condition for over a year, my mind was gloomy, could see no light on anything, could not work and could not have anyone to see me. Doctor's medicine did not help me and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended. I took it and am now well. I recommend it to all afflicted with nervous prostration."—Mrs. J. CHRISTMAN, 193 Oak Street, Binghamton, New York.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from nervous prostration, displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion and dizziness. LAYMEN AS LEADERS IN THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

It is significant that in the selection of men for leadership in the Christian Education Movement of our church two laymen were chosen for this important task—the Director General, Dr. John H. Reynolds, of Arkansas, and the Associate Director General, Dr. Henry N. Snyder, of South Carolina.

Dr. Reynolds has been for some years president of Hendrix College at Conway, Ark., and his work there, as well as in other fields of service, has given him high rank among the educators of our country. In addition, he has given efficient service to church and State in many worthy enterprises, and his influenee as a Christian layman has counted for much in the civic and church life of his State.

Dr. Henry N. Snyder is the worthy successor of the great Dr. Carlisle, who left the impress of his Christian character upon thousands of young men in South Carolina and other sections of our Southland. He has held Wofford College to the high ideals of a Christian educational institution, and has done there a work worth while.

In the leadership of the Christian Education Movement are two great laymen. In all of their plans and work they are giving first place to the spiritual objectives of this Movement. It is to the credit of Southern Methodism that out of the ranks of the laity, the church can call men who are able to lead in any great Christian enterprise.

FROM AMORY, MISS.

As the Conferenco year is fast drawing to a close, it is thought well to give a brief summary of the year's work, for it has, indeed, been a glad and prosperous year.

Our pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot, who has been with us the past two years, has used every effort to build up firmly each institution of the church, and to draw men and women nearer to Christ. Under his ministry the church has made advancement along all lines of work, Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society, Epworth League, Maids' and Matrons' Society, and prayer meeting. In fact, he takes great interest in the work of the church generally. The membership has increased and the attendance at services increases each Sunday.

Brother Smoot is a strong, forceful preacher. He boldly and fearlessly, but with love, warns people of tho danger of living sinful lives. In almost every sermon he denounces sin, unveils its consequences and holds up the cross of Christ as the only means of salvation. He preaches and plans and leads the work capably and with great devotion.

Brother Smoot is ably assisted by his cultured, consecrated wife. Both are gifted singers and render valuable assistance to the music. Through their untiring energy in the advancement of the kingdom of Christ, they have endeared themselves to the members, who are hoping they will be with us two years more.

Mr. J. M. May is our faithful and wide-awake Sunday school superintendent. Under his management the Sunday school is growing in numbers and efficiency. All departments of the school are doing well and are in care of efficient teachers. Mrs. Edna Lovy, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, has been faithful in the performance of her duty. Under her skillful leadership the society has made great progress. With Mrs. W. V. Stanley as president of the Maids' and Matrons' Society, the members have worked beautifully and harmoniously and with gratifying results.

Mr. L. E. Price is to be congratulated on the splendid progress made by the Epworth League. Each department, Senior, Intermediate, and Junior, is well organized with a capable leader at the head of each. In all there are 223 members of the Epworth League. The mid-week prayer meetings, which are always so helpful and inspiring, are well attended.

We deem ourselves fortunate in having such a presiding elder as Rev. T. H. Dorsey, who, when he comes our way, always gives us a splendid sermon.

During the month of July, Evangelist J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, held a fifteen days' meeting. The music was in charge of that consecrated Christian gentleman, Mr. Stalnaker, who is a splendid choir leader. He was assisted by Brother Smoot, who is not only a choir leader of note, but also a gifted soloist. Very early in the year our pastor began making careful and prayerful arrangements for the meeting. During the fifteen days' meeting the tent was filled to overflowing at the evening services and the morning services were well attended.

Brother Hanes is truly a man of God, a preacher of unusual ability, and his earnest presentation of the gospel inspired his listeners. He is uncompromising with every form of vice and sin. The meeting for men and boys the second Sunday afternoon was one of great spiritual power. The sweetest service of all, the love feast, was held the last Sunday afternoon of the meeting. Nearly every one present responded to the call to lead a higher life. As a result of the meeting there were many conversions, and almost the entire membership received a great spiritual uplift.

Services at the Methodist church of our city were of unusual interest on Sunday, October 17. It was our good

Of all the men I met at Hot Springs last winter, Mr. Brabham impressed me as being most thorough with his work.

Thanking you all for your help in this great work, and praying God's richest blessings to rest on each of you, I am, Sincerely,

50 Hens Laid 3 Eggs A Day. Now Lay 36

Tells How to Make Idle Hens Produce Money in Winter.

"When I began using Don Sung in December, I was getting only 2 or 3 eggs a day from 50 hens. Within three weeks I was getting from 3 to 4 dozen a day. I shall never be without Don Sung."—Jermima Hedges, R. F. D. 1, Shumway, Ill.

This 3 or 4 dozen eggs a day, at winter prices, was almost clear profit. Your hens should do as well. It's no trouble to use Don Sung and you risk nothing by trying it under this offer.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg-laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

WATCH NIGHT PROGRAM.

An attractive program embodying entertainment, discussion of the church's plans for the coming year, a lunch and social hour, in addition to the usual features of a Watch Night service, has been prepared by Dr. P. L. Cobb of the Department of Spiritual Resources. Each pastor and chairman of Minuto Men will be mailed one of these programs, and any other person interested upon request. It is hoped that this program will be used not only in the city churches but in the remotest country church.—Bulletin.

One of the most important discoveries of all time in medical science was made recently, if later tests verify the claims. The greater credence is to be given to the announcement because it comes from the United States public health service in the Hawaiian Islands. It is said that already forty-eight cases of leprosy have been cured by the new specific. The patients were under treatment for about a year and paroled as cured. Though nearly eight months have elapsed, no trace of the disease has reappeared. Credit for the discovery is given to Prof. L. E. Dean, head of the chemical department of the College of Hawaii.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

Not Bad Cook But Bad Stomach.

The word dyspepsia means literally bad cook, but it will not be fair for many people to lay the blame on the cook if they begin the Christmas Dinner with little appetite and end it with distress or nausea. It may not be fair for any to do that—let us hope so for the sake of the cook!

The disease, dyspepsia, indicates a bad stomach, that is a weak stomach, rather than a bad cook, and for a weak stomach we know of nothing else equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. This digestive and tonic medicine helps the stomach, gives it vigor and tone, relieves dyspepsia, creates an appetite, and makes eating the pleasure it should be.

The biliousness and constipation found in so many cases of dyspepsia are gently and thoroughly relieved by Hood's Pills, which act in perfect harmony with Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Adv.

SPIRITUAL REVIVAL NEEDED.

By Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir.

There is no doubt about somethlng belng wrong in this old world. We all know about it; and we know that we should do something as soon as possible to make what is wrong right. We are groping around; but we seem to be coming to the point where we realize what the old world needs is a genuine revlval of true Holy Ghost religion such as came to the disciples on the day of Pentecost. We all believe in a revlval of business and industry, and work to that end. It is not a revival of interest in religion that we need; we have that, for we can repeat religious creeds until we are blue in the face, but we are no better. What we do really need to-day is a real revival of Holy Ghost spirituality in our churches that will make men and women let the things of the world alone, and to love God more. The kind of revivai that we actually need is one that is born not of man, but of God.

A revivai to meet the needs of the world must come from God in answer to prayers that go up. The Wesleys prayed, and England had a read spiritual revlval; John Knox prayed with such faith that Scotland was awakened; and prayer is the only remedy that will give to our own church and country a spiritual revival. What is needed today is a faith in the good old Book (the Bible) as the Word of God, and in Jesus Christ our Savior. If there were such faith, a spiritual revlval would come and men would begin to say, "What must we do to be saved from our sins?" Just such a revival would affect not only our official boards, but the entire membership of the church would be so revlved that there would be increase in the attendance, enlarged usefulness, and inspiration to a more active service for the Master, so that there would be no question about whether we ought to have a prayer meetlng or not. It would come off itself.

The time has come when the church of Jesus Christ must go to God on her knees for herself before it can help a lost world to see the beauty there is in the religion of Jesus Christ. Prayerless churches are powerless, and cannot stand before the unsaved world and tell them that Jesus "saves from all sin," because action speaks louder than words. The real thing that we need is Pentecost, which has been called the commencement of the new era of organized Christianity, which was a spiritual revival of religion. It was promised by Jesus Christ if the disciples would meet the conditions by prayer. They did, and the promised power came that moved Jerusalem with a spiritual awakening. Come, Holy Ghost, into all our churches and prepare us to take this world for our Christ!

Amite, La.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR AT AMITE, LA.

Since Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir commenced his pastorate here less than twelve months ago, the Methodist church has developed and grown marvelously in all of its departments. Especially is this true with regard to prayer meetings, in numbers present each and every Wednesday night and in the interest and zeal manifested. The members of the congregation take turns about in leading these meetings, and, as Brother Hoffpauir puts it, it is their meeting, and all he does is to sit with them and lend them the moral support of his presence. When Brother Hoffpauir held his first prayer meeting here, there were twelve present, which at that time was considered pretty fair. Last June it was decided to have the meetings conducted by members of the church, instead of by the pastor as heretofore. From then on, the attendance began to increase by leaps and bounds, as many as sixty-five filling the pews at one time. On Wednesday evening, November 24, about 200 were in their places. This meeting was led by Mrs. J. R. Johnson, the choir leader, and she and several others intoned beautiful prayers full of the Thanksgiving spirit and palpitating with gratitude and love to the Giver of all good. At these meetings, which partake more of the character of a family reunion than aught else, are heard many expressions of gratitude and appreciation for special blessings conferred by the Heavenly Father. Judged from the large number of men that now attend services regularly, the efforts of our worthy pastor have not been in vain. Never before have the men of this community evinced such a deep interest in the church.

Up to about last May the membership and attendance of the Epworth League apparently were on the wane. Now the League is more than one hundred strong, and of late all of their regular meetings on Sunday evenings have been overflow meetings. The League is divided into two sides, each with its captain. At the end of each month, the side with the smaller number of points to its credit must entertain the winning side. The first losing side entertained last Friday, November 19, the pastor and fifty-five Leaguers participating, and all reported a most enjoyable time. The membership of the League is almost equally divided between the younger male and female members of the church and their friends.

Another branch of the church which shows a remarkable improvement is the choir, under the able and efficient leadership of Mrs. J. R. Johnson. While Brother Hoffpauir was away at Conference, something like three hundred persons from Amite and vicinity thronged the spacious auditorium of the church and Sunday school to enjoy the sacred concert given them by the choir; and when leaving at the close, on every hand could be heard expressions of appreciation and praise of the choir and the numbers rendered, the verdict of many being that Brother Hoffpauir had a choir in his church that was equal to the best, not even excepting the paid choirs of New Orleans.

The finances of the church, according to the report made by the board of stewards, are in excellent condition. While the budget for the current year had of necessity to be increased quite a bit, yet it will be met, the stewards announce, without any increase in assessment, this because of the increase in membership during the past year.

The good people here, both members of the church and otherwise, evidenced their appreciation of the return of Brother Hoffpauir by filling his church when he preached his first sermon on the Sunday following his return from Conference. It used to be the usual and accepted thing to find more pews filled by women than by men; but these days in the Methodist church at Amite this condition of affairs has very nearly been reversed. Brother Hoffpauir's preaching must appeal strongly to the men of the community, for he certainly draws them to his services and to the church.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

IN YE OLDEN TIME

Hoop skirts were worn by those who first asked the druggist for, and insisted on having, the genuine Golden Medical Discovery put up by Dr. Pierce over fifty years ago. Dress has changed very much since then! But Dr. Pierce's medicines contain the same dependable ingredients. They are standard today just as they were fifty years ago.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the stomach and blood cannot be surpassed by any remedy today.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak women has never been equalled for the distressing complaints incident to womanhood. What others say:

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"Ever since I can remember Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family. When I was quite a young girl I had my first experience with them. I was in a miserable condition when my father gave me the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' but my cough soon stopped, and it completely restored my health. Then, when it came to the critical time of life I depended entirely on the 'Favorite Prescription and it brought me thru in remarkably good health."—MRS. CARRIE DIODENS, 1818 Baronne St.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

fortune to have with us at the morning service Mr. Ledyard, of Tupelo, superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school at that place, also teacher of a Bible class. After an inspiring address to the Men's Bible Class, Mr. Ledyard delivered a short address to the entire Sunday school. It would be well if every Sunday school worker could have as much enthusiasm and inspiration as has this gifted leader.

The evening hour was given over to the Epworth League. A well-arranged program was delightfully rendered by the young people. It consisted of Bible lessons, music by the orchestra, composed of members of the League, piano solos, vocal solos, readings and talks along lines of Epworth League work. Subjects discussed by the young people were inspiring and uplifting, showing they have entered heartily into the work. An earnest effort was made to broaden and deepen the interest. A vigorous membership campaign has been inaugurated, the members realizing that "not failure but low aim is crime"; so the mark for membership has been placed high. The entire church is grateful for this host of workers. The success of the organization is largely due to the tireless work and loyalty of its president, Mr. L. E. Price, under whose leadership it has reached its present efficient state.

As a result of the year's work, 136 members have been added to the church, but the work has been a success not only in accessions to the church but in spiritual uplift. Money raised for all purposes during the year amounts to over $12,000, not including the Centenary collection.

At the last quarterly conference, resolutions were passed expressing appreciation of Brother Smoot's faithful ministry the past year, and asking for his return another year.

A MEMBER.

A LIFE FOR GOD IN CUBA.

By Rev. R. J. Parker.

"I would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause; which doeth great things and unsearchable; marvelous things without number."—Job 5:8, 9.

In 1895 a Spaniard, Prospero Guerra by name, arrived in Cuba to try his fortune in that distant part of proud old Spain's possessions. In December, the following year, it became his lot to enter the Spanish army in Santiago de Cuba, under the orders of General Lincres. As he fought for Spanish supremacy against Cuban independence, he little realized that the King of kings was planning another campaign to establish His Kingdom in Cuba, and was planning to give this Spanish soldier an important place in His forces.

When the Americans blockaded Santiago and disembarked in Dalquiri, it became the duty of this soldier to enter the trenches in San Juan Hill and assist his fellow-countrymen in the attempt to stop the advance of Uncle Sam's boys. In this impossible task, one after another, four companions were killed at his side, and he has always felt that God spared him for a special purpose. He has since spoken of the joy he then felt at seeing the Americans fall, because he really did not know them, and felt at the time that this was the fate they deserved.

After the surrender of the Spaniards, having served his allotted time in the army, he was discharged and entered the police force, where he served one year under the American intervention. Afterward he worked at his trade as carpenter. In 1905, accepting the invitation of Rev. W. G. Fletcher, he entered the Methodist Church for the first time. He became deeply interested, and attended every one of the revival services then being held. During this series of meetings he was converted and became a candidate for church membership. Three months later, having given proof of the change in his heart and his purpose to live for Christ, he was received by baptism into the church. Here he labored according to his ability for the cause in Cuba.

Later he was recommended to the American Bible Society for a place as colporteur and was accepted at once. He says that as he went about selling Bibles he felt the unmistakable call to preach. But, having had an exceedingly limited education, it seemed impossible for him ever to enter the ministry. In his perplexity he went to his pastor, Rev. H. W. Baker, who encouraged him to trust in the Lord, who was able to help him to study, and to open the way into the work of the church.

Putting the matter into the Master's hands, Guerra went forward, "doing the next thing," and spending the spare moments in study. As a lay worker he was untiring in his efforts to do anything and everything that would help the cause of Christ.

In 1910 he was licensed to preach, and the following year, after having overcome many obstacles, he was appointed pastor of the Jamaica Circuit in the Eastern Province. There he labored earnestly and acceptably for three years.

In 1912 he was ordained deacon, and two years later, having finished the course of study, he was ordained elder. He served two years in Baracca, and for the past five years he has been pastor of our church in Holguin.

Prospero Guerra has done splendid work as a pastor, and has carried sunshine into many homes. Many souls have found "the Sun of Righteousness" through his ministry. All of the brethren, both native and American, greatly appreciate the spirit and work of this one-time enemy, but now true brother in the faith and fellow-laborer in the glorious Gospel of our common Lord.

As we think of what he was before he found the Savior, and his present life, we can but exclaim, What hath God wrought! The transformation in his life, his ability to overcome the obstacles and get up the course of study, his humble, patient, gentle spirit in the work, and, above all, his success in the greatest work in the world—that of bringing men to Christ—are all added proofs of God's power to save to the uttermost.

If no other work had been done, the work in this life and the blessing that has flowed out from this life to others, would justify all that we as a church have given in men and means to carry the glad tidings of salvation to the Province of Santiago de Cuba.

WORK IN MEXICO.

Feeling sure that you are interested in God's work in all lands, I am prompted to send you a little report from Mexico, our next-door neighbor, which field I've just left for a short visit in the States. It sometimes seems that "distance lends enchantment," even in mission work, for oftentimes we are more thoroughly informed and, therefore, more interested in the far-away fields than in those near by. Or, if we are informed at all, it is so apt to be about the motes in our neighbor's national eye, viewed at that close range that always makes international disturbances seem to be immanent.

After more than ten years in the Lord's work in Mexico, devoting most of the time to evangelistic work, going in and out among the people in the cities, in the villages, and out-of-the-way places, living among them and studying at first hand their customs and character, I am prepared to say with all candor that the Mexican is greatly misjudged by the average American here in the homeland. As a race, they are very intelligent and very versatile, and that lack of stability and dependableness for which they are so much blamed is overcome in those who open their hearts to the influence of the Gospel which is the power of God unto the making of a new creature in Christ, regardless of race characteristics. Their racial pride is, in a paradoxical way, coupled with a spirit of humility and gentleness that makes them an all-round lovable people, especially when this nature has come under the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit.

In the homes of the middle and high classes, there is a dignified respect, the one for the other, among the members of the family, a profound reverence for parents, and well-disciplined children.

In the political world is seen the results of the lack of Gospel influence in the scarcity of men of Christian character and unselfish aims to fill seats of governmental responsibility. In these latter years, there are some places of great importance being filled by Christian men, and their superiority is recognized, although the prejudice and envy of Catholic opponents have caused more than one to lose his position. Until the Gospel has more fully permeated this country, we can have no assurance that the presidents will not, too often, "go in by the ballot and go out by the bullet." For generation after generation, these people have been dominated by the Catholic clergy, they have been denied the Bible and the knowledge of personal, saving faith in the atoning merits of our Lord Jesus Christ. Indeed, our Christ has a small place in their cult of Mariology and innumerable saints. Of course, this ritual of idolatry can have no power to the satisfying of the soul or the transforming of the life, and so it is possible for one to be a devotee in his religion and a demon in his life. In all of the eight denominations now working in Mexico, there is at present a great forward movement made possible by the improved conditions of the country, and this is calling forth renewed opposition from the clergy and all kinds of indulgences are being offered to those who in whatever way will put forth some effort to impede the forward march of Protestantism. Just recently a Mexico City daily announced in bold headlines a convention of bishops and archbishops for the purpose of discussing the most effective methods of combating "Protestantismo and Bolshevismo." But where God is really working none can hinder, and in many of the missions there is a revival spirit, and a readiness to accept the Gospel as has not been seen heretofore.

The growth in the educational work is also notable. The many mission schools that were closed during the revolution have been reopened and are being filled to the limit of their capacity. They are only handicapped by lack of native teachers, because there were few being prepared during the war period, when the schools were closed. Some of these students come from the villages and out-of-the-way places where no work has been done except in the visits of those of us who are engaged in evangelistic work, and, returning to their homes during vacations, make faithful witnesses and propagandists of the Gospel even while preparing for Christian service, to which many of them have dedicated their lives.

From any and every viewpoint, this seems to be the day of opportunity for the Gospel in Mexico, and we covet for this work Spirit-filled young men and young women willing to "spend and be spent" in a service that, in the fullest sense, is worth while. There are numbers of places with a group of Christians making a Macedonian call for some one to continue to teach them in the things of God. Another great need which we should remember in our intercession for this dear and needy people is a more spiritual native ministry that, by life and teaching, can lead the members into the deep things of God. In general, there seems a hunger on the part of Mexican Christians for the baptism of the Holy Spirit. It is noticeable in public prayer that a petition for a Pentecostal blessing is always accompanied by hearty "Amens." It seems, too, that our Lord is answering these pleadings, for there is an increasing number of Spirit-baptized workers who recognize a call to spread the teaching of scriptural holiness over Mexico. Let us continue to pray, that many others may be thrust out into this great harvest field, for the hope of Mexico, morally, religiously and politically, is in the regenerating and sanctifying power of a full Gospel.

NOTES CONCERNING THE SUMMER REVIVAL CAMPAIGN IN THE RURAL DISTRICTS.

We are confident that we have had by far the best revival year in the history of Southern Methodism. The Pre-Easter Campaign, which was largely in cities and towns, brought into the church more than one hundred thousand members. Actual figures in my office show sixty-nine thousand, but no Conference reported in full and thirteen Annual Conferences made no report to my office on the Pre-Easter Campaign. Hence, we are quite sure that one hundred thousand is a very conservative estimate.

Such reports as we shall be able to get from the ninety-day summer campaign for the rural districts are now in. At best, these reports are fragmentary.

The main thing is to have the revival. We are vastly more concerned about getting people saved than about making a spectacular report. Your Evangelistic Committee have never shown an obsession for members with which to make a display. Our consuming passion has been for the conversion of the largest possible number of lost men and women. Still the pressure on us to report numbers is persistent. We have an evangelistic director in each Conference. He is supposed, among other things, to gather the data and report to my office. I can not report numbers except as he reports them to me. He can not report numbers except as the presiding elders report to him. The presiding elders can not report to the campaign director except as the pastors report to them.

Some interesting reports have come in. Mr. T. S. Southgate, of the Virginia Conference, has one of the fullest reports that have reached my office. It shows that our pastors have been doing business for the King and, incidentally, shows a painstaking evangelistic director. During the Summer Campaign, the Virginia Conference received by letter, two thousand eight hundred sixty-seven; on profession of faith, six thousand two hundred ninety-three. During the summer eleven hundred fifty-five new family altars were established, three thousand four hundred ninety-five tithers enrolled, and one hundred eighty-two young people volunteered for some kind of Christian work. Counting the Pre-Easter and the Summer Campaign together, the Virginia Conference added nearly twenty thousand members, more than six thousand new tithers, about three thousand new family altars and more than three hundred volunteers for life service. Did the Virginia Conference or any other Conference ever have another year like this?

Judge Geo. W. Barcus, director in the Central Texas Conference, is another valuable layman. His report shows four thousand four hundred twenty-four added by letter and three thousand four hundred and ninety-one on profession of faith. This great Conference has done well in family altars and tithers.

Brother G. W. Pardee, director in the Little Rock Conference, makes the following report: Additions on profession of faith, two thousand four hundred thirty-two; additions by certificate, two thousand five hundred sixty; family altars, nine hundred fifty-three; new tithers, one thousand three hundred seventy-five; volunteers for life service, two hundred fifteen. The summer work in the Little Rock Conference was very effective. The Pine Bluff and Monticello districts made no reports. Brother Pardee is another one of our active laymen.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, evangelistic director of the Memphis Conference, reports one thousand seven hundred seventy-two by certificate and three thousand five hundred twenty-six on profession of faith; six hundred twenty-six new family altars; seven hundred seventy-eight new tithers, and seventy-six volunteers for life service. There is no report from the Lexington District.

Rev. H. M. North, evangelistic director of the North Carolina Conference, gives a fine report from that historic Conference. Additions by certificate, two thousand eighty-nine; on profession of faith, four thousand four hundred eighty-nine; new family altars, five hundred ninety-four; new tithers, nine hundred sixty-six; and volunteers for life service, one hundred thirty-eight.

The Illinois Conference has had some gracious revivals during the year. The evangelistic director reports five hundred seventy-five additions to the church. This is one of our smallest Conferences.

Rev. H. H. Johnson, director in the St. Louis Conference, reports two thousand one hundred sixty-five by certificate; three thousand three hundred forty-one on profession of faith. The Denver Conference has had more than five hundred additions.

Rev. H. C. Threadgill, director in the Alabama Conference, reports two thousand one hundred twenty-six by certificate; two thousand six hundred eighty-two on profession of faith; six hundred twelve new family altars; three hundred forty-three new tithers; and one hundred sixteen for life service.

Rev. B. C. Horton, director of the Kentucky Conference, reports one thousand one hundred ninety-seven by certificate; one thousand one hundred eighty on profession of faith; eight hundred new family altars; one thousand two hundred forty-two volunteers for life service.

Dr. B. B. Evans, director in East Oklahoma Conference, reports one thousand five hundred thirty-two by certificate, one thousand eight hundred twenty-three on profession of faith; more than eight hundred tithers; over three hundred new family altars; and about one hundred volunteers for life service. There is no report from the Muskogee district.

Rev. Ira Barnett, director in the Florida Conference, reports from four districts out of nine, as follows: Additions by certificate, nine hundred twenty-three; on profession of faith, seven hundred seventeen. Four districts did not report. These figures do not include the good report from the Latin district.

Rev. C. T. Curry, director in the W. Texas Conference, reports two thousand six hundred twenty by certificate; two thousand on profession of faith; seven hundred fifty new family altars; one thousand one hundred ninety-nine new tithers; and one hundred twenty-two volunteers for life service. Brother Curry, the pastors and presiding elders are doing fine work in that interesting field.

There are partial reports from some other Conferences. These are sufficient to indicate in a general way the results of the summer campaign. It seems quite likely that the summer campaign brought into the church more than one hundred thousand members. The Baltimore Conference, whose campaign is still on, will be heard from later. This is sufficient to justify the statement that this has been the most successful year in the history of our church in soul-winning. This I hope is but the beginning of a great revival that shall last many years. Already the Committee is planing to make next year a better year than the past year has been. If pastors will report fully and promptly to their elders, and the elders to the directors, and the directors to me, we can have full reports for next year.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

First Day.

The one hundred and seventh session of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the Methodist church in Brookhaven, Miss., at nine o'clock Wednesday morning, December 1, Bishop W. F. McMurry presiding. After devotional exercises, conducted by the Bishop, the annual sacramental service was held, in which the Bishop was assisted by H. W. Featherstun, J. T. Abney, W. W. Hopper, and L. A. Darsey.

The roll was called by Dr. A. F. Watkins, secretary of the previous Conference, and a large number of preachers and laymen answered to their names.

On nomination, A. F. Watkins was elected secretary, and G. S. Harmon and Claude P. Jones were elected assistant secretaries. G. P. McKeown was elected statistical secretary, and John D. Ellis and W. A. Hays were elected assistant statistical secretaries. The hours of meeting and adjourning were fixed at nine o'clock a. m., and twelve, noon. The main auditorium was fixed as the bar of the Conference.

On nomination of the presiding elders, the usual standing committees were elected. On nomination of the presiding elders, the following substitutions were made on the Board of Education: Rolfe Hunt, in place of D. C. Hull, and W. L. Linfield in place of J. A. Moore.

Various communications were referred, without reading, to the appropriate boards and committees.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, editor of the Christian Advocate; Dr. Luther E. Todd, general secretary of the Board of Finance; Dr. H. N. Snyder, president of Wofford College; Dr. R. A. Meek, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference; Dr. W. B. Ricks, of the Centenary Commission, and Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, were presented to the Conference.

On motion, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, representing the Memphis Commercial Appeal, was elected official reporter of the Conference.

The Bishop called Question 17, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" and the following presiding elders made their reports and were passed in examination of character: J. R. Jones, of the Port Gibson District; W. B. Jones, of the Hattiesburg District; J. T. Leggett, of the Brookhaven District; John A. Moore, of the Newton District; W. M. Sullivan, of the Seashore District; G. H. Thompson, of the Meridian District; J. M. Morse, of the Jackson District. Their reports showed that there has been gratifying revival interest during the year throughout the Conference.

The names of the superannuate members of the Conference were called, their characters were passed, and their names were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the same relation. When the name of Rev. Ira B. Robertson was called, he made a report which touched the entire Conference, and the brethren gathered about him to express their affectionate esteem. When the name of Rev. L. Carley was called, the secretary read a paper from him which, upon motion, was ordered spread upon the Journal of the Conference; and a copy was ordered to be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

The name of W. B. Waldrop was called, he was passed in examination of character, and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation. The name of G. S. Harmon, who has sustained the supernumerary relation during the past year, was called and he was passed in examination of character. There being no motion, he automatically returned to the effective ranks. The name of T. B. Holloman was called, and, he having died during the year, his name was referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

On motion, the educational program was made the order of the day for Thursday, beginning at ten o'clock and continuing through the morning session and sessions to be held in the afternoon and the evening.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, editor of the Christian Advocate, addressed the Conference in the interest of the General Organ. At the close of his address, a resolution expressing the appreciation of the Conference of the presence and services of Dr. Ivey was adopted.

The report of the Seashore Camp Ground Commission was read by H. M. Ellis, and referred to the Board of Education. The report of the Seashore Divinity School was read by H. M. Ellis, and ordered to record.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that W. W. Graves would preach at three o'clock in the afternoon, and that Dr. Luther E. Todd would deliver an address at seven o'clock in the evening, his address to be followed by the celebration of the anniversary of the Sunday School Board. Rev. W. H. Lewis, the local pastor, announced that the Conference was invited to attend an entertainment at Whitworth College on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock.

After other announcements concerning the work of boards and committees, the Conference adjourned with the singing of the doxology, and the benediction, pronounced by Ira B. Robertson.

Second Day—Morning Session.

The Conference was called to order at nine o'clock by Bishop McMurry. The devotional exercises were conducted by W. J. Ferguson, and consisted of singing, prayer, and a Scripture lesson from the eighth chapter of the Epistle to the Romans. The minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved, and the roll of absentees from the first day was called. Several substitutions of alternate lay delegates were made in place of principals who were absent.

On motion, the calling of the roll at future sessions was dispensed with.

A motion was adopted that when the Conference adjourn, it adjourn to meet at three o'clock in the afternoon.

A resolution, offered by C. W. Crisler, expressing the affectionate esteem of the Conference for Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo, now suffering a painful illness at his home in Charlotte, N. C., was unanimously adopted.

On motion, the Conference voted to accept the invitation to attend the recital at Whitworth College at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Dr. C. M. Bishop, president of Southwestern University; Dr. R. H. Bennett, secretary of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training; Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Mission Secretary; Dr. J. A. Baxter, of the St. Louis Conference; Rev. H. T. Carley, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; Rev. Alonzo Early, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference; Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, of the Louisiana Conference, and Rev. W. M. Young and Rev. L. W. Cain, of the North Mississippi Conference, were presented to the Conference.

The presiding elder of the Meridian District announced that during the year John D. Crymes, a local elder, had been tried, in due form, for improper tempers, words, and actions, and had been found guilty and expelled from the ministry and membership of the church, and that he had appealed his case to the Annual Conference. The Bishop stated that the appeal and the grounds thereof would be heard. The charges and the verdict were read; the appellant made a statement in his own behalf; and the question, "Will the Conference sustain the appeal?" was put. By unanimous vote, the Conference refused to sustain the appeal.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Finance was read and adopted.

On motion of M. L. Burton, the whole matter of the assessment for the Representative Church, Washington, D. C., assumed by the Conference of 1911, was referred to the Commission on Finance.

The hour for the order of the day having arrived, the educational program was taken up. After singing, and prayer by J. L. Greenway, Dr. H. N. Snyder, president of Wofford College, addressed the Conference on "The Objectives of the Christian Education Movement;" Dr. C. M. Bishop, president of Southwestern University, spoke on "The Compelling Appeal of the Educational Movement," and Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Mission Secretary, spoke on "The Educational Movement and an Enlarged Program for Missions."

Announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned with singing, and the benediction pronounced by Dr. Bishop.

Afternoon Session.

Bourne, president of Centenary College, the minutes of the morning session were read and approved, and the educational program was resumed. Addresses were delivered by Dr. R. H. Bennett, secretary of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, and Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, after which the Conference adjourned to meet at seven o'clock in the evening, the benediction being pronnounced by Dr. Bennett.

Evening Session.

The Conference convened promptly at seven o'clock, Bishop McMurry presiding. After devotional exercices, conducted by W. H. Huntley, the minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved. The concluding features of the educational program were then had.

J. L. Neill, superintendent of the Department of Missionary Education of the General Sunday School Board, gave a stereoptican lecture on the educational institutions and work of the church. A special feature of this lecture was the singing of college songs by the Lewis brothers' quartette when the pictures of Millsaps College were shown.

Bishop McMurry then addressed the Conference, laying great emphasis upon the importance of the Christian Education Movement as enterprised by the church.

The Bishop's address was followed by report No. 1 of the Board of Education, which strongly endorsed the Movement, pledged hearty co-operation in carrying it forward to success, and accepted as the quota of the Mississippi Conference the sum of $1,278,500. The report was unanimously adopted.

LOOK UP AND TRUST.

By Willie Conger Page.

What if your feet are weary and worn
By the rocks and stones on life's highway?
Or if by thorns they are bleeding and torn,
If you know that the Father guides the way?

What if your eyes are blinded and dim,
The beautiful visions far-off and obscure,
So long as He looks only to the heart within,
Not judging the outside—seeking the pure?

What if your hands are tired and weak?
They are fashioned only of clay of dust;
All is well if by faith you can to Him speak.
And heart and soul look up in love and trust.

THE SUPREME NEED OF THE HOUR.

By Wm. C. Allen.

In the years 1914-15 I was in China, Japan, Australia and New Zealand; and met with eminent statesmen, church people or missionaries in those countries. The Chinese were then neutral, but were horrified at the machinery for destruction, and the passions, associated with the Great War. They politely but frankly declared that the Western nations were not Christian. The Japanese were in the war. I was brought into contact with some of their leading politicians and financial men as well as some of their humbler folk. One thing mightily impressed me. From not one of the Japanese did I hear a single word of disrepect or depreciation of their foes. Courteous expression was always in evidence. But when Hong Kong, Australia and New Zealand were reached, all was changed. Bitterness and hate were everywhere. Evidence of an unforgiving spirit often poured from the lips of men dedicated to the service of Christ. The contrast with respect to attitude toward their enemies, between the non-Christian and Christian lands, was startling. Why?

The only reason I can assign is that when those who love Christ turn from obedience to the spirit of their Lord they are left in greater darkness than are those who have not been acquainted with His teachings.

I have recently concluded one year of travel round the world. I have met many clergymen and addressed meetings of church people in different cities. Whilst I have heard no open appeal for forgiveness on the part of these brethren, I have everywhere discovered a changed attitude towards their late enemies. The word of hatred has largely been stilled. But among men and women met with in the course of travel, in hotels or on railway trains and steamships, there have remained miserable evidences of retaliation and unforgiveness of foes. Returning army officers—not returning privates—politicians and newspapers have often—not always—combined to fan the fires of hate. International hate has been everywhere. Class hate, like an evil germ, multiplies. Many parts of the world are in an infinitely worse condition than is the British Empire or America. Our Anglo-American peoples little understand the real situation. Much of the economic stress and anguish of the present time is the legitimate fruit of pettifogging rooted and grounded in hatreds and fears. O, for the genuine forgiving spirit! Will it come? Who will bring it? We, Thy wandering children, O Father of all the families of the earth, wait for a fresh outpouring of Thy grace and love!

The Relief Committee of the American Friends (Quakers) has recently been reported as being engaged in furnishing one good meal per day to about 650,000 innocent starving children in Central Europe. This has done more to develop among the Central Powers a willingness to open economic and spiritual intercourse with their late enemies than have continued taunts or blockades and machine guns. The international value of this service based on love, can never be estimated.

Whilst evil passions have consumed Europe, and so much of the world, some warning voices have been lifted in unexpected places. I remember General Smuts, Premier of South Africa. During a conversation I had with him, he earnestly pleaded for preaching "the Gospel of love and forgiveness." Secular newspapers have reported a speech made by General Sir Ian Hamilton in the year 1913. Referring to the soldiers he is alleged to have said: "Propaganda was necessary to harden their hearts for the job. But now the war is over, we do not want any more propaganda. If you wish for peace, away with hate propaganda."

If such pacific words fall from the lips of men skilled in the art of war, should not a call to forgiveness come from men consecrated to the Gospel of Peace? If a propaganda of hate was required to deceive men, or make them willing to destroy one another, is not a propaganda of love overwhelmingly necessary if the world is to be created anew? Does not a living appeal go out to ministers and laity to forgive the past, to remember the extraordinary needs of the future, to be reconciled to one another and to God? May not this become a glorious task?

Is not human nature on our side? Is not humanity built for co-operation, service, love? Do not men primarily crave peace? Are they not at bottom sick of strife and passion? Are not many men and women in many countries longing for a deeper life close to the Love Divine? Does not bad leadership take many astray? Let us then accept the Gospel leadership which will carry us to the higher altitudes where the will of Christ is done.

We look on the frozen summits of the mountains of Switzerland where the snows of winter would never cease to gather, and from whence the refreshing streams would not flow, were it not for the melting rays of the sun. So are the icy things of the soul disintegrated by the warmth of Christ's eternal love. Even the stars in their courses seem to proclaim the serenity and compassions of God. Recently I travelled across France where for many miles blasted trees and broken cities bore silent testimony to terrible violation of the commands of Jesus. But where men had shamefully wounded, the Great Recreator had already commenced to heal. Young trees were tossing their pretty leaves in the sweet south wind. The gleaners were following an abundant harvest. God had already pardoned the desecration of His beautiful handiwork. He had again come with blessing to gracious Mother-earth who did not resist His gifts. Even so should we forgive each other and bear witness to the beauty of the things of peace.

This must be done if civilization is to continue. International and class forgiveness is a supreme need of the hour. Unto every reader of these lines in some way or other is committed the healing ministry of reconciliation. Shall we fulfill it? Dare we do so?

Switzerland, 1920.

REV. G. W. GORDON—A MEMOIR.

George Washington, son of Jonathan and Naomi Gordon, was born in Lafayette County, Mississippi, January 29, 1855, and died in Aberdeen, Mississippi, December 7, 1919. He was converted in 1870; licensed to preach in November, 1874; admitted into the North Mississippi Conference on trial in November, 1876; ordained deacon in 1877, and elder in 1879. He served the following charges: 1878, Fulton; 1879-80, Athens; 1881-82, Shannon; 1883, Kosciusko; 1884, Jonesboro; 1885, Ripley and Blue Mountain; 1886, Iuka station; 1887-88, Fulton; 1889, Greenwood and Carrollton; 1890-93, Coffeeville; 1894, Nesbit; 1895, Guntown, 1896-97, Columbus Circuit; 1898, Itta Bena and Sidon; 1899, Ethel; 1900-01, Ackerman; 1902-04, Eupora and Maben; 1905-06, Courtland; 1907, Supernumerary; 1908, Myrtle; 1909, Kosciusko; 1910, Supernumerary; 1911, Vaiden; 1912, Mantachie; 1913-14, Sherman; 1915, Sherman; 1916-19, Noxapater.

Brother Gordon was married, January 26, 1876, to Miss Callie Bowlen, of Saltillo, Miss., who died August 15, 1911. On December 27, 1911, he was married to Miss Mattie Morgan of Carroll County. Of this marriage came Sarah, his only child.

Brother Gordon possessed the fundamental elements which go to make a real preacher. He was a converted man. He knew in whom he believed. He was not only born into the Kingdom of God, but he lived in the atmosphere of an abiding experience. He was a called man. Set apart by the divine call to the ministry he gave himself to it exclusively and became a man of one Book and one Calling.

He read and knew the Scriptures. He had definite ideas as to what the Scriptures teach. He derived from the Book its great doctrines. His mind took hold upon the truth that the Revelation of God comes to men in the form of great dogmas or doctrines. He grasped these doctrines and so had clear and definite ideas of what he was to preach. And thus he understood why he was in the church to which he gave his life, and he knew that for which his church stood. He not only knew these doctrines, but he believed them profoundly. He could say with the Psalmist, "I believe, therefore have I spoken." He believed that his church had best interpreted the Word of God. He was a profoundly convinced Methodist and could ever render out of the Scriptures a ground for the hope that was in him.

He preached great fundamental things and he did so with great strength and force. He was among the last of the fast-vanishing class of preachers who, with clear insight and strong conviction, preach the great fundamental doctrines of the churches.

Another and a greater element of power in him was his personal piety. He read and thought upon the Scriptures. He was a man of prayer. He acquired, preserved and enlarged an experience of the deep things of God. With these gifts and acquirements he was, in my judgment, at the time of his end, the most representative man among us. He was most loyal to his church. He believed in and preached her creed. He went at the behest of her voice to all fields, no matter how difficult. No doubt his faithfulness hastened his death, for it is most probable that his last visit to Conference was fatal. But that was characteristic.

Few men of his ability have had less "recognition," so called, at the hands of the church. He served God without earthly honor and indepently of the praise of men. Conscientious, faithful and unrecognized men constitute the saving element in all human society. They bear the essential burdens in church and State. Verily they have their reward. God knows all. Brother Gordon was a fond, devoted and considerate husband and loving father. His home life was in keeping with the high standards of the religion he professed. He was a faithful friend, a good citizen, and a courageous, noble and sincerely honest man. He was my friend.

After serving the quadrennium on the last charge he filled, he went to Aberdeen to attend what was to be his last Conference. All unconscious of the fact that he was fatally stricken, he persisted in going to what was to him the place of duty. Before he could meet with his brethren in Conference session, he had to take the bed of sickness from which he was never to arise. A three weeks' struggle with influenza and pneumonia followed, during much of which time he passed the weary, painful hours in expression of joy and praises to God.

To his faithful wife and dear little daughter we extend our love and sympathy, and commend them to the love and blessing of the God whom the husband and father so faithfully served.

TRE BLESSEDNESS OF BEING IN WANT.

The Laodicean curse rests upon the church which is fully satisfied with itself; which says, "I have need of nothing." To be contented in the light of a religion which calls for eternal enlargement, to be complacent in the face of a world so full of need, this is a great sin. Christ seeks to keep his people fired with a holy discontent, the pursuit of perfection, and a passion for the extension of the kingdom.

This is the burden of the Savior's prayers and preaching. He saw to it that they who wrote his message to the churches should teach the doctrine of "greater things," of life abundant, of a pressing on, of "more and more."

The church is blessed that hungers and thirsts after righteousness. The secret of a great life is to know how to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want. The mark of the successful church is to do well the work in hand, with eye and heart to the larger task and the fuller day.—Christian Standard.

OFFICIAL REPORT, COMMISSION ON FINANCE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Harper: At the last session of the Louisiana Conference, held at De Ridder, the number of districts was reduced from seven to six, exclusive of the Houma District. This necessitated an entirely new apportionment of the assessments upon the districts, which, as secretary of the Commission on Finance, I was authorized and instructed to do.

Besides this, another change was made. Heretofore the assessments for Home Work and for General Work were the same, that is, $35,500 for each, but at the meeting of the Conference, the assessments for Home Work were increased to $49,092. The assessment for General Work was the same as last year, $35,500, or .4196 per cent of the whole, and for Home Work, $49,092, or .5804 per cent of the whole.

The allotment for the different home causes was as follows:

	Amount.	Ratio
Sunday Schools	$ 5,000.00	.1018
Epworth League	2,000.00	.0407
Conference Missions	11,500.00	.2343
Conference Education	11,000.00	.2241
Conference Claimants	10,000.00	.2037
Conference Minutes	750.00	.0153
Conference Treasurer, etc.	700.00	.0143
General Superannuate Endowment Fund	1,921.00	.0392
On Salary of Editor N. O. Christian Advocate	1,218.00	.0248
New Orleans Memorial Home	5,000.00	.1018
Totals	$49,092.00	100.00

The allotment, or apportionment for the several districts is as follows:

District—	Ratio	Home Work	General Work
Alexandria	.11595	$5,692.00	$4,116.00
Baton Rouge	.13965	6,856.00	4,958.00
Henma	.00870	427.00	309.00
Lake Charles	.15585	7,651.00	5,533.00
Monroe-Ruston	.19195	9,423.00	6,814.00
New Orleans	.12705	6,237.00	4,510.00
Shreveport	.26085	12,806.00	9,260.00
Totals	100.00	$49,092.00	$35,500.00

I would thank you, as Secretary of the Conference, if you would insert a copy of this letter in the Minutes as the final report of the Commission on Finance of the Louisiana Conference and oblige,

Yours cordially,

W. S. HOLMES,

Secretary, Commission on Finance.

We ought not to open the doors of our souls to God only at special times and seasons. We think wrongly of Him when we suppose Him to be responsive only to our specially religious moods. The heart of God lies about our lives as closely as the air. There is no smallest act or thought that does not echo itself in Him. And this Divine presence is intensely sympathetic. It is not the mere oversight of a judge, registering praise and blame. It is the companionship of one who rejoices in all our joy, and suffers in all our pain. There is no glad heart-beat in the world that the Almighty heart does not beat with gladness in response. There is no little child's cry of sorrow over its broken toy, that a more than mother's love does not catch.—Selected.

A DAY IN HONOLULU.

By Dr. Carlton D. Harris, Editor Baltimore Southern Methodist.

Honolulu is the capital of Hawaii, a group of eight islands of volcanic origin, lying in the semi-tropical sun of the Mid-Pacific. They were formerly known as the Sandwich islands and were discovered by Captain James Cook of the British Navy in 1778 and named by him in honor of the Earl of Sandwich, who was the First Lord of the Admirality at the time of their discovery.

Queen Liliuokalani, the last of Hawailan royalty, was deposed in 1893 as the result of a revolution because of her reactionary tendencies, and a Provisional Government established, which in turn was succeeded by the Republic of Hawaii with Hon. Sanford B. Dole as President. In the meantime Hawaiian commissioners sought an alliance with the great American Republic. Their efforts were not without success, for, by a joint resolution of Congress, adopted July 7, 1898, the Hawaiian Islands came under the sovereignty of the United States, and on June 24, 1900, Congress passed an organic act by which Hawaii became a Territory of the United States with a special form of government made necessary by the great difference between the seat of the central government and its territory.

The deposed queen will always remain a pathetic memory. She lived within a few blocks of her former palace, and at her death, Nov. 11, 1917, in her eightieth year, was accorded from the palace the most imposing funeral obsequies ever held on the island. The civil and military display was of unparalleled splendor.

Of these beautiful islands Joaquin Miller, the California poet, declared: "The Hawaiian Islands are not a group, as often misclaimed, but a string of islands—a string of pearls, if you please—a string of rare and precious pearls in tho sapphire center of the great American sea."

As we approached Oahu, (pronounced O-ah-oo), the island on which Hawaii is situated, early on Friday morning, Sept. 24, the mountains loomed up looking rather bare in the distance, but a nearer view revealed them robed in the softest of green. Our ship came to a stop some distance out of the harbor, where the indigo blue of the sea with an emerald hue near the shore and the velvety green of the mountains formed a rare and beautiful picture. Quarantine and revenue regulations had to be complied with. We were lined up in two rows on deck and a grizzled doctor in khaki walked down one line and up the other giving a quick glance at the eyes of each passenger. After he was satisfied that none of us had cholera or smallpox and the revenue men had made a careful inspection, the boat moved slowly up to the pier and in a few minutes several hundred people were in that city of myriad charms—Honolulu.

It claims 85,000 inhabitants: Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, Hawaiians, Americans, and a sprinkling of several other races. Each race has its own section of the city for living and business purposes, though there is some overlapping, but the children of all attend the same public schools with which the city is well supplied. A boy can enter the primary school and continue his studies until he graduates from the University of Hawaii. The children of people of over a dozen nationalities are poured into this melting pot and come forth bearing upon them the stamp of true Americanism, waving Old Glory and singing the Star Spangled Banner.

The Hawaiians are a stalwart race. They are characterized by being generous and pleasure-loving, with a special aptitude for music and oratory. They are usually well educated, for compulsory education has been in vogue for nearly fifty years.

They never were cannibals, as were some of the aborgines of the Sandwich group. They welcomed the New England missionaries who were sent to tho Islands a hundred years ago under the auspices of the American Board, and gladly embraced the religion of Christ which they preached. The civilizing process of the Gospel has been the most potent force in coloring the civilization of these islands.

The churches are celebrating this year the Centenary of the advent of Christianity in Hawaii. We stumbled into the Central Union Mission, a group of buildings, in a setting of palms and tropical plants. The congregation was giving a reception to the pubilc schooi teachers in a Sunday school house, at which tea-cakes and pineapple punch were being served by dainty Japanese and Portuguese maidens. Dr. Albert W. Palmer, the pastor, told us that he had 1200 members and was preparing to rebuild at a cost of $250,000. Religion seems to have retained its pristine vigor at this crossroads of the East and the West, as there are many churches and a splendid Young Men's Christian Association building.

The chief exports from the islands are sugar, fruits and nuts; this year the exportation of sugar was valued at $76,554,181 and that of fruits and nuts at $19,803,951.

The automobile ride through the city of Honolulu and to other points of interest on the island was an introduction to a tropical paradise. Near the heart of the city is the regal palace of the former king and queen of Hawaii. It is a colonial looking structure fronted by a small park filled with tropical trees and shrubs. Its throne room and marvelously bedecked apartments, with their old paintings, are now used for government purposes. The offices of the Governor of Hawaii, the Secretary, the Auditor and the Attorney General occupy the second floor. Hon. Charles J. McCarthy is the present Governor. He did not give us a military reception for he did not know we were in town.

Six miles from the city is the historic Pali, a precipice of over 1,000 feet, over which Kamehameha, the Hawaiian chieftain, in 1895 drove the Oahuans after a furious battle and thereby added the island to his realm. A bronze tablet in the rocks, erected by the daughters of Hawaii, recites this fact of history. The wind sweeps over this precipice at all times—sometimes with such terrific force as to strip automobiles of their tops and carry them off to sea.

The trip to the Pali, through a valley with mountains rising 3,000 feet on either side, was an indescribable delight. The endless variety of flower and shrub combined with the brown of earth and the deep blue of sea formed a color scheme of unrivaled richness and beauty. We recalled what a young woman of Hawaii had said to us on the train when we were admiring California tints: "You will have to go to Hawaii to see unsurpassed coloring." The softest Hawaiian tints remind us of Egypt, where the desert contributes largely to delicate hues.

This view embraces distant mountain promontories and steeply towering pinnacles; little islands seemingly floating in opalescent sealets; crowded groups of tumbling hills; weirdly shaped volcanic cones and pyramids; fields of many greens—canebrakes, rice, pineapples, Kukui trees, palm groves and many other growths of the wondrous far-flung gardens of the Pacific. Growing bananas, oranges, lemons, pineapples, dates, cocoanuts, papaya, in the richest profusion, everywhere greet the eye.

A most remarkable feature is that there are no snakes, dangerous animals or insects, or poisonous growths on the islands. One can wander without danger through the wilderness of brilliant vegetation and flowering trees.

We copy from the diary of a friend a bit of his description of the drive:

"We passed Hawaiian native churches, fine public school buildings, homes in bowers of hibiscus, poinciana trees, banyan trees of wonderful proportions, groves and avenues of royal palms, giant ferns the fronds of which were ten to fifteen feet in length, cocoanut trees in fruit, giant cacti, far-spreading monkey podtrees, rice fields, mango trees and wonderful flowering hedges of hibiscus in seven hundred colors. The roadway lay between two endless floral ribbons of blossoming trees and shrubs every one of which introduced a surprise."

Mark Twain referred to the cocoanut trees as gigantic feather dusters struck by lightning.

Waikiki (pronounced Wy-ke-ke) beach, about three miles from the business center of the city, is world-renowned for its bathing and aquatic sports, such as surf boating and surf board riding. The temperature of the water is close to 78 degrees the year round. There is no undertow and the beach runs slowly out to deep water. The coral reef encircling the beach at Waikiki guards bathers from the possible intrusion of sharks, which are never seen in the lagoons.

The sharp outrigger canoes of the natives, guided by experts, are so turned in front of a breaker that the wave furnishes the impetus which drives the canoe straight to the shore. Surfing experts take a long pointed board, giving to it the necessary forward motion to enable the inrushing wave to bear it shoreward on the crest. Often the rider will stand upright upon this slight support.

We must omit a thousand attractions of Hawaii because of the limitations of our space. But we cannot close this article without speaking of the aquarium which contains the most beautifully "painted fishes" imaginable and which flourish in the native waters. All the colors of the rainbow are reflected in the tinted fish. They are of every form and variety.

Mark Twain wrote years ago:

"No alien land in all the world has any deep, strong charm for me but that one. I can see its garlanded craigs, its leaping cascades, its plumy palms—drowning by the shore; its remote summits floating like islands above the cloud rack; I can feel the spirit of its woodland solitudes; I can hear tho splash of its brooks; in my nostrils still lives the breath of flowers that perished twenty years ago."

WHAT OTHER CHURCHES ARE DOING FOR THEIR SCHOOLS.

The Christian Education Movement of our church, through its Department of Publicity, calls attention to the following facts that should be given consideraion by all our people.

"Like individuals, churches do not live apart; they are not independent; they are in the midst of an environment which largely determines lines of action. Our church is surrounded by other churches whose activities influenco our course. This is true in the field of education. The World War has given tremendous emphasis to education. England has enlarged her educational program; States and communities are increasing their public school budgets, and our big universities are seeking to meet the larger demands upon them.

"Northwestern University of the Methodist Episcopal Church is in the field for $25,000,000, almost as much as the entire budget of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in its present great enterprise; Harvard has raised recently $15,000,000; Yale is seeking $11,000,000; Chicago and Cornell each seek $10,000,000. All of the great Protestant churches of America have been profoundly influenced by this movement. The Methodist Episcopal Church closed an Educational Jubilee Campaign in 1918 which produced for its colleges and universities $35,000,000. In addition to this, tho General Conference of that church at Des Moines last May authorized an educational campaign for $138,000,000. This will make a total of $173,000,000 for their colleges and universities, over five times the sum we are asking.

"The Northern Presbyterian Church is in the field for $33,307,125; the Northern Baptists have just closed a campaign for $30,000,000; the Southern Presbyterians are seeking $8,000,000; and the Southern Baptists have just raised about $25,000,000 for education. The colleges and universities of the Southern Baptists are in the midst of the greatest period of building and expansion in their history. This fact is a source of great embarrassment to our schools lying alongside of them, but powerless to act until now. Thus a half dozen of our sister denominations, through efforts just closed or in process, are raising for their enlarged educational programs over $300,000,000.

"This enlarged educational program of our sister churches makes immediate action by our church necessary if we are to retain our place as one of the dominant spiritual forces of the world. If our church should fail to do anything for educational institutions while our sister churches by their larger equipments turn out an increased supply of trained leaders for the ministry and missions, our church would die."—Bulletin.

RESOLUTIONS ON CENTENARY PAYMENTS.

Whereas, the Centenary of Missions pledges of the Louisiana Conference have become due through the second payment:

Therefore be it resolved by the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference:

1. That January 16 to 23, 1921, be observed as pay-up week and that an earnest effort be made in every church to secure the payment of at least 40 per cent of the total amount pledged from each individual subscriber.

2. That the pastor and treasurer of each local church use the same organization that functioned in securing the pledges, as far as possible; and where this is not available, a committee be appointed in each local church to co-operate with the pastor and treasurer in securing these collections.

3. That the Minute Men in the various churches be used to bring before the people the importance of this serious matter.

4. That we regard the collections of these Centenary pledges from each subscriber through the second payment as the most important matter before the Louisiana Conference at this time; and that we feel that failure in this respect will bring discredit upon the church and hinder its future progress.

TRUST.

I will not doubt, though all my ships at sea
Come drifting home with broken masts and sails;
I shall believe the hand which never fails
From seeming evil worketh good for me;
And though I weep because those sails are battered,
Still will I cry, while my best hopes lie shattered,
"I trust in Thee."

I will not doubt, though sorrows fall like rain
And troubles swarm like bees about a hive;
I shall believe the heights for which I strive
Are only reached by anguish and by pain.
And though I groan and tremble with my crosses,
I yet shall see through my severest losses
The greater gain. —Selected.

The Church Stands Shackled

Facing the world's darkest crisis, the Church is hampered by an inadequate supply of Christian workers.

There are 1048 charges without itinerant preachers in the M. E. Church, South, while the dearth of adequately educated ministers is deplorable. We have scarcely 10 per cent of the missionaries needed to properly man our fields.

Hundreds and thousands of our own boys and girls were turned away from our Church colleges this year because there was no room for them.

These went into secular or other denominational colleges, or else they will be denied educational advantages altogether. In either case the Church will lose their services while they themselves will lose infinitely more. Shall we close the door in the faces of our own?

THE CHURCH MUST EDUCATE OR DIE

It is no theory, but a cold, hard fact; the Church must educate or die and let the world die with it.

Humanity was led astray by its teachers, and now, bewildered and confused by the wreckage of a world war, it seeks spiritual aid. Like children crying in the night, the peoples grope everywhere for something stable.

Bread, work, wages will not redeem the social order. When these loom above all else, red revolution threatens.

Prussianized education, glorifying materialism and minus God, duty, and morality, has well-nigh scrapped civilization. And the ideas which plunged us into the abyss are making their appearance in American education.

WHAT IS THE WAY OUT?

There is but one hope of salvation now before us. The Church must educate.

To correct the atheistic tendency in American education through the influence of colleges thoroughly Christian; to stabilize the staggering world by a stream of Christian men trained to be leaders in every sphere; to evangelize the world through the ministry of thousands of young people educated by the Church for its own service; to train all of our young people in colleges adequately equipped—this is the most imperative program of the present day.

The need of the world is a soul—a moral sense—a consciousness of God. It can be imparted to mankind only by a system of education which plumbs the depths of the human heart and educates the whole man. IF THE CHURCH DOES NOT EDUCATE NOW MATERIALISM WILL PREVAIL.

KNITTING.

By Rose Mills Powers.

When auntie knits, you ought to see
The way her needles fly!
In rows and rows, the knitting grows
Beneath her watchful eye;
Her yarn is never known to snarl,
Her work is never stopped
Because somewhere, through lack of care,
A tiny stitch was dropped.

And auntie says if I will learn,
She'll teach it all to me,
But I must heed her words, indeed,
And very patient be;
She's given me some skeins of wool
Of such a pretty blue!
Just watch me try! and by and by
I will be knitting, too.

"GO CHEERFULLY."

Little Go Cheerfully worked away patiently at the pair of moccasins she was making. They were her first pair, and she sewed the beads on with pride. She was sure that her mother would praise her, and perhaps even her father would say that she had done well. Every stitch was just as perfect as she could make it. It was so much more of an accomplishment to make moccasins than to string beads or quills.

When she had finished them she took some red paint and painted right down in each little heel her name—Go Cheerfully—so that every one would be sure to know who had made them; then she laid them proudly on top of the basket of moccasins her mother was going to sell in the village that afternoon. Surely some one would want them; they were so pretty.

Now it happened that Annie Bell Lee's mother went to the village that afternoon also to buy her little girl a pair of moccasins. Annie Bell had about everything that it was possible to buy for a little girl, and her mother had thought a long time before she had thought of the dear little Indian moccasins as a gift for her daughter.

The pair that Go Cheerfully had made were so cunning it was no wonder Annie Bell's mother selected them in preference to any others, and she felt sure that her little girl would be pleased with them, too. She was sorry to remember how hard it was to please Annie Bell.

Nowhere in all the country was there a prettier little girl than she. Her long golden hair was marveled over by all who saw it. and her blue eyes and rosy cheeks called forth admiration; but no one had ever said that she was a willing and dutiful child.

When her mother gave her the moccasins, she straightway took off her little patent-leather pumps to try them on. They were a perfect fit. She put on one, then she held up the other and inspected it carefully. The crudely fashioned letters in the heel attracted her attention: "Go Cheerfully." She looked at her mother, but her mother did not even know of the letters and was busily sewing.

She took off the moccasin on her foot, and there was "Go Cheerfully" again; then she put them both on and sat by the fire thinking. In a moment her mamma looked up from her work: "I wish you would bring me the scissors, dear," she said.

Now Annie Bell's first inclination was to grumble. She did not like to run errands; but the words "Go Cheerfully" in the bottom of her little shoes seemed to prick her. She found herself saying, "All right, mamma," and in a flash she was away for them.

"Go Cheerfully; Go Cheerfully!" They were such pretty moccasins. The dainty bead work on the toes fascinated her. They seemed made especially for her. Never before had she realized how unwilling she was; but now when she was inclined to lag there were the words to remind her. Sometimes it seemed that they almost burned her little heels, and in the end she always obeyed them.

"I wonder what has come over my little girl lately? She is so kind to her mother."

Annie Bell Lee was sitting at her mother's feet winding yarn, and her mother reached over and laid a hand upon her beautiful hair.

"I just have to mind my moccasins, that's all," Annie Bell admitted; and then she slipped them off and let her mother read the words, and neither of them guessed that, after all, it was only a little girl's name.—Maud M. Huey.

A GREAT SOLDIER AND A LITTLE LAMB.

Garibaldi was a brave soldier who lived in Italy. His father was a fisherman, and the boy learned to be a fine sailor, but his country was in trouble so that he became a soldier when he was a very young man. Twice he had to go away to fight for his country. He was so brave that he made others brave, and they fought until they won the victory.

But a story about him shows that he was gentle and kind, as well as a great soldier and leader. One night when he was in camp with his army, a shepherd came to them in great trouble about one of his lambs that was lost. The soldiers brought lanterns and went back and forth over the hillsides hunting for the lost lamb, but one by one they gave up and came back. Garibaldi himself went out with them, and no one noticed that after all the others had come back, their general was not in his tent.

The next morning some one peeped into his tent and there, sound asleep, lay the brave soldier with the little lost lamb beside him. He would not come back and sleep while a poor little lamb was lost, and he had hunted almost all night until he found it.

This story will help us to remember that Jesus is never too busy with the great things of this world to have time to know all about every little child, and lovingly, tenderly, to care for each one. He knew all about the shepherds of His country—how they lived with their sheep and loved them and cared for them as David had done, night and day. How safe and happy we may feel with Him for our Shepherd!—The Sunbeam.

HOW A GOOD MAN WAS SAVED.

One night John Paton was very tired and went to bed early; he fell into a sound sleep. His little dog, Cluthi, lay by his bedside.

It was a dark night when Cluthi jumped up and began to pull at the bedclothes. "Bow, wow! Bow, wow, wow, wow!" she barked, frantically.

John Paton woke up—quickly he aroused his two friends. They saw that dark shadows were passing to and fro outside the window. He and his friends kneeled down and asked God to take care of them.

Just then a glare of light flashed into the room. Men passed with flaming torches. They set fire to the reed fence. In a few minutes the house would catch. The wicked savages were outside, with knives and clubs to kill him.

The brave man stepped outside his door. He cut the burning reed fence and threw it away from his house. Seven or eight savages jumped out and surrounded him; their clubs were raised.

"Kill him! kill him!" some one yelled.

John Paton said a quick prayer to God.

"Dare to strike me, and my God will punish you!" he cried. "He takes care of us. He will punish you for burning his church, and for hating his people, and for all your badness! We have been doing you good, and you want to kill us! But our God is right here. He is here; he will take care of us. He will punish you!"

They howled in rage. They called some one to strike the first blow, yet no one dared.

Now comes the wonderful part of the story. A rushing, roaring sound came up from the south; it was like the noise of some great engine. Every savage stopped to listen.

It was a tornado! One of the most dreadful kind of storms was coming!

Then the wind blew. The rain poured in torrents and put out the fire.

"That is Jehovah's rain! Truly their God is fighting for them, and helping them. Run! Run away!"

Then the savages threw down their torches; and in a few minutes every cannibal, with face drawn with fright, was running for his life! John Paton and his friends were not harmed and their home was spared.—Selected.

TO THE BISHOP AND MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

(The following letter, read before the recent session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, is published by the request of the Conference.)

Dear Brethren: Fifty-one years ago this December I was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Conference. To-day there is only one man in the Conference who was a member when I joined it, Brother Ira B. Robertson. Of my own class I only remain. For the past eight years I have been on the roll of superannuates.

My reason for not being present at this session of the Conference is that I am needed at home on account of family afflictions. My own health is perhaps better than that of the average man of my age.

In the providence of God I have a comfortable home. It is my own property and is free of all incumbrances.

My time is occupied in various ways. In addition to the duties already alluded to, and to other duties incidental to the usual home, I teach a class in the Sunday school, conduct prayer meetings occasionally, preach some, marry the living and bury the dead, visit among the sick and the well, help the pastor in getting subscribers for our church papers, and try to follow him as my divinely appointed leader in every good word and work. I read some of our best periodicals and try to keep abreast of the times by some acquaintance with the books of the day. I correspond for six daily newspapers and one weekly. In fact, I am kept so busy most of the time that I am not bothered with the "blues." By the grace of God, I am generally in a good humor and enjoy the society of my fellow-man. I try to be prayerful and useful and hope to be ready when the Master shall call me.

The experience of a superannuate is unique in many ways. It has its lights and shadows. The superannuate stands on a line that gives him a distinct and impartial view of both the ministry and laity. Since my superannuation, I have seen some things, I think, in a clearer and better light than I ever saw them while in the active pastorate. I am sure that I love Methodism with an increasing appreciation of its polity and doctrines. I think I have a more intelligent grasp of its mission in the world and would be glad to give my life again to the propagation of its teachings. I think I see more distinctly than ever its perils and possibilities and I am jealous of its honor among men.

If you will permit me to do so, I shall presume to make a few suggestions about matters to which I have given a good deal of thought:

1. Do not lower the standard of education in admitting young men into the Conference. There are many temptations at times to do this. Whatever may have been permissible in the past, an educated ministry is one of the crying needs of the times and will be more so in the future.

2. Let more emphasis and prominence be given in our ministrations to the distinctive doctrines of Methodism. We all believe that our doctrines are the doctrines of the Bible. But we are surrounded by those who do not hesitate to denounce some of them as diabolical heresies. I believe that we need to emphasize more determinedly the direct witness of the Spirit, infant baptism, and the possibility of apostasy. I believe that it is time for us, with loving hearts, but with firmness of conviction, to maintain more strenuously than is usual with some of us the doctrines of our Methodism. I believe that untold harm has resulted from the constant attacks, made by some of our fellow-Christians, upon our interpretation of the Word of God. I believe that by means of the press, the Sunday school and the pulpit we should strive to perpetuate what the fathers of Methodism achieved for us by their faithful preaching and defense of the truth.

3. Let our evangelists understand that they are sent out as Methodist preachers and not as propagandists of undenominationalism. Other denominations, I fear, are wiser in this respect than we are. Their evangelists do not hesitate to magnify their peculiar systems of doctrine, and it is not in me to find fault with them for doing this. What is believed to be true should be preached to all people everywhere. If our doctrines are true, as we believe them to be, we should proclaim them loudly and widely as we try to fulfill our mission in the world. While saying this I am not unmindful of the fact that a real Methodist preacher can be, and should be, a man of the broadest catholicity.

4. Let some plan be adopted to give our work more publicity. The columns of secular newspapers are more open to-day to items of real religious news than ever before. Baptists and Presbyterians are outstripping us in putting their work before the public by means of the secular press. This is not because the newspapers are partial to these denominations, but it is due to the alertness of these churches and their realization of the value of publicity. I think it might be wise for every Annual, District, Quarterly and Church Conference to have a standing committee on publicity.

My brethren will pardon me for making these suggestions. You may not see them as I do.

Hoping and praying that you may have a pleasant and profitable session of Conference, I am

Your brother in Christ,
LYMAN CARLEY.

Ellisville, Miss., Nov. 27, 1920.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

The presence of Rev. Ira B. Robertson was a benediction to the Conference. Though advanced in years and in great feebleness of body, his spirit is indomitable and his faith is triumphant.

Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, the business manager of the Advocate, had most hospitable entertainment in the home of Dr. R. E. Iligdon. Rev. M. B. Sharbrough was another guest in this delightful home.

A very delightful social feature of the Conference was the dining in honor of the Bishop, the presiding elders, and a few other guests, by the Home Economics Department of Whitworth College on Friday evening.

It was an unusual pleasure and privilege for the Conference to have the opportunity of observing the work of one of its greatest educational institutions at close range. No school ever had a finer set of girls than Whitworth has; and the faculty is such as any college might be proud of.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, the pastor of our church at Brookhaven, assisted by a most capable committee, had made perfect provision for the comfort and convenience of the Conference visitors. If there was a single thing lacking, we did not detect it; nor did we hear the slightest complaint from any source.

We have seen Bishop McMurry in three Conferences now, and if there is a more capable presiding officer in the church it is our judgment that he has not come this way. He is "present, on time, with a studied lesson" at each session of the Conference—and he believes that all the delegates should be equally faithful.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the distinguished president of Whitworth College, not only entertained his full quota of house guests, including the Bishop, but he also extended his hospitality to many of the brethren by inviting them to dinner in the commodious new dining room of the college. It was the editor's privilege to share in this hospitality on Friday.

The Educational Commission sent a great "team" to the Mississippi Conference, under the leadership of Dr. Henry N. Snyder, president of Wofford College. Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Mississippi's own great college, Millsaps, and himself a member of the Conference, was not one whit behind his brethren in the presentation of the educational interests.

The editor of the Advocate was most hospitably entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McNair. We heard many others felicitating themselves upon their delightful situation—but they could not have been more happily placed than were we. Mr. and Mrs. McNair and Miss Mary, their charming daughter, have mastered the beautiful art of showing hospitality to strangers.

It would be hard for any Conference to select a better secretarial force than serves the Mississippi Conference—Dr. A. F. Watkins being the secretary, with Rev. G. S. Harmon and Rev. Claude P. Jones as assistants, and Rev. G. P. McKeown, Rev. W. A. Hays, and Rev. J. D. Ellis as statistical secretaries. The editor of the Advocate is indebted to Rev. G. S. Harmon for many brotherly courtesies.

So far as our knowledge goes, Rev. E. H. Cunningham is in a class by himself as a reporter to the secular press of the proceedings of an Annual Conference, unless we include Mr. H. H. Ahrens, who, for some years, has not been engaged in newspaper work. We would pick these two as the peers of any in the land. The editor of the Advocate is indebted to Brother Cunningham for many kindnesses in connection with both the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences.

Rev. W. M. Young, president of the Board of Church Extension of the North Mississippi Conference, was a visitor to the Mississippi Conference for the purpose of securing co-operation in the erection of a church at Columbus, Miss., that will be so situated as to be able to minister especially to the many Methodist girls who attend the great State educational institution at that place. He was successful in his mission, the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension cheerfully agreeing to lend financial aid to the enterprise.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. E. H. Campbell, of Evergreen, La., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for more than forty years. She is now in her eightieth year, but she still reads the paper with interest.

"Graciously received by my new congregation, and happy in the work," writes Rev. Henry T. Young from Natchitoches, La.

Brother W. J. Beasley, of Woodland, Miss., reached the ripe age of seventy on December 4. He has long been a reader of the Advocate.

The American-Press, of Lake Charles, La., paid extended tribute to the late Mrs. Seaman Mayo, in its issue of November 29. Mrs. Mayo was one of the most greatly beloved women of Lake Charles.

Rev. R. S. Walton has been most cordially received by the people of Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La. Rev. F. R. Power, the former pastor, left for his new appointment, Wilmar, Ark., on November 30.

Rev. R. B. Craig, who was recently transferred from the North Mississippi to the North Arkansas Conference, attended the meeting of the latter at Fort Smith. He writes that it was a great gathering. His assignment was to Colt, Ark., an excellent appointment.

Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference evangelist of the North Mississippi Conference, requests us to announce that he is at present located at New Albany, Miss., and that should any one desire his services in the work of the church, he may be reached at that place.

December 12 is Education Day in the North Mississippi Conference by order of the Conference. The Conference Secretary of Education, Rev. J. H. Holder, is sending out literature in preparation for the day, and is doing everything in his power to make the day a success.

Rev. Roy H. Kleiser, who was, for some years, one of the most popular and efficient members of the Mississippi Conference, has been reassigned to our Scott Street Church, in Covington, Ky., where he has met with remarkable success. As a preacher, his ability is recognized far beyond the bounds of his own Conference.

The board of stewards of our church at Forest, Miss., at its meeting on November 27, passed resolutions highly appreciative of the work among them of Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Galloway. Brother Galloway served the church most faithfully and acceptably for four years, and he and his good wife won their way to the hearts of all the people.

The Advocate is authorized by Bishop W. F. McMurry to announce that Rev. L. M. Lipscomb will remain as pastor at Oxford, Miss., and that Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb will be the pastor at Columbus, Miss.; also, that Rev. L. W. Cain has been transferred from the North Mississippi Conference to the Louisiana Conference, and appointed to Franklinton, La.

"PREPARED FOR WHAT?"

The school of experience has many graduates, but there are many who seem yet only ready for matriculation. As one travels through the church talking of its work and program, there is one universal cry which is by no means new, "If we only had leaders!" This would seem to say, "The opportunity is recognized, but the task is impossible."

Leaders do not spring full grown from the brow of Jove. There are prodigious men with wonderful powers of leadership, but they are not the ones that stabilize the church's program. Real leaders are made. By what processes then do they come? Many answers could be given.

The church college stands as the one outstanding institution giving its reason for existence to give Christian training; the State school may teach science and mathematics as well as or better than the church school, but it does not propose to give Christian training for leadership.

The student in college finds himself advised by fellow students, as well as by president and teacher, that there are societies and contacts in college that are as valuable to him as any textbook or academic course; among these side courses he joins the Literary Society and the "Y. M." or the "Y. W." In these he finds fellowship, intercollegiate contacts, and a class and college standing is gained which is valuable. Even further in the "Y," opportunity is given for Christian fraternity and frank discussions of many moral questions. He may gain a program of Christian religion as it fits a college man, and the attitude of business or professional men. The student may even become a Christian through forces brought about through the "Y."

Vacation time comes or graduation days may be over. The student goes home fired with an ambition to "do things." If he is a Christian, he wants to see things move in the little church at home, and the folks at home are expecting him to lead, for he has been "off to college." Remember, now, that he has been attending a church college, where he is supposed to be trained in specific things which only a church school can give, a school that is supported on the ground that it is necessary for the Methodists of its Conference. But our young graduate is confused. He is ill at ease and confesses that he is well acquainted with program of the "Y," but that he was not affiliated with the societies of the church. They stare at him with abated admiration—and the little church goes along in the same old rut.

Of our 19,000 churches, approximately 15,000 are in communities of 2,500 or less. And approximately 14,000 are strictly rural churches. This means that the program that should consume our largest interest is the one that will reach this small town or community.

We then ask, "Can graduates of church schools who know nothing about its societies, who only have learned to work in the 'Y,' be expected to assume this leadership?"

Young men and women in college often approach church leaders and say, "I am going home soon and I want to help in our Sunday school, or I want to organize an Epworth League but I don't know a thing about them. Where can I get some literature or information?" This same student can conjugate perfectly an irregular verb in Latin or give a correct reaction for a formula in chemistry, but he is entirely ignorant of the organization and work of the church.

Is it not reasonable to expect the church school at least to provide societies that will give a standard of work through which not only will they grow in the graces of Christian fellowship and experience, but that at the same time they are able to be familiar with their administration and program? More vital than the necessity to become familiar with the program of the church is the necessity to have a proper regard for and a relative value of the church and its societies. In determining this, teachers and president have more influence than any one else.

The president of a certain church school was always generous in his attitude to the "Y" organizations and eagerly proclaimed its work. He mentioned the other societies of the church and advised attendance on them; but he was not familiar with their work and did not seem solicitous for their success. Students of his school were not noted for their dependable church leadership. GARFIELD EVANS.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

To presiding elders and preachers of the North Mississippi Annual Conference: The profitable occasion of an Annual Conference is passed, and now we are looking forward eagerly to a great year in the advancement of the Kingdom which we love.

As Conference President of Epworth Leagues, I would urge you to give your young people a chance to aid you in this year's work. The Epworth League is perfectly adapted to be of assistance in any great church undertaking. In fact, our young people are anxious to be of service. If you have gone into a new field for you, as soon as possible get hold of a young man or woman who wants to learn, and organize an Epworth League. Our preachers in tried charges certainly by this time know where to get that young person to take the lead. The minutes show that we have only forty Leagues of all kinds—a very poor showing for a Conference of our standing.

In every district there is a secretary whose traveling and postage expenses are paid by the Conference Board. If you get in touch with these young men and women, they will be glad to come to your charge and be of any assistance they possibly can in organizing a League or helping you to increase interest. W. R. LOTT, Conference President.

NOTES OF THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

Meeting at Memphis,

There was a meeting of the Conference Educational Secretaries at Memphis, Tenn., on Tuesday, November 30, and Wednesday, December 1. The members of the Christian Education Commission, the bishops, and representatives from the Board of Missions, the Woman's Missionary Council, the Epworth League, and the Sunday School Board were also in attendance. This meeting was held for the purpose of discussing the three months' program of spiritual cultivation that is to actively occupy the church with the beginning of the new year.

It is the plan of the Christian Education Movement to ask all pastors who are willing, to emphasize in their sermons and in their work during January the importance of prayer. In the same way, February is to be devoted to Christian Life Service, and March to Stewardship.

The meeting at Memphis was the first meeting at which all the Conference Educational Secretaries were present and was, in a sense, the beginning of the active work of the Movement.

Conferences for Alumni Sub-Directors.

The Set-Up Conferences for Sub-Directors in the plan to interest the alumni and former students of our educational institutes in the Christian Education Movement have been started, and before the month is over at least one Conference will have been held in practically every Annual Conference or State embraced by the Southern Methodist Church.—Bulletin.

Simple Mixture Makes Hens Lay

By W. S. Burgess.

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A life long study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Combs' Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 158 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.—Adv.

CHRISTIANITY AND INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATION.

By Bishop F. J. McConnell.

A genuinely Christian emphasis on the human values in modern society would hasten the transition from a competitive to a co-operative basis in industry. The Christian conception of the will of God for human society is that men should live together in a brotherhood of mutual service. Just what form such a co-operation would best take there is no reason for our trying to state. All advances of this sort must proceed by the method of trial and error. But a competitive system whereby one man's gain means depriving another of the elemental necessities of life is fundamentally contrary to the spirit of Christ. Competition in sports, or rivalry in intellectual or artistic endeavor for the sake of the noblest result, is exhilarating and even inspiring. But competition for food and clothes and shelter is not suggestive of a Christian commonwealth. If the survival of the fittest means that in the race for food the stronger are to crush out the weaker by remorseless competition, the doctrine is pagan. Competition in the industrial realm is essentially selfish and there is no way of making selfishness Christian by calling it enlightened self-interest. Christianity can only mean the organization of society on a basis of unselfishness—and that demands some form of economic co-operation. The inability of the Christian to tell offhand just what form of co-operation would be best is not a count against co-operation, but a challenge to socially-minded Christians to inventiveness and discovery. For the way simply must be found.—Missionary Voice.

CHRISTIANITY IN INDUSTRY.

The Christian standpoint in industrial relations, as in all other human relations, was expressed by the Founder of Christianity in a single sentence, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The world-wide industrial unrest which exists in the present reconstruction period following the war is at bottom a blind, groping effort to substitute the law of warm-blooded love for the law of cold-blooded justice in the relations between employer and employed.

Love demands not only that you refrain from injuring your fellow men, but that you actively promote their welfare in every way in your power.—Christian Herald.

Our friends see the best in us, and by that very fact call forth the best from us.—Black.

Let a man take care that the circle of his petitions grows wider every week. The pathos and the tragedy in many Christian lives is this: their prayers are no bigger to-day than they were twenty or thirty years ago. Spiritual hospitality is no richer, there are no more guests in their heart!—J. H. Jowet.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Blakney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. J. L. Neill, of Nashville, made a fine impression on the Conference at its recent session at Charleston. He gave a clearcut picture of the place the Sunday school occupies in saving the world.

The date for our Standard Training School is May 30 to June 3. The Board has planned for two District Standard Training Schools. Sardis has said the church at this place will meet the requirements. What district will take the other one?

Our purpose is to train teachers at Jumaiwaka, our Conference and District schools until we shall be able to put a training class in every church that is willing to have the work done for the teachers.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, New Albany, Miss., is Conference Superintendent of Teacher-Training. He has two engagements to teach classes. Four other competent men have agreed to teach classes during the year. If you want a class taught, write to Brother Stephens. He will gladly help you.

We aim to have five hundred teachers do credit work this year. It can be done and we must do it. Judge J. G. McGowen has organized a class of eight to study "Life in the Making." Mrs. Guy Dean is the teacher. Get in line, men, and let us do something that will come in giving our children a knowledge of God and train them in worship and service.

What town in the Conference wants the Wesley Bible Class Federation? Some town in the eastern part of the Conference ought to but for this great gathering of our workers. We expect to pay our way. Just invite us to come. This date must be settled very soon.

Have you got time to set your people to study the Bible? Do you know of anything that they need to do that will be more helpful to them? Why not put in a Home Department? The magazine for that purpose is to be enlarged and made helpful to the entire family. If you want a religious church, make the family religious. Now is the time our people crave sympathy and help. Many of them have lost most all their money; now turn them to God.

If any man or woman desires to teach a class of teachers, write me and let me help you. If you want to multiply yourself by ten, teach ten people. Why not multiply yourself by a larger number? The time is short, let us get to work at a definite task at once.

JOURNEYING TO REVELATION.

Paul of Tarsus, writing reminiscently to the Galatians—and all rather elderly good men like to talk of their past achievements—tells of a journey which he took with Barnabas to Jerusalem, when, as he adds, he "went up by revelation." Paul was a man of many goals, but they were all the goals of God. When he went anywhere it was in the spirit of prayer and humility, seeking to be guided along every step of the way. The missionary cause was too sacred and important to be marred and impeded by any lapses of judgment on the part of the first missionary of all time. "I went up by revelation," says this grand old man of the New Testament. Can we say as much of every, or indeed of any journey that we take? We ought to be able so to do, but alas! too frequently we stumble along a half-prayed, half-pondered path, hardly knowing whether the Lord is pleased with our choice of courses or not. It may be now that some one objects that while it was doubly necessary that Paul should pick his way by prayer, it is not needful that we should go down to the post office "by revelation," or to the country club after a half-hour of devotions, questioning heaven as to its desirability as a port of call. Strictly speaking, however, there can be no part of a Christian man's life that is not under providential control and divine oversight, and so we ought to be just as sure of our ground when tramping on a vacation as when walking to church. The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and just as much when the feet are lifted to enter the right "auto" as when they are scratched by the brambles or torn by the rocks in climbing laboriously some mount of sacrifice. "I went up by revelation," said Paul. That has a fine ring. How would it sound for a politician to say, "I went up to the State House by revelation," or for a college professor to say, "I entered my classroom after prayer" or for a grimy son of toil to murmur, "By revelation I climbed into my engine-cab," or "started the dynamo running?" It makes no difference what the errand or the task may be so long as it is the duty of the hour, appointed by God. Let us seek more carefully, in our hard, daily pursuits, for this note of direction, this assurance of guidance, and this sense of fitness, in setting our plans to those of God, and in making all hours of resting or of toiling alike contributory to growth in grace and greater success in genuine service.—Zion's Herald.

THE TEACHER SITUATION.

An impression prevails that the teacher shortage throughout the United States is no longer a serious problem. Recent reports received from county and district superintendents in every State clearly indicate that such a condition is erroneous. While the average condition is slightly better than last year, due to marked improvement in States where salaries have been greatly increased, the general situation remains practically unchanged. The number of schools without teachers and the still larger number taught by incompetent teachers show that a very serious situation still exists, particularly in those States where salaries are lowest.

On September 1, 1920, the National Education Association sent a letter to every county and district superintendent of schools in the United States, enclosing a return postal card upon which were asked ten questions regarding the teacher situation in their respective counties. The following is a tabulation of the replies received to three of the questions asked: (1) The number of teaching positions in the country or district covered by the report; (2) the shortage of teachers at the opening of school in September, 1920; (3) the number of teachers below standard whom it had been necessary to accept in order to keep as many schools as possible open. The standard referred to is, of course, the minimum for the given county or district, and teachers below standard are admittedly incompetent. The real shortage is, therefore, the sum of the actual shortage and the number of teachers below standard.

Inquiries were sent to 3468 superintendents and 1492 replies had been received at the time this tabulation was made, October 12. Every report is signed by the county or district superintendent making it, and the information is, therefore, the most reliable that can be obtained. The "estimated shortage and below standard" of 92,949 is based on the assumption that the unreported counties of a State would show conditions the same as those reported.

Unquestionably the greatest educational problem before the American people is the securing of competent, well-trained teachers for every teaching position in the country, in rural as well as in city schools. At least two years of professional training beyond a four-year high school course is the generally accepted minimum standard for teachers. The replies of county and district superintendents to the question, "What per cent of your teachers have had two years or more of training beyond high schools?" show that in only a few States have one-half the teachers had that amount of training, and that in a large majority of the States less than one-half had that much. Some superintendents report as few as ten per cent of their teachers having attained that standard.

The aim should be for a competent, well-trained teacher for every boy and girl in America. Until this shall have been accomplished, approximately, it cannot be said that the teacher situation is not a serious problem.—National Educational Association.

INFORMATION FOR HOLDERS OF CLERGY PERMITS.

Clergy fares, based on two-thirds of the regular one-way fares, will be authorized next year, certificates to be limited to calendar year 1921; a Clergy Bureau will be established at St. Louis, Missouri, for issuance of certificates to applicants living in Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas; the present Bureau at Chicago will be operated next year and will issue certificates to applicants residing in States west of and including Illinois and the Mississippi River, except the States in Southwestern territory enumerated above. Application blanks will be available on or about December 15, and can be secured from ticket agents.

Your attention is invited to the fact that Clergy Certificates issued in January and early in February, 1920, expire one year from date of issue, that is, they expire in January or February, 1921, as the case may be. Holders of such certificates should not, at the present time or early in December, apply for new certificates; they should wait until about two weeks before expiration of old certificate, which date can be determined by inspection of certificate; foregoing does not apply, of course, where certificates have all been used and a new certificate is desired at once, nor where certificates expire December 31, 1920, which is the expiration date of those issued during March and later months of the present year, including those issued now, from day to day.—Transportation Bureau Bulletin.

LINCOLN AND THANKSGIVING DAY.

"My friend, President-elect Harding, is one of those who agree with me that Lincoln was a religious man," said Dr. John Wesley Hill, Chancellor of the Lincoln Memorial University, whose book, "Abraham Lincoln, Man of God," has just been published by the Putnams. "He has been good enough to write me, 'I am glad that you have undertaken to set at rest much foolish speculation, and to convince the most incredulous that Abraham Lincoln was as sincere in his religious faith as Robert E. Lee or William E. Gladstone.'

"In 1910 I delivered an address on the religious side of Lincoln's nature at the National Theatre in Washington. Among those who attended were Vice-President Sherman, Charles D. Hilles, then secretary to President Taft; Secretary of War Dickinson, Secretary of the Treasury McVey, Postmaster-General Hitchcock, 'Uncle Joe' Cannon, and other prominent men, and the enthusiasm that these men and the other members of my audience were kind enough to display convinced me that the public was deeply interested in this subject; and it was then that the thought of writing a book occurred to me. By the way, you may be interested to know Cannon's views on religion. After the meeting, when I consulted him on this, he said, 'I believe God Almighty organized this big corporation known as Humanity, issued all the capital stock and is responsible for its maintenance at par value, and I'll be hanged if I'll part with my holdings!'

"It was Lincoln," continued Dr. Hill, "who nationalized Thanksgiving Day, proving his dependance on God. This he did on July 12, 1863. He invited the people 'To render the homage due the Divine Majesty for the wonderful things done in the Nation's behalf; to invoke the influence of the Holy Spirit to subdue the anger which has produced and so long sustained a needless and cruel rebellion; to change the hearts of the insurgents; to guide the counsels of the Government with wisdom adequate to so great a national emergency; to visit with tender care and consolation, throughout the length and breadth of the land, all those who through the vicissitudes of marches, voyages, battles, and sieges have been brought to suffer in mind, body or estate . . . . And to recognize and confess the presence of the Almighty Father and the power of His hand equally in triumph and in sorrow.'"

MINISTER WANTS TO HELP.

It is only natural that one who has been relieved from suffering should feel grateful and want to help others. Rev. F. M. Swyndale, 818 Elm St., Macon, Ga., writes: "My kidneys gave me much trouble before I took Foley Kidney Pills. My sleep is not disturbed now and my back seems to have gotten completely well. I am ready at any time to speak a word for Foley Kidney Pills." Why suffer from aches and pains, sore muscles, stiff joints, or sleep disturbing bladder trouble when you can procure such a good remedy?—Adv.

IN YE OLDEN TIME

Hoop skirts were worn by those who first asked the druggist for, and insisted on having, the genuine Golden Medical Discovery put up by Dr. Pierce over fifty years ago. Dress has changed very much since then! But Dr. Pierce's medicines contain the same dependable ingredients. They are standard today just as they were fifty years ago.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the stomach and blood cannot be surpassed by any remedy today.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak women has never been equalled for the distressing complaints incident to womanhood. What others say:

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"Ever since I can remember Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family. When I was quite a young girl I had my first experience with them. I was in a miserable condition when my father gave me the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' but my cough soon stopped, and it completely restored my health. Then, when it came to the critical time of life I depended entirely on the 'Favorite Prescription and it brought me thru in remarkably good health."—MRS. CARRIE DIODENE, 1818 Baronne St.

If You Need A Medicine You Should Have the Best

Although there are hundreds of preparations advertised, there is only one that really stands out pre-eminent as a meddling for diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything.

A sworn certificate of purity is with every bottle. You may receive a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents.

For sale at all drug stores in large and medium size bottles, also mention this paper.—Adv.

SUFFERING FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

Sin and suffering are correlates. Sin is always followed at some time by suffering, and suffering is the sequence of sin. The sinner always suffers, although the sufferer is not always a sinner, but may suffer because another has sinned. Humanity, like divinity, is social, and individuality is not complete except as it acts and reacts upon other individuals. As a person derives his greatest joys from association with others, so he suffers through his relation to others. Human interest grows out of these reciprocal and interdependent relations.

Divinity, because personally related to humanity, grieved when humanity sinned, and in his fleshly union with man Christ suffered because man had sinned. By remaining in heaven Christ could have avoided that suffering, but he voluntarily assumed a body which must suffer on account of his relation to a sinning humanity. Christ's suffering came not as a consequence of his own sin, but because of his relation to sinful man.

Most of us suffer much on account of our own sins; and suffer because of our involuntary and necessary relation to a sinful race. None of this is in itself suffering for Christ's sake. To suffer for His sake, we must, as He did toward us, come voluntarily into relation to Him, or to others on account of Him. We may suffer because we have sinned in eating, or stealing, or in fornication; or we may suffer because we are sons of sinners and can only have our being through our necessary relation to a sin-tainted race, but none of this is suffering for Christ's sake. Some of the suffering which comes to us as Christians is not for Christ's sake, but on account of our stubbornness or lack of true Christliness. Only when for His sake we voluntarily deprive ourselves of luxuries and comforts, or when men hate and abuse us because they hate the Christ whom they see in our lives, do we really suffer for Christ's sake.

As our generation affects to admire Christ, do we often suffer for His sake? Are we so true to Him that men who would crucify Him, persecute and revile us simply because they recognize Him in us? Let us not deceive ourselves by thinking that because we suffer it is for Christ's sake. Let us understand that the sufferings which we could avoid by denying Him are those which are for Christ's sake. In such suffering we may rejoice and become more like Him who was made perfect through that kind of suffering.—Arkansas Methodist.

A RARE RELIC OF OLDEN DAYS.

Rev. Payton A. Sowell Sends the Saddlebags Used by Him Fifty Years Ago, on his First Circuit in Lawrence and Wayne Counties, Tenn., to the Emory University, as a Relic, at the Request of Bishop Candler, Chancellor.

To Bishop Candler, Chancellor Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia.

Dear Bishop and Brother: I am sending to you by parcels post the "saddlebags" I used on my first circuit, Mount Zion Circuit, Savannah District, Tennessee Conference. Rev. Alexander Green Dinwiddie was my presiding elder. I give them in perpetuity to the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, to be safely preserved among the curios.

The "calf" for the flaps and the "kip" for the body of the saddlebags were tanned by the old "bark-ooze" method, requiring over twelve months, at Wilson's Tan Yard, Maury County, Tennessee. My uncle, Payton Sowell, then about 60 years old, brought the two skins thirty-seven miles, on horse back, to me at my father's, as a gift toward my "saddlebags" as a furnishing for the itinerancy. I carried them thirty miles on horseback to Rev. John Sherrell, a circuit rider, and a "saddlebags" maker of Conference reputation. He made them in the late summer of 1870, and brought them to me at Pulaski, October 6, 1870, at the session of the Tennessee Conference, Bishop David S. Doggett conducting the session, Rev. Dr. R. A. Young, Secretary.

Bishop Doggett assigned Payton A. Sowell to Mt. Zion Circuit, and the "saddlebags" went also.

The young preacher and "saddlebags" rode on "Ross," a fine young Tennessee single-footer. Any lover of good saddle horses would have admired "Ross." It might be heathen to say "Ross" was religious but at least I can say that he had as beautiful a spirit as most Christians.

"Ross's" dumb fellowship on the long stretches, as he wended his way the one hundred miles around the circuit was genuine.

These saddlebags were trunk, wardrobe, bookcase. Many a mile they carried Wesley's Sermons, Watson's Institutes, Part IV, Ralston's Elements, The Discipline of 1870, a Methodist Hymnbook and the Bible accompanying them. Between the readings of the Christian Advocate, edited by Dr. T. O. Summers, as I rode, it, too, found safety until given to an old Methodist.

At 72 years old they are sent to you, and the memories of the Bishop who sent me to Mt. Zion Circuit, and those who were then members of the Conference, the man who made them, the little churches where I carried them, the plain people who sat on the rustic benches, and the humble, kind homes where I ate and slept, make a strange moisture fill my eyes.

I might say, in the presence of these saddlebags, as my silent witnesses, we did not think of temporal reward.

These saddlebags were present at the first quarterly meeting, when the ten "preaching places" paid me TWO DOLLARS and again, on the Saturday before the second Sunday in March, when the next payment occurred. And they know, with 35c to begin with, I lived free from debt.

I send the Bible I used on the first circuit and for sixteen years. This Bible went from place to place in these saddlebags.

I make this reservation: If any blood descendants of mine ever ask for the Bible, to possess it, it is to be given to them, or to him or her; otherwise it is to be kept by the Candler School of Theology, associated with the saddlebags, which belong to the said school.

(Signed) PAYTON A. SOWELL.

HYOMEI

From Famous Eucalyptus Tree of Australia Comes Mr. Booth's Wonderful Discovery.

Some years ago, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, temperance orator and leader of international fame who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble while lecturing in London. Seeking to regain health, he went to inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests—especially the Eucalyptus trees.

This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment known to the medical science—Hyomei, which is formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air, absolutely harmless but wonderfully effective in the treatment of catarrh in all of its forms, cold in the head, spasmodic croup, hay fever, clergyman's sore throat and similar complaints.

The treatment is simple but most scientific. You breathe Hyomei. It is pronounced the only method of treatment that sends by direct inhalation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamic air that destroys all germs and bacilli of catarrh in the breathing organs, soothes and allays all irritation and enriches and purifies the blood with additional ozone.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment $1.33, extra bottle inhalant 75c. Sold by druggists on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. If your druggist can not supply it, write

FROM CHESTER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you please allow me space in the dear old Advocate for a few lines? Our year's work is done here at Chester (and we had a good year). Conference has come and gone. The preachers and their families are moving to their new work, or settling down to remain another year with the people that they have learned to love. I have always found Conference time to be the saddest time of the year. But this year it is more than sad. Yes, we must go to a new appointment. And it is with a sad and heavy heart that we leave the parsonage home and the dear, good people of the Chester charge, and take up the appointment assigned us at Conference—a superannuate. No one but a superannuate knows what this means. But we are trusting God, and will do what we can for the upbuilding of his Kingdom.

We wish to thank each one throughout the Conference for sympathy and kindness to us through the dark and sad days that have come to us this year. The pastor has been confined to his bed for five months—stayed in the hospital three months. These have been dark days indeed. The good people of Chester and surrounding community, regardless of denomination, have stood by us nobly—and we shall never forget them.

So many have written such helpful letters, and some remembered us with substantial help, even before Conference. During Conference our presiding elder, Brother McCorkle, and the other brethren remembered us very kindly. I would be so glad to write each one a personal letter, but I can't do that; so through the Advocate I wish to thank each one for his kindness, and pray that God will send each one a special rich blessing for this act of loving kindness. You have made it possible for a preacher to have the necessities of life during the winter, and we are hoping and praying that by spring he will be well again. He is improving slowly. I am doing my best to "be not afraid, but to believe." Again we thank each one for his kindness and ask that you remember us in your prayers.

Mrs. J. C. McELROY.

Thousands Agree As To This

That Black-Draught Is Excellent for Stomach and Liver Disorders, Hence Its Great Popularity. —Mississippi Planter's Indorsement.

Houston, Miss.—Mr. J. A. Trenor, a well-known planter of this place, recently related his experience in using Thedford's Black-Draught. "I don't believe there is a better liver medicine made," said Mr. Trenor. "I use it for headache, stomach disorders and torpid liver.

It is not bad to take, does not leave a constipated condition, as so many of the liver pills and medicines do. It does its work and leaves you feeling like a new person."

Thousands of others have found Black-Draught as helpful as Mr. Trenor describes, and a valuable remedy for derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. It is purely vegetable, having an active effect upon the bowels, gently stimulating the liver, and helping to increase the flow of bile.

Black-Draught has been found to assist in the digestion of food, and relieves constipation in a prompt and normal way.

On account of Black-Draught's long-proved merit and immense popularity, many imitations are being offered for sale. For your own satisfaction it will pay you to insist upon the genuine, and be sure the package bears the name "Thedford's Black-Draught."

At your druggist's—ready for instant use—full directions in package. —Adv.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. IN DEFENSE OF SOUTH MAGNOLIA.

Mr. Editor: A letter appeared in the November 18 issue of the Christian Advocate directed to the Mississippi Conference by Rev. R. E. Simpson, and we wish, through the columns of your esteemed paper, to answer this letter and contradict some of the scathing remarks made by Mr. Simpson against the living, character and disposition of the residents of South Magnolia.

In the first place, the people of South Magnolia are a hard-working class of people, always attending strictly to their own affairs, and leading as good and straightforward a life as any community wherever one may go.

It seems a sad thing that a pastor in a community would make such a slurring and unbaked declaration as to term members of the flock among which he has been administering the Gospel for nearly a year, as being as mean as the devil would have them.

The writer comes in closer contact with all the people of South Magnolia at all times than any one, and wishes to state at this time that he has as yet to find any one as described above.

We also note that Mr. Simpson gives the impression that there is little likelihood of any one's doing any work in our church the coming year; but we wish to state that we have two real men under consideration now and that we will certainly have some one, and he will have the same inducements and the same backing in everything that is for the good of the community that Mr. Simpson had.

Very truly yours,

A. K. LANDAU.

JAPANESE CHURCHES CONDEMN MILITARISM.

The Federation of Japanese churches recently issued a remarkable statement with regard to international affairs, from which the following paragraphs on militarism are taken:

"Among European and American people there is a mistaken idea that we are clinging to militaristic and aggressive principles and that we are thus a second Germany. We deeply regret this. In every nation there are those who admire militarism, and to this Japan is no exception. But we unquestionably believe that both our national policy and the desire of the majority of our people are always for peace and without ambition to invade and possess the territory of others. It is our aim to lead our people to the absolute rejection of militarism and to help bring about a world peace that will endure forever.

"It is a matter of great joy to us that at a time when the necessity for mutual understanding and trust and friendship among the nations is most vital, the League of Nations has been established. We Christians in this land believe that we are richest in international ideas and have the clearest understanding of the great principle of world brotherhood. Our religion had done this for us, and so at this great time it is our ambition that our whole people shall be permeated with the spirit of the League of Nations, and at the same time we wish to join with Christian people throughout the world in bringing it to perfection."—Missionary Voice.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

The Bible account of the power of prayer is the best we can have. Jacob prays—Esau's revenge is changed to fraternal love. Joseph prays—he is delivered from the prison of Egypt. Moses prays—Amalek is discomfited, Israel triumphs. David prays—Ahithophel goes out and hangs himself. Asa prays—Israel gains a glorious victory. Jehoshaphat prays—God turns away his anger and smiles. Elisha prays—a child is restored to life. Isaiah prays—one hundred and eighty-four thousand Assyrians are dead. Hezekiah prays—the sundial is turned back. Mordecai prays—Haman is hanged, Israel is delivered. Nehemiah prays—the king's heart is softened in a moment. Ezra prays—the walls of Jerusalem begin to rise. The church prays—the Holy Spirit is poured out. Paul and Silas pray—the prison is shaken, the doors are opened and every one's bands are loosed.—Selected.

Insist on yourself; never imitate. There is at this moment for you an utterance brave and grand as that of the colossal chisel of Phidias, or the pen of Moses or Dante, but different from these. If you can hear what these patriarchs say, surely you can reply to them in the same pitch of voice—Emerson.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

DUTY FIRST.

One of the veterans of the North Mississippi Conference, at its recent session in Charleston, made the remark that, in his thinking, the expression, "safety first," is misleading so far as its being a proper motto for life is concerned—that "duty first" should take precedence of every other consideration. We agree with him fully. Without suggesting that we ought to be less careful to avoid danger to life and limb, we do feel that this age is in need of a kind of holy recklessness that will count not life itself dear when high emprises are to be carried through. The world complacently commends the prudent man who picks his way carefully along difficult paths—but it hails with tumultuous applause the hero who looks death in the eye and leaps to the fray against apparently overwhelming odds. "Where duty calls, or danger —be never wanting there."

A LITTLE "PEP."

One of the hardest things in the world to do is to arouse enthusiasm by a perfunctory performance. We say it is hard—it must he, since we have never seen it done. Just as a man that hath friends must show himself friendly, so must a man that would arouse eager interest in any subject show a little "pep" himself. It is possible to keep even an unworthy cause largely in the public eye by persistent zeal in advocating it; all the more easily can a following be had for righteous causes by presenting them with enthusiastic earnestness. That eminent minister was not far wrong when he said that the best remedy for a sleepy congregation is somebody to wake the preacher up. Some people may he "too poor to be pious," but no preacher ought to he too pious to use a little "pep" in his pulpit. If some of us could swap off our "slow and poky" ways for a little "get up and get," we might astonish the natives—but their astonishment would give way to pleased commendation.

"ONE THING THOU LACKEST."

One of the best-known manufacturing cities of this country has recently been widely advertised by one of its prominent business firms as "a city that is thoroughly alive," and a list of twenty-five things is given for which every citizen should work. Among these things are better schools. more social centers, better streets, more hospital equipment, more garden plots, more playgrounds, more parks, etc., etc. But the church is not once mentioned on the illustrated folder more than twice the size of the Advocate. We have no disposition to intrude in the affairs of our neighbors; but we should like to remind our friends that no city can really be a great city that neglects the primary sources of its moral character—the churches. We propose as an amendment to the list of twenty-five things for which every citizen should work, the inclusion of this item: "Better churches, better attended and better supported."

PROFITS.

It would fall pleasantly upon our ears to hear some public service or private corporation declare frankly and unequivocally that it is in business solely for the sake of profits, and that it is unconcerned about the general community interests so long as the aforesaid profits are not forthcoming. All these corporations would probably indignantly deny, if the matter were brought to their attention, that they are so utterly selfish in their attitude toward the public; but they would have a hard time making their denial square with their record. The naivete with which reputable business firms frankly confess now that they are selling goods, "bought to sell at a much higher price," at a greatly reduced price. is positively refreshing. One can scarcely he expected to believe that they are not making a fair profit at present prices; yet one is expected to believe that they have conferred a distinct favor on the public by surrendering profits that, from the very nature of the case, must have been exorbitant. No truer word was ever said than that "money is the root of all evil."

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make the following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.

2. There must be at least twenty families represented in the membership of a church taking advantage of this offer.

3. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.

4. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.

5. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.

6. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate In Every Methodist Home In Louisiana And Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.

2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.

3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will he found.

We shall have some interesting announcements to make in the near future concerning "A Greater Advocate."

SANCTUARY.

See now they throng, the angry multitude,
And press on Him, with blows and curses; now
Inclose Him fast, to thrust Him to the brow
Of the steep rock; but swift He will elude
Their hatred, who the stormy winds subdued.
As darted waves fall backward from the prow
Of a swift boat, He goes, they know not how,
To pray within some mountain solitude.
So, Lord, when Care and sorrows roughly crowd,
And madly push me to some steep despair;
When sins, and earth's dull pleasures, cry aloud
And snatch to hold me in their subtle snare:
Filled with Thy strength, may I pass through their throng,
And find my mountain fastness in Thy song!

—Mary Alethea Woodward, in Exchange.

A NEW UNIFICATION MOVEMENT.

by Rev. A. M. Shaw.

When the teaching department of the church, particularly that part which deals with young life, ceased to be a "Sunday school"—a school that uses twenty or thirty minutes each Sunday for the instruction of children—and realizes the twentieth century ideal of a Department of Religious Education, we will, in some measure, have realized the first century ideal of a church going forth to "teach all nations." In one view of the case it seems unfortunate that Protestantism does not maintain day schools for primary education. The churches that keep the education of their children in their own hands during the most plastic and formative years, undoubtedly reap a great advantage in that intellect, will and character are thus determined in harmony with the faith of their fathers and the ideals of their religion. We, on the other hand, have our children spend these most impressionable years in public schools; then, when they have finished high school and are almost grown, we take them—some of them—to our Christian colleges, where we seek to carry up to completion the good work begun in the public schools—and to correct or eradicate the evil tendencies and non-Christian ideals which our negligence has indirectly fostered.

Over against this view, however, several things may be pertinently said. The public schools, while not under any ecclesiastical influence, are usually sound morally, and many of them have a distinctly religious tendency. The evils that creep in are to be deplored; but the lives that our children are to live in the world must be spent in the midst of much evil, and the little contact which they must have with it in their schooldays may serve to test their virtues and to develop their powers of resistance. The democratic character and atmosphere of the public school may well offset the loss of a more select cultural environment. Then, adolescence is a most significant factor. Between fourteen and twenty-five, every normal boy and girl is born again! The boy of twelve is no adequate prophecy of the lad of eighteen—much less of the man of thirty. Within these mysterious and wonderful adolescent years, the whole physical, nervous, mental and moral personality undergoes for better or for worse, a re-making.

This is the Christian college's opportunity. It has many times happened that the boy or girl whose childhood years give no promise of such an issue, has, within those four short college years, become not into a most powerful and purposeful manhood or womanhood. One of the most astonishing sights that the observant eye beholds today is the relatively large harvest in moral and spiritual personality that he church is reaping from her loving sowing in the field of Christian Education! But while the number of leaders in church and civic life that have come from religious institutions of learning seems large in proportion to our equipment, as compared with state institutions, the present might of our schools is wholly inadequate to the imperative demands of the multitudinous task which now confronts the forces of the Kingdom of God. To reconstruct a broken and chaotic world on Christian lines, and leaven its complex life with divine ideals, will call for rivers of sanctified culture instead of sparkling rills and murmuring brooks! And the sources of these rivers must be in the highlands of Christian Education.

There is need, then, of a mighty unifying of effort and a correlation of educational activities throughout the church. Every Annual Conference, every minister, every congregation, every individual Christian, old and young, must be enlisted in an intelligent, purposeful effort to deliver the utmost of the total influence of the church upon several vital, correlated centers of interest.

1. The principal part of a child's early education is in the home. God must be given His rightful place in the homes of our people. This means the revival of family worship; and it means vastly more. It means the literal realization of the truth that the child belongs to God; that the home is a divinely ordained agency for his protection, nurture and development; that family life is a sacred trust, and that from the cradle to maturity the parents carry a responsibility with respect to the interests and destiny of their children, of which no person or institution can relieve them. It means that the physical surroundings, and the mental, social and moral atmosphere of the home, must be made clean, beautiful, cheerful, and religiously wholesome.

2. The home must be in vital touch with other agencies that influence the child's development. We must not send our children to school to be "rid of them!" The home and the school should work in harmonious correlation. Intimate understanding and sympathetic confidence between parents and teachers are not less essential than between teachers and pupils. Indeed, Christian parents should co-operate—one family with another, as well as with the school—for the common good of the young life.

3. At this point the church has a vast responsibility and a promising field. The preacher should keep in close touch with the public school. As a champion of dogma, intellectual or moral, he is not wanted there; but as an intelligent, interested citizen, and a kindly, capable counsellor, he is always welcome. The Sunday school should be an efficient Department of Religious Education, in intelligent correlation with the day school. In many places the public schools give "credits" for work done in such departments. In all places and all cases the church's teaching activities should take hold of the whole child; should keep that hold seven days in the week, and should genuinely coordinate their aims and means with all the good influences that are playing upon the developing life. To do this, the church's teaching agency must be a genuine school. Parents, teachers and pastors must see in it the very heart of the church's life, the recruiting-ground of its membership, and the fountain-head of its efficiency. The home, the school and the church can thus cooperate in giving wholesome direction to the unfolding and outreaching life of the child.

4. But these agencies can carry our children only so far. The boy or girl who goes only thus far before launching upon a lifework will be but poorly equipped. The youth must go to college—must, if possible, continue through the university. It is an epoch in life—a crucial time. Manhood and womanhood, even in their beginnings, differ widely from childhood. There is a "self-consciousness of the elements of character." Childhood's illusions fade; maturity comes almost at a stride. Life-plans begin to form. Self-choice is made; the individual begins to look out for himself. self-reliance and the sense of personal responsibility are present. It is now begun life with a meaning never before realized. Here men are men, not boys; and college "girls" are women!

The higher branches of learning cannot be mastered and carried on at home among familiar associations. Home ties must be, at least temporarily, broken; former school and Sunday school and church ties must be loosed. The student must meet the most crucial period of his life and wrestle with the most fateful problems, among strangers in strange surroundings. For the church and the home to loose their grip on him then, is tragic. But what is to be done? Why, the home, the school and the church must stay with him. They must see him through. And they can do this in but one way. They can provide for him a Christian college, with a home atmosphere, where all that home, church, Sunday school, and day school have done for him will be conserved and carried to completion.

Only by the co-operation and interaction of these several agencies, carried on throughout the time of life-preparation and character-formation, can our young man or young lady be brought to that ripe, well-rounded manhood or womanhood that can take its place near the head of the column in the march of present day progress.

This is the program of first importance in the church just now. A program of staggering magnitude, it may seem at first glance; and a few may be tempted to declare it impossible. But we have far more to encourage us than to discourage us. We have the Christian homes, the Sunday schools, cordial relations with the day schools, and a considerable number of well-located colleges and universities with admirable records behind them, to begin with. When all these are brought into such correlation as really to unify their endeavors, the task will be half done. The other half will be, the adding to our present institutions of learning enough new institutions, enough building and equipment in connection with our old ones, and enough endowment for all, to give us one great coordinated system commensurate with our needs, opportunities and responsibilities, as we face our world-task. This, in turn, involves the raising of all the millions for education that our great church is calling for.

For the success of this undertaking, one thing, and one thing only, is needed: absolute, intelligent loyalty on the part of every preacher and leader in the church. This will insure the education of all our people in the one great business which we have in hand. Nothing more is required. The more than two millions of Southern Methodists have the money. They are willing to put it into this great enterprise if we show them the value and urgency of it.

And the preacher's task, while not an easy one, is decidedly simple. Have faith in God and in the church; master the literature of the Movement; flood your congregations with light on this great subject—and follow the Standard Plan through to a finish!

PRAYER.

O God, who renewest the days and the years, grant me this and every morning the vision of thy face. In the light of thy countenance may I see all toil and pain, all joy and service made beautiful and godlike. Amen.—C. W. McCormick in "Little Messages for Shut-in Folk."

Faith is a thing that presupposes a searching after till it finds the God in whom man lives and moves and has his being; the half-unconscious feeling that there is a glory which God, the alone great and good and glorious, destines for and can alone bestow upon man.—Selected.

HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN TO BE FINISHED.

To the Methodists of North Mississippi: In obedience to the instructions of the North Mississippi Conference, lately held at Charleston, Miss., a meeting of the presiding elders of the Conference in the interest of the Methodist Hospital at Memphis was held at Wiposna on Dec. 1, with Bishop W. F. McMurry presiding. Report No. 1 of the Hospital Committee adopted by the Annual Conference, which ordered that an intensive campaign be conducted from Dec. 15, 1920, to Jan. 9, 1921, to finish raising the quota of $150,000 assigned to and accepted by the Conference a year ago, was taken up and carefully considered, and the following decisions were reached:

1. That a campaign of preparation in behalf of this movement shall be carried on in every presiding elder's district from Dec. 15 to Jan. 2. In furtherance of this undertaking, we urge every pastor in whose charge the assigned quota has not been raised to begin at once to organize his forces to complete this work. An efficient soliciting committee should be secured and a local treasurer appointed for each church. Specially prepared subscription cards and other informing literature will be mailed to each pastor within the next few days.

2. The week from Jan. 2 to 9, inclusive, is designated as the time for securing (in cash and subscriptions) the quota assigned to each church. Let attention be called to this matter from every pulpit on Sunday, Jan. 2, and let an every-member canvass be made that afternoon, or at some time during the ensuing week. Final reports as to the outcome of the campaign should be made in every congregation on Sunday, Jan. 9.

There was present at our meeting in Winona Rev. J. K. Farris, Field Agent for the Memphis Methodist Hospital in the North Arkansas Conference, who came at the instance of the Board of Managers in Memphis. As the Hospital campaign in Arkansas will not be under way for a brief time, the services of Brother Farris were offered by the Boad of Managers, free of cost, to the Methodists of North Mississippi until the close of their campaign on Jan. 9, and this offer was gratefully accepted. Brother Farris is a strong campaigner, and is ready for work now; and pastors desiring his assistance in raising their quotas may communicate with him by addressing him in care of Dr. T. E. Sharp, Union and Planters Bank Bldg., Memphis, Tenn.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our pastors and people the imperative necessity of making a success of this campaign. The Board of Managers of our Hospital have been forced to borrow heavily upon their own personal endorsement to keep going the work on the main building of this institution, and they have done this relying upon the pledges of the patronizing Annual Conferences to supply funds for this purpose. Unless our quotas are secured, the Hospital cannot be completed and equipped, and to have this enterprise halted and imperiled for the want of means would be a deep reproach to our church. Already its consummation has been too long delayed. We have dallied with this undertaking, while other denominations have gone forward and outstripped us in this appealing field of service. We cannot believe that the Methodists of North Mississippi, stringent though the times may be, will fail to come to the rescue of this splendid project, which they were instrumental in starting, and which promises so much to the church and humanity in this section of the South.

Respectfully yours,
T. H. DORSEY,
R. A. MEEK,
S. L. POPE,
J. H. FELTS,
R. A. TUCKER,
J. B. RANDOLPH,
A. T. McILWAIN.
Presiding Elders of the North Mississippi Conference.

MEMPHIS METHODIST HOSPITAL.

The North Mississippi Conference has pledged substantial support to the building of the hospital in Memphis, Tennessee, and the presiding elders and bishop in charge, at the request of the Conference, met in Winona, on Tuesday, December 7, to plan for the payment of this pledge.

The total amount expected from the Conference is $150,000. Only a small payment has been made on this total. The $150,000 has been apportioned to the several districts and for the most part to the pastoral charges within the districts.

The Annual Conference, at the session held in Charleston, November 17-20, instructed that special attention be given to the securing, in cash and subscriptions, the entire pledge, between December 15 and January 9. Literature and subscription cards will be sent to each pastor in the Conference, and during the week beginning January 3 and closing January 9, subscriptions are to be taken.

It is expected, of course, that each member of the Conference will give proper attention to this responsibility laid upon him by the North Mississippi Conference. The need for funds is most urgent. Our representatives have assumed obligations that must be met. They are depending on us.

W. F. McMURRY.

TO THE PASTORS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: May I suggest to the pastors who are going to a new charge that they leave their successor a statement of the Centenary for each church on the charge, showing the amount pledged, and the amount paid to date, and the name of the Centenary Treasurer; also any other information that would prove helpful? I wish to call your attention also to the payment of your pledge to the church where you made your pledge.

Please see that your Treasurers remit all their collections so as to reach me not later than December 20, and urge them to push their collections, for, remember—10 per cent of all paid in this year goes to our Conference, to be used by our Conference Board of Missions to help the mission charges. Do not take it for granted that they have already reported, but see that they have done so.

If there is any information or help that you may need from this office, you only have to ask, and I shall be glad to furnish it.

May the Lord abundantly bless and use you this year for the "ongoing of His Kingdom" in your charge, and to all the ends of the earth!

With Christmas greetings and best wishes for the New Year, I am,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Co-Workers: I wish to thank each of you for your co-operation during 1920, which has made it possible for the Mississippi Conference to occupy seventh place in the list of Conferences in the collection of Centenary pledges, going from thirty-sixth to seventh place during the year, for which we should be thankful.

Let's all work together during 1921, that we may reach the top. Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

EDUCATIONAL SET-UP MEETING—NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Our Educational Secretary for the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. H. Holder, called together at Winona, Tuesday and Wednesday, December 7 and 8, the representatives of the different Quadrennial Boards, the Commission on Education appointed by the last Annual Conference, together with the presiding elders, who studied, in detail, the plans outlined for the guidance of our pastors and people in the work of the Educational Movement now before the church.

Rev. J. L. Neill, representing the Nashville office, spoke to the brethren at length on the "Objectives," which are to have our attention during the first months of the new year.

Arrangements were made for a meeting in each presiding elder's district during the middle of January, to which all the pastors in those districts will be brought for the study of the outlined suggestions, and inspirational services, so that they may carry the message to every congregation in the Conference of this great and timely movement.

If you have not read the five objectives, as stated in the manual on "Talking Points," or on the first pages of the "Survey," read them right away and commit them to memory so you can talk of them as you go about your work; preach them as you fill your appointments, and pray over them all the time. Only the first three and last (5th) are to be stressed during January, February, and March.

Brother Holder and each presiding elder will notify, through the press and by personal correspondence, the pastors of the time and place of the meetings nearest them, so that they may attend one of these January gatherings.

The Church has spoken - her loyal sons respond..
The full power of the Church has been called into action by the command of its supreme governing authority. The General Conference has ordered its loyal sons and daughters to strain every nerve and sinew to make Christian Education dominant in the life of the Church and the nation.
The General Conference considered all—and determined all. It set the time: "During the second two years of the quadrennium." It designated the character: "A Church-wide popular campaign." It isolated the Movement: "One campaign at a time: it is not practicable to place two campaigns under one committee."
After long consideration of all the factors involved, the whole plan was set up as it stands today. The time for discussion and argument has passed. We are in the period of action.
The General Conference Was Wise
The great assembly of the Church showed prophetic insight and wisdom. This is its declaration:
"The physical conquest of Germany will avail but little unless it is quickly followed by a great spiritual conquest. The war will be quickly followed by a far more titanic and fateful struggle, a contest for the spiritual supremacy of Christ in the life of the world. Success in this second war will depend largely upon America, and more particularly upon her Christian colleges and universities."
Prophetic words indeed! In the social, industrial, and national chaos of the world—with its unrest, class struggles, radicalism, misery, devastation, starvation, Bolshevism—great souls hear the clarion challenge to that "more titanic and fateful struggle."
We Step as One Man
"The right of way shall be given to the educational campaign during the second two years of the quadrennium, and during this period the full power of the Church shall be delivered." These are the exact words of the great Conference.
Loyal sons of Methodism therefore stand at attention, in the forefront of progress, trim for the "more titanic and fateful struggle." The voice of our Church —and, we believe, the voice of the Head of the Church—has called us. We respond with full loyalty and devoted allegiance.

THE LITTLE HELPER.

That's what I am, for every day
My grandpa calls me so,
And as I've always lived with him
I think he ought to know.

I find his hat and cane for him
When they get out of sight,
And put his slippers in their place,
And bring them out at night.

I look about and see a lot
Of things to tell to him,
Because my eyes are young and bright
And his are old and dim.

I very often go to walk
With him along the street,
And stand close to him when he talks
With people that we meet.

And he has told me many times
To be a lady true,
And give a proper answer back
When I am spoken to.

So now I do not turn my head
And twist my bonnet-string,
But when folks speak to me I speak
As p'lite as anything.

I'm such a comfort and a help
To grandpa every day,
I don't know what he'd ever do
If I should go away!

—Mary Hanson, in The Christian Register.

PHIL'S STARVATION DAY.

"You know what the minister said about the children in India, mamma—how some of 'em were starving, and we must help; well, how do they feel before they starve?"

"They feel very, very hungry, Phil," his mother answered.

"The minister said it would do us good to saccer-a-fice by not eating our dinners and send the money."

"But he didn't mean little boys, dear. He meant fathers and mothers—grown-up people, you know."

"He didn't say so—he said the ones that was sorry for 'em, and I'm sorry."

Phil was quiet for a full minute, and then he said, "How much do I cost in a day?"

"Your food do you mean? Oh, perhaps fifty cents!"

"Would you give me fifty cents if I didn't eat any breakfast or dinner or supper to-morrow?"

His mother laughed. "Why, yes, but I wouldn't like to have my little boy go hungry."

"I want to be hungry, mamma—I want to get very hungry, so I'll know how the poor boys in India feel."

"All right," Mrs. Fay answered, for she thought Phil would forget before morning.

But he did not. When Robert and Ida sat down to breakfast, he climbed into his high chair, but would not take oat-meal or rolls.

"Are you sick?" his father asked.

Phil shook his head.

"I'm saccer-a-ficing for the hungry children. Mamma will give fifty cents."

Rob and Ida laughed.

"Oh, come, eat your breakfast," they said, "you can have the money, anyway."

But Phil shook his head and sipped water from his silver cup, and a little later trotted off to school quite cheerfully.

But when he came home at noon the dinner smelled so good! It was a sober little boy who slowly mounted the stairs when the family gathered at the table.

"Oh, come back!" Rob cried. "It's roast lamb and green peas."

"And strawberry shortcake with whipped cream for dessert," Ida fairly shouted.

"I smell 'em," Phil called back—"and I better not stay down there. I'm not giving up—but—I am a little bit—hungry.'

His voice trembled and his father exclaimed, "I can't stand that! Do go up and get the boy."

But his mother said, "I wish I could, but Phil is in earnest, and I don't like to persuade him to break his resolution."

Rob and Ida leaned over their plates, and it seemed hard to swallow their food.

"I don't want to stop eating," Rob whispered, "but I'll give up going to the Park if you will."

Ida nodded, and brushed away her tears. "Yes, and ice cream and chocolate, too."

"Sure."

After school Ida felt so sorry for the little hungry brother that she planned a "party" out under the trees where there should be plenty of fruit and cookies.

"Not really eating," she explained, "but just something to keep him from starving."

When she went for him, however, she found him fast asleep on the play-room floor, and his mother undressed the little hero and put him in his bed without fully awakening him.

But the next morning Phil's eyes flew open while the birds were singing their first songs.

"Is it another day, mamma?"

"Yes, dear," was the answer, after he had called again, "but it isn't time to get up."

"But," sobbed Phil, "I want a banano. I'm all—squinted up—inside of me. But I didn't give up, did I? Now can I please get a banano?'

And then, if an "early bird" had peeped in, he might have seen a dear child in his nightgown creeping downstairs in the dim light and grasping a big banana from the fruit dish in the dining-room.

"It's so good, mamma," he chirped, climbing into bed again, "and I want to send a million to those hungry boys. Now where's my fifty cents?'—The King's Builders.

A NURSERY ECHO.

"Mother," said George, "we had a nice time yesterday afternoon at Uncle John's. Do you know that there is an echo behind the barn? I wish we had one here."

"Well, so we have," said mother. "This house is full of echoes."

"It is?" said George. "Where must I stand to make my voice come back to me?"

"Anywhere you choose, but I think the nursery is the best place.

Off ran George, delighted; but as he entered the room, he saw that Baby Ned had possession of his new kite and was proceeding to fly it. "Put that kite down," he cried angrily. "You will break it to pieces, you bad boy!"

"Bad boy, bad boy!" shouted the baby.

And mother entered the nursery just in time to prevent a serious difficulty. "I think you found your echo sooner than you expected," she said soberly when peace was restored.

George hung his head. "Oh, is that what you mean, mother?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied; "that is what I mean. Just as the echo behind the barn sent back the very tones of your voice, so your little brother and sister reflect back your tones and manner. I think that if you will remember this it will make you very careful how you speak."

Later in the day George was playing stage-coach with the little children, and with his shouting and his trumpet setting the nurse almost crazy. "I wish," she cried out angrily, "that you would go downstairs. You are such a noisy, horrid boy!"

"You are a horrid old thing yourself," he shouted back. And then suddenly he began to laugh. "Why," he said, "I was an echo myself that time." And as his mother came in just then, they had another talk about echoes, and both George and the nurse determined to try to make some pleasant ones before the day was over.

When Baby Ned's supper came upstairs, he was cross and would not drink his milk, and said that his bread was "sour."

"George," said mother, "now is your chance." And George ran into the room and was so funny and bright with the baby that in a few moments he was in high humor, and as mother listened, she could not tell which was the laugh and which was the echo.—Parish Visitor.

A CHEERFUL SINGER.

By Helen M. Richardson.

I'm just as sure as I can be
To-day I heard a chickadee.
He seemed to be above my head,
And this is what I thought he said:
"Winter is coming, but, you know,
I sing through rain and cold and snow.
I'm always happy, don't you see,
Because I am a chickadee."

Editorial

THE MAIN ISSUE.

As the church in Louisiana and Mississippi enters upon a new Conference year, it will be well to keep in mind the work that constitutes its real task during the months ahead of it—the work of evangelizing all the people.

We must not forget, of course, that we have a program of definite undertakings which must not be neglected. The Centenary pledges must be collected, the Educational Movement must be successfully carried through, the hospital enterprises must be adequately taken care of, and many local plans for development and improvement must be carried out. But we must not forget that all these things rest ultimately upon the preaching of the gospel as the power of God unto salvation to those who believe; and we must not forget that the primary and essential work of the church is to get people to accept Christ as their savior.

We hope no preacher or church member will neglect in the slightest degree any of the claims of the church in connection with the great forward movements that have already been undertaken or that are in prospect; but we do earnestly hope that this will be a year of preaching such as Louisiana and Mississippi Methodism has never known before. It is in the pulpit that the power is generated that enables our church to accomplish great things; and it is in the pulpit, largely, that those forces are set in operation that build up the Kingdom of God and extend its borders. Faithful, earnest preaching, based upon the fundamental spiritual verities, will do more toward maintaining a proper morale for all proper religious undertakings than all the systems of mechanics ever devised, though these are altogether to be commended in their appropriate places.

If preaching were an easy task, we should have plenty of it; but it is a brain-taxing, heart-searching, soul-trying piece of business, and there is danger of our allowing collateral issues to cause us to neglect the main thing. When our preaching loses its power, all our other interests will begin to fail.

THE METHODIST HOSPITAL AT MEMPHIS.

We desire to call the attention of North Mississippi Methodists especially to a communication from the presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference, appearing in another column, concerning the urgent necessity of completing at once the collection of the quota for the Methodist Hospital at Memphis. This communication of the presiding elders is in line with the action taken by the Conference in its meeting at Charleston, and is in keeping with the immediate needs of this great institution.

It was a great step forward when our church undertook to establish in the city of Memphis a great hospital which would minister to the physical needs of all our people throughout the adjacent territory. We presume no one will question the need of such an institution, or the propriety of the church's undertaking its establishment. It is strictly in keeping with the teachings of the Master that we should minister to men's bodies as well as to their souls.

The sentiment in favor of establishing this hospital was so strong, and the provision made for meeting the necessary expenses in connection therewith was so comprehensive, that those charged with the responsibility of carrying out the plans felt fully justified in going forward. The progress that has already been made, as indicated in the report of the Hospital Committee, is most commendable and gratifying, and we can take a just pride in what has been accomplished. But the work is not yet complete, and the authorized additional funds must be forthcoming if the enterprise is not to suffer very greatly.

In designating the period from December 15 to January 2 as a time for preparation for securing the amount apportioned, and the week of January 2-9 as the time for collecting the amount in cash and pledges, the presiding elders have not only complied with the instructions of the Conference, but they have also provided a most business-like method of getting the claims of the institution before all the people. This plan ought to be heartily entered into by every pastor and every pastoral charge, and every possible opportunity ought to be given the members and friends of the church to subscribe in full the allotted quota. There need be no fear that the presentation of this cause will interefere with the adequate presentation of any other cause to which the church is committed, since ample time will remain for due consideration of these causes.

We hope—and "hope hath in it somewhat of expectation"—to hear that North Mississippi Methodists have fully subscribed the quota of $150,000 for the Methodist Hospital by January 9.

MEETING OF THE SOUTHERN METHODIST PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The Southern Methodist Press Association, composed of the editors and the publishers of all the periodicals of our church, is in session this week in Hot Springs, Ark. This organization was formed about two years ago for the purpose of bringing together those who are charged with the important work of furnishing the church its periodical literature, in order that there might be developed among them the closest possible co-operation in the service they are trying to render the church. Already the Association has functioned in many helpful ways, and the meeting this week is expected to result in a profitable discussion of some of the perplexing problems that confront our church papers. The editor of the Advocate is in attendance on the meeting, his absence from the office being made easier by the cheerful assistance of Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Church, this city, in providing for next week's issue.

DEATH OF MRS. J. B. A. AHRENS.

New Orleans Methodism suffered a great loss on Wednesday of last week in the death of Mrs. J. B. A. Ahrens, one of the few connecting links between the Methodism of fifty years ago in this city, and the present. She was the wife of the late Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, D.D., a distinguished scholar and preacher, who rendered eminent service to the church in its earlier days in this city.

Mrs. Ahrens was a devout woman, a lover of the church, a supporter of its institutions, and a friend of its ministers. For many years she was a regular visitor to the Seashore Camp Ground, where she enjoyed the fellowship of the saints, taking an active interest in the religious services and doing what she could to maintain the revival spirit that has made the Camp Ground historic in the annals of Methodism.

She passed away on the day she was eighty years old, having attained the age which she had expressed the desire to reach. Her days were beautifully spent in the service of the Lord, and her end was peace. She is survived by a son, Mr. H. H. Ahrens, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, now in charge of the secular press division of the Department of Publicity of the Christian Education Movement, a daughter, Mrs. E. K. Jennings, of this city, and several grandchildren. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, assisted by Rev. J. A. Aiford and Rev. W. L. Duren. The Advocate extends tender sympathy to the friends and loved ones who are in sorrow because of her going.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. H. Wade Cudd has made a fine beginning at Tallulah, La., his new charge. One of the special features of the work at Tallulah is a fine prayer meeting.

Rev. A. R. Beasley writes that he has been cordially received on the Corinth circuit, North Mississippi Conference, and that the outlook for the year's work is good.

We desire to call special attention to the "Special Offer" on the first page of the Advocate this week. This offer ought to be of interest to a great many of our churches throughout Louisiana and Mississippi.

Rev. R. T. Nolen has reached his new charge and is now comfortably situated at Weir, Miss. He has visited all his appointments—six in number—and has preached at four of them. The work begins well.

Rev. C. L. Oakes, of Oakland, Miss., writes: "We reached Oakland on last Monday evening, and were received by these good people in a whole-hearted way. We are well pleased with the work, and are sure of a good year."

The Southern Association of Schools and Colleges, at its recent meeting in Chattanooga, Tenn., elected Dr. J. Reese Lin and Dr. D. M. Key to important positions in that organization. Both these gentlemen are distinguished members of the faculty of Millsaps College.

Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb has been most cordially received by the congregation of First Church, Columbus, Miss., and Rev. A. T. McIlwain, the new presiding elder of the Columbus District, has begun his work most auspiciously—so we learn from a private communication.

The Lake Charles American-Press of December 8 gave a full account of the meeting of the district stewards, pastors, and other prominent church leaders of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, held recently at Lake Charles. The meeting was a success in every way.

Rev. R. P. Neblett writes from Durant, Miss.: "Our people have given us a cordial welcome, and there is a bright prospect for a splendid year. The congregation here has a magnificent church plant, and the work is well organized. Former pastors did valiant service to enable us to start out with such a bright future."

Rev. J. W. Booth has been cordially received for the fourth year at Keener Memorial Church, Baton Rouge, La. There has been steady progress at this church during the pastorate of Brother Booth, the pastor's salary having been increased each year. This year bids fair to be the best of the four.

We are authorized by Rev. Chas. A. Battle, presiding elder of the Lake Charles' District, Louisiana Conference, to state that Rev. Drew J. Wilson has given up his work—the Branch charge—having joined the U. S. Marines, and that Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir, of Crowley, La., has been placed in charge.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, our pastor at Bogalusa, La., made the Advocate office a pleasant call on Tuesday of last week. We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Gearheard had found it necessary to come to New Orleans for medical attention, though we were glad to hear that she was improving under treatment.

Rev. J. C. Ellis, of New Augusta, Miss., writes very appreciatively of the lecture recently delivered at that place by Dr. Geo. S. Hammond, under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League. By the way, the Perry County News expresses the delight of the community over having Brother Ellis returned to New Augusta for another year.

The teachers of our Sunday school at D'Lo, Miss., voicing the sentiment of the whole school and of the church, passed resolutions recently regretting the contemplated removal from the town of Mr. S. G. Armstrong and family, who are strong Christian forces in the business, social, and religious life of the community. Brother Armstrong is superintendent of the Sunday school, and a member of his family is secretary.

The Annual Meeting and banquet of the Louisiana Sons of the American Revolution was held on December 11 at the Grunewald Hotel. The "Hero of Verdun," General Nivelle, and other prominent gentlemen addressed the Sons, and the officers for 1921 were elected, the Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., being re-elected as Chaplain. The doctor has served as Chaplain for many years.

The Fayette Chronicle, in its issue of December 3, pays high editorial tribute to Rev. J. R. Jones and Rev. Claude P. Jones, both of whom live in Fayette, the former as presiding elder of the Port Gibson (now Vicksburg) District, and the latter as pastor of the local Methodist church. These two good men, father and son, have greatly endeared themselves to the people of the town and community.

A delightful occasion was the reception on Friday evening of last week, in the Sunday school rooms, to the new pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, Rev. W. L. Duren, and his family, given by the Missionary Society. There was a large attendance of the membership of the church and, in addition, many visitors from other congregations. Brother Duren and his splendid family have already won their way into the hearts of the people.

The presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, Rev. H. M. Ellis, authorizes the Advocate to announce that Rev. Eugene C. Terry, received from the Methodist Protestant Church as a local deacon at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, has been appointed pastor of McCalls Creek charge, which was left to be supplied. Brother Terry is the father of Rev. W. A. Terry, our pastor at South and East McComb.

We are glad to learn from a note from Mrs. Paul D. Hardin that Brother Hardin, who was unable to attend the Mississippi Conference on account of illness, is steadily improving at the Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg, Miss., where he was removed a few days ago, and that he expects soon to be able to take up his work on the Meridian District. Mrs. Hardin expresses deep appreciation of the many messages of love and sympathy that have come from the brethren during Brother Hardin's illness.

THE EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION AND CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL SECRETARIES IN SESSION AT MEMPHIS.

At Memphis, Tenn., November 29-December 1, was held the first joint meeting of the Educational Commission and the Conference Educational Secretaries to consider the program of spiritual cultivation of the Christian Education Movement of the church, and to give attention to the details of organization for the work in the field of the Annual Conferences.

During Monday, November 29, the Educational Commission was in session. This body gave a full day to the consideration of all matters touching the program of the Christian Education Movement, with special reference to the Spiritual Objectives of the Movement. The following resolution, declaring the mind of the Commission concerning the great enterprise now before the church was adopted:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Commission that the next four months should be used to deliver the full power of the church of developing in the minds of our people an adequate conception of the meaning of Christian Education and of its place in the life of the church and the world, and that, for this period, all effort should be devoted by our leadership—the Campaign Committee, the bishops, the presiding elders, the Conference secretaries, pastors—to the carrying out of such a program as will thoroughly educate the whole church as to the supreme significance of the spiritual objectives of the Christian Education Movement."

It will doubtless be of interest to our people generally to give again the names of the ministers and laymen who are members of the Educational Commission, the committee that has general supervision of the Christian Education Movement. These are: Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Bishop E. D. Mouzon, Drs. Stonewall Anderson, J. H. Reynolds, H. N. Snyder, W. B. Beauchamp, E. B. Chappell, F. S. Parker, A. J. Lamar, A. F. Watkins, F. N. Parker, W. P. Few, C. C. Weaver, P. H. Linn, S. C. Hatcher, and C. M. Bishop; Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Judge Joseph E. Cockrell.

The joint meeting of the Conference Educational Secretaries, the Educational Commission, representatives of the Sunday School Board, the Board of Missions, the Woman's Missionary Council, the Epworth League Board, and of the College of Bishops was held Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1. The entire first day was given to a discussion of the Spiritual Objectives of the Movement, and throughout the sessions of the two days the thought of those present was held to these vital things. In the messages of the speakers, the discussions, the questions considered, this was given emphasis: That our educational institutions cannot alone provide Christian education; the very foundation of Christian education must be laid in the home and the church. This message is to go to the heart of the church; to the last man, woman, and child of the remotest congregation of Southern Methodism. If there was no movement for the strengthening of our educational institutions such as was ordered by the General Conference in the adoption of a four-year program for the church, these vital things of the Christian Education Movement must be the program of Southern Methodism if the church is to have the right to live and grow.

Those present were Bishop Collins Denny, Bishop W. B. Murrah, Drs. C. M. Bishop, W. P. Few, P. H. Linn, J. H. Reynolds, J. S. Chadwick, H. N. Snyder, A. F. Watkins, Stonewall Anderson, W. B. Beauchamp, E. B. Chappell, F. S. Parker, A. J. Lamar, F. N. Parker, Judge J. E. Cockrell, Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Drs. R. H. Bennett, P. L. Cobb, J. J. Stowe, O. E. Goddard, D. R. Anderson, Ed F. Cook, President J. M. Williams, Rev. J. L. Neill, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, J. M. Way, H. H. Ahrens, A. C. Marts, W. E. Hogan, Dr. H. H. Sherman, Rev. J. M. Barcus, Rev. R. E. L. Morgan, Rev. S. W. Lawler, Rev. I. P. Martin, Rev. O. B. Crockett, Mr. J. S. Bond, Rev. Leonidas Robinson, Rev. Albert S. Lutz, Rev. R. C. Douglas, Rev. Robt. Selby, Rev. C. S. Rennison, Dr. L. C. Branscomb, Dr. J. S. Frazer, Rev. H. M. North, Rev. J. E. Dickey, Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. J. E. Roach, Rev. B. D. Doak, Rev. J. M. Bradley, Rev. G. E. Edwards, Rev. J. A. Harmon, Rev. R. N. Allen, Rev. D. M. Ausmus, Rev. R. W. Adams, Rev. J. C. Roper, Dr. J. K. Joliff, Rev. Sterling Fisher, Dr. T. F. Marr, Dr. R. T. Webb, Dr. W. R. Bourne, Rev. A. E. Clements, and Rev. J. A. J. Brock.

The speakers of Tuesday were Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Dr. P. L. Cobb, Dr. F. N. Parker, Dr. R. H. Bennett, Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Dr. E. B. Chappell, Bishop Collins Denny, Dr. J. J. Stowe, Dr. H. N. Snyder. It was a great day, a day in which the addresses, discussions, and all the proceedings centered in the fundamental things of Chistian experience and service. Those present went out from that day's sessions with the faith that this great task of the church can be done, that it will be done, because its doing is the program of Jesus Christ for the building of his kingdom. This is true because the message of the Christian Education Movement to presiding elders, pastors, and lay members is to devote the months of January, February and March to special emphasis on three great spiritual messages: January — Spiritual Resources (Bible study, prayer, intercession); February — Christian Life Service (stewardship of life and time, the call to thousands for all-time Christian service); March—Christian Stewardship.

The sessions of Wednesday were given to a study of the plans of work in the Annual Conferences, this being set forth by Mr. A. C. Marts, Dr. P. L. Cobb, Dr. R. H. Bennett, Dr. J. J. Stowe, and Mr. J. M. Way. Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb spoke for the Woman's Missionary Society, pledging the support of this organized force of Methodism. Within the next several weeks a meeting will be held in each Annual Conference, this to be attended by members of the Conference Educational Commission, the presiding elders, officers of the Conference Board of Missions, Sunday School Board, Epworth League Board, the Woman's Missionary Conference, the Conference Educational Secretary, the heads of Conference schools, and others whose work has direct relation to the program of the Christian Education Movement. At this meeting will be made careful plans for the district group meetings which will be called for the purpose of giving helps to pastors and other representatives of all the churches in each district in carrying to the people at home the messages of the Spiritual Cultivation program. It was recognized that, as in all the work of the church, the presiding elders, pastors, and active lay workers are to be the leaders in this great enterprise. The connectional representatives and the Conference Educational Secretaries are in their places and are giving their service for the help of the people to whom the General Conference has committed the task of carrying through the program of the Christian Education Movement—the presiding elders and the pastors.

The Memphis meeting marked a most important stage in the movement of Southern Methodism towards its larger inheritance. That larger inheritance is in its call to do its share of the work God has given to His church of to-day. If Southern Methodism does this, we must come into a deeper spiritual experience than the church now knows. The call of the Christian Education Movement for these months of Spiritual Cultivation gives us our opportunity as a church, the opportunity to give ourselves in prayer and intercession that we may be equal to our task; to make our vows of consecration to God's service, giving of our time and effort as never before; to place on God's altar our sons and daughters, our homes, our possessions. As we face the fearful responsibilities that a world's needs bring to us to-day, it is not so much a question whether the educational institutions of the church shall get what they ask. This will be given. It is, whether Southern Methodism shall enter upon the larger service to which the Spiritual Cultivation program of the Christian Education Movement calls, or whether we shall yield our place as a vital factor in the work of rebuilding the world according to the ideals of Jesus Christ. This was faced by the men and women in the Conference at Memphis. There was only one answer to give, only one way open to them and their church—their message to the church is: "Southern Methodism shall not fail in this task God has given us; we shall go forward!"

J. S. CHADWICK, Secretary.

On the 20th inst., at 3 a.m., the death angel entered the home of WILLIAM L. MARSH, of Summerfield, and took him from us. Brother Marsh was born in Jackson Parish, October 17, 1848, and died on November 20, 1920. He was seventy-two years, one month and three days old. He was a good man. He was happily converted at the age of eighteen in old Lisbon Methodist Church, down at the altar with Brother Billie McLane (an old-time class leader) by his side. On Dec. 19, 1872, he was happily married to Miss Fannie Barrow, of Homer. To this union were born nine children—seven girls and two boys. His companion and three children survive him. Brother Marsh lived a consistent Christian life for fifty-four years. He served as a steward in the Methodist Church for fifty-two years. He was a man of decided optimism. He was a model husband and father. After the funeral service held in the Methodist church in Summerfield, he was quietly laid to rest in the Summerfield cemetery by the Masons, witnessed by a host of friends. J. C. PRICE, Pastor.

Bernice, La.

MRS. BETTIE LEWIS OWNES CURTIS was born November 9, 1893, and died October 20, 1920. She was twenty-six years, eleven months and seventeen days of age. She was united in marriage to Jobbie Curtis, April 22, 1917. She was a member of the Methodist Church, having joined the church when but a little girl six years old. She lived a beautiful Christian life and always loved her church and was a very fine church worker as long as she was physically able to discharge her church duties. For several months before she died she was confined to her bed, but always bore her suffering well, and always said that she was ready to go when her Lord took her. She leaves a devoted husband, mother, and several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends, who are looking forward to that day when they shall see her again, and part no more in that world that shall never end. Her pastor,

The subject of this sketch, MRS. FRANCES VIRGINIA FOSTER LEWIS, daughter of Rev. A. J. Foster, was born, January 24, 1857, and departed this life November 1, 1920. She was united in marriage to Wiley B. Lewis, December 8, 1878. There were born to this union seven children—five boys and two girls. Six children and the devoted husband survive her. Sister Lewis was truly a good woman. Being of Methodist parentage she was baptized in infancy; joined the Methodist Church at the age of nine years, and lived a consistent Christian life until the last. She was always kind and patient and bore her afflictions for many years with a smile each day. Her life was beautiful; she died a beautiful death. Just before she left us, she called her devoted husband to her bedside and told him good-bye; then she called each one of her devoted children to her and told them good-bye; then she called her pastor and friends and told them good-bye, and went home to glory. She died a triumphant death, rejoicing in her Lord as long as she was able to speak a word. We will miss her and know that this world is poorer by her going, but we have the sweet assurance that heaven is richer by her departure.

Her pastor, T. J. HALFACRE.

J. Bailey and I. W. Cooper. T. J. Bailey was elected the seventh time as Superintendent of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League.

In order to educate and agitate, that our people may be thoroughly alert, the League has put on a State-wide campaign of speaking. It is the purpose to reach every town of as many as 400 inhabitants. The speakers are of very high order, such as Rev. G. W. Young, Louisville, Ky., Hon. John G. Woolley, Chicago, Ill., Rev. G. M. Hammond, D.D., Wilmore, Ky., and Rev J. Sidney Peters, D.D., Richmond, Va. The speaking began November 8 and will continue till February 25, 1921.

There is great need of extra activity on the part of the League just at this time. It is true we have won several great battles, but there are yet others ahead. It would be nothing short of a national calamity for the League to relax its activities at this juncture. The liquor forces were never better organized, never had more available money, and were never more determined than at present. It is true they have failed in their legal contentions, but they are now laying deep their plans to defeat us in Congress—not in the present Congress, perhaps, but in the next one.

T. J. BAILEY,
Superintendent.

A WORD AS TO THE BEGINNING—MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: A splendid congregation gathered in the beautiful new church at West Monroe. Here I preached my first sermon on the district on the 21st of November. Brother Ledbetter is doing good work. I enjoyed being with him and his people. At 7:30 p.m., I preached at Monroe, First Church. We had an enjoyable service. Brother Means is in high favor with his people. This is evidenced by the fact that he is beginning his fifth year as pastor of this church. On the 28th I was with Brother McCormick at Dubach. We had a good service and a very happy occasion. Brother McCormick and his people are planning great things for the year. At Ruston, where I sometimes stop in my rounds, I preached on Sunday morning, December 5. Dr. Henry, and his assistant pastor, Brother Greenway, are doing things, and everything is moving on well. They go to church in Ruston. Each Sabbath morning a great body of students are in evidence, and altogether this is one of the largest congregations in the State.

The thriving little city of Jonesboro was our next place, where Brother Morgan is beginning his fourth year. There seems to be an enthusiastic desire and effort to make this the best of the four years. The house was filled with an appreciative audience. The splendid music added much to the service.

I am hastening around with happy anticipations and will write again of what the brethren are doing.

Very truly yours,
K. W. DODSON.

Simple Mixture Makes Hens Lay

By W. S. Burgess.

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A life long study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Combs' Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 158 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.—Adv.

Obituaries.

The death of ROBERTA HARBOUR, at her home in Meridian, July 16, 1920, has been one of the saddest incidents of the now fast-dying year. It has been difficult for her parents and grandparents and all the large circle that loved her, in church and in school, to throw off the shadow of her going and to appreciate the gain that is so surely hers "with Christ." Roberta was born July 1, 1904. Her beautiful sixteen years were spent in Meridian in the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Mars, which is home also to her parents, Robert L. Harbour and his wife, Mrs. Leila Mars Harbour, and her little brother, Fenton. She lived long enough for the beautiful womanhood to become apparent, budding behind a charming, delightful girlhood. In the midst of her high school years (a junior) she had attained a proficiency that placed her in the lead of the best, and had made her the center of a circle of girlish friendships which transfigures schooldays. Her going cast a shadow into life's happy sunshine, not soon forgotten nor dispelled. She was baptized, April 23, 1905, Easter Sunday, by her maternal great-grandfather, the Rev. D. G. Ellis. In the fall of 1914, in the ministry of Rev. John R. Jones, she joined the church and began to evidence the fruitage of a real surrender to Christ worthy of the "Apostolic succession" to which she naturally belonged. Her mother writes of her: "Naturally religious and spiritual, the finer interests of life were always sought. She was from babyhood serious and earnest in trying to do her duty. The strongest characteristic of her life was to be dutiful. She was determined and patient and persistent in her endeavor to do her whole duty. Her parents have repeatedly commended her for her sweet, gentle life and told her how gratifying it was that she was so biddable and satisfactory as a daughter." Happy the mother who can speak so of a daughter even though that daughter has gone to await her in the Beyond!

Writing further, her mother says of her: "She was a trusting Christian, noticeably loyal to her church. She loved her church associations, the Sunday school, the missionary society, the Y. W. C. A., and could always be depended on to do her part in whatever she was affiliated with." In Central Church circles we all felt that the church had given to the Church Triumphant one of its best, out of whose consecrated, strong life we could have expected those unusual activities that occasionally bless a congregation. The writer has not known many deaths with the peculiarly sad features and yet with the uncommon comforts as this. It seemed as if the sun in mid-heavens before the noon was reached had gone back suddenly into the darkness of night. It seemed as if the spring had come with all its melodies and fragrance, and then at its brightest had lapsed again into the icy chill and gloom of mid-winter. It seemed as if the flower had budded until the fragrance and beauty of a gorgeous flower were apparent and then in a moment had faded and died. But this was only seeming. The sun had descended early, but only to rise again in a better world with a fresher, all-undying light; the springtime had only ceased to give place beyond to an eternal summer; the flower had fallen only to bloom again forever in the fragrant, unceasing garden of our God. Roberta Harbour lives, promoted early, and in her Father's House, with the sainted ones gone on, waits while you, dear ones, weep and work on awhile.

FROM McCOOL, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Allow me space to say that we reached our new charge, McCool circuit, November 26, and found comfortable quarters in the parsonage home good enough for any pastor in the Conference. We feel and believe we have a great people to serve. The Rev. A. R. Beasley, the former pastor, together with his family, is well beloved by all this people. He has wrought well among them, and they have many good things to say of him and family, and all wish them well in the new field.

The second night we spent in the parsonage home in McCool will be long remembered by this pastor and wife. About 8 o'clock a group of the good people from various parts of the town came with light hearts, but burdened physical bodies, and rolled their burdens off in the pantry, consisting of all kinds of good things to eat so numerous we will not mention them one by one, but enough, not only for days and weeks, but for months.

After an effort to express our appreciation in words, and failing completely, we listened to the reading of a portion of God's Word by Sister Tucker, one of the company, the 91st Psalm, after which we all knelt around the family altar and poured out our hearts in praise and thanksgiving for His blessings. And as this group of good people bade us good-night our heart kept saying, "God bless you, God bless you!"

May we ask the readers of the Advocate to pray for us, that we may be a blessing in His name?

D. R. McDOUGAL, Pastor.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The past session of the Annual Conference was very pleasant. The Sunday school statistics were very surprising to me. The reports turned in at the Annual Conference show a net loss of 44 Sunday schools, with a net loss of nine Sunday school pupils. I feel sure that there was a gain in Sunday school pupils this year, because several of our largest schools have doubled their membership.

I wish to make a plea to the circuit Sunday school workers that they do everything they know to do, and then some, to keep the schools open every Sunday in spite of the bad roads, the weather or anything else. I trust that a definite effort will be made to increase the attendance in the schools this year.

I ask an interest in your prayers. May this he the greatest and happiest year of all your life! Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Have you ordered your literature? If you want to get the material you need, order now. Why not try a copy of the Church School for each of the teachers and the Visitor for the Junior boys and girls?

If you care to bave a training class taught in your school, we will try to furnish you a teacher. Why not arrange for this early in the year? The Sunday school is not great because it is a Sunday school, but it is great only when it has teachers who know the secret of making God known to the children.

Organize every class above the juniors. Do this much and in our Federation of Wesley Bible Classes we will try to help you make these classes effective. We have enough unused and unorganized people in our schools to accomplish a hundred-fold more than we are doing.

This week I am teaching a training class of twelve at Carrollton. Besides the class, eight or ten come in and get the benefit of the work. We are using Life in the Making. We are planning to have not less than fifty classes like this taught during the year. No good reason to wait for warm weather.

One secret of the great success in the Clarksdale Sunday school is, every teacher in the school is being trained except three men. All the junior teachers are studying The Pupil. Another large group is taking Learning and Teaching. All who are not doing class work are enrolled as individual students except the three mentioned.

"Go and do thou likewise."

FROM PONTOTOC, MISS.

Dear Brotber Carley: Our assignment for the new Conference year is back to Pontotoc. A year's record has been made, and, as we review it, we see much to encourage us. Real progress has been made in the Lord's work. We show a net increase in members of 34. Fifteen infants bave been baptized. The Sunday school is carrying a $500 Missionary Special. The Memphis Hospital allotment to this work of $1200 was over-subscribed and half of it has been paid. Our entire financial showing was nearly $8,000, or about $4700 over the record of a year ago. The church is well organized in all departments and a true spirit of religious devotion possesses a large part of the membership. There has been a real growth in grace in the lives of many of the members.

The financial work for the new year has already been mapped out. Four days after we returned from Conference, the official board met, made out the budget and levied the assessment on the members. The leaders among the laymen are really and truly putting the interest of God's Kingdom FIRST in their lives. In spite of the uncertain financial conditions existing over the country, they are planning the Lord's work on a broad and liberal scale.

We are entering the new year's work with strong faith, and determination that it shall be the best we have given to the Master's service. Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,

H. P. LEWIS.

YOUR RHEUMATISM

Remove Its Cause by Purifying Your Blood.

One of the most important duties of your system is to burn up certain substances no longer of use in your body. One is uric acid, now generally held to be the cause of rheumatism. It inflames the joints, stiffens the muscles, causes pains aches, and lameness.

The system is helped to dispose of this troublesome substance, and rheumatism is permanently relieved, by Hood's Sarsaparilla the one true blood purifier. It is aided in many cases by Hood's Pills, which in small doses are a gentle laxative, in larger doses an active cathartic. A grand course of treatment, economical and effective.

CENTENARY "PAY-UP" WEEK, JANUARY 16-23.

At the meeting of all the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference and others interested in the great Centenary here in New Orleans on November 30, it was unanimously agreed, after hearing a careful presentation of the work of the various Conferences by Dr. Ricks, of Nashville, that January 16-23 be made a Centenary "Pay-up" week, at which time every subscriber will be urged to pay at least 40 per cent of his pledge.

The great work launched by our church as set forth by Dr. Ricks was most gratifying, indeed, and will succeed only as these pledges are all paid up in full.

The Conference Secretary-Treasurer expressed a very general feeling, judging from reports from all parts of the Conference, that our subscribers intended to pay their full subscriptions. Already quite a number of churches have paid 40 per cent or more.

It is ardently hoped that every church in our Conference will take pleasure and special pains to accomplish this great result in this week.

At this meeting it was suggested that the pastors and laymen make short talks at every church on Sunday, January 16, on "The Centenary Making Good," and to urge all to pay 40 per cent on pledges. Special literature bearing on this subject will be sent to every pastor in ample time from the Secretary's office as well as to the district leaders.

No one is more keenly alive to the great Centenary interests than the women of our Missionary Societies, who are urgently requested to make this one of the special features of their work in lending such help during this week as lies in their power.

STEPHEN S. THOMAS,
Conference Secretary-Treasurer.

THE WORK OF OUR CHURCH IN THE CITIES.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you give me space in the Advocate for a short article on the work of our church in the cities?

It has been suggested by at least one man of prominence that we have a closer co-operation on the part of Methodist churches in the cities and, by this means, inaugurate a "drive" that would accomplish great good. The co-operation and the "drive" are all right, but they will not accomplish the end sought without being accompanied, or led, by the right kind of preaching. And with the right kind of preaching the closer co-operation of the churches and the "drive" would hardly be needed.

The pastors of the city churches, so far as I know, are good men and able preachers. Their sermons are generally, if not always, good. But they do not preach the whole truth. What did Paul say to the elders of the church at Ephesus after a three years' pastorate? "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." Acts 20:27. How many of our city pastors can say as much? How much time do they give to the discussion of eternal punishment? Very little, so far as I have been able to learn after a residence of several years in one of our largest cities. I heard one of our most popular pastors a few years ago preach on "Dives and Lazarus." In the course of his remarks, he said that there were some places here in the city about as bad as any place he could imagine. With that conception of hell, sinners, in many instances, would prefer going to hell rather than going to heaven.

The societies out of which grew the Methodist Church were started by people who came to Mr. Wesley that they might be instructed and helped in fleeing from the wrath to come, which they saw continually hanging over their heads. Wesley said, in a sermon on "Cast not your pearls before swine" (I quote substantially, not having the sermon before me), that "we should not preach on the amiable side of the gospel when preaching to unconvicted sinners, but rather reason of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, if we would make a Felix tremble." I have not counted the texts in which the doctrine of eternal punishment is taught, but I believe it would be safe to say that there are as many as teach the doctrine of eternal heaven.

Can a preacher who has neglected half the truth, and that truth of such vital importance, claim that he has not shunned to declare all the counsel of God? I firmly believe that if all our pulpits would thunder the terrors of the law, universal and inherent depravity, necessity of the new birth, and the witness of the Spirit, we would need no other kind of "drive."

A SUPERANNUATE.

Habitual Constipation Cured in 14 to 21 Days

"LAX-FOS WITH PEPSIN" is a specially-prepared Syrup Tonic-Laxative for Habitual Constipation. It relieves promptly and should be taken regularly for 14 to 21 days to induce regular action. It Stimulates and Regulates. Very Pleasant to Take. 60c per bottle.

"LET ALL THINGS BE DONE DECENTLY AND IN ORDER."

Your editorial in the issue of September 29, on "Enriching the Service of Worship," is very wholesome. Can nothing be done to induce our preachers to cease their slovenly manner of receiving members? Not in ten years have I seen members received with any degree of decency. Usually it is thrust in between Sunday school and the eleven o'clock preaching service, with disgusting irreverence sufficient to make the angels weep. Or immediately upon presenting themselves for membership at the close of a night evangelistic service they are galloped through as though they might never return to be received if not yanked in now. Indeed, such methods may find justification in the fact that many are not again present till the next annual spree, falsely called a revival.

It has always seemed to me that all applicants for membership should be conversed with privately and instructed and trained, and received into membership at the Sunday eleven o'clock service, after due announcement that they would be received at that time, in a reverent and dignified manner. Such service would magnify the church and church membership. It is difficult to keep down the gorge when one who has been a pastor for a third of a century, or longer, lines up a class, reads the interrogatory, and then in sepulchral tones whines, "The answer is"—that too when there are hundreds of copies of the ritual in the pews. A little care, a little thought, a little training, a little sense would prevent such unseemly exhibition.—Methodist, in Zion's Herald.

Will You Help Them This Christmas?

BY LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary.

The M. E. Church, South, has approximately 1,000 living superannuated preachers—that is, men who are worn out, old, permanently disabled physically, and therefore have been retired from active work in the ministry. When they were superannuated their salaries stopped, and they became dependent on the funds raised by the Church for her incapacitated men. The amount received by them from this source, which is their only support, averages for each of them a little more than $200 annually. It is impossible for any man to live in any degree of comfort on such a pittance, and especially so when he has an aged wife dependent with him on this small allowance.

Of these 1,000 superannuates, 100 of them have very bad sight—they are practically blind; 470 of them have very bad hearing—they are practically deaf; 440 of them are greatly impaired physically—they are practically invalids, confined to their beds, wheel chairs, crutches, canes, etc.; 170 of them have each an invalid to support. Under such conditions it is not surprising that our old veterans are actually suffering for the bare necessities of existence. They do not murmur or complain, but out of their patiently borne distresses, deprivations, physical weaknesses, and loneliness, don't you hear them calling you?

It's about to be Christmas again—the time when all people untie their purse strings for worthy and benevolent purposes. Does not this company of 1,000 scarred and battered veterans of the Cross appeal to you as worthy of your assistance? If their great needs are not enough to move you to make a Christmas offering in their behalf, your attention is directed further to our 1,300 widows of deceased preachers. The annual amount paid to each of them by the Church averages about $150. They suffer equally as much, if not more, than the superannuates, for the commonest necessities. Some of them, widowed in middle life, have had to take their dependent children from both public and Sunday School for lack of funds to provide decent clothes for these orphans of our ministry. It is quite bad enough to forget our wornout preachers, but when we also fail to remember the widows and orphans of them our neglect will shame us to the grave and condemn us in the Judgment.

The General Board of Finance, 510-12 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo., was organized by the last General Conference to provide an adequate support for the Conference Claimants—that is, the superannuated preachers and the widows of deceased preachers. The only way the Board can provide such support at present is for the people everywhere voluntarily to send the Board their contributions for this purpose. Therefore, you are urged now to make a liberal Christmas gift to the cause. Put these forgotten men and forgotten women on your Christmas-list, and let the General Board of Finance direct your offerings.

Be a Life Member.—The Board has organized a Conference Claimants' Club, a comradeship of men, women and children pledged to a life-long interest in these veterans of the Church. To be a life member of the club you must send the Board as many dollars cash as there are years between your present age and eighty, together with your name and address. Thereafter you will have no further dues, but you will be expected to work for the cause as you have opportunity and especially to try to induce others to become life members. Upon receipt of your amount, name and address, the Board will send you a beautiful life membership certificate and a gold-plated enameled pin, having three C's in monogram. If 65,000 of our people will become life members this Christmas and pay for the memberships the average now being paid for them, the total received therefor will amount to a half million dollars. It would require an average of but ten life members from every charge in the Church to secure the grand total of 65,000. Think it over!

Other Ways to Help.—If you cannot become a life member of the club, (1) you can send a cash contribution in any amount; (2) you can make a subscription payable at a specified time; (3) you can send a Liberty Bond and receive credit for this gift at its par value; (4) you can take a Christmas offering in your Sunday School class for the cause, and send it to the Board; (5) Sunday School superintendents and Epworth League presidents can have their respective organizations make a Christmas offering for this purpose; (6) pastors can have their congregations make a Christmas offering and send it to the Board.

Not the Way, But the Will.—If you really want to help in this emergency, when you have read this appeal your initiative will find a way that suits your conditions. Remember, Christmas is nearly here. While you are providing for your friends and loved ones, don't forget these old worn-out servants of Him who gave Christ to Christmas. These veterans are His friends. He loves them. If you do good unto them, you at the same time do it unto Him. He said so. Look upon the beautiful Presence of your Christ this holy Christmas time! See, He is pointing you to the nearly 2,300 suffering and needy Conference Claimants of the M. E. Church, South. He reaches forth His finger to show you the way; they lift up their hands pleading for your assistance. Don't you hear them calling you?

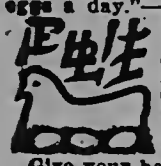
114 Eggs A Day Now Instead Of 25 A Day

This Means About $126 Extra Income Per Month for Mrs. Ropp.

"I have 200 hens, including late pullets not old enough to lay, and had been getting 25 to 30 eggs a day. Then I tried Don Sung and am now getting 107 to 114 eggs a day."—Mrs. Essie B. Ropp, R. R. 2, Littles, Ind.



This increase of 7 dozen a day in the middle of winter, at 60c a dozen, makes $126 extra income per month. Don Sung for her 200 hens cost about $2.50. It paid her, and we guarantee it will pay you.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg-laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Chinese for Egg-Laying

A woman's fondest hope is to stay young. She often resorts to paints, powders and cosmetics to hide her years. Some women pay large sums to so-called "Beauty Doctors" in the belief that money will buy youth. Others wear girlish dresses, thinking they can fool the world about their age. But no one is deceived. The more you try to hide your age, the more it shows.

There is but one thing that holds old age back, and that is health. Sickness and weakness bring old age early in life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a building-up medicine for women. It makes them healthy and strong when they suffer from women's troubles. It keeps them looking young by keeping them well. It is a woman's tonic for the frail, the delicate and those who are nervous, dizzy and who have backache and dragging pains. Favorite Prescription is altogether vegetable and without a particle of alcohol. It is safe to take. Try it now. MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Meridian District Conference.

The annual district conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Meridian District was held at Quitman, October 20 to 21. The services Wednesday night opened with a song, "To the Harvest Fields," the pastor, Rev. H. A. Wood, conducting the devotional exercises. We then heard a very warm address of welcome given by Mrs. Mason, the local president; this was responded to by Mrs. J. H. Rush, of Meridian.

Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, the district secretary, gave an interesting report of the work and urged that we increase our missionary efforts. She reported twenty-four adult auxiliaries, three Young People's auxiliaries and eight Junior auxiliaries, and the pledge in advance of last year. Miss Ormond also reported that the Round Robin sent out by Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb, our Home Base Secretary, very beneficial to the societies, and that many in the district had signed the tithing cards. We then listened to a beauiful quartet, "The Missionary's Farewell"—this touched the hearts of the audience.

Miss Fall, our deaconess, gave an interesting talk on our Meridian Wesley House, its opportunities, its needs, also some laughable incidents regarding her work.

Mrs. McClesky, our Conference Corresponding Secretary, was present and addressed the Conference. Her message was indeed interesting. After Miss Fail had given a talk on home work, Mrs. McClesky reviewed the needs of the foreign fields, showing how inadequate our forces when compared with the enormity of the fields that have been opened to us, and she then urged us to feel the individual responsibility to occupy in His name. After singing "To The Work," the Conference adjourned to meet again Thursday morning at 9:30.

The District Conference opened Thursday morning, the devotional exercises being led by Miss Bessie Hardee, of McGown's Chapel. The lesson was taken from the prophecy of Jeremiah; she gave an interesting and feeling talk on the Scripture, to which the hearts of her hearers responded. After prayer she asked the Conference to sing "A Charge to Keep I Have." Mrs. George W. Herring was elected secretary of the Conference.

There were thirty-five delegates in attendance, four conference officers, and Miss Fall, the deaconess from our Meridian Wesley House. The following auxiliaries were represented: Meridian, Central Church, Adult; Meridian, Central Young Woman's and Meridian Central Young People; Fifth Street; Hawkin's Memorial; Seventh Ave;. Scooba; Waynesboro, Waynesboro Young People; Shubuta, McGowns Chapel; Enterprise; Quitman Adult and Quitman Junior. All these gave splendid reports of their work. As names of auxiliaries having no delegate present were called, Miss Ormond gave reports for them from her secretarial records. As the auxiliaries reported, Mrs. McClesky, who was in the audience, urged that they organize Mission Study Classes and told how to form and keep the study classes going—this was very interesting and many of the ladies present testified that they had been benefited and developed by studying the prescribed course, some especially. Shubuta offered to give their books to any auxiliaries not having a class, in this way hoping to stimulate organization. As the auxiliaries reported, Miss Ormond urged the need of organizing Junior auxiliaries so the young people would be developed to take up the work as the older ones pass out. The need of boxes for the Wesley House was stressed by the district secretary, and the deaconess, Miss Fail, asked that each auxiliary make a definite pledge for the maintenance of our Wesley House.

Mrs. McQueen, the Conference Superintendent of Supplies, asked that all boxes sent to Wesley House be reported to her so that she would have a full report to send to Council. The conference was adjourned with prayer by Mrs. McQueen.

At two, the devotional services were opened by singing "Guide Me, Oh Thou Great Jehovah." Miss Fail read the first chapter of Saint Mark as the lesson, commenting on the Scripture and putting special stress on the words, "Come, follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." She led the Conference in prayer and closed the service by singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Three reports were heard at the afternoon session. Quitman gave an exceptionally good report on the "Round Robin." The Juniors of Waynesboro gave a splendid report, and Miss Ormond reported for the Central Lights, of Meridian Central Church. These little people are doing real good work.

All present enjoyed hearing the messages from Miss Hall to our district secretary while on her way to Africa and all were delighted to hear of her safe arrival in the foreign field.

Mrs. McQueen gave a very interesting talk on the Supply work and asked the auxiliaries represented to elect superintendents of supplies and have them report to her before conference in the spring. Next was the contest showing "Just how much we know" of the missionary activities; this was furnished by Mrs. McClesky, but Miss Ormond held the contest, since Mrs. McClesky was called home before the Conference closed. The questions were written on white arrows, and after sides were chosen an arrow was shot at each side. If these questions were answered, the arrows were gained, but if not, were lost to the opposite side. This resulted in a tie. It was a half hour profitably and pleasantly spent. At the close of this service prayer was offered by Mrs. Mason.

The closing service Thursday night was in the hands of the Conference Superintendent of Young People's work, Mrs. Z. D. Clark. The opening song, "Wonderful Words of Life," was sung by the Conference. The devotional lessons, was given by a junior, little Miss Mason, of Quitman. She used as the lesson, "The Marriage Feast," where Jesus turned the water into wine. The juniors sang "When I Hear that Sweet Story of old;" after this a demonstration of Japan was given by four young people, teaching us something of Japanese customs. Mrs. Clark then took charge of the program and gave an interesting and instructive illustration of the work planned for the young people, showing that a separate and distinct work should be done each month in the year. She also gave a blackboard exercise proving that the lives of the young people were the people were the seed—the plants must bear the fruitage of the Master's kingdom.

Miss Ormond followed her, calling attention to the fact that the ages of six to fourteen belong to the Junior division, and fourteen to twenty belong to the Young People's division. Mrs. Wiley Ferguson then discussed stewardship. She brought out some fine points on giving. The minutes of the Conference were read and approved, a committee was appointed to thank the people of Quitman for their hearty co-operation and splendid hospitality, which will long be remembered with pleasure by those who attended.

We sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Mrs. Ferguson closed the Conference with prayer. On the whole, it was one of the most delightful and uplifting meetings it has ever been our privilege to attend.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FROM BOYCE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: The members of the church received us most kindly. It was after dark when wife and I arrived. When in sight of the parsonage, we saw electric lights shining through each window (we drove through in a Ford), and found some of the elect ladies waiting for us, with rooms scoured, and new art squares on floor, new curtains at windows, clean beds; in fact, the house showed careful thought and preparation. The waiting ladies had the house warm, and a tempting supper. And such a pounding!—not only many things good to eat, but other things of service to the pastor and wife. We pray that we may be so guided by the Holy Spirit, and may be such a blessing to this community, that at the end of this Conference year these same people may be able to say, "Well done, faithful servant."

I finished out the unexpired term of Brother Roberts last year (two months) at this place, but did not move here until this week.

Dear Brother Carley: We have begun our work for the second year on the St. Francisville charge. We have been graciously received. A GREAT DAY IN THE HOMER OIL FIELD.

A new day has dawned in the great oil field near Homer, La. For several reasons the people who live near the same are rejoicing. C. O. M. Hepner, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., which is located near the center of the field, has done some great things through the activities of that institution. Following close on the heels of this work, a public school was established, with an enrollment of more than two hundred pupils. The school board of Claiborne Parish has taken steps to make this school equal in equipment to any graded school in the parish. Through the work of these two institutions there has been a community spirit born that is working a revelation among the workers of the field.

And while oil is gushing forth in great streams, and money is being coined by the millions, we find a greater spirit prevailing among the workers of said community. The Y. M. C. A. is fine, the school is fine, but neither of the two could fill the aching heart, and of this I wish to speak now.

The Macedonian cry was set up, "Come over and help us—build us a church!" Thanks be to God, this cry was heard, men's hearts were stirred to action, and to-day we have a church erected, so all may go and worship their great Redeemer with joy and thanksgiving.

I wish that every man who has an interest in this particular field could attend the church there and see just how much every man, woman, and child out there appreciates the fact that they have a church wholly their own. I want each of the great companies who have holdings out there to make it their business to have a representative call around and see the moral effect that the work is having on their entire working force.

At this time there is a splendid Sunday school carried on each Sabbath that is well attended. It is the purpose of this movement to bring together the whole field in a solid community spirit and so acquaint them one with another that there will be mutual love springing up in every heart and so attach them in this manner as to make the oil field a real home.

At the church on each Sunday at 2 p.m., the Sunday school meets for one hour's Bible study; then follows a sermon by the pastor of the oil field church. We expect to have a woman's auxiliary of some form organized soon that will take care of a great part of the active work of the church.

The writer desires the prayers of all the evangelical churches in the State for the success of this great work, as all the churches are more or less represented there. "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."—II Cor. 10:4-5.

J. F. DRING, Pastor.

FROM MOORINGSPORT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We had a great day yesterday at Mooringsport. We had communion service, and my heart was filled with joy as men, women, and children fell on their knees at the altar, many of them weeping, calling on God for more of his divine grace, to commemorate the death and suffering of our Lord. The altar was filled the third time. Thank God for old-time religion!

We have outgrown our church equipment by far. Just what we are going to do, I do not know, but we have got to do something. Our Sunday school attendance yesterday went beyond the attendance at any time last year. The "Young Peoples' Wesley Bible Class" sent in a request for more room. The church is too small for the night congregations when the weather is good. Two weeks ago we had thirty-six chairs in the aisles, and we did not have on the movies, either. I do not know a place anywhere where they need a well-equipped church more than we do at Mooringsport. We need at least a $15,000 church, and it will take that to build a church to meet the needs. All of our church people are people who work for salaries, and for that reason we have no one who can give his thousands, but we are going to pray and plan for the needs at Mooringsport to be met.

We are beginning our third year here and we are looking forward and praying for this year to be the greatest. What we need most now is, "The power and wisdom from God" to lead His people right. Yours in His service,

R. T. WARE.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

TURNING THOUGHTS INTO THINGS.

While thinking is an abstract process, its culmination is in something tangible. The great inventions that have revolutionized industry were, at first, vague ideas in the minds of inventors, developing, through a process of thought and experimentation, into the machinos that carry on the world's work. It is truo that thoughts do not always culminate in so material a thing as a machine, but the right kind of thoughts must eventuate in some betterment of mankind, else they are in vain. A very practical question that some of us might ask ourselves with profit, is, "Does our thinking get us anywhere?"

HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED!

We read this the othor day: "Perhaps the most successful executive in history was the centurion of the Bible. 'For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me. And I say to this man, go, and he goeth; and to another, come, and he cometh; and to my servant, do this, and he doeth it.' Marvelous man!" While elliciency on the part of employees may not have been the point in mind when the centurion was stating the ground of his appeal to the Master, it is at least illustrative of tho fact that in former times the payment of a day's wages insured the rendering of a day's work. But such is too often not the case to-day. The whole working class is in danger of being brought into disrepute by those laborers who seem to have adopted as their motto, "Do as little as you can for as much as you can get." By the way, we notice that the number of unemployed in the cities seems to be growing daily.

THE INNOCENT SUFFER.

One of the greatest tragedies growing out of the late war is the fact that three and one-half million children in Central Europe are facing starvation, thousands of others already having died for the lack of even tho bare necessaries of existence. It will probably always be so—that the innocent will suffer as the result of wrongdoing for which they aro not responsible—but the Christian world is at fault if it allows that suffering to reach larger proportions that is absolutely necessary. It is estimated that $30 will save the life of a child until the next harvest is available; of this amount, the countries where these children are can furnish two-thirds, leaving the other third, or $10, to be supplied from other sources. Many of our own people have passed through difficult times within tho past four years—but starvation has not stalked among us. Fully to be commended are those agencies which are endeavoring to raise funds in this country for the relief of suffering little ones in devastated lands. The Christmas spirit now so evident will save the life of many a child that otherwise would starve to death.

Christmas Again

Just as the birth of Christ marks the central date in history, so the celebration of that event on December 25 is the most significant event of each recurring year. The Babe of Bethlehem has become the Monarch of Mankind, and his name is revered among all the nations of earth. The sweep of his influence is as wide as the orbit of the sun, and the power of h gospel is the regnant force of the universe. Not by might has he enthroned Himself in the hearts of men, but by the compulsion of infinite love. He marshals no armies and He builds no navies, but with the flaming sword of righteousness in His hand He leads a mighty host against the strongholds of darkness and sin and drives the enemies of peace tumultuously before Him. He is setting up a Kingdom—not of force, but of righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit—a Kingdom not yet fully come, but inevitable in its consummation, since the foundation of God standeth sure. In the days when He was despised and rejected of men, when He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, when He was esteemed smitten of God and afflicted, when He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, when the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, not once did He lose faith in His Father or become despondent because He had to pour out His soul even unto death. The redemption of a race was His mission—and naught else could satisfy the passionate longing of His soul. Because He gave Himself for the world, the inviolable word has been spoken, "He shall see of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied; by His knowledge shall My Righteous Servant justify many; and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in His hand." On this Christmas Day, as we rejoice in the Infinite Gift of God's love, it should be in our hearts to pray as we have never prayed before, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven"; and as the seal of our faith that our prayer will be answered, we add, "For Thine is the Kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen."

"A STIFF UPPER LIP."

The industrial world is in an unsettled condition; the prices of agricultural products are below the cost of production, business enterprises are facing a period of uncertainty, economic forces seem not to be functioning normally. It is evident that the era of readjustment following the war is at hand, and that it will take a good deal of time for the process to be completed. But there is no occasion for our lapsing into despair or of thinking that black ruin stares us in the face. In critical times men must be courageous, but calm. The universe has not lost its center of gravity, and sooner or later things will be restored to a state of normal equilibrium. Now is the time for us to maintain an optimistic spirit and keep a stiff upper lip."

HOW TO SPEND MONEY.

We do not propose to write an essay on personal or household economy; we merely want to call attention to some recent figures concerning the expenditures of our Government. We do not vouch for the accuracy of these figures, though we believe they are taken from official sources, being an analysis of our national budget by an official of the United States Bureau of Standards. According to this analysis, ninety three cents out of every dollar expended by the Government this year go for the support of our military and naval establishments, while only one cent of that dollar goes for education and the improvement of the public health. While the cities spend an average of six dollars per capita for education per year, and the States and private agencies about three dollars per capita, the National Government spends only about six cents. The Federal tax levy this year amounts to an average of fifty dollars for every man, woman, and child in the United States, and of this amount about forty-six dollars go for military purposes. Of course a great debt was incurred during the war, which must be paid, and we must maintain such a state of preparedness as will insure the highest possible degree of safety to the nation. But it strikes us that we have not yet learned how to spend our money for the best things.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS.

It is in our heart to commend those who are habitually inclined to be merciful to dumb animals, and to entreat those who have never given thought to the matter to deal gently with these faithful, but often unappreciated, servants of mankind. The mute suffering often endured by livestock during the bitter cold of winter would break our hearts if we could but realize it, and their brutal treatment by inhumane owners would stir the deepest indignation. Let parents teach their children to be kind to all breathing things, and let them set the good example. Gentleness is a most manly virtue.

IT'S NEVER YOUR CHURCH—IT'S YOU.

If you want to belong to the kind of a church
That's the kind of a church you like,
Don't go and pack your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll find elsewhere what you left behind,
'Cause there's nothing that's really new;
It's knock at yourself when you knock your church.
For it isn't the church—it's you.

A church is not made by those afraid
Lest some one else gets ahead;
When everyone works and nobody shirks,
You can work for the Lord—not praise,
And if you work for the Lord—not praise,
Your brother will help you, that's true;
Your church then will be what you want it to be,
For it's never your church—it's you.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE IN THE LIGHT OF THE GREAT WAR.

By Rev. John A. Rice, A.M., D.D., LL.D.

I heard Woodrow Wilson say, when he was President of Princeton, that the best things a boy gets out of college life he gets not from the teachers, not in the classrooms, not from books and laboratories, but from the college life. The spirit of the institution is the most powerful educative factor in any college. That spirit is atmospheric, invisible, intangible, yet all-persuasive and inescapable. You can no more avoid it than you can the air on the campus. The things that make that spirit Christian are, therefore, of first importance, and that importance is strongly accentuated by the experiences of the Great War.

In the first place, it must be wholesomely religious. There are two dangers to be avoided. It is easy for a denominational college to lay stress upon professions their students make while there. Emphasis upon shibboleths, upon denominational phrases, upon sectarian tenets, upon mint, anise and cummin, may be good campaign slogans, but count for little with wide-awake young men and women trying to orient themselves in the big world. It is not impossible to substitute religiousness for both Christianity and education. The other danger is the opposite. Cold intellectualism is the constant peril of the earnest student bent upon finding the truth. Between these two extremes the Christ must be atmospheric. He must be unavoidable; not in mere formulae, but in fact, in real life and experience. There should be no place in the Christian college for the intellectual highbrow, on the one hand, or on the other for the ecclesiastical diplomat, the smooth manipulator of men and things, the man who carries all his religious goods on his coatsleeve and his countenance. Reality should so saturate his soul that he radiates it in every attitude as well as every act. Only reality can make us free. Conscious contact with reality at the very core of life and truth—this is the first passion of the Christian college. This is, perhaps, the first lesson of the war for us all. And all reality centers for the teacher in the individual student.

The weak point in all our education is that it is impersonal. We are so busy chasing facts that we are in danger of forgetting truth, and so busy dealing out facts in general as to forget that all our research may miss the individual soul. Education is for the student and not the student for education. My observation has been that there is very little intimate contact between the pupil and the teacher. Too few students, I fear, ever go to their professors for help in the deep and delicate problems that most concern them. All too few professors, I am afraid, ever have their students as warm friends in the holy of holies. When I was a college president I was able to report to the Annual Conference the per cent of the girls who professed a definite experience of religion, who regularly read their Bibles, who ever brought a soul to Christ, who ever did Christian work of any kind. The interviews in which I gained this knowledge were some of the richest hours I have ever had. And these girls now understand. Their warm appreciation shown in a hundred ways is one of the noblest blessings my home-coming brought me. Wherever I meet a Columbia College girl, I meet a most delightful friend devoted to the last degree. My dealings with them were personal, individual, in the spirit of reality. One by one I sought to bring the Christ into their lives. This, I thought, was my mission. The war has shown this ideal to be the right one. For all the values at stake turned upon the faithfulness and efficiency of each soldier in the place where he fought. The worth of one comes closer than ever to us now.

But the emphasis must not be on the individual experience alone. The interdependence of all life is another element in the atmosphere of the Christian college. Bourbonism, selfishness, the segregation of self—these are barbarous now. No man can be fully saved on an island. Brotherliness is as necessary to salvation as faith. We shall all be saved together or lost together. Getting into heaven or keeping out of hell is not the highest aim. We shall carry our brother with us into whichever state we enter finally. Our colleges must be socialized—must be dynamic centers for the Social Gospel of Jesus.

The bringing on of his social ideal as set forth in the Sermon on the Mount is our task, and the colleges must accept it as such. Whatever obstructs the progress of that ideal must go sooner or later. All our institutions must be readjusted to the new appreciation of the other half with its perils and problems, its pain and its privations. The democratizing, the humanitizing, the Christianizing of all our relationships in the home, the church, the schools, politics and statecraft, commerce and industry, and wherever else man meets man—this must be our newly emphasized aim.

The hour has struck also for Christian service as the supreme motive not only of personal life, but also of all our institutions. No business ought to survive a day that is not intended somehow to serve society at some point. No youth can be trusted or ought to be respected that seeks an education for selfish ends alone. Training for a career must now give way to training for service as the great incentive. Each doing his bit was the slogan of the war. Preparation of our children for doing more effectively their bit is the only justification for the vast outlay in our schools. Vocational interests press for fresh attention. Training by educational guidance from experience to experience, and through experience to further experience and into whole-hearted self-expression in sacrificial service to the whole social order—this is the new education. Finding his place as well as getting ready for it confronts every youth. Misfits and self-centered careers among graduates are a reflection upon the college.

There is also a new patriotism which reaches the lowliest. My native heath will always be the sweetest place to me in all the world, be it ever so humble. But I must not forget that the Hottentot feels the same way. College work is a part of the world life to-day. A world consciousness, a world conscience, a world passion, a world commission, a sense of world importance—these must be felt in the modern college. The Stars and Stripes should symbolize the moral leadership of mankind. Despite wedding her western way too closely to our stores to give place to universal democracy as the political creed of all peoples, making that creed prevail politically, industrially, and economically over all the earth is the task before the humblest institution that claims to be Christian.

Our colleges being a part of the total life of to-day, they must connect up with that life in all of its phases, with the thought-life in particular. We are passing through an intellectual crisis. There are great thought movements sweeping over every land. The reaction now on is only temporary. Narrowness and superficiality and the backward look will have their day. Whatever thinking we are doing must be done with the total self. We cannot think in one way politically, industrially, scientifically, philosophically, and in an altogether different way religiously. We must relate our religious thinking to all the rest so that it shall be a vital whole. Dogmas are of social origin. We make them out of our lives, in terms of our social experiences. Hence the forms of one generation may have little power over the next. That is a poor apology for a Christian college that ignores modern thought. If the college cannot grapple with the truth, who can? If the college is afraid of Jesus, who will teach Him? If in times like these the so-called Christian college leaves her constituents to find out from other sources what the world is thinking about, the whole world, the whole world in all the reaches of its turbulent soul, how can she justify her claim to be Christian?

We have learned what wrong education can do. We have learned also that upon religious education that is Christian the peace and the lasting progress of men and nations depend. Without it not only our democracy but also all our spiritual values will perish from the earth. Without it nothing is safe. Nothing is finally worth while.

Dallas, Texas.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

II.

Dear Brother Carley: In a previous communication I said, I was never "the hero of my own tales," or words to that effect. Nevertheless, I have had experiences—some thrilling, some otherwise. Preachers were apt to have experiences of all sorts in the days of my youth. The things here noted occurred away back when all traveling was done on horseback or in a one-horse buggy, and often over roads almost impassable. There was not a branch railroad in all the land, and but few through lines. They did not wind around or zigzag for the accommodation of preachers.

My first real itinerant experience was one winter night about the first of January, 1861. The brother I lodged with didn't seem to know anything about cold weather. There was a big fireplace and a big fire in it, but the two doors to the room were kept open, and this, with the cracks in the log house, made the temperature almost as cold as out of doors. I would stand before the fire and burn on one side while freezing on the other. I kept this up until bedtime. Then I was put to sleep in a little side room constructed entirely of clapboards—both roof and sides—and not closely put together. I could see the stars through the openings. What the bedding was I do not remember, but the covering was light and not much of it. I carried a blanket (a blue one); as all circuit riders of that day. But for that blanket and my warm blood, I should have nearly reached the freezing point. The experience was painful, but I was with a brother on a newly settled place, and fared no worse than he.

Another winter night's experience was different. It was warm for the season, and raining when I went to bed. Before day the weather changed. The rain stopped and snow fell. It was what was called a "searching snow." It certainly searched and found every nook and corner of the house. The snow fell to the depth of an inch all over the floor and the bed. I learned that night how bears and other animals keep warm under such a cover. I was never as hot in bed before or since. Now and then I would cautiously reach out and get a handful of snow and cool off. But what a time I had getting up in the morning bare-footed in an inch of snow! I was no exception in that household—all had to do likewise or stay abed.

Six times I have been in "perils of waters." The first was in crossing Hatchie River bottom near Cornerville, Mississippi. A big overflow had subsided just enough to put the water inside the bunks, but the back-water was still in evidence. Two roads were before me. The ferryman advised me to take "the lower one." After going a half mile I struck the first slough. The pond was filled with drift-wood and fallen timber, so that it was impossible to cross it on my horse. A large tree had fallen almost parallel with the bank of the slough—with about three feet of ground between the tree and the water. I led my horse nearly up to the drift, gave him a strong and sudden push and he dropped into the water. In a minute he was across the slough. I followed afoot over the drift. There was no water in sight when I remounted, but I soon saw a plenty—a sea of it, not more than an inch deep where I entered it, but it grew deeper and deeper as I advanced. I soon saw that I was heading for a swim, and made ready. I rode up to a big stump, pulled off my clothes, put them and my saddle-bags on my shoulder and was immediately in swimming water. Fortunately the deep water was not more than thirty feet wide. I was soon on solid ground and safe.

It was on the ferry-boat at this crossing that I married my first couple, the 7th of February, 1863. Snow was falling at a lively rate. The girl in the case had run away to meet her beloved. In doing so she had waded three sloughs waist-deep in water. When the gentleman asked: "What do you charge me, parson?" I said, "Nothing but to love your wife and take care of her." The man was young, and a widower, and this second wife lived only three weeks. She caught her death cold wading water for his sake.

The next time I made a risk in water was in an effort to get over Forked Deer River somewhere in the vicinity of Humboldt, Tennessee. High water had destroyed the bridge, leaving no way for horses and vehicles to cross except to swim. I sent my wife across on a skiff. I concluded to swim. I pulled off my shoes and socks and rolled up my pantaloons above my knees. When I reached deep water I stood up on the buggy seat. Everything went out of sight except my body and my horse's head. I went over all right. Just as I drove up on one side of the stream another preacher, J. J. Brooks, and his wife drove up on the other. Brother Brooks was a great, big fat man. He decided that he could do as well as I did. There was one difference in my favor: I was driving a good, sensible horse. He was driving a stubborn mule. He made ready as I had done, first seeing that his wife had crossed safely. He started in, but when he got to swimming water he forgot all about standing up on his buggy seat. He got as wet as Governor Edwards said he would make New Jersey: as wet as the Atlantic Ocean.

Another peril encountered was in the back-waters of White River in Arkansas. The river was not full and I was surprised when I came to a bayou, perhaps four miles from the river, full and overflowing, and hundreds of yards wide. The bayou was spanned by a bridge that could not be seen. I knew the location of the bridge and that it was well weighted with rock, but I didn't know how deep it was covered with water. I unharnessed one of my horses and waded in. The water was barely three feet deep. I put the horse back in the traces and went across safely. I had gone but a short distance when I struck more water—not too deep for the horse to wade, but too deep for comfortable riding in a buggy. Fortunately my buggy was a plano-box, and water tight. It floated like an old-fashioned Mississippi River-bottom bateau. I could not see the road and goverened my course by the notches on the trees. Nothing went wrong. I got through safely, and was as thankful as a man could well be. I could not be persuaded to undertake the like again.

I had another experience in water, but not perilous. It was amusing. At least a stranger looking on from a distance would have taken a hearty laugh. It had been raining a long time and the roads were in a bad fix, especially across the creek bottoms. Wife and I started from Hickory Flat, Miss., to Jackson, Tenn. At the middle of the first day my horse showed signs of being tired, and his shoulders became sore. In fact, like Birmingham's horse, he became very much "discouraged" and declined to go without assistance. At bad places, when he stopped, I got out and pushed just enough to let him know. That was all he needed. We came to a creek—shallow, but about thirty feet wide. He waded in and over to about eight feet of the opposite bank and stopped. He couldn't be persuaded to move, nor would he be forced. I got out to help. There was nothing else to do. I stripped off all the clothing I could spare, got a fence rail and put it from the front wheel to the bank. On this wife walked to dry ground. Then I waded in and laid my hands on the buggy. Bob felt a gentle push and out he went. I didn't help to the extent of ten pounds, but Bob thought I did.

I might have saved myself trouble had I adopted the tactics of one of our North Mississippi Conference preachers, as reported several years ago. Whether true or false, the story goes this way: "I was on my rounds," said Brother W——, "when for some cause my horse failed. He couldn't travel, and I was forced to seek help. I called on a gentleman living close by, who readily offered the loan of a spare horse. The kind-hearted gentleman told me frankly that the horse was balky, and added, 'My boys drive him, but sometimes they have to cuss him to get him to go.' I thanked the gentleman and told him I thought I could get along without cussing. The horse performed nicely until I came to a creek with steep banks. He got through the water but hesitated at the heavy climb up the bank. I begged and coaxed the animal to no purpose. I tried to lead him but he wouldn't move. I got on his back and tried to ride him out, but all in vain. Finally I concluded to quote Scripture on him. I stood up in the buggy and with emphasis on the last clause, I said: 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned.' The horse took the hint and gave me no more trouble."

How did this story originate if Brother W—— had no such experience and didn't tell it?

"DO IT FUST"—DAVID HARUM.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman.

(This posthumous article will, we are sure, be read with unusual interest by the multitudes of friends of the lamented Dr. Holloman.—Editor.)

Dear Brother Carley: Now that the Conference sessions are over and the brethren have, for the second time, placed me among the fathers, I claim a few lines to moralize.

Some years ago I read the then popular novel, "David Harum," which bristled with common sense aphorisms and rugged philosophy. One of David's soliloquies, interpreting the Golden Rule, was, "Find out what the other fellow wants to do to you, and do it to him fust"—a nutshell full of every-day practices.

"But," you say, "what has this to do with Conferences and preachers?" Well, much, if experience is to serve as teacher. It is the time for criticisms and prejudgments of incoming pastors.

Full many a family has already been analyzed, and obstacles erected to the pastor's success by placing him below par by the gossiping parasite. The plucked bird does not recognize himself in the picture presented, and the self-sacrificing wife stands aghast at the man upon whom she has looked with greatest pride. New doctors, new lawyers and others may come unnoticed, but the new pastor must needs be measured and sized up from every angle; a process of prejudging which recalls David Harum's backwoods philosophy of "doing it fust." Over and against this disposition our Master places the Parable of the Beam and the Mote, which we do well to heed.

EXCLUSIVE OBJECTS OF THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

Articles have been written and statements made which mistakenly attribute to the Anti-Saloon League of America aims and, indeed, activities which are not only not authorized, but which, indeed, are positively forbidden by the constitution of the League. The second article of the constitution declares: "The object of this league is the extermination of the beverage liquor traffic. Furthermore, the League pledges itself to maintain strict neutrality on all questions of public policy not directly connected with the traffic in strong drink."

As chairman of the National Legislative Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America since the organization of that committee in 1913, I officially declare that the Anti-Saloon League of America has never violated the constitution, as stated above. Whatever may be the personal opinion or activities of some individual supporters of the Anti-Saloon League of America, the League itself as an organization is not supporting either directly or indirectly any efforts to secure legislation concerning gambling, Sabbath observance, divorce, social impurity, tobacco, etc. Legislation proposed on these great questions by various persons or organizations may or may not be desirable or wise, but the Anti-Saloon League is positively forbidden by its constitution to take any part in any movement which is not directly concerned with the extermination of the beverage liquor traffic.

DIGGING AT DUTY.

Many a man now eminent in his trade or profession has begun in a humble way, as an apprentice or novitiate, and by sheer resourcefulness and downright hard work has beaten his way to success. A former superintendent of motive power on the Pennsylvania lines thus described his rise to his important position: "I got in there (on the system) and was given a chance to dig, and I dug!" Another official of the same road once sized up the human-power situation in this fashion: "The fellows learn that the longest poles knock the most plums." When a young man is given a chance to do even the humblest work, the only way to begin is to begin. If he is afforded an opportunity to dig, let him dig in! There is a man in Scripture who weakly declared: "I cannot dig." That was pretty bad, although he had grace enough to add: "To beg I am ashamed." Not every man, indeed, can work as a day laborer. There are still those, plenty of them, who even in these days of steam shovels and electric motors sell their muscles or bend their energy in aging toil. But most people to-day, while engaged many of them in manual employments, must use their wits to spare their backs and strive to attain a skill which will relieve toil of its most tiresome forms of drudgery. Yet, however we may arrange it, there will nevertheless remain a certain amount of downright demand which can be met and countered only by digging in. The practice that makes perfect is often a laborious calculation, an intense application of brain power, an unsparing devotion, or an emotional strain which leaves the subject of the process the worst-tired man at the end of the day that there is to be found anywhere in town. Especially when the feelings and sympathies, as well as the mind and muscles, are strained is the the intense and persistent. Nevertheless, it is only by toil and sacrifice and perseverance that life's highest prizes are won. It rests with us to determine, when confronted with any unfamiliar, yet promising situation, whether we shall "give it up" before we try, or try with a vehemence of zeal, a resoluteness of purpose, and a persistence of activity which simply wring prosperity out of poverty, and conquer circumstance by sheer force of character. "I cannot dig!" "I dare!" Here are two types of men, one a failure and the other a force. Which type are you?—Zion's Herald.

TO THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Brethren: Seeing in the current issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, which carried a report of the proceedings of your Conference session, that, on motion of Brother C. W. Crisler, you adopted a resolution expressing the affectionate esteem of the Conference for me, I accept this method of making reply to your generous thoughtfulness of me in my time of suffering and inability to be actively engaged in the work which lies your hearts and lies my heart. I cannot only express my sense of gratitude for your thoughtfulness of me. From my entrance among you I have loved you. My indebtedness to you for uniform kindnesses is more than I can express, and daily I have you in remembrance, making prayers for you that you might be blessed with all heavenly blessings in your own hearts and in your abundant labors. Truly the Lord has guided you, as the great increase of members to the church clearly makes manifest. In all these victories I rejoice with you, and assure you it would have been a blessing to me if I could have been present at your Conference and joined with you in giving thanks unto the Great Head of the church for His presence in your ministry. May all riches of grace abound unto you continually.

I am glad to report my physical condition improved, yet at times I have great suffering. I trust you will be mindful of me in your prayers. Believe me to be sincerely your brother in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. JOHN C. KILGO.

A SUPERANNUATE SUPERANNUATED.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Well, they have gone and done it the second time! The Conference at Meridian last year superannuated me, but it had to be done again at this Conference. I rested about three months in the first of the year, and it so refreshed me that I took up my old work of preaching. I preached sixty-four times during the year. It was too much for me, and I almost collapsed. I have had to quit all pulpit work.

I never realized, while well and strong, how much joy and satisfaction it was to preach. Now, "old and worn out," I want to preach all the time. I wonder if I can preach when I get to heaven. Of one thing I am sure—my ascended friend, Tom Holloman, and I will hold sweet and blissful fellowship that shall never be disturbed by suffering or parting. I missed him at this Conference more than I can tell.

Our Memorial Service, Sunday at 3 p.m., was devoted wholly to his memory. He was the only member of the Conference who passed to his reward last year. No man in our midst was more loved. His passing from us gave us great sorrow, but no one has any doubt of his glory and rich reward at God's right hand. The service in memory of my precious son in 1919 made my heart bleed; the service in 1920, in memory of my oldest friend, Tom Holloman, opened afresh the wound and overwhelmed me. All during the Conference I felt lonesome and sad—"Tom Holloman is not here, and will never attend another session of the Conference." This thought painfully oppressed me. But we will meet in heaven.

I passed my first year in the superannuate class, and was advanced to the class of the second year. Good! If I can complete this year with credit, I shall be happy. I am going to do my best—may the Lord help me! I implore all the brethren to pray for me.

Brother Noble was given work, and Brother Barr was added to the Honor Roll. I congratulate him on his promotion. I hope he may wear his new honors with dignity and sweetness of spirit. I am sure he will.

It is the best thing possible for us to wear out ourselves in God's work and put our all into the building up of His kingdom. Human activities can not be directed to any other end so noble and profitable. If I had my life to live over, it should be spent in preaching Jesus Christ and Him crucified. There is mighty little money in it, but God's work, and God's love, and God's approval are values infinitely greater than all worldly riches. The hundreds of souls God has saved through my ministry, and the thousands comforted and strengthened have meant more to me in gladness of heart than millions of dollars could have done. In this holy work we can and do lay up for ourselves heavenly treasures. We can afford to bear patiently all the hardships we are called upon to bear in the service of God and humanity.

In our annual memorial services the question comes unbidden, "Who will be the next one to fall?" May we all live in constant readiness for the coming of the Son of man."

May 1921 be a fine year for the Advocate and for the editor!

THESE TIMES.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

I just want to preface this article with a short reference to the Conference recently held in the little city of Charleston, then expostulate somewhat against the tendency of the times.

Charleston was greatly blessed by having the North Mississippi Conference meet with our church. Everything, from the opening session to the reading of the appointments, was an inspiration to our whole city. The presence of that body of Christian workers in our city was something new under the sun for Charleston. Many said "IT JUST CAN NOT BE DONE"—entertaining so many—but it was done.

Those Connectional visitors, even, were accepted by our good people as worthy while men. The messages brought by these brethren were an inspiration to our church. All our folks fell in love with Bishop McMurry and are yet talking about the great message that he brought on Sunday. The congregations of the other churches were delighted with the sermons preached by their Methodist friends.

No man ever had better and more efficient captains and lieutenants, to serve under him, than I had associated with me in caring for the Conference. Every one of them addressed himself to the work he was asked to do with joy and enthusiasm. Save for the fact that I was worked rather strenuously for the first four days, I had no trouble at all. It was a joy and pleasure all around. This is due in a large measure to the fact that our guests were agreeable men and women who were easily pleased.

As I see things, at this writing, it would be a mistake to change our plan of caring for the Conference. Charleston will welcome the North Mississippi Conference back to her borders when that body is again scheduled to meet here.

These Times.

The human family is responsive to but three appeals: 1. Appeal to right; 2. Appeal to expediency; 3. Appeal to force. In times like these through which we are passing, our church and State will be maintained, alone, by those who are amenable to the appeal to RIGHT. With but few exceptions, the Christian—the individual who fears God and delights to do His will—is the only kind of man who can be depended upon to maintain law, order and right amid times like these into which we are rapidly passing. The church and the State are the foundation sills upon which our civilization is builded. We can not afford to allow either to go to pieces. If we desert the church in these times, it will be but a question of time before our State will also be deserted; then we will have chaos.

Some of our people have already begun to cut out altogether their support of the church. Others are threatening not to pay their taxes, but allow their property to be sold, then redeem same later. In times like these it is our duty to strain a point both to keep up our support of the church and to pay our taxes. If we fail at either point, we will but hasten our doom. Without money, our State can not do business. Our schools will be closed, then our children will be turned loose without restraint, many of them, to follow the lead of bad men and women who will make criminals out of them.

Yes, I know these are hard times, and they are likely to become harder. But noble men grit their teeth, hold a stiff upper lip and stick out their lower jaw, amid times like these, with grim determination to save their homes, families and civilization. Who is going to protect your home and loved ones, when you throw down the church of God and your support of the State? Why should you wish to live selfishly, and at the same time receive and benefit by the protection offered by the church and State? As Christians we will stand by our guns, even though all other men desert.

God is allowing us to be tested. Shall we ring true, or will these testing times but prove that we are hypocrites? If we are but hypocrites, and will not repent, then the sooner we are dead, the better off will God and the world be.

These are times for all church members to say: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Charleston, Miss.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SET-UP MEETING.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of those interested in Christian Education for the Louisiana Conference was held at the First Methodist Church, in Shreveport, on Dec. 9. Every presiding elder was present and a large number of leaders in the various organizations of the church. The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District. The objectives of the campaign were succinctly given in an address by the Secretary of Education, Rev. Albert S. Lutz. The inspirational address was given by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Nashville, Tenn., who clearly showed the need for a Christian Education Movement at this time.

At the noon hour the brethren took lunch together at the Inn Hotel. In the afternoon the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Alonzo Early, the Field Secretary of the Sunday schools. The Cultural Program of the Movement was explained by the Secretary of Education.

The presiding elders announce the following dates for district group meetings:

Shreveport District, at Shreveport, Jan. 4.
Monroe-Ruston District, at Rayville, Jan. 5.
Lake Charles District, at Lake Charles, Jan. 7.
French Mission District, at Houma, Jan. 8.
New Orleans District, at New Orleans, Jan. 11.
Alexandria District, at Alexandria, Jan. 12.
Baton Rouge District, at Baton Rouge, Jan. 13.

The cultural program ought to begin with Watch-Night Service, for which a full program has been made out. Pastors ought to adopt as much of this as possible and make an effort to have one of these meetings in each charge.

There will be sent to each pastor a book known as "Spiritual Resources Manual," in which suggestive themes are named for the month of January. The topic for Jan. 2 is, "Beginning the Year With the Book," and for Jan. 9, "The Prayer that Teaches How to Pray." Since the distinct group meetings will take place during the time the Program for Spiritual Culture is to be put on, the pastors are urged to take up this matter with the beginning of the year and as soon as the book is sent them to plan definitely their work.

I Must Keep Faith

BY A METHODIST LAYMAN.

In 1919 I made a pledge to the Missionary Centenary.

That pledge was not made hastily or unadvisedly, but from a deep sense of the urgent need for a great forward movement in missions, as the only hope for the world and perhaps for the Church itself.

That pledge was my authorization to the Centenary Commission and the Boards to proceed with the program which they had presented for my approval and support.

It was made in good faith.

God helping me, it shall be redeemed.

I MUST KEEP FAITH, and for many reasons:

1. Because every reason that existed a year ago for a great missionary advance exists to-day and carries equal or greater weight.

The threat of universal chaos seems greater now than then. Apart from the Gospel, the world has less ground for hope. If there were reasons then why I should do more for missions, there is greater reason now.

2. My pledge was made in consideration of the Centenary's promise to carry out a certain program—to do certain specific things. Many of those things have been done; the others are being done as rapidly as possible. The funds contributed so far have been applied exactly as promised. The Centenary has kept faith with me. I must keep faith with the Centenary.

3. The Centenary has made good—it has justified the fullest confidence. Merely to enumerate the fine things that it has already accomplished would require a volume — the missionaries sent out, the churches built, the hospitals opened, the schools established or enlarged, the new territory entered and new stations opened, the relief extended to starving Europe, the insufficient pastoral salaries supplemented at home, the hundred thousand souls gathered in during the evangelistic campaign. By these priceless results the Centenary has justified itself many times over.

4. But these achievements, great as they are, are only the beginning—the first fruits of a five-year program. There are hundreds of missionaries yet to be sent, thousands of native leaders to be trained, scores of churches to be built, schools to be opened, social service agencies to be established, millions at home and abroad to be evangelized. Withdrawal of my further support would mean that some part of this great program would be left undone — that some benighted brother, perhaps many, would be denied light. I dare not have such a responsibility. I must keep faith.

5. I must keep faith with the missionaries at the front. How the Centenary has heartened and inspired them! To their depleted ranks, hard-pressed and poorly equipped, it means the turning of the tide — the Chateau Thierry of a great offensive of love. Should the promised support now be withheld, distress and despair would be unspeakable — their last state worse than the first.

6. I must keep faith with the native Church that we have gathered out of heathenism. From every mission field come thrilling reports of a new sense of responsibility on the part of the native Christians, of generous contributions, of growing self-support, of missionary zeal, of upspringing revival fires—all as a result of the Centenary. There must be no lapse—no surrender of these great gains. I must keep faith.

7. I must keep faith, because a dollar to-day will go scarcely half as far as it would when my pledge was made. At best, with every subscription paid in full, it is going to be difficult to provide for all the pressing needs that made up the original askings. I must redeem my pledge in full.

8. I must keep faith with myself. Having set out to do a fine thing for God, I could turn back, even if I would, only at too great peril to myself. I cannot renounce the greater joy of co-operation and service that the Centenary has brought me. I dare not turn my back upon the heavenly vision, lest perchance it be forever.

9. I must keep faith with my Lord. He is depending upon me. I am his mouthpiece, his messenger, his representative among men. There is no other way. The Centenary has enabled me more fully than ever before to enter into the fellowship of His purpose and program. I must keep faith with Him.

SO I SHALL PAY MY VOW.

And though it mean sacrifice, still will I pay it, glad to enter into "the fellowship of His sufferings" who has suffered so much for me and for all the world.

THE ABOVE STATEMENT

voices the faith of a multitude of our laymen. Will not every subscriber to the Centenary Fund make it his creed?

We must make the second annual distribution to the departments in January. Up to date the Centenary has MADE GOOD in every part of its program. We confidently count on the co-operation of the Centenary organization throughout the Church to enable us to make good in this second distribution. To this end let every subscriber at once complete the second payment on his pledge. Let the collecting committee in every local church be as definitely trained for the collection of individual subscriptions as they were to secure these subscriptions in the Eight-day Drive.

The spirit of the great Centenary in no way recedes. With a vital faith in God and confidence in our people, let us "carry on."

W. B. BEAUCHAMP,
Secretary for Centenary Commission.

BY THIS SIGN EDUCATE

America has made up her mind to be educated. And the American will is indomitable.

But we must make a choice in the character of our culture. It will be Christian or Pagan, Spiritual or Materialistic. Our destiny depends upon our choice.

Germany had no Christian colleges, and her education led the world to the brink of ruin. Culture bred to materialism will always wreck the nation which adopts it.

In the Colonial period of our history all American schools and colleges were Christian institutions. The great majority of them were Christian until the civil war.

But strong secularizing and materialistic tendencies set in, aided and abetted by the universities of Germany. During the last quarter of a century this Prussian influence has typed the big secular colleges and universities of America.

Follow these tendencies to their logical development and we have Prussianism and all that it means to the world and to the nation that upholds it. The German super-state was built on Humboldt's advice: "Whatever you would put into the life of the nation, you must first put into the schools of the nation."

The Church Stands for Christian Education

The Christian Education Movement is the reply of the Church to these attempts to paganize our culture. Its ultimate objective is to Christianize all educational processes, to train a whole generation of Christians, to make all the world Christian.

Its immediate objective is to revolutionize the mind of Methodism concerning the rightful place of Christian education in the life of the world and the church. It aims to equip and adequately maintain the finest and most deeply spiritual system of schools and colleges in the world, that their influence through their students may permeate and eventually control the culture of the land.

The Cross Is at the Center

At the heart of the Christian Education Movement stands the Cross—representative of unselfish service, vicarious sacrifice, redemptive power. From the Cross it draws both its motive and its ideal. In the Cross it centers all its hopes for the world.

We are not the exponents of mere education, as such. We are the exponents of a particular kind of education. And that is the Christian kind.

It trains heart, head, and hand together. It believes in the polished intellect and the regenerated spirit. It preaches that the soul of education is the education of the soul.

A CHRISTMAS SONG OF HOME.

By Alexander Lewis Fraser.

Come, sing a song of home, boys;
Come, think a while of home joys—
Of founts no drought of time can ever drain.
For when it's nigh to Christmas dawn,
On memory's pinions we are gone,
Those streams of pure delight to taste again.

So sing a song of mother,
Of father, sister, brother,
Of love that ever hovered o'er our cot,
Of the sweet kiss that always healed,
Of the low chair at which we kneeled,
Oh! surely home is old earth's dearest spot.

Though change has found the home, boys,
To-night its haunts we'll roam, boys—
See childhood's white, sweet room; see kith and kin;
See the warm hearth, half-circled, bright,
See our own mother's window light
That shone there till her last dear lad was in!

A BELATED CHRISTMAS GIFT.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

It was the day before Christmas when the conductor on No. 9 of the L. & N. R. R. came into the smoking car to announce a wreck ahead and the probability of a long delay. The passengers were rebellious, and none more so than Herbert Hewitt, who had just been forming mental pictures of the sweetest little wife in the world, as she sat in their cozy home, her nimble fingers weaving all sorts of jim cracks for all the kith and kin. He could see her glancing at the clock and counting the hours in her own childish way until she should meet him at the depot, smiling the brightest of welcomes.

A Christmas on the road is no Christmas at all, but it was not of himself that young Hewitt thought, but of the loneliness and disappointment of his wife. It was not as if she had little ones to plan for and to divert her, for their only little darling had been claimed by the Angel of Death five years since. He knew Alma would be thinking of little Edith, for it was their custom to hang the tiny stockings every Christmas just as they had done the three years Edith danced about the home. Not only was the stocking filled, but toys were placed all about, and on Christmas morning Alma always had some little orphan child to come and claim all that Santa Claus had brought. The child's happiness made them forget their own heart-ache.

A business trip had taken Hewitt to the North, and he had dispatched it with all possible haste, only to be thwarted by a miserable railroad wreck. He stalked out of the car, determined to clear away the entire wreck himself, but he stopped in dismay at the scene before him. Some of the men were cursing, many were fuming; nothing could be done. Hewitt went back to his seat in the Pullman and put his face down in his hands in utter dejection.

He was roused from his unpleasant reverie by a piping voice close at his knee. "Is you crying, Mr. Man?" Hewitt looked down at a pair of blue eyes gazing up at him from a mass of golden curls and caught his breath, for the child was so like his own baby Edith.

"Is you crying tause the train's b'oke down?"

Hewitt lifted the child reverently to his knee and answered: "Yes, little one; I do feel like crying, because to-morrow is Christmas, you know."

"Kismus? O zat's the day Santa Taus tums. I didn't know 'twas Kismus. Nobody told me nuffin 'bout it."

"Didn't Mother tell you, baby?" Slowly the little one shook her head. "Muvver don. I want a doll and a chair and heaps o' sings and now Santa Taus tant tum, taus the twain aint dot any chimney." The tears gathered in her eyes and her voice broke in a sob.

Hearing her, a lady came forward and took the child in her arms. "What's the matter, Doris? You must not bother the gentleman."

"I tant hang up my 'tocking and Santa Taus won't tum on the twain," cried the baby.

"Oh, who ever told you anything about Christmas," said the woman somewhat irritably.

"I'm afraid I did," said Hewitt apologetically; but I thought, of course, all children knew."

"She knew and remembers well last year, but things are different now. Her parents have both died since and there was no one to take her but me. I am taking her to an orphanage in New Orleans, as I am a working woman and unable to provide for her."

With that she moved away; but Herbert Hewitt's thoughts were turned in another channel. He forgot his own disappointment and even his wife's picture faded and gave place to a weeping child—one that seemed to be his own little Edith.

As night came on, his thoughts took definite shape. Little Doris should have a Christmas on the train. In his grip was a beautiful doll and some trinkets and candy galore meant for the child that Alma would search out; so why not give them to Doris? He walked to the end of the car, where little Doris sat cuddling Teddy Bear, and told her to hang up her stocking, as Santa Claus had just sent a telegram saying he was on the way. How little Doris' eyes sparkled as she slipped off her shoes and eagerly handed him the tiny stocking which he hung on the basket over the window!

Going outside, he cut off a branch from a pine tree, and, bringing it in after Doris was asleep, propped it up and began to hang on it everything he had in his grip that a child would like. Other passengers became interested and made contributions, for Doris was the only child on the car.

Christmas morning dawned bright and fair, and the passengers stifled their sighs and suppressed complaints of delay when they saw Doris dancing about, hugging her doll and giving screams of delight. "Santa Taus did tum," she sang over and over.

The joy of the little girl brought all the passengers together, and the day was passed in jest and story and song as the train sped on.

In the afternoon, as little Doris lay with her curly head pillowed on Hewitt's arm, he felt that he could never give her up. A conference with the lady who had her in charge ended by Doris's being given to Hewitt rather than being placed in an orphanage.

Hewitt wired his wife, "I am bringing a live doll," and when he placed Little Doris in her arms he said, "This is a belated Christmas gift, dear; but the most precious I could find," and Alma, looking down into the pretty face that brought so vividly before her that of her own little Edith, whispered "I am content."

HOW MUCH IT MEANT WHEN MOTHER PRAYED.

In a meeting of ministers whose intent was the deepening of the spiritual life, one of the members, a veritable modern saint, arose and related this incident of his early life. One night, he said, when he was a boy on the old farm, he went to bed as usual in the open garret, and as he was dozing off into sleep he heard a familiar footfall on the uncovered stairway. He knew quite well who it was, but he thought he would feign sleep and see what she might do. Slowly, on tiptoe lest she might wake him, she went to the end of the long chamber, put her candle down upon the old-fashioned bureau, took a hard bottomed chair that stood near by and, bringing it to his bedside, knelt down and buried her face in her hands. Never had his heart beat so fast or so loud, he declared as it did that night. It seemed as if he must undeceive her by raising up in bed, reaching his arms around her neck and giving her a kiss that had more love in it than any he had ever planted on her fond face. But he restrained the impulse, and, instead, she arose after the lapse of many minutes and kissed him; and then carried the chair back to its place, took the candle and went downstairs. But he did not go to sleep. It was long after midnight ere his drowsiness returned and all through those long hours, he told us, two great thoughts kept coursing through his mind and heart. The first was, with such a mother praying for me what manner of man I ought to become, and the second, I must see to it that nothing that I am responsible for comes between those prayers and their answer. He concluded the incident by saying that the memory of that evening had chastened his whole life and often since entering the ministry the thought of his mother's prayers had proved a source of inspiration and strength.—John Balcom Shaw.

PERSONAL RELIGION.

There is no other kind of religion except that which is personal. Religious principles may be expressed in social conventions, business ethics, enactments of the legislatures, and the like, but that expression grows out of the fact that in somebody's heart there is glowing a pure flame of devotion to God.

Still, since the words, "personal religion," have come to have the significance of individual acceptance and practice of the obligations of the Christian religion, it is well to lay emphasis upon them as expressive of the fundamental requirement of those who really hope to enter into the inheritance of the saints. It is the glory of the gospel that its power to redeem the life is self-authenticating. The man or woman who studies to know God's will, who communes with him in prayer and worships him in service, who loves his neighbor as he loves himself, and who looks upon the performance of duty, not as a burden but as a privilege, has a sense of acceptance with God that is both satisfying and joyous.

We earnestly hope that the year just opening before us will be rich in the development of those beautiful virtues that are so intimately associated with the quiet, simple, unassuming personal life. It may be that we shall be called upon to face difficulties and trials, that we shall have to pass through the valley of sorrow, that we shall have to enter into the thickest of the fray in order to preserve those things for which we stand; but in spite of all these, by faith and prayer and the study of God's Word we can have the beautiful experience of "growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Whatever else we do, let us adorn our lives with the beauty of this achievement.

WORK THAT COUNTS FOR MOST.

Under the above caption, Dr. A. J. Weeks, the distinguished editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, writes as follows:

"Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says: 'If the eighteen thousand Methodist Episcopal ministers would devote one week to a tactful, pushful, canvass for our Church papers and do nothing else during that time, it would be the best investment of seven days which the denomination ever made.' This is certainly true, as the church paper placed in a Methodist home continues its work on through the year.

"We are making a desperate effort to almost double the list of subscribers to this Advocate because we know it will greatly increase the efficiency and power of the church. Just as soon as the twelve hundred and fifty pastors in our eight patronizing Conferences undertake to do this thing, success will be assured. Furthermore, if we succeed in doing this, we will succeed in every other undertaking of the church.

"We are interested in renewals as well as new subscribers and frequently these depend upon the interest the pastor shows in securing them. On account of the low price of cotton many subscribers are going to be disposed to stop the church paper as the first step in economy. They think that is one thing they can do without. Can they safely do without it? It costs less than five cents a week and its influence can not begin to be estimated in any home where it goes regularly. We can not think of poorer economy than cutting off the soul food of the family when that means a saving of only five cents a week.

"If this increased circulation of the Advocate is going to be secured, it must be done now, as these are the best months to secure subscribers. Then to do it now means to put into the church at the beginning of the year the influence that comes from increased information about the work of God in the world."

The above are timely words, and we quote them for the purpose of endorsing them and applying them to our own Conferences and the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Now is the time to do the work that counts!

"A CORDIAL WELCOME."

One of the beautiful expressions in the reports of pastors from their new charges is the one used as the caption of this paragraph. It is just like our people to open their hearts to those who have been sent to them as their ministers in spiritual things, and it is just like our preachers to feel strongly drawn to these new friends who have greeted them so cordially. It is one of the things that make our itinerant system so effective in spite of embarrassments that sometimes arise. But we are wondering if this "cordial welcome" always includes an act that is always appropriate, and that is very frequently urgently needed—the early payment of at least a part of the first month's salary to the incoming pastor. Basing our statement upon a lifelong acquaintance with Methodist preachers, we are prepared to say that very few of them come to the end of the year with a surplus of cash. When they have to move, the necessary expenses of the move frequently amount to more than the money they have, and they have to negotiate loans in order to reach their new homes. If the stewards would make an early payment to the new preacher—and we feel sure they need only to have their attention called to the matter in order for them to do so—the chances are that they would be doing a favor far greater than they could imagine would be bestowed by the amount of money given.

ATTENTION—PRESIDING ELDERS, DISTRICT STEWARDS, PASTORS, AND ALL THE PEOPLE!

As will be recalled, the Publishing Committee of the Advocate, at its meeting last October, asked that a minimum quota of one subscriber to every ten members of the church be established and maintained in all our pastoral charges. The Boards of Christian Literature of each of our patronizing Conferences adopted this recommendation and included it, if we mistake not, in their reports, which were adopted by the Conferences. It was the expressed plan of the Publishing Committee that this quota, having been accepted by the Conferences, should be distributed to the charges through the district stewards, and that the presiding elders should call specific attention to the matter.

It is of the utmost importance that this item of business be attended to at the district stewards' meeting, and we earnestly request the presiding elders to be sure that it is properly looked after. The calculation of the quota is a very simple matter, since it is one-tenth of the membership reported to the Annual Conference. And the securing of the quota will, we are convinced, be a comparatively easy thing also, where diligent effort is made to that end. In view of the great work that is before the church this year, we do not believe any pastor could undertake a more helpful plan in the beginning of the year than that of seeing that the Advocate goes regularly into the homes of his people. The paper itself will do a work of preparation, education, and inspiration week by week that cannot be accomplished in any other way. For the time and labor spent in circulating it, we believe the richest results will accrue. The going of the Advocate into the homes of the people each week will make easier the work of the pastor throughout the year.

A minimum of one subscriber to every ten members of the church is certainly the smallest number that will creditably reflect the interest of the intelligent membership in the affairs of the church; the ultimate goal will have been reached only when there is an Advocate in every Methodist home in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Brethren, can we not quickly secure the minimum quota, and then "go on to perfection?"

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D., recently held a successful meeting at Union, West Virginia.

The official board of Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, at its first meeting of the Conference year increased the pastor's salary $400.

Rev. W. H. Saunders has been cordially received for the fourth year by the good people of Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss., and all the indications point to a successful year's work.

After considerable difficulty, Rev. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary of Education, has succeeded in finding a house to live in at Shreveport, La., his address now being 1063 Sheridan Avenue, that city.

Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir, who was recently appointed to the Branch charge, Louisiana Conference, desires us to state that his post office address will, for the present, remain as formerly, Crowley, La.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, requests us to call attention to the fact that the district stewards will meet at 11:30 o'clock on January 12 instead of 12 o'clock, as formerly announced.

By an arrangement satisfactory to all concerned, an exchange of appointments has been effected between Rev. B. W. Lewis and Rev. H. B. Perritt, of the Mississippi Conference, Brother Lewis going to Eden, and Brother Perritt to Decatur.

Brother J. W. Lipscomb, of Oakpolia, La., expresses his estimate of the value of the church paper in the following words: "I have been reading the Advocate ever since I was a boy—and I am now nearly eighty-seven years old." Blessings upon him!

Rev. A. S. Lutz, the Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, met with the pastors of the New Orleans District on Monday of this week in connection with his work. The district "set-up" meeting will be held in the Carrollton Avenue Church on January 11.

Such words as the following, by Mr. and Mrs. Jeff D. Hammett, of Campti, La., are an inspiration to both editor and publisher: "We have been readers of this dear old paper for over fifty years, and cannot get on very well without it. It is always a welcome visitor in our home."

The First Methodist Church of Lake Charles, La., held a "White Christmas" service on Sunday evening, December 19. All departments of the church entered into the service, and the gifts collected are to be used in such way as to bring a blessing locally and throughout the State.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, the Secretary of Education for the Louisiana Conference, requests us to state that it is very important that all pastors call attention on Sunday, December 26, to the Cultural Program of the Christian Education Movement. He also urges every church in the Conference to hold the Watch Night Service on December 31.

Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, formerly pastor at Indianola, Miss., but now pastor at Fredericktown, Mo., finds a most attractive field of labor in his new pastorate. He has a church membership of 702, and a Sunday school enrollment of 450. The Fredericktown Democratic News devoted a good deal of space to the work of this church in a recent issue.

The Natchez (Miss.) Democrat of December 18 gives an interesting account of a social meeting of the Men's Bible Classes of the Presbyterian, the Baptist, and the Methodist churches, on Friday evening, December 17, the Presbyterian class being the host of the occasion. An interesting program was rendered, and a most delightful time was had.

Rev. L. R. Sparks, of Covington, La., and Rev. W. H. Giles, of Slidell, attended the meeting of the pastors of the New Orleans District last Monday. A delightful feature of this gathering was the luncheon served through the courtesy of Rev. J. G. Snelling, the presiding elder, and Mr. Stephen

S. Thomas, the Centenary secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Snelling and Mrs. C. H. Brown graciously acting as hostesses.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, writes that he will make his home in Vicksburg, instead of Fayette, as formerly, and that his address will bo 1208 Clay Street, that city, after December 28.

We quote from tho Gulf Coast Progress, of Bay St. Louis, Miss., as follows: "All our Bay St. Louis folks—irrespective of class, creed, or color—are gratified that Rov. W. G. Forsythe has been returned as pastor of the Main Street Methodist Church for another year. Brother Forsytho is an earnest and forceful preacher, and an all-around splendid gentleman and a citizen we aro all delighted to honor."

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, the presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conferenco, writes as follows: "We aro now comfortably domiciled in the district parsonage, and I hope to be able to enter actively upon my work in a few days. The people of Meridian have received us very graciously. Both pastors and people have brought us under lasting obligations by many acts of kindness. May God bless them!"

Dr. O. E. Goddard, Homo Mission Secretary, spent two or three days in New Orleans recently in connection with the development of plans for the work of the City Mission Board. The work of this Board is being given the most careful consideration, and steady progress is being made in carrying out its purposes. Rev. W. C. Childress, the superintendent of city missions, is giving splendid servico in his important and responsible position.

Brother A. M. Mayo, district chairman of Minute Men for the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, has sent a communication to every pastor, Sunday school superintendent, lay leader, minute man, and local Centenary treasurer in tho district, quoting a stirring statement by Brother T. W. Holloman, Conference chairman of Minute Men, urging them to do everything in their power to make "Pay-Up Week," December 16-23, a period of intensive work.

We take the following from a recent issue of the Columbus (Miss.) Dispatch: "The first sermon of the new minister was profound, scholarly, logical, earnest, eloquent and helpful. It made a lasting impression upon those who heard it. Taking this first service as an Index to the year's work, we are led to believe that the First Methodist Church of Columbus will make splendid progress during the next twelve months under the spiritual leadership of the Rev. Thomas H. Lipscomb."

We learn from private sources that Rev. B. P. Jaco, Centenary Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, is actively at work in connection with the interests committed to his care, and that the presiding elders, pastors, and district stewards are working with him in a fine spirit of co-operation. There is fine logic in tho determination to secure all Centenary pledges that are now due, during "Pay-Up Week," January 16-23, that the decks may be cleared for the other important undertakings of the year.

The Advocato acknowledges the honor of receiving an invitation to the marriage of Miss Birdie Bowers to Mr. Quintin R. Henry, at the Methodist church in Brazil, Tenn., at eight o'clock p. m., December 25. Mr. Henry is a graduate of Centenary College, now Educational Director for the Federal Training Center at Meridian, Miss., and Miss Bowers was formerly one of the Council workers at Mary Werlein Mission, this city. We extend sincere good wishes to the happy couple in advance of tho event.

From the Durant (Miss.) News we learn that the ladies of the Methodist church in Durant served a dinner in connection with their annual bazaar at the city hall, and realized $140 to be added to the improvement fund of church and parsonage. "One of the pleasing features of the occasion," says the local paper, "was the presentation of a beautiful and costly silver service to tho Rev. and Mrs. A. C. McCorkle, as a token of esteem for the splendid services rendered during tho two years' residence in Durant as pastor and presiding elder."

The Advocate acknowledges the honor of receiving an announcement of the marriage of Miss Eva Parker to Rev. John Wesley Dickens, D.D., at New Orleans, on November 25. Mrs. Dickens is a sister of Rev. Geo. D. Parker, a missionary of our church to Brazil; Dr. Dickens is pastor of the First Baptist Church at Lafayette, La. He is a native of Tennessee, a graduate of Union University, Jackson, Tenn., and of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to this splendid couple of Christian workers.

On December 4, Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., celebrated their silver wedding. When the congregation learned of the happy significance of that date, they planned a reception including the presentation of beautiful gifts in silver from the Big Brothers' Bible Class, the Woman's Missionary Society, and the congregation at large, these gifts being a silver pitcher and goblets, a platter, and a coffee service and bread tray. The Advocate joins with their many other friends in wishing Brother and Sister Lewis a continuation of all the joys that have been theirs through these years, even to the golden anniversary of their wedding—and beyond.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. Robt. M. Brown, Zwolle, La., 9; D. W. Payne, Longville, La., 2; T. M. Babington, Franklinton, La., 2; Rev. J. W. Booth, Baton Rouge, La., 2; S. E. Coxe, Watson, La., 2.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

After careful consideration of the matter, and in response to many inquiries concerning the possibility of making an "Every-Family" proposition, we hereby make tho following special offer: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR $1.50, SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS BELOW.

1. This offer expires on March 31.
2. There must be at least twenty families represented in the membership of a church taking advantage of this offer.
3. This is not a club offer—no clubs, no matter how large, can be accepted at this rate.
4. Cash, or its equivalent, must accompany every list.
5. In case of any uncertainty in the interpretation of the offer, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence
6. We must reserve the right to make such additional regulations as experience may prove to be necessary.

No one can regret more than we do the necessity that arose last year of withdrawing the "Every-Family" offer somewhat abruptly; we were forced to do so by advancing costs of production that imperiled our very existence. The popularity of that offer, however—we received more than 3000 subscriptions in response to it—convinced us that it was a step in the right direction to solve the problem of the circulation of the church paper. In making the present offer, we do it with the realization that it is justifiable only on the ground that we want to go as far as we dare in the effort to reach our ultimate goal, "The New Orleans Christian Advocate in Every Methodist Home in Louisiana And Mississippi." The costs of production have not decreased, and we shall have to practice every possible economy in order to publish the paper at the regular subscription price of $2 a year; but for the sake of an "every-family" circulation, we will reduce the margin of safety to the smallest possible limits.

We hope this offer will be accepted by as many of our churches as possible. We make three suggestions as to how it may be put into effect:

1. Include the cost of an Advocate in every family in the church in the regular budget. This is simple, direct, and, in many cases, thoroughly practicable.
2. Present the matter in the most feasible way to the membership of the church and ask for contributions for the purpose of putting the paper into every home.
3. Make a personal canvass of the membership, appealing directly for a subscription from each home.

A combination of the above methods may be found practicable, or better ones may be thought of by those who take the matter up. In some cases, this might very well become the special activity of an organized Sunday school class, or of some other organization in the church, or even of a group of individuals. A prominent Mississippi layman told us recently that several interested laymen in his church had easily secured an amount sufficient to send the Advocate into a good many homes. We are convinced that the way can be found in most of our churches to put the Conference organ into every home. We earnestly hope that it will be found.

We shall have some interesting announcements to make in the near future concerning "A Greater Advocate."

Weber was a native of Nykjobing, Zeland, Denmark. He was born March 24, 1828, and died June 23, 1901. A man remarkable for his economy, temperate life, and industry, he ever stood afar the best of all things in the community where he was so well known. Six sons and three daughters comprised the Weber family, all of whom reached mature life. In 1869 Mrs. Weber moved from Mansfield to his country home. There being no school nor church near, through the influence of Mr. Weber and his devoted wife both were soon built. Mrs. Weber united with the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. John Pipes in 1878 and soon thereafter Mr. Weber and the children followed her example. Her name was the first enrolled on the register of the Ebenezer church.

At the call of his adopted land, Mr. Weber donned the uniform of those whose deeds of heroic service have passed into the glorious history of our Southland. Left alone with the responsibility of caring for her own and others, the good woman rose to the emergency and, in the words of a daughter of the family—"She not only cared for her home and those on the battlefield, but many a sick neighbor and wounded soldier received care and nourishment from her busy hands. With swift fingers she spun and wove and thus clothed husband, brother and children in those dark days when there was none to be bought."

The church and all its interests were objects of care and service by this family, and in the precincts of this home the ministers ever found a warm and hearty welcome.

Four grandsons, true to the spirit of their soldier sire, enlisted in the late world war. Two of these helped in laying that chain of mines which was so effective in defeating the submarines of Germany.

Mrs. Weber's last days on earth were strengthened and lightened by a faith that had grown with the years. When the message came, she was ready and amid the suffering and pain incident to her last illness she entered into the vision of a larger life with her face lighted with a smile.

Five of her children are still living and bear conscious testimony of the love and worth of such a godly mother.

Funeral services were held in the home in memory of her by Rev. A. G. Kidd, a minister who had known her from early youth. Robed in white garments and enshrined in a casket of white covering, she was borne to her last resting place in the cemetery of the Ebenezer church. Rev. George D. Purcell read the burial service and she was left by a concourse of loving friends to await the resurrection of God's people. S. J. DAVIES.

NOTICE!

As provided for in the plan of the Educational Movement for the coming year, there is called to meet in First Church, Baton Rouge, January 13, 1921, a district group meeting, consisting of the presiding elder, all the pastors of the district, District Secretary of Sunday Schools, District Secretary of Woman's Missionary Society, District Secretary of Epworth League, District Chairman of Minute Men, and the Conference Team, including the Conference Educational Secretary.

Brethren, let every pastor plan to be with us and also each of the other officials named. This is of the utmost importance to the launching of the great Educational Movement that will mean so much to our church and our country and to the world. Here the plan for the cultivation of the field will be presented by able speakers and the organization for the work effected.

J. W. LEE, P. E.

FROM CAMDEN, MISS.

One year ago, by appointment of the church, I became pastor of the Camden Circuit, Jackson District, Mississippi Conference. The outlook was anything but encouraging. For many years our people had been without a real habitation. About 1893 their splendid house was literally and totally wrecked by a severe storm. The congregation replaced this by a new and beautiful building. In 1909 this, too, was totally lost in a destructive fire. Effort after effort had been made to build, but always without success. The Madison County Agricultural High School being located at Camden, calling together a large number of choice young people, with our sister churches providing their people with up-to-date buildings, if we would do our part, a suitable building was clearly a necessity. With prayer and faith, we asked for an offering on Easter Sunday, and, to our delight, $2100 was pledged in good subscriptions. Out of this, notwithstanding the great depression, we have a new and beautiful house of ample size and beautiful design, with three Sunday School rooms attached.

Many of our precious people are informed of our need and will rejoice with us in the victory [illegible]. The building thus far has cost about $2000. To pay off the indebtedness and complete the building and see it ready for use will require at least $2000 more. If the congregation pays $1000, our Conference Board of Church Extension agrees to take the remaining $1000.

To meet this generous offer, the church at Camden is asking for a Christmas and New Year offering to all who may be interested. A good start has been made, and we are confident of success. Any amount will be thankfully received. Send subscriptions to Miss Lily Maxwell, Secretary, Camden, Miss.; Mr. S. C. Milton, Treasurer, or to the undersigned. Prompt acknowledgment of offering will be made by postcard or letter.

We rejoice in gracious revivals in which the pastor had our efficient Conference evangelist, Rev. Dan E. Kelly. There were about forty additions, mostly on profession of faith.

We are planning for large things. In God we trust. C. H. ELLIS.

Should we at times feel disheartened and discouraged, a confiding thought, a simple movement of hearts toward God will renew our powers. Whatever He may demand of us, He will give us at the moment the strength and the courage that we need.—Fenelon.

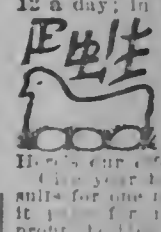
19 Eggs A Day From 23 Hens, In Winter

Mr. Dunl's Hens Increased Every Day. Plan is Easily Tried.

"We have 23 chickens and hadn't had an egg all winter. In five days after feeding Don Sung, we got 4 to 5 eggs a day; in three weeks, we were getting 10 to 12 a day; in five weeks we got 15 eggs a day."—John Dunl, Box 102, Cherry Valley, Pa.



Mr. Dunl started giving Don Sung in January, in zero weather. He now keeps his hens busy in winter when hens usually loaf. A trial costs nothing. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit to boot, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed. Improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It forces up the egg laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.01 (includes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Restore the Potash

During the past few years farmers have been urged to bend every effort to produce maximum crops without giving much consideration to the effect on their soils. Established rotations were broken up and the very best parts of the farm put into the most needed crops, while the poorer parts were neglected.

In a way it was a return to the pioneer's method of mining the soil.

Today is the period of readjustment for the farmer as well as for the merchant and the manufacturer.

The farm labor situation and the uncertainty of future prices are such that prudence demands that the cost of producing a unit of crop be reduced as much as possible. This requires more crop units per acre and a return to the rotations known to be best for a given locality.

The great factor in reducing the cost of crop production is the right method of feeding the crops.

The composition of commercial plant foods has been profoundly changed during the period of Potash famine. Phosphoric Acid has replaced all or a part of the Potash in American fertilizer formulas, while just the opposite has taken place in Europe, where there was a shortage of phosphates.

Now is the time to get back to normal again and to return to the fertilizer formulas that were so profitable and satisfactory in the past. But this cannot be done without effort on the part of the farmer and without sufficient notice to the manufacturer to prepare for the change.

Therefore think the matter over carefully, and if your previous experience has shown you that notify your dealer that you wish to use fertilizers with 5 to 10 per cent. of Potash and a little more to make up for the drain on the soil during the Potash famine.

And do it right away, for it takes time for the manufacturer to import it and it is only fair that he should know what your demands will be.

The price of Potash has fallen much faster than the prices of farm products so you may feel assured that you can again get a profit from its use. The main point is to insist that the right kind of fertilizer shall be ready for you when needed. In order to insure this, prompt action on your part is essential.

Take up the matter with your dealer at once. If we can help you write to us.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I am just back from a trip to Laurel, where I had the privilege and pleasure of teaching a class in "Life In The Making." Seven took the examinations. This is a most gracious and loyal band of workers. God is blessing them. Brother Beasley enters upon on the year's work with hope and a promise of great success. I enjoyed my stay so much, but the most enjoyable feature was that so many of the class seemed determined to go on to the completion of the whole course.

I hope that every school will determine to do likewise.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless you.

Yours in His name,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Sincere Christmas greetings to 3000 officers and teachers in the Sunday schools of the North Mississippi Conference. Every lesson you teach is laying up treasure in heaven; after awhile you shall enter into your inheritance. May we all take more time to pray, to study, to work, and we shall bring a multitude of souls as trophies of the redeeming grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The prospects are bright for a glorious year in our work of religious education. We start out with a united purpose, we have an overwhelming task before us, and an omnipotent God to work his miracles through us. Then may we all rededicate all we are and all we have to Him who loves us and who has washed us in his precious blood.

It is easier to hear the heart-breaking wail of the millions of starving men, women, and children in China, Armenia and other quarters of the earth, than to hear the low cry of the millions of souls that are famishing for the Bread of Life at our own doors. How dare we be indifferent to such conditions as we face?

Let us put as much prayer as our Lord would have us devote to our work and we shall have less difficulty in organizing our unorganized and idle church members for the purpose of feeding the last soul committed to our care. His "all power in heaven and earth" is at our command when we follow his plan of teaching all things concerning him.

Just look at the thonsands of homes where the Bible is seldom read and where little or no prayer is offered. Surely we do care? Is it carelessness, or ignorance, or laziness that keeps so many of us from using the Home Department as a means of feeding the poor people who do not attend the services held at the church? Or do we think our whole duty is done when we have fed the people at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning?

It was my good fortune not long since to spend a week in a real Christian home where a rare and heavenly atmosphere pervaded the entire household. It is needless to say that prayer was offered night and morning. Great books, the best magazines and papers were in abundance and they were loved and read. The children were loving, obedient, reverent. Not often do you see the servants provided with religious instruction as a part of the regular program. I have never been in a home so rich and complete in its religious life. It has required many years and countless holy influences to build a home like this. The thought that struck me was, this home is not an accident.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Mid-Winter Meeting of the Field Secretaries and Presidents of Conference Sunday School Boards will be held at Tampa, Fla., Jan. 11 to 14, 1921.

The tour of the Conference in the interest of the Men's Bible Classes will not be made in January as planned. There are too many things in the way that are of interest to men for us to put on this tour now. I will do this, or get some other plan later in the winter.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation will meet at Lake Charles, March 15, 16, 17. The Elementary Departments will be represented, as will all the Bible classes.

Miss Caroline Hess, our Elementary Superintendent, will be pleased to visit our Sunday schools; and where you have special needs, write her or the Field Secretary.

No Worms in a Healthy Child

All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a general Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the Child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 75c per bottle.

Recommended to School Children.

This is the season when children are subject to croup, colds and coughs. Rena C. Marchard, 36 Lawrence St., Salem, Mass., writes: "I used Foley's Honey and Tar with good results. I had a very bad cold and it gave me relief at once, so I recommended it to every child that goes to school." This standard, low priced medicine loosens and clears mucus and phlegm, checks strangling coughing, makes easy breathing, soothes and heals raw, inflamed membranes, and stops tickling in throat.—Adv.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

inner light on the situations not given to those less favored.

"Women and Missions" should have a reading by the thousands of women whose names and minds are committed to the cause of Missions in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It should—and we predict will—become the reference guide for officer and lay member alike. While giving history, it is itself making history. In that it establishes and proclaims lines of work and defines progress and outlook. No Methodist can read the pages without a glow of pride in the womanhood of the church. None can feel less than gratitude for the vision which has led, the spirit which has thrilled, and the courage which has not faltered. The Divine leading is at all times unmistakable, and this story of the Gospel's planting in the unoccupied but waiting fields is a story of God and His children laboring together in love and hope.

It should be read in the family and used in mission study circles and in programs of auxiliaries. It will make excellent material for an open missionary meeting on Sunday, or at a weekly prayer service.

But, best of all, this chronicle of the rise and progress of missions among us should become the inspiration for yet greater achievement, and this telling of the story of our founding give birth in the hearts of our young womanhood to great life-purposes. Let it send them forth to tell of God's love in factories and congested city districts, and on and on to other shores till "none shall say, Know the Lord, but all shall know Him from the least to the greatest."

The price is: Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75 cents. Order of Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Home Base Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

I consider Foley Kidney Pills the best kidney remedy in the world. No recurrence of my trouble."—Adv.

S. L. POPE, P. E.

FROM QUEENSBOROUGH, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We are getting along nicely with our work. We have received eleven members since Conference. Our Sunday school has grown 50 per cent, and we are planning to build a Sunday school annex to the church. We have a great field in which to work. These are good people. They know how to appreciate the pastor.

Methodism in Shreveport is a great and mighty force for good in God's kingdom. I know of no church that has any greater opportunity to grow than our church in Queensborough. If I had been out looking for a church to serve, I am sure that I could not have chosen one that would have suited me any better than just the one Conference has given me.

W. A. MANGUM.

Will You Help Them This Christmas?

BY LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary.

The M. E. Church, South, has approximately 1,000 living superannuated preachers—that is, men who are worn out, old, permanently disabled physically, and therefore have been retired from active work in the ministry. When they were superannuated their salaries stopped, and they became dependent on the funds raised by the Church for her incapacitated men. The amount received by them from this source, which is their only support, averages for each of them a little more than $200 annually. It is impossible for any man to live in any degree of comfort on such a pittance, and especially so when he has an aged wife dependent with him on this small allowance.

Of these 1,000 superannuates, 100 of them have very bad sight—they are practically blind; 470 of them have very bad hearing—they are practically deaf; 440 of them are greatly impaired physically—they are practically invalids, confined to their beds, wheel chairs, crutches, canes, etc.; 170 of them have each an invalid to support. Under such conditions it is not surprising that our old veterans are actually suffering for the bare necessities of existence. They do not murmur or complain, but out of their patiently borne distresses, deprivations, physical weaknesses, and loneliness, don't you hear them calling you?

It's about to be Christmas again—the time when all people untie their purse strings for worthy and benevolent purposes. Does not this company of 1,000 scarred and battered veterans of the Cross appeal to you as worthy of your assistance? If their great needs are not enough to move you to make a Christmas offering in their behalf, your attention is directed further to our 1,300 widows of deceased preachers. The annual amount paid to each of them by the Church averages about $150. They suffer equally as much, if not more, than the superannuates, for the commonest necessities. Some of them, widowed in middle life, have had to take their dependent children from both public and Sunday School for lack of funds to provide decent clothes for these orphans of our ministry. It is quite bad enough to forget our wornout preachers, but when we also fail to remember the widows and orphans of them our neglect will shame us to the grave and condemn us in the Judgment.

The General Board of Finance, 510-12 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo., was organized by the last General Conference to provide an adequate support for the Conference Claimants—that is, the superannuated preachers and the widows of deceased preachers. The only way the Board can provide such support at present is for the people everywhere voluntarily to send the Board their contributions for this purpose. Therefore, you are urged now to make a liberal Christmas gift to the cause. Put these forgotten men and forgotten women on your Christmas list, and let the General Board of Finance direct your offerings.

Be a Life Member.—The Board has organized a Conference Claimants' Club, a comradeship of men, women and children pledged to a life-long interest in these veterans of the Church. To be a life member of the club you must send the Board as many dollars cash as there are years between your present age and eighty, together with your name and address. Thereafter you will have no further dues, but you will be expected to work for the cause as you have opportunity and especially to try to induce others to become life members. Upon receipt of your amount, name and address, the Board will send you a beautiful life membership certificate and a gold-plated enameled pin, having three C's in monogram. If 65,000 of our people will become life members this Christmas and pay for the memberships the average now being paid for them, the total received therefor will amount to a half million dollars. It would require an average of but ten life members from every charge in the Church to secure the grand total of 65,000. Think it over!

Other Ways to Help.—If you cannot become a life member of the club, (1) you can send a cash contribution in any amount; (2) you can make a subscription payable at a specified time; (3) you can send a Liberty Bond and receive credit for this gift at its par value; (4) you can take a Christmas offering in your Sunday School class for the cause, and send it to the Board; (5) Sunday School superintendents and Epworth League presidents can have their respective organizations make a Christmas offering for this purpose; (6) pastors can have their congregations make a Christmas offering and send it to the Board.

Not the Way, But the Will.—If you really want to help in this emergency, when you have read this appeal your initiative will find a way that suits your conditions. Remember, Christmas is nearly here. While you are providing for your friends and loved ones, don't forget these old worn-out servants of Him who gave Christ to Christmas. These veterans are His friends. He loves them. If you do good unto them, you at the same time do it unto Him. He said so. Look upon the beautiful Presence of your Christ this holy Christmas time! See, He is pointing you to the nearly 2,300 suffering and needy Conference Claimants of the M. E. Church, South. He reaches forth His finger to show you the way; they lift up their hands pleading for your assistance. Don't you hear them calling you?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Christmas greeting and best wishes for the New Year to the women of Louisiana, who have "with gladness" and with "willing feet" brought throughout the year that is past, the "gift of loving service" to the Babe of Bethlehem.

"As with gladness men of old
Did the guiding star behold;
As with joy they hailed its light,
Leading onward through the night,
So, most gracious Lord, may we
Evermore be led to Thee.

"As with joyful steps they speed
To that lowly manger bed.
There to bend the knee before
Him whom heaven and earth adore,
So may we, with willing feet,
Ever seek thy mercy seat.

"As they offered gifts most rare
At that manger rude and bare,
So may we with holy joy,
Pure and free from sin's alloy,
All our costliest treasure bring,
Christ, to Thee, our heavenly King."

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL,
President.

Alexandria.

Dear Mrs. Snelling: Please give me a little space on the woman's page of our splendid children paper to tell some of the good things of our auxiliary and its many activities. First of all, we have a large number of members enrolled who are earnest, devout women, and efficient officers, with whom it is a pleasure to work. Our auxiliary is divided into circles, each with a chairman whose special duty is to collect dues and pledges. Financial reports show that all of our obligations have been met in a most liberal way. Every Tuesday we have a meeting — first, for business; second, inspirational and literary; third, Bible class, and, fourth, Mission study. The business and inspirational meetings are held in the church, while, for the other two, we are entertained in the homes with a fine program, a social hour and the serving of delicious refreshments. We have finished the book, "Christian Americanization," and are now studying "The Bible and Missions."

Our home-coming meeting in the Fall is looked forward to with great pleasure, and this year it was held in the lovely home of Mrs. Nettie Brown. We had a good program of music and readings, and welcomed those home who had been absent on pleasure trips. On this occasion plans were made for work which is near to our hearts and gives us opportunity for golden deeds of service. We have a little protege in the Ruston Home; a warm winter outfit having been sent to her, also the necessary amount of money was sent for our far-away little orphan in Armenia.

Boxes of supplies have been sent to our missions, and to others in the State that needed sometimes to be remembered. Our wish is to serve Him even better in the years to come, but we are glad that this has been a happy and successful year for the members of our auxiliary.

With blessings for all,

MRS. F. W. BRADT.

A BRIEF TRIBUTE TO THE LATE MRS. SEAMAN MAYO.

"We have but Faith: we cannot know,
For knowledge is of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from Thee
A beam in darkness: let it glow."

She was loved because she loved much. The memory of her will remain because in serving her Master cheerfully she served her fellow-man.

Mrs. Mayo was the daughter of Rev. A. W. Turner, of the State Anti-Saloon League, and the wife of Mr. Seaman Mayo, of Lake Charles. She died at her home after a very brief illness, and is mourned by all who knew her.

The pastor's wife, Mrs. W. W. Holmes, writes us of her as follows:

"You have, I am sure, heard of the great sorrow that has come to us here in Lake Charles. Ward Ella's going was so unexpected, and now that we are beginning to realize that she has really gone, we are coming to a realization of the great loss we have suffered — no one woman can fill her place. She was wonderful in works and in the sweet spirit in which she worked. Those of us who are left will have our hearts and hands full, and her example will be an inspiration and blessing in days to come, as in days that are passed. The Woman's Missionary Society was enriched by the life she brought to it, and grieves at her going away."

CONCERNING POLISH RELIEF.

Those societies or churches or individuals that still wish to contribute to Polish relief are urged to send packages by parcel post to Methodist Polish Relief Headquarters, care of Miss Daisy Davies, Newport News, Va. Later boats will be sailing and the shipments all taken care of. Checks should be sent to Miss Daisy Davies, Box 629, Nashville, Tenn. Miss Quayle reports the suffering in Poland as "absolutely unbelievable"; and the coming winter will serve to intensify it unless something is done, and done quickly. We cannot do too much when little children are starving and freezing. Let us give all we can and then give more.

Bishop Atkins, who has just returned from a tour of the unhappy country, reports that there are now more than 1,300,000 children in Poland who are too young to get food even by begging, and must be kept from starvation by help from without. "I saw babies in Warsaw not over six weeks of age who had been picked up and nobody knew to whom they belonged," says Bishop Atkins. "Thousands of old men and women from whom all hope has gone are as needy and helpless as the infants. The people have turned and patched and remade their clothes until nothing is left. They must be helped or perish from the effects of the cold winter. Old people will pass off by mere exposure and the cries of shivering infants will ascend to heaven against those who will not help at such a time. We want every tender-hearted member of our church to take some part in this enterprise to clothe Poland."

WOMEN AND MISSIONS.

Under the above title a book, setting forth the origin and ongoing of Missions among the women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has just been issued. The author is Miss Sara Estelle Haskin, Educational Secretary in charge of literature in the Woman's Missionary Council.

The task Miss Haskin undertook was no small one. It required investigation and research, time and infinite care. From meager records and out of the memory of those who still live, she collected the facts regarding those sixty years and more of missionary endeavor. With faithfulness to such details as were available, she has woven a rarely fascinating story which in the opening chapter insures interest to the end.

The eleven chapters treat of the beginnings of missionary impulse and effort by Mrs. M. L. Kelly in 1858 to the organization of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in 1878, with intensely interesting history lying in between these dates. Then follows the early record, in story, in China, Japan, Korea, Brazil, Mexico and Cuba, and later in Africa. Two chapters were given to the organization of Home Mission work and include schools and city mission work, and work among and for the negroes. Very fitting it is that our great training center, Scarritt Bible and Training School, shall have the closing chapter.

No one better fitted could have been found for such a compiling of the history of missions among Southern Methodist women. Herself a missionary, trained for service in Scarritt Bible and Training School, and later a teacher in the Methodist Training School in Nashville, Tenn., afterward serving in the Bethlehem House in the same city, and going from this service to her present work as Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council, Miss Haskin has lived in and for the cause she so sympathetically presents. She speaks from the vantage point of "one to the manor born," and with an

THE BREATH of the FOREST

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to Inland Australia, where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment,—Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating cold in the head, spasmodic croup, clergyman's sore throat, hay fever and all forms of bronchial catarrh. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

PRAYER THE SECRET.

By Rev. J. C. Price.

Dear Brother Carley: I have just read with interest Dr. H. Walter Featherstun's article on "Our Preacher Shortage." I esteem Dr. Featherstun very highly, especially since I met him in his home in 1914, just as he was retiring from the presiding eldership on the Newton District. I, in company with young McPhearson, had a very pleasant season with the doctor. The thing that impressed me most was his great faith in prayer. Young McPhearson had been won to him because he was such a friend to young preachers. Rev. R. T. Ware, of Moorlngsport, La., began his ministry in the Methodist Church (I believe) under Dr. Featherstun. Brother Ware told me on one occasion that Dr. Featherstun came up to him and one or two other young preachers, and was talking with them about their ministry, and purposed and entered into an agreement with them to pray for at least a half hour daily that the Lord might give them an effective ministry. Ware says this has been the stay of his ministry.

I am like the doctor—I think too many of our preachers are crowding into other things and leaving the pastorate. There is no question in my mind but the pastorate is the greatest work in the world, but with it comes the most grinding responsibility that, at times, almost crushes us. But everything of very great importance carries with it a weighty responsibility. Why is all this shortage, anyhow. I think I know. We are a busy people, and are doing things. We have been programing everything, selecting some fellow to work out a select program that will fit the whole thing. We had our Centenary program, Hospital program, and now we have our Educational program. Every one of them is good and much needed, but I fear we have rattled paper, until that is about all our people are hearing. Don't get me down wrong—I believe in plans—but I want some right in the plan that is to be applied to my little part of the work. I don't think some brother sitting somewhere behind Kalsomined walls can plan a revival for me, away down here somewhere in the back woods. The Lord has honored my work in a revival way; and the shortest route, and the only route I have ever seen a revival come is out of much prayer, consecration, and devotion to God. If you can bring your people into this state, you will then have a real revival. Now comes the real point: Out of a church where there is a real revival, workers will come. It is a productive church. Men and women will be called into the different departments of the church as they are needed. "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest" (Matt. 9:38). This is a time when we should be praying for the Lord to call more young men into the ministry and stop the rattle of paper and machinery long enough for them to hear. Prayer has always been the route. Elijah, in contending with Ahab, prayed out of it; Hezekiah prayed, and fifteen years were added to his life; Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises at the hour of midnight, and caused an earthquake; our Lord stood before the tomb of Lazarus and prayed, and he came forth.

Prayer, then, is the route. The prophets took it to have their needs supplied. In the crucial hour with the apostles, they prayed and their needs were met. Our Lord himself prayed with marvelous results.

May we not have our needs all met, if we pray? "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16).

I am going to pray this year that the Lord will give us more preachers. Will you join me?

A HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS STILL.

By Dr. John A. Rice.

We have all heard the story going the rounds to the effect that Bishop Mouzon telegraphed the Executive Committee here, after an interview in Louisville with Dr. Boaz, saying "Booze is available, call committee together." Another paper, commenting upon this headline, said facetiously, "A hundred thousand dollars is a big price to pay for a still. Nevertheless, the campaign should be put over even at a high cost." And it was. I have for years watched local movements to raise money, but have never witnessed such a magnificent victory as the one just achieved by President Boaz and his co-workers. He proceeded to organize the business men of the city, Methodists and others, into a series of groups. The men in these groups, teams, so to speak, visited the leading business people of the city with a perfectly definite story to tell each day. They all lunched together each noon and reported progress. Dallas has just passed through a most trying commercial ordeal the drop in the price of cotton and of wool and of other current commodities gave us a near-panic for a while and right in the midst of that depression this campaign was at its height. It looked to be perfectly impossible from every standpoint except the imperative necessity. The General Board had agreed to give one-third of the million, provided the remaining two-thirds were raised. December 1 was the last date. It was magnificent to see the determined enthusiasm with which the workers went about their task. The response of this city is a tribute to its appreciation of the value of the culture forces gathered in a university. Men of all faiths united in attesting splendid appreciation of the work and worth of Southern Methodist University. Under proper leadership, what has been done in Dallas can be done in every part of the church.

We cannot do less than accept the challenge of this public-spirited community and press with confidence in a spirit of enthusiastic unity toward the goal of thirty-three millions. All honor to President Boaz and the splendid men that stood with him in the fight! All honor to the great city that answered their call!

CHRISTIAN LITERATRUE AND THE WATCH-NIGHT SERVICE.

Dear Dr. Ivey: After reading the splendid editorial in the Christian Advocate on the Watch-Night Service, allow me to say in response that I had in mind only the organized departments.

However, I regard our church's literature of such paramount importance that I am giving out for publication the suggestion that the Chairman of the Committee on Christian Literature in each local church be given an opportunity to state what the committee has formulated as a program for the coming year.

This should specify, among other things, definite goals for the Conference organ and Christian Advocate say one in ten members for the Conference organ and one in twenty for the general organ; also definite goals for other church publications.

Publicity is one of the largest factors in any plan of intensive cultivation, as proved by the Missionary Centenary and every other great campaign that has succeeded in the church or out. Our church periodicals deserve and should receive our heartiest cooperation.

Yours sincerely,

Hunger Slays Chinese

45,000,000 in direst need in Northeast China
8,000,000 facing immediate starvation

The most distressing and widespread famine in recorded history.

Bishop Lambuth cables that they are selling their children for one dollar. Whole families are committing suicide in their despair. They are eating leaves, grasses, cotton seed meal and roots.

No stronger appeal could be made to those who love God and men. There is no time for delay. While we wait, multitudes die. We are about to celebrate the birth of Him who said: "As oft as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me." Can we feast and exchange gifts in His name and leave His children die of hunger?

The Board of Missions, on December 15th, met and authorized the issuing of a call for an immediate offering for relief of these starving millions. They are not in our Methodist territory, and this is not a strictly missionary appeal. It is an appeal on the plane of humanity. It is emphatically a Christian appeal to Christian America. We must do our share, or stand condemned. It is an appeal that should enlist every pastor, every church, and every member.

Calls are being made from every direction, including a Committee appointed by the President of the United States. We are authorized by the Board to co-operate with these in the gathering and distribution of funds in such ways as will secure quickest and best results, the one aim of all being to save as many starving people as possible, and as speedily as possible.

TAKING STOCK.

At the close of what has been a busy year and, in many respects, a trying one, it is in order for us to "take stock," in order that we may know just how we stand as we pause upon the threshold of a new year. Most of us, thank God, have a reasonable degree of health and enough of the necessaries of life—if not its luxuries—to enable us to renew our strength day by day for the performance of the duties that inevitably come with the light of each new sun; we have vividly in mind the experiences of the past twelvemonth, reflecting upon which we ought to be able to draw many lessons of warning, encouragement, and hope; we have friends who have stood by us when we needed help, and upon whom we may rely for cordial sympathy in all laudable endeavors; we have loved ones in the home circle who have borne with us when we may not have been altogether lovable, who have sustained us when we were cast down, who have rejoiced with us in our joys, and who will love us to the end; above all, we have the sure promises of God, which have been fulfilled time and time again, and which still bend across the heavens as a pledge of infinite compassion. No matter what difficulties we have passed through, no matter what sorrows we have suffered, no matter what losses we have endured, we still have those resources that make us rich in the best things of life. As the old year fades into the new and as we meditate upon God's goodness to us through all the days, we cannot refrain from exclaiming with the psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

LOOKING FORWARD.

At the beginning of a new year, after having "taken stock" of what remains from the transactions of the months that have gone, it is well to take as comprehensive a view as possible of the demands that will be made upon us in the days that are ahead, in order that we may adjust ourselves to whatever situations that may confront us, and in order that we may estimate our resources in relation to the tasks we shall be called upon to perform. We shall fail in the very beginning of what ought to be one of the best years in our lives if we do not enter upon it with the full realization that it has work for us to do. "The man with a mission" may be an expression that is peculiarly applicable to some person who has been specifically charged with the performance of some particular work; but it is an expression that belongs fundamentally to every normal man and woman in the land. There are no "missionless men," even if many of us do manage to drift through life as a rudderless ship upon an uncharted ocean; there is work a plenty in this busy world, and every person in it is responsible for the due performance of some portion of it. The heaviest obligation that rests upon us is that of developing to the fullest possible degree those normal powers, physical, mental, and spiritual, which differentiate us from the brute creation and endow us with the capacity to be co-workers with God in bringing to perfection a constantly developing race. Our first work, then, is naturally that of self-improvement—the more perfect development of our own powers in order that we may be well qualified to do a full share of the work that remains to be done. Surely, as we look to the year ahead of us, we will determine to make more of ourselves than we have made in the past. There is as much of duty as there is of privilege in the opportunity to "grow in grace and in knowledge" through succeeding years. And it is in struggling toward the goal of self-perfection that we come into contact with those needs of our fellow-men that reveal to us our duties and inspire us to do our best for the welfare of the whole world. The new year opens to us a field of activity in which every man can find a place to work.

BENDING TO THE TASK.

We covet for ourselves, and for all those to whom we may speak a word, the determination to dedicate all the powers we possess to the full accomplishment of all the tasks that will fall to our lot during the coming year. We may not have much to do as compared with the tasks of some men, and our limitations may be such as to render impossible the accomplishment of anything very much worth while; but what we can do, we would do with never a thought of discouragement or weariness. It is work just plain, hard work—that the world needs today to solve many of its problems and start it on the road to peaceful prosperity. Ignorance and laziness are two curses of the present generation and the greater of these is laziness. Too many of us try to open the doors of the treasure house with the magic words, "Open, sesame!" not realizing that those were magic doors that swung back on their hinges in that old story; ours are matter-of-fact doors that respond to nothing but matter-of-fact methods (though there is a wonderful magic in hard work). As a church we have laid out a great program, one that, by every token, ought to enlist the heartiest co-operation of every man among us, in spite of all the difficulties in the way of its accomplishment, it, too, will be carried to a successful conclusion by the united efforts of all who are interested in its completion. No matter what our tasks may be in the coming year, if we bend to them with all the strength we possess, they will be done before the year has elapsed. We may well keep in mind those aphorisms of the ancients: "There is no excellence without labor," and "Labor conquers all things."

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

It is peculiarly tragic that the news should come from China just at this time that 45,000,000 people in that land are in the midst of what is spoken of as the most distressing and widespread famine in recorded history. We have become more or less familiar with the terrible suffering of the children of the Near East as the result of the devastation wrought by the war, and responded in part to the appeals that have been made from that region for relief, yet here is a situation brought about, not by war, but by such failure of rainfall that no food crops have been produced since 1919. There may be some people in the United States who have fared scantily during the past two or three years—but hundreds of thousands of men, women, and children have not actually starved to death, and most of us have had as much to eat as was good for us. Doubtless we have wasted enough to save a nation, since six cents will save a life in China for a day. It would be utterly in keeping with the Christmas spirit to send a contribution to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, 810 Broadway Nashville, Tenn., to be sent to these starving people in China by our Board of Missions.

FIRMLY FIXED.

We were greatly interested the other day in reading an account of the peculiar power of a man in Paris who seems to be able to resist all the efforts of strong men to lift him from the floor. He simply takes his stand, touches the right pulse and the left carotid region of the one who attempts to lift him and remains immovable. This is only a figure, however, of the man who fixes himself firmly upon a foundation of moral principle and is unmoved by all the forces that may be brought to bear against him. The Master himself told of a house that fell not even when the rain descended and the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon it, because it was founded upon a rock.

THE LITTLE THINGS.

By Florence Jones Hadley.

'Tis the little things and the common things,
And the things we do each day;
'Tis the little sigh and the little song
And the common words we say,
That round at last to the perfect whole,
For life is but this, my dear,
A summing up of the common things
That make the common year.

O the little things and the common things
Are the things that make the day;
The common sun and the common rain,
And the grass beside the way,
The song of a bird on the swaying bough,
The flashing of soft, brown wings,
Are all but a part of a perfect whole—
God's beautiful common things!

A BENIGN REACTION IN EDUCATION.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Christian education, that is, education in and by denominational schools, was the earliest type of education in the American Colonies, and later in the Republic of the United States. Although William and Mary College in Virginia was chartered before Harvard College, the latter was the first American college to actually begin work, and it was founded for religious purposes, and at first it was conducted under the control of the church. An inscription on one of the gate-posts reveals the motives which led to its establishment and the objects which it was designed to achieve: "After God had carried us safe to New England, and we had builded our homes, provided necessaries for our livelihood, reared convenient places for God's worship and settled the civil government, one of the next things we longed for and looked after was to advance learning and to perpetuate it to posterity, dreading to leave an illiterate ministry to the churches when our present ministers shall lie in the dust." The motto carved on the corner-stone of the first building, and which is still inscribed upon the seal of Harvard University, is "For Christ and the Church." The second building of the institution was called "Indian College" because the money given for its erection was contributed with the understanding that it was to be used for the evangelization of the Indians, and a college press, the first printing press in this country, was set up in this building, and it was in it that Eliot's Indian Bible and other religious literature were printed.

Not less religious were the motives which gave rise to William and Mary College in Virginia which was opened in 1693. In the charter of the institution its object was proclaimed in these words: "That the Church of Virginia may be furnished with a seminary of ministers of the Gospel, and that the youth may be properly educated in good manners, and that the Christian faith may be propagated among the Western Indians to the glory of Almighty God."

Seven years later than William and Mary, Yale College was established because of the deep concern felt on account of the decline of godliness at Harvard. A company of ministers in Connecticut held a meeting and took steps to found a college of the most orthodox character, and "in which," they said, "we may educate ministers in our own way."

Princeton University is the successor of the "Log College," founded by Rev. William Tennant and his parishioners. It was a part of the fruit of "The Great Awakening," in which great religious revival Tennant bore a conspicuous part.

Thus the leading institutions of our country in Colonial times, and for the first half of the nineteenth century, were all denominational colleges. From these schools of the churches came the great founders of the republic, Madison coming from Princeton, Jefferson from William and Mary, and the Adamses from Harvard. Later Webster was graduated from Dartmouth, a college founded by a gift of the devout Lord Dartmouth for the avowed purpose of promoting evangelical religion, and especially for preparing missionaries for work among the Indians. Calhoun came from Yale, and John Forsyth and the two Colquitts from Princeton.

About the middle of the nineteenth century a wave of secularization passed over many institutions of learning in the United States. Various influences conspired to bring to pass this result. Not a few were allured away from the churches by the hope of getting large aid of a financial sort from wealthy secularists who cared nothing for supporting the churches, but who felt constrained to do some philanthropic deeds for the public good. Some were captured furtively and gradually by men of liberalistic minds, who excited, by reason of their education at German universities, a degree of influence on American education far beyond what was justified by their real merits. They were able to do much to change the British type of our American colleges, given to them by their devout founders, and Teutonize to a very great extent American institutions of learning.

The world war has worked a revolution in the thought of our people concerning the higher education. They have been forced to see that secularized education is a peril to civilization, and that it has already cost immeasurable treasure and slain seven millions of the young men of the nations whose value cannot be expressed in terms of money. They have seen that education exclusively by the State tends to deify the State, and to dethrone God, to the damage of the State itself; for the State-controlled universities of Germany, politicalized and then polluted by their politicalization, generated the forces which wrought the ruin of the German empire and brought injury to all mankind.

Hence our people are turning back to the type of education which produced the founders of the Republic and nurtured a majority of the great statesmen who guided its destiny during the first century of its existence. A type of education which made Madison and Jefferson and Adams and Webster and Calhoun and Forsyth and Colquitt, they are not willing to exchange for a politicalized and secularized sort of culture which yielded Kaiser William, Hindenburg, Bernstorff, and their like.

The return to first principles has not come too soon, and the churches of our country perceive this fact. The larger Protestant denominations, to say nothing of the Roman Catholic Church with its well-known and settled policy of education, have projected in recent years campaigns to add above $250,000,000 to the assets of their educational institutions. Some of these campaigns have been carried to complete success already, and others are assured of success. No church can afford to fall short of its goal in such a movement, and none of the large churches will do so. Any church which does not at this momentous hour equip and endow its colleges and universities will eventually perish, and deserve to perish.

Let no man suppose, therefore, that denominational colleges and universities are going to become an extinct species in the field of American education. There has never been a time when they did not shelter a majority of the college students of the country, and the post-bellum reaction in favor of distinctly religious education will increase both the number of their pupils and the amount of their resources. And the Christian education which has been well for the nation in the past will continue to promote its welfare in the future.

The institutions of the American churches have rendered a service to the nation which very many have not appreciated, and which some have affected to despise. But the great body of thoughtful and patriotic men in our country are now beginning to see the vast amount and inexpressible value of this service, and they will give both financial and moral support to the colleges and universities which have rendered it.

Of the twenty-six men who have been presidents of the United States, seventeen have been college men, and sixteen of the seventeen have been educated in denominational institutions, among whom are Jefferson, Madison, Adams, McKinley and Wilson.

The very perpetuation of higher education in the United States has depended upon the colleges and universities of the churches. State schools and other secular institutions have never been able to produce educators of sufficient strength and in sufficient numbers to make up their own faculties. Without the schools of the churches other institutions of learning would never have had an existence; they could not have been born nor could they have been preserved if the denominational colleges had not gone before them. Moreover, they have been restrained from evil tendencies by the influence of the denominational institutions.

Nor could the American churches have lived and done their great work without their colleges and universities. The colleges and universities of the State, and the independent and irresponsible institutions of the secularists, have educated very few ministers of the Gospel, and they were never producing as few preachers as they are now graduating. Without our denominational institutions of learning we should be without a Christian ministry, or have only an illiterate ministry. We can not depend on secular schools to supply the churches with an educated ministry, and the republic cannot live without the churches. Wherefore, the colleges and universities of the churches are indispensable supports to our civilization and social order.

The country is to be congratulated upon the new era of increased resources and enlarged influence which has opened before the Christian colleges and universities in the United States. Their wide and blessed power will do much to avert from us the dreadful doom of the nations that forget God.

They will continue in the future to be the dominant force in American education as they have been in the past, from colonial times until the present day. Just in proportion as they have been forced to do their work with insufficient resources and inadequate equipment, the nation has suffered with them. Now as never before they are needed to serve and save the republic. They deserve the generous support to which their past service entitle them and the liberal aid for which their future mission calls.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The fabled Argus had a hundred eyes, Briareus as many arms, and Hercules was assigned tasks which required marvelous strength and ingenuity. It would require all of these combined to accomplish fully the work apparently expected and unblushingly solicited of your modern preacher. Yesterday I received my mail—only four calls for help; this morning, three or four more urgent appeals. But what's the use? Counting them does not stop them. Like the poor, they are ever with us. Our good women are sending clothes to shivering Poland, Central Europe is calling for food and ralment, famine is hurrying myriads to the grave in China, the same condition, we are told, prevails in parts of India, all the institutions and beneolences at home must be maintained and new ones enterprised. So there you are. I suppose every charitably-inclined person must exercise wise judgment and discretion in deciding whom, when, and where to help. Back of all this want there is some deep-seated cause or reason for its existence. God has given man certain principles and rules by which he may live and prosper. If these are disregarded and disobeyed, a touch of hell flames forth on earth. America has never known a famine that I ever read of in all its history. Yet right in the center of civilization, the heart of Europe, where great universities teach all the known sciences and where cathedral spires tower to the heavens, a country that has produced some of the world's greatest thinkers—poets, philosophers, statesmen, theologians, and scholars—right there, children are crying for bread and its wailing refrain comes across the seas to you and me. Something is radically wrong—and it is only through suffering and pain that the wrong can be done away with and the right reinstated. Meanwhile, we can help them as we can, and leave the rest in the hands of a righteous God, for the need is sore and the heart-cry pitiful.

Only five loaves and two fishes—a lad's luncheon, we are told. The Master was tired that day. All the day or days before he had been busy at home in Capernaum. Peter and John had taken him in the boat that he might cross over to Perea and rest, but no, the crowd must follow and they rush around the head of the lake and meet him on the further shore. He was weary, but his compassion for the shepherdless flock was stronger, and he ministered unto them. He was human; so were they, and human need must be met. "Bring them hither to me"—the loaves and fishes. In his heart was compassion, in his hands was bread, in his spirit, by divine birthright, the power to increase and multiply. From his lips falls the blessing so well known in every Judean home—"Blessed art Thou, Jehovah our God, who causeth bread to come forth from the earth." And then the ever-recurring mystery and miracles of the seasons is cut short by the divine power of Him who ruleth all things. May we not bring our poor talents, our gifts, our privileges? and surely he will use them and multiply to feed again, and yet again many who hunger for the bread of life. So the miracle coutinues, passing the bread of life from the Master's hand to other hands. "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled."

* * *

Then again the Spirit of Wisdom led me to another part of the King's domain. Fair and upright, strong and with faces lighted with hope and faith were the Keepers. They were the guardians of the King's treasures and messengers of the Throne.

"What need hath the King for these? Doth he not guard and keep his own?" said I to my guide.

"Surely," answered Wisdom, "but this is the King's way and His way is ever the best."

"And what means that vast busy throng, just over there, with riches of gold, and all the love and luxury of life in their hands, calling to these chosen ones? Do they need these elect ones? And do these heed the call?"

Wisdom answered, "Some indeed heed the call of this multitude and are lost in the world of men, yet the King honors those who honor Him. The faithful ones are the jewels in His crown and he knows full well his own."

"But, see, they are feasting, breaking bread, and drinking water from cups of crystal, giving one to other and to the throng!"

"This is the King's business. His own know his voice and speak for Him, toil for Him, though often weary; their hands are His hands, their feet bear His message. It is His way among men. He has no other.

"Now, see again, they gather in crowds, they shout, in many tones, they sing and I hear anon the earnest cry of prayer; then with lifted hands one blesses many."

"It is thus they praise the King and gather gems for his crown, jewels of such shine forever. For this hath he called them. Ministering to these, they minister for him. As no man knoweth the full mystery of life, so none knoweth all the ways of the King."

Deeply moved by the wonder, beauty and marvel of the vision, looking in the shining eyes of Wisdom, I said, "Ah, what can I do?"

Pointing to a great burnished light which hung like a crystal star shining to call the fair field, he answered, "This calleth one, work now and evermore in the light of Faith."

LINKING UP SPIRITUAL CULTIVATION WITH CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By Rev. P. L. Cobb, Secretary,
Department of Spiritual Resources.

The question has been asked, "How are we to link up a program of spiritual cultivation, including Bible reading, prayer, the family altar, life service and stewardship, with Christian Education?"

If the former educational movements in the church had been sufficiently strong financially to put on such a campaign, Christian education to-day would be considered as spiritual as the missionary propaganda. It was not done and the strongest advocates of Christian education regret the fact that the church has yet be brought to see that Christian education is really as spiritual as any other cause that has ever been presented for endorsement and support.

Education.

To make this link so plain that the wayfaring man may not err therein, let me go at some of the elementary facts concerned. Education is a process of leading out, as the word indicates. This brings up the mental picture of the boy or girl being led by the hand, getting a constantly enlarging view, exercising and thus developing.

Ideas are gathered along the way, which are grouped as ideals—the things ahead that are worth while. They may be good or bad. The process is a part of his education. Ideals are fascinating and alluring. In education, per se, there is no discrimination. Nothing ethical enters into the ideal. They may be devilish or divine.

In the process of education, or this leading-out process, there is yet no compelling power—nothing within that would push out to the attainment of these ideals. Gradually motives are formed and the youth begins to put forth effort to realize certain ideals. This inner compulsion pushes out to the ideals regardless of whether they are good or bad. It is simply the desire for certain things becoming stronger than for other things.

The ideals selected become objectives. They have now become concreted. The whole power of being is centered on the attainment of these objectives, regardless, as yet, of their ethical value. This is education. It is good or bad by chance. But remember that it confers power, and power is always dangerous when not brought under moral restraint.

Christian Education.

Let us start over with the youth. The hand that leads him is a Christian hand. Christian influences surround him as he exercises and develops. The constantly enlarging view is seen through a spiritual atmosphere. Right ideals are gathered as he moves onward and his ideals are high and noble.

Next, the inspiration that moves him to the realization of these ideals is thoroughly moral. Nothing low or sordid or selfish actuates him. From these ideals, all of which are worthy, he selects those that seem to him most worth while. His ideals have been concreted, they have become objectives. They are thoroughly moral and unselfish.

In the midst of these objectives stands the Christ. Love and unselfish service characterize the use of all the love of the youth, now grown to manhood, has developed. He that would be great among you, let him be the servant of all. This is Christian development, Christian education, whether given in the home, the church, the social group or the school.

Scope of Christian Education.

Every factor that contributes to this leading out process, this development of power, is in the field or scope of Christian education. First in point of time and importance comes the home, the Christian father and mother in those first steps on the way, then the associations of the home and the companionships of the children.

Following these are the books, periodicals and papers that are selected for their moral and educative value. The social standards of the community and the influence of the moving pictures of to-day, must be reckoned with.

From the home and the community, the boy's steps next lead to the church and Sunday school and League. To say that the church, while doing a marvelous work, is playing its part in Christianizing the boy, is to forget the facts given by the Sunday school authorities, that sixty per cent of them slip through the meshes and are lost to the church.

The next logical step is the school, public, private, collegiate, university, technical and professional. To shoot all these agencies through with the spirit of unselfish service and loyalty to Jesus Christ and His motives and ideals is our task. This is Christian Education.

The Christianizing Process.

Up to this time we have discussed education vs. Christian education, and outlined the boundaries or scope of Christian education. Let us now define the Christianizing process.

What is fundamental in all spiritual cultivation? Just a few things: Bible study, prayer and worship in the family, the larger social group and the church, the student body—everything that generates spiritual life and power and makes a contribution to the atmosphere in which Christian character grows.

Then, into the family we propose, during the three months of spiritual cultivation, to carry a definite program for these two fundamental things; a program that includes daily Bible reading and prayer, whether by the individual or at the family altar.

This program, followed by enrollment of our choicest young people for various types of life service and the acceptance by our people of the largest view of stewardship, will create a tide of spiritual power deep enough and strong enough to carry the five objectives of the Christian Education Movement to a glorious realization.

To me, it is as natural to move in thought from processes of prayer, Bible reading, life service and stewardship to the financial objective of the great Christian Education Movement as it is to expect a revival of religion to quicken all the material and life processes of the local church and community.

When the church flourishes spiritually, the stewards rejoice because their burdens are light. The worthy evangelist has no stipulation for pay. The people, rejoicing at the close for results achieved, voice with a silver tongue their grateful appreciation.

The Centenary was undergirded with prayer and the Director-General, Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, thus expresses his belief in the spiritual program: "I need not re-emphasize to you how important I consider this department of work. If we shall successfully carry out the fundamental program of the Centenary, we must undergird it with the Spiritual Resources plan."

The words of the Educational Director-General, Dr. J. H. Reynolds, are similar: "From its inception I have felt keenly the need of the prayers of praying people for the Christian Education Movement. Ours is a difficult task, as well as a great cause. At such a time we need a vital faith and a clear sense of divine leadership. Prayer alone can bring about this happy result."

If we have, through this program of spiritual cultivation, a revival in the homes of the church, we shall have, as a result, a constantly enlarging stream of Christian young men and women pouring into our enlarged halls of learning.

No, the three months set aside for spiritual cultivation is none too much time to give. This program, coupled with the splendid efforts to give the people the proper conception of the value of Christian education as imparted by our institutions of learning, will secure the financial assings as an incident of the enlarged program of Christian education, and great joy will mark our giving.

A WONDERFUL THING IN KOREA.

But it would be more sensational, as well as more wonderful, in America. I have just received a card letter from L. R. S. Stewart, who led our evangelistic campaign in our colleges last year with such great success, who is now conducting the Centenary evangelistic work in Korea. He is directing it a school of preparation, where workers are being trained in evangelism. And the wonderful thing could be 100 preachers gathered in such a school for three weeks. But it would be still more wonderful if these preachers were going out for three months' revival work. But it is more wonderful than either of these.

Listen. It is 100 laymen who are going out to do evangelistic work for three months! Think of it!

Suppose you were to go over to Grenada and find Reed Bingham, Jim Johnston, C. C. Moore, W. P. Kretschmar, Jim Small, Bob Sharp, Jim Kyle, Claude Holmes, Dick Hall, Walter Stokes, Russell Weaver, Ed. Wilburn, George Stokely, J. R. Sheffield, Jim High, J. G. McGowan, George Lenwich, Dudley Lipscomb, Dick Jones, Lem Seawright, and 50 others, all seated in a church studying their Bibles, finding suitable passages to read to sinners to cause them to repent and believe on Christ, while J. R. Pepper, W. M. McIntosh, and O. E. Goddard make earnest talks on how to do personal work, and every once in awhile they all pray earnestly for the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Then you will think, "I never saw the like." But just wait a few days until you see these 100 laymen of America giving business instructions, packing their suitcases and saying good-by to their families, and saying: "I'll be back in three months, D. V." Then you will say something good. But wait three months, please sir. Wait till you read the report of the Evangelistic Committee in the Conference minutes! Then what? You will shout and you will not be by yourself. We will all help you. Wonderful in Korea, more wonderful in America. Why? You answer for yourself.

Thank God for a Centenary Evangelistic Campaign in Korea. Who wants one in America? I do.

A STEWARD—HIS EQUIPMENT.

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Stewards of the Methodist Church are very important persons. They represent the preacher's best estimate of men in his congregation, or else they represent his fear of men. A book on my table says that the steward maintains three tables: that of the preacher, that of the Lord's Supper, and that of the poor. With the trend toward associated charities, Red Cross peace-time programs, and the like, the steward has little to do for the poor, and the dollar per month for the elements for the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper cannot be termed a great load. Then shall we say that the principal business of the steward is to feed the preacher?

In a sense, yes, that is his big job. But the making of a steward is something other than locating a collector of money. I have gathered it somewhere that a steward should have four things in order to qualify as a steward. He should, first of all, have religion; then he should have a Bible; next he should have the Conference organ: and finally, a list of names. Literally, a steward is one to whom is committed for safe keeping a sacred trust. A steward should keep his religion, keep his Bible handy, keep his church paper and keep his list of names. Right there is where his keeping work ends.

As a Christian he should stand out in his congregation and city until all recognize his piety. Putting a man on the board of stewards simply to honor him and let his monthly check more easily, is one method of trifling with the influence of the church. The steward should live his religion boldly. He should read his Bible habitually. There will be many cares and disturbances in his official life, and to meet these requires divine support. Knowledge of the Bible is a fine prop to a busy steward. He should have his Conference organ. Imagine a steward without his church paper! In it he is kept posted on what his church is doing in his own and adjoining States, as well as all over the Connection. If by chance a steward is financially unable to pay for the paper, and measures up in other respects to the requirements of his office, the paper should be given to him.

Now, the steward has a list of names, and he should collect from them. I know the steward who says he would rather pay the whole amount himself than go out and collect. I would not be sarcastic for a minute, but such a steward is missing the job entirely when he takes that attitude. If the steward at the beginning of the year visits the members on his list, secures their pledge and is faithful all the year, there will not be an item of the church budget but that will be paid in full. The practice of the whole official board's lying down on a secretary or treasurer or some other one person, is ruinous.

The steward ought to represent the whole church to the people under his supervision. He ought to know the several causes to which the church applies itself and gives its money. A working knowledge of our missionary fields; our educational plants; our work of church extension and other items, should characterize his equipment; and for this purpose it is well for the pastor to deliver a twenty-minute address at each stewards' meeting on the works of the church. In this way we would soon have an educated and loyal body of men as the officers of our churches.

THE CHINESE RENAISSANCE.

By W. B. Nance.

The sense in which this word is used has been defined by one of the leaders of the movement thus: A deep dissatisfaction with things as they are as a necessary step for something better. This indicates, of course, that the first feature of the movement is rigidly critical. Everything, new and old, must be submitted to the acid test before young China will consent to accept it and build it into his new world. The leaders of this movement are for the most part what you call agnostics, but there are various types of agnostics and fortunately for China the most influential leaders are the type that George Romanes called "pure agnostics." That is to say, men who have laid aside all prepossessions and who are willing to consider anything whatsoever on its merits. These men recognize that the present condition of China from every point of view is unsatisfactory. They are men who know a great deal about America and other Western countries. They have an intense admiration for the efficiency of Western countries along various lines. Especially their admiration has been stirred by the idealism of America as it came out of the great war, and was voiced in the historic papers of President Wilson. They are, therefore, deeply concerned to find out the source of China's present weakness and failure, that they may get rid of it, and to find out the source of America's strength that they may take advantage of it for the future of China. They are face to face, of course, with the fact that a Christian missionary enterprise has existed in China for a long time, and they are naturally familiar with the attitude of Chinese scholars in the past toward the Christian church, which was a part of their general attitude toward everything foreign. Now, let us ask a few questions:

1. What is the attitude of the leaders of this movement toward Confucianism? These men have bred into their very nature a spirit of reverence for the past. They will be found speaking of Confucianism, therefore, usually in terms of the highest respect. They call it sometimes "our sacred religion," but they do not hesitate to point out that for a strong, united and efficient China a forward-looking attitude is absolutely essential, and that this contradicts the very foundation of orthodox Confucianism. The foundation of orthodox Confucianism is that the golden age was in the distant past, and that the first of all virtues is filial piety. For any man, therefore, to suppose that he could improve upon the institutions and ideas of his ancestors is to fail in filial piety. Young China's eyes are opened to what this means for any nation that must come into competition with the modern nations of the world. Consequently, while their training leads them to maintain a form of respect for their so-called "sacred religion," they thoroughly realize that orthodox Confusianism is not a possible foundation for modern China.

2. What is the attitude of these men toward the Christian church? In an article published in the July number of the Chinese Recorder, Mr. Shen Tu Sheo sets forth the attitude of himself and his associates in this movement toward Christianity. He refers to the contempt with which the older Chinese scholars regard the Christian church and seeks to set forth the reasons therefor. He says that while it may be true, and doubtless is, that there have been many church members who were unworthy, that the chief reason for the hostile or contemptuous attitude of the older scholars toward Christianity was their own ignorance and pride, and he bewails the fact that this attitude of the older scholars robbed China of great spiritual benefits which might have come to her from the presence of such a power as a Christian religion in China. He then goes on to state the attitude which he and his associates have toward Christianity. He feels that while the progress of science has made some of the doctrines which are emphasized by missionaries untenable, there is one thing which young China must gain from Christianity if China is to be made strong, united and efficient. He puts this in telling words—"We must by some means," he says, "infuse the spirit of generous love and self-sacrifice of Jesus into the very life-blood of our people."

3. These men realize that if China is to be a real democracy, the masses of the people must be fitted for citizenship which involves, of course, universal education. They are fully alive to the obstacle in the way of universal education presented by the Chinese classic language. A comparison will show what this means. When a schoolboy began to learn in the old days in China, he began to memorize "The Great Learning" and "The Constant Mean," not one word of which he could understand, and not one word of which was ever explained to him until he had memorized the book. This was just as if an American schoolboy, instead of beginning with the primer, should be set down with Cicero's disquisition on "Friendship" or "Old Age" in Latin. This means, of course, that the book language of China up to the present time has been entirely or almost entirely different from the spoken language of the people. The situation is similar to that which existed in Europe at the time when Alfred the Great first began to translate books from Latin, the only book language then, into spoken English. The leaders of the Renaissance Movement are perfectly familiar with European history and have now definitely set themselves to be the Alfred the Greats of China. Past masters of the classic themselves and, therefore, commanding the respect of all the reading people of China, men like Shen Tu Sheo and Hu Shih have definitely and finally bidden farewell to classic Chinese. All their writing now is in the spoken language of the people and within the last three years there have been established in China by the leaders of this movement 360 periodicals—dailies, weeklies, ten-day issues, monthlies and quarterlies—all published in the spoken language of the people. The establishment of these periodicals and the whole-hearted advocacy of this new movement by men of such acknowledged ability has given great impetus to the movement already started by the leaders of education in China for the reform of the whole educational system. A number of years ago in the primary schools the methods of teaching were changed. Illustrated primers and readers were adoptod as a means of teaching Chinese in the primary schools, but not until recently was there much enthusiasm for the substitution of the spoken language for the classic. The attempt was still to teach the old classic language by a new method. Now, however, the Ministry of Education has given instruction that in all the primary schools, the national language, which means the spoken language, alone shall be taught. The classic language is only to be taken up in the middle school (which corresponds to our American high school) just as Latin in America is taken in the high school. Thus the Government itself is definitely committed to this great reform of making the spoken language also the literary language of the country, and it can be only a question of time when the classic language in China will occupy the same position that Latin does in English-speaking countries.

4. The change from the classic to the spoken language was a vast step in advance, but so long as there was no means of writing Chinese except by the use of idiograms, much of which must be learned separately, there was still a mountain of difficulty in the way of universal education. Missionaries have recognized this obstacle of the written character ever since the beginning of Protestant missions in China, and in order to make it possible for adults, who had not learned to read in their childhood, to read the Scriptures, so-called Romanized systems of writing were worked out and Christian literature produced in them in various parts of China. There were two reasons why these systems did not appeal to the Chinese. One was that they were foreign. Roman letters were as strange to the Chinese as the Chinese idiograms would be to an American. The other was that only uneducated Chinese used these methods of writing. In recent years some missionaries of North China decided that if a simplified alphabet of the Chinese language was ever to be successful, it must be based upon the old Chinese writing. They, therefore, set to work to simplify a few Chinese idiograms and thus produced an alphabet with which to spell all the Chinese signs. This system they used for some years and proved its practicability, when the Renaissance Movement prepared an intelligent, patriotic China for a sympathetic consideration of its merits. As a result, the Ministry of Education a few years ago appointed a committee of Chinese scholars to work out a similar system. A number of missionaries were invited to sit on this committee and together they produced an alphabet of thirty-nine letters with which it is possible to spell all the words of the Chinese language. The peculiar excellence of this system is that it is strictly phonetic. There is only one possible way to spell a word. There can never be any doubt of the pronunciation of any word. Consequently, any intelligent person, whether he can read a Chinese character or not, if he can speak the Chinese language, can learn to write it with ease in a few weeks. What this means for the masses of uneducated adults who will be taught by Christian missionaries to read the Christian Scriptures may easily be imagined, not to mention what it means for the rising generation of children who will be delivered from the bondage of the classic language.

The Attitude of the Christian Church Toward This Movement.

Naturally this movement has created great interest in all circles in China, and the leaders of the Christian forces, both missionaries and Chinese Christians, realize that this movement is full of dynamite. Now dynamite means danger, but it also means power. The problem, therefore, is how to handle this dynamite so that its destructive power shall be exercised only on that which must be removed, in order that that which cannot be shaken may take its place. A conference of Christian leaders was held in Peking last spring to which were invited a number of leaders of this Renaissance Movement, and various questions were discussed in a spirit of brotherliness and mutual consideration in the hope of bringing to bear upon the Renaissance Movement the helpful influence of Christianity. It is recognized that a new ap[illegible] for the new time in China is the first [illegible] of the missionary propaganda. Best of all was the spirit of open-minded co-operation in a search for truth and for means of promoting the best interests of China. The future of these developments will be watched with the deepest interest by all lovers of China and the Kingdom of God.

FROM CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Please tell our readers that we have just closed a most successful half-year at Centenary College. There has been beautiful harmony in the faculty, and the student body seems happy and contented. A marked improvement is noted in the efforts of the students; they work better, they study more. A deeper spirit of purpose [illegible] seems to animate them. Centenary is having a new life.

Our new (winter) term begins Jan. 3, 1921. I am writing to ask the co-operation of all our [illegible], to the end that this new term may be the best in all our honored history. I covet the prayers of all our good people. May I say, with all [illegible] that I had rather have the prayers and [illegible] of the preachers of the Louisiana Conference than to have an endowment of a million dollars without that personal and fraternal backing.

Let me suggest right here a very simple but effective means of helpfulness to us. If each one of you will send me the name of one good boy who ought to be in Centenary, we can soon fill even the new building and also help more students.

On the press now is a new booklet about Centenary College. You will find some good reading in it. A card will bring it to you free—and all the boys will want to read it. Just ask for our new booklet.

Of course, you have all heard that Dr. Bourne has been granted leave of absence to assist the [illegible] Commission at headquarters. A great responsibility is thrust upon me. Once more, I ask that you pray for me that I may hold the standard of Centenary high for God and the church. Brethren, come to see us when in Shreveport. Send us names of worthy boys, and tell your members also to write for our new booklet—it's a beauty and is full of interesting things to all the family.

Acting President.

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Today's mail brought a letter from John E. Edgerton, treasurer of the Centenary Commission, advising that their books would be held open until January 7, in order that we might get in all the money possible. Therefore, I am writing you, asking that you collect all the money possible between now and January 1; and that you have already collected, see that it is sent in. This is very important, and your co-operation will be very much appreciated. It is very important that all treasurers send in their reports, with the money they have collected and have on hand; and if you have any in the bank, please send check with your report, or notify me of the amount, and I will make draft for it and your church will receive credit for the same. Please see that your report and remittance reaches me not later than January 1, so that I will have time to include it in my report to Mr. Edgerton.

Remember that the distribution of 10 per cent will be made to the Conferences immediately after our report; therefore, the more we pay, the more we will be entitled to in our Conference.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

"Behold The Triumph of the Prussian Schoolmaster"

When von Humboldt was asked how to develop a great Prussian Empire, he replied: "Whatever you would put into the life of the nation, you must first put into the schools of the nation."

This advice was followed. Militarism, the glorification of force, the idea of the German super-state, and the ethics of the jungle went into the schools. And when von Moltke led the triumphant hosts of Prussian militarism through the streets of conquered Paris, he remarked: "Behold the triumph of the Prussian schoolmaster."

Wrong Education Wrecked the World

Germany scrapped civilization by wrong education. In two generations she transformed a gentle, God-fearing, peace-loving people into a ruthless horde of war-mad fanatics.

This kind of education glorifies might and physical prowess, while it despises the gentler virtues of humility, truth, and honor. It exhalts the ethics of the jungle and considers, as Neitzsche did, the ethics of Jesus as fit only for "women, and cows, and Englishmen."

Thus it trained a generation to believe that the supreme interest is the state, that war is a legitimate activity, that might—military, industrial, physical—is the final arbiter of all things. So when at last "Der Taag"—"the day"—arrived the product of the Prussian schools marched across Belgium, spurred on by their preacher's declaration: "We execute God's almighty will, and he calls us to murderous battles, even if worlds should thereby fall in ruins."

Are Americans willing for the Prussian tendency now manifest in our education to become dominant?

Christian Education Can Save the World

Over against Prussianism, Christian education accepts the principle that right makes might and implants deep in the soul the fundamental principles of religion—love for God, faith in Jesus Christ, justice, humility, love.

William Hohenzollern is the product of the one. Woodrow Wilson is the product of the other.

Christian education is necessary to civilization and the world's salvation. It alone can produce a generation of men devoted to righteous principles of personal, social, national, and international action. It alone can give us Christian leaders to lead the world aright. It alone can furnish men and women to do the Christian work of the world.

Germany had no Christian colleges, and she ruined the world. The Christian Education Movement proposes to give Methodism the best system of Christian colleges in America. Will you back this program?

THE TEST.

By Florence Jones Hadley.

It seems to be all right, laddie,
In color and form and line;
There's nothing to make you doubt it,
So perfect is the design.
But before you try to pass it—
This dollar so bright and new—
Just give it a final test, lad,
And see if the coin rings true.

'Tis one of the old world's ways, laddie,
Demanding the very best
From our heart and brain and conscience.
And making it pass the test.
For aught that is base will bar it,
This dollar so bright and new,
So, if you would have it pass, lad,
Just see if the coin rings true.

If friendship is offered, laddie,
And honor and fame and gold,
Don't be in a hurry to grasp them—
Just see if the test will hold.
Will they weigh out in the balance
Where God and the world may view?
Just give them the final test, dear,
And see if the coin rings true!

THE JOKE ON ELLEN ANN.

"In a tin pail!"

Cicely's voice was so astonished and horrified that it made mamma laugh.

"A nice, shiny tin pail," she amended. "Come and see your face in it. And that isn't all there is in it, either."

There were crinkled tarts and delicate sandwiches and a little golden cup custard, with one of Cicely's little silver spoons to eat it with. There was a twisty doughnut that looked like a man, and a little round pie with "C" pricked into the crust.

"The inside's nice," admitted Cicely admiringly. "But must I take it in a tin pail, mamma? I'd rather come way home—yes, I would, every single step! Nobody else but Ellen Ann Tibbetts carries a tin pail, and the boys all laugh at Ellen Ann. And, O dear, that pail is 'zactly like Ellen Ann's, mamma! Hers is shiny, too!"

Mamma was fitting on the cover. She looked rather sober now. "A little girl who loses her pretty lunch basket must carry her dinner in a tin pail or go without," she said gravely. "And maybe it will be good for her to learn how little Ellen Ann feels to be laughed at."

"I never laughed at her, honest, mamma, 'cept up my sleeve."

"Well, maybe now you won't laugh even there, dear. Now kiss me, and off with you."

It was a beautiful morning, with sunshine enough in it to make two days. The pail cover jingled a jolly little tune as Cicely walked, and the sun caught the shiny surface of it and made it look like a silver cover.

During the morning somebody came for Ellen Ann Tibbetts to go right home, as her mother was sick. So there was only one tin pail in the dressing room at noon recess. That comforted Cicely a good deal; for it would have been dreadful to see Ellen Ann eating out of a tin pail just like hers!

She took her shiny tin pail and went out into the sunshine with it, thinking how "delucious" mamma's custard would taste and how— "Why!"

Cicely almost dropped the pail; but it wouldn't have spilled much if she had. It was nearly empty! There was not any custard or any silver spoon to eat it with. There was not any little round pie with "C" on the cover. There was not any—anything except just two lonesome biscuits sliding round in the bottom!

"Why!" Cicely cried over again.

Then she knew what it meant. This was Ellen Ann's shiny pail. Ellen Ann had carried hers home.

"Well, she's mean!" cried Cicely hotly. "I hope my custard and my 'nitial pie will choke her—most. Yes, I do! I'm most starved to pieces. And she didn't leave any butter on her old biscuits."

She went off by herself to be cross and hungry. It was ever so long before she would be sensible and stop trying to believe Ellen Ann had done it just to play a mean joke on her. It was ever so long before she took out her little butterless biscuits and looked at them pityingly. Was that what Ellen ate for lunches? And not any butter on them at all? Didn't she ever have any custards or tarts or twisty doughnuts? And never any little thin slices of pink ham in between? It made Cicely so hungry to think about little thin slices of pink ham that she took a nibble of Ellen Ann's biscuit. Then she slowly dropped it back into the tin pail. Cicely would rather go without any dinner than eat her lunch without a speck of butter on it.

Poor Ellen Ann! Cicely hoped she would like the custard and the crinkly tarts. Yes, and even the initial pie. She suddenly remembered that Ellen Ann's father was an invalid and that Ellen Ann's mother "took in" house-cleaning and things. And the patched places in Ellen Ann's clothes—Cicely remembered those, too.

On her way home from school, what should peep out at Cicely from the bushes beside the "Halfway Spring" but a dainty little red and white lunch basket, just where she'd left it to hunt for water cresses! She carried it home to mamma. "But I want the tin pail, too, to-morrow, mamma—this tin pail. I'm going to play a joke on Ellen Ann Tibbetts," she said. And then she whispered to mamma, and mamma nodded to her. And the next day two dainty lunches went to school with Cicely, and one of them was in Ellen Ann's shiny tin pail.—Annie Hamilton Donnell, in Children's Treasury.

A LITTLE ERRAND FOR WHOM?

Helen stood on the doorstep with a very tiny basket in her hand, when her father drove up to her and said: "I am glad you are ready to go out, dear. I came to take you to Mrs. Lee's park to see the new deer."

"Oh, thank you, papa; but I can't go just this time. The deer will keep, and we will go to-morrow. I have a very particular errand to do now," said the little girl.

"What is it dear?" asked the father.

"Oh, it is to carry this somewhere," and she held up the small basket.

Her father paused and asked: "Who is this errand for, dear?"

"For my own self papa? Oh, no. I guess not—it's a little errand for God, papa."

"Well, I will not hinder you, my little dear," said the good father, tenderly. "Can I help you any?"

"No, sir. I was going to carry my orange, that I saved from my dessert, to old Peter."

"Is old Peter sick?"

"No, I hope not, but he never has anything nice, and he's good and thankful. Big folks give him only meat and broken bread, and I thought an orange would look so beautiful and make him so happy! Don't you think that poor well folks ought to be comforted sometimes as well as poor sick folks, papa?"

"Yes; and I think we too often forget them until sickness or starvation comes. You are right; this is a little errand for God. Get into the buggy and I will drive you to Peter's and wait till you have done the errand, and then show you the deer. Have you a pin, Helen?"

"Yes, papa, here is one."

"Well, here is a five dollar bill for you to fix on the skin of the orange. This will pay old Peter's rent for four weeks, and perhaps this will be a little errand for God, too," said the gentleman.

Little Helen, who had taught a wise man a wise lesson, looked very pleased as her fingers fixed the bill on the orange.—Young Evangelist.

WHAT DO WE OWE OTHERS?

What is the measure of the love we owe to others? It is the measure of what we think is owing to ourselves. "Love him as thyself." Observe, if I may use such a word, the equity of this divine rule. It makes us the judge of what we ought to do. It imposes upon us no duty that we have not already acknowledged for ourselves.—Dean Stanley.

Should we at times feel disheartened and discouraged, a confiding thought, a simple movement of hearts towards God will renew our powers. Whatever He may demand of us, He will give us at the moment the strength and the courage that we need.—Fenelon.

PRESS ASSOCIATION MEETING AT HOT SPRINGS.

The second annual meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association, composed of the editors and the publishers of the periodical literature of our church, was held in Central Methodist Church, Hot Springs, Ark., December 17-18. This organization, formed at Birmingham, Ala., two years ago, has been the means of bringing the editors and the publishers together in a most enjoyable fellowship and in most helpful business relations. While this was the second annual meeting, two called meetings have been held, so this was the fourth gathering of the Association.

The meeting was well attended, the following being present: L. C. Branscomb, of the Alabama Christian Advocate; A. C. Millar, of the Arkansas Methodist; Carlton D. Harris, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; S. A. Arnold, of the Central Methodist; T. N. Ivey, of the Christian Advocate (Nashville); F. S. Parker, of the Epworth Era; Curtis B. Haley, of the Methodist Quarterly Review; J. A. Burrow, of the Midland Methodist; H. T. Carley, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; D. H. Aston, of the Oklahoma Methodist; W. H. Nelson, of the Pacific Methodist Advocate; A. F. Smith, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate; E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor; A. J. Weeks, of the Texas Christian Advocate; W. P. King and L. J. Ballard, of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. The periodicals not personally represented were the Advocate-Herald, the Florida Christian Advocate, the North Carolina Christian Advocate, the Richmond Christian Advocate, the Southern Christian Advocate, and the Missionary Voice, although messages were received from all of these. C. W. Tadlock and S. H. C. Burgin, members of the General Conference Commission on Christian Literature, met with the Association for the purpose of considering with its members the general subject of General Conference legislation concerning the periodical literature of the church.

It would be impossible for any gathering to be more royally entertained than was this meeting of the Press Association. The official board of Central Methodist Church, and Dr. Marion S. Monk, the pastor, must have resolved among themselves to give a demonstration of perfect hospitality, for they did just that thing. Not one detail that would make for the comfort or convenience of the visitors was overlooked, and many courtesies were extended that far exceeded the requirements of even faultless entertainment. We were not surprised to learn, from various sources, that Dr. Monk is held in peculiarly high esteem throughout the city. We record our opinion that he is "a scholar and gentleman"—what more could we say?

The Association is also greatly indebted to the Business Men's League of Hot Springs for unusual courtesies. Composed as it is of progressive citizens who are thoroughly alive to the best interests of the community, the League made a generous appropriation from its funds to assist in the entertainment of these representatives of a great church, and it officially designated one of its officers as the bearer of a cordial message of welcome. When we called at the office of the League to express our personal appreciation of the kindnesses we had received, it was our good fortune to meet both the president and the secretary of the organization, whom we found to be as cordial in their personal greetings as they were in their official capacities.

Hot Springs is a wonderfully interesting and attractive place. Though its reputation may not have been so savory some years ago, it is now as clean, physically and morally, as the average city of its size, and in many respects it is far above the average. We have never come into contact with a people who take them by and large, were more friendly to a good cause, more hospitable to strangers, more eager to extend delightful courtesies to mere chance acquaintances. The city administration is in the hands of men who stand for right things, and there is constant effort to make better every phase of municipal life.

The hot springs, from which the city takes its name, are, of course, among the wonders of the world. There are more than forty of them, and they possess a radio-activity which gives them remarkable curative properties. The springs are owned and controlled by the United States Government, being set apart in 1832 as a "national sanitarium for all time," and "dedicated to the people of the United States to be forever free from sale or alienation." The bath houses, of which there are twenty, are magnificent structures, operated under rules and regulations approved by the Secretary of the Interior. The prices charged are very reasonable and are fixed by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the equipment and accommodations furnished. In addition, the Government itself maintains a free bath house for indigent persons. The members of the Press Association were courteously extended the privileges of all the houses, and most of them took at least one good bath while in the city. This editor took his experimental ablution at the Buckstaff, one of the finest establishments on the reservation, under the direction of a skillful attendant who has been scouring, showering, steaming, and "sweating out" visitors for nine years. We venture the opinion that the Association Saturday morning was composed of as clean a set of men as ever assembled.

Hot Springs is a city of hotels, boarding houses, and restaurants, as might be expected since the resident population is only about twenty thousand, and the number of visitors is about one hundred and fifty thousand annually. And we are glad to record the fact that hotel and restaurant rates are reasonable—much more so than in any other city it has been our pleasure to visit. Some of the hotels are big enough to lodge and feed at one time as many people as compose the entire population of a good many towns in Louisiana and Mississippi. There is one—and its facilities have been pledged in case Hot Springs secures the meeting—large enough to take care of our General Conference in every detail under one roof. The Press Association was housed at one of the smaller hotels—the Townsend—which gave the proprietor, Mr. J. A. Townsend, the opportunity of extending to its members many kindnesses which were far above the basis of a mere commercial transaction. If the General Conference goes to Hot Springs—and we hope it will—it will, of course, draw many visitors, and to all such we commend the Townsend.

The meetings of the Press Association were both enjoyable and profitable. It was gratifying to learn that the subscription lists of practically all our Conference organs have shown a material increase during the year, though most of the papers have had a hard struggle for existence on account of the high cost of production. The members of the General Conference Commission on Christian Literature were keenly interested in all the discussions pertaining to the business management of the papers, and they were frank in saying they had gathered much valuable material for their official report.

There was unanimous agreement on the part of those present that the church paper is both a missionary and an educational agency, and that, as such, its circulation ought, in some way, to be made to extend throughout the rank and file of the church membership. It is too often true that the people who need it most are the very ones who are hardest to secure as regular readers at a subscription rate that will make the paper entirely self-supporting. There needs to be developed—and there are signs that it is being developed—a Christian literature conscience that will insure at least one religious newspaper in every Christian home.

As part of the published program, interesting addresses were delivered by Dr. Carlton D. Harris, president of the Association, Dr. A. C. Millar, Dr. J. A. Burrow, Dr. L. C. Branscomb, and Dr. W. H. Nelson. All those present took part in the discussion of topics that were of general interest.

The following statement of the circulation of some of our papers may be of interest, the figures being in round numbers: Advocate-Herald, 4,000; Alabama Christian Advocate, 25,000; Arkansas Methodist, 13,500; Baltimore Suthern Methodist, 10,400; Central Methodist, 9,000; Christian Advocate (Nashville), 15,000; Epworth Era, 30,000; Midland Methodist, 11,000; New Orleans Christian Advocate, 10,000; North Carolina Christian Advocate, 16,500; Pacific Methodist Advocate, 3,000; Richmond Christian Advocate, 8,300; St. Louis Christian Advocate, 12,000; Texas Christian Advocate, 20,000; Wesleyan Christian Advocate, 10,000.

The officers of the Association were re-elected, as follows: Carlton D. Harris, president; H. T. Carley, vice president; Alfred F. Smith, secretary-treasurer. The time of the next annual meeting was fixed for the third week in December, 1921, the place to be selected by the executive committee.

Of the new members of the Association, Drs. W. P. King and L. J. Ballard, of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, and Dr. D. H. Aston, of the newly-established Oklahoma Methodist, were present. After a careful examination by Dr. A. J. Weeks, official phrenologist of the famous Bonehead Club of Dallas, Texas, their eligibility was thoroughly established and they were admitted, magna cum laude.

After the final session on Saturday, the Association was the guest of Dr. Monk at dinner, after which an automobile ride over the city was enjoyed. At other times the visitors enjoyed walking to various points of interest, though walking was not necessary, as the Hot Springs Street Railway Company had courteously furnished each one with a plentiful supply of complimentary tickets. No account of the meeting would be complete without mention of the many courtesies of Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, through whose influence the Association met at Hot Springs, in a sense, host for the State at large—and a most hospitable one he was.

A "GREATER ADVOCATE."

It has been our earnest desire to make the Advocate as far as possible an indispensable part of the equipment of the intelligent Methodist in Louisiana and Mississippi. We have by no means reached our ideal of what the paper ought to be, though we do believe it is a substantial help to every person who reads it regularly, and that it carries each week some item at least of information, or some helpful suggestion, that makes it fully worth its cost.

But that it may more fully minister to all the needs of all our people, beginning with the first number of the new year we are going to make an addition to the Sunday School Department, and add an Epworth League Department, with the hope that ultimately we shall be able to furnish a paper that will meet every legitimate requirement of those who are interested in any part of the church's work. In other words, we are going to try to furnish such a paper as will enable our friends to say to those who do not now take it, "When you take the New Orleans Christian Advocate, you will be getting an all-around religious periodical that will directly and specifically help every member of the family who is in any way interested in any department of church work."

The addition to the Sunday School Department will, for the present, consist of the subject, the golden text, and the Scripture reference for the current Uniform Lesson, with a few suggestive "teaching points" that will undertake especially to make a practical application of the truths studied.

The Epworth League Department will be conducted for the purpose of helping in every possible way this great organization that has done so much, and is still doing so much, for the religious development of our young people. Without adopting a fixed form for the presentation of League material, we shall endeavor to make this Department minister in every way possible to the needs of all our young people.

That these new features will add considerably to our own labors, we do not mind at all. We have all the time there is- and we have dedicated all the strength we possess to the service of the church. If we should find that no useful purpose is served by these additional features, we can omit them more easily than we carry them—and no harm will have been done. We are ready to undertake any other work that will help make the paper all that it ought to be.

We are calling attention to these features now in order that they may be mentioned by our pastors and friends when they set about putting the paper into the homes of all their people. We are earnestly hoping that at least the maximum quota of one subscriber to every ten members, as adopted by our Patronizing Conferences, will speedily be secured, and that we may soon attain the rank of "A Greater Advocate" in circulation if in nothing else. We confidently believe that the united, earnest efforts of our pastors, assisted by the laity, would put the Advocate into 5,000 new homes within a period of four weeks. Rev. Harry W. Rickey, a member of the Louisiana Conference, reported to us that he undertook to see what he could do in the way of securing new subscribers; he approached twenty-four people on the subject—and got twenty-three subscriptions. This may sound like "Agents' Bonanza" propaganda but Brother Rickey sent the names and the money to the office.

A man does not know what he really can do until he has really tried.

SPECIAL EDUCATIONAL NUMBER NEXT WEEK.

In co-operation with the Christian Education Commission, we shall make next week's issue of the Advocate a special educational number carrying an unusual amount of exceedingly interesting and valuable material dealing with the great Christian Education Movement in which our church is now engaged. We call special attention to it, with the hope that our readers will look forward to it eagerly, and that they will read carefully every article dealing with this subject of paramount interest.

SHELBY, MISS., HEADS THE LIST.

Our church at Shelby, Miss., North Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, pastor, has the honor of sending in the first "Every Family" list of subscriptions to the Advocate under our special proposition, the list consisting of 21 renewals and 33 new subscriptions. We extend our thanks to Brother Wyatt and his splendid people for the promptness with which they have availed themselves of the special offer, and we earnestly pray that the Advocate may be a blessing to every home into which it goes, and to the charge as a whole.

Second on the list, just one day behind Shelby, is Pontotoc, Miss., also of the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor. We have been notified by Brother Lewis that the Advocate will go into every home represented in the membership of the church at Pontotoc; and to him and his good people we likewise extend thanks and express the hope that the Advocate will be a great blessing. It is worthy of note that Pontotoc was on the "Every Family" list last year.

We are hoping that many churches in all three of our Conferences will follow the example of these progressive pastorates.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Walter W. Moore requests us to state that his post office address is 1029 East Beach, Biloxi, Miss.

The subscription price of Zion's Herald has recently been increased from $2.50 to $3.50 a year, due to the increased cost of production.

Rev. R. E. Simpson, of the Mississippi Conference, will attend Southern Methodist University this year, where he will take the theological course.

The Methodist, a weekly paper of the M. E. Church, published at Baltimore, Md., has suspended publication, the high cost of paper and labor and the failure of many to pay for the paper being assigned as the reason.

We learn from an exchange that each of the two Conferences in Georgia made an assessment of $500 for the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, giving that splendid paper deserved assistance to the extent of $1,000 for the next year.

Rev. L. H. Floyd, of Horn Lake, Miss., writes: "We find some very fine people in the bounds of the Horn Lake charge. They seem to be interested in church work and we are praying that this may be a great year in the Master's cause."

The editor takes this opportunity to thank the many friends, known and unknown, who have so kindly sent him Christmas greetings, with other words of good cheer, and to wish for every one of them the fullest measure of happiness and prosperity throughout the new year.

Rev. G. P. Files, now of the North Arkansas Conference but formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is stationed this year at De View, Ark., in the Searcy District, one of the choice charges of the Conference. He still keeps in touch with his Mississippi friends through the Advocate.

Rev. J. F. Corbin, superintendent of the Western District, Western Mexican Conference, paid the Advocate office a pleasant call one day last week. He had been spending several weeks at Biloxi, Miss., for the benefit of his health, and was returning to his home at El Paso, Tex., greatly improved.

Rev. Henry T. Young, our pastor at Natchitoches, La., in a note to the Business Manager, with enclosure for nine new subscriptions says: "This is partial result of campaign last Sunday afternoon. Will send more later." This is additional proof of what can be done by diligent effort.

We desire to amend our "Every Family" proposition to this effect: Where the Advocate is sent into every home represented in the membership of the church, we will send the paper one year for $1.50, whether there are as many as twenty families or not. We are not willing to impose even a seeming hardship upon those pastors who have churches with fewer than twenty families on the church roll.

We take the following from the Greenwood (Miss.) Daily Commonwealth, of December 20: "The members and pastors of the various churches in Greenwood joined in a union welcome service last night at the Methodist church for the new pastor of this congregation, Rev. V. C. Curtis, formerly presiding elder of the Greenville District. The church was filled to capacity, evidencing the hearty welcome which the people of this city are extending to the new pastor."

From a personal letter from Rev. W. B. Jones, the recently appointed pastor of our church at Crystal Springs, Miss., we learn that sickness and washouts on the railroads delayed his moving, but that he was expecting to reach his new home this week. Brother Jones visited his appointment last week, where he was delightfully received. The new church is in process of erection, and the prospects of its being completed by [illegible]

We clip the following from the St. Louis Christian Advocate: "Rev. C. O. McCormick is conducting a revival at Holly Grove. He writes us that [illegible] added to the roll of the church, three of whom were heads of families, and the whole quantity to those [illegible] and twenty, for which he will receive [illegible] connected with their attendance at church on the Sunday. He has secured a contribution amounting to $600 and has [illegible] and still [illegible] in the contest."

Greenwood's Missionary Society of Clarksdale, Miss., is a unit of organization. It has about 150 members, and last year it raised for all purposes $2,900. Its organization is complete, its work is extensive, and its meetings are pervaded by a deeply spiritual atmosphere. In the organization for the new year, Mrs. F. H. Cannon becomes president, succeeding Mrs. S. W. Whitmire, during whose administration marvelous progress was made. We could almost envy the pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, the privilege of having such a magnificent organization with which to work. A recent number of the Clarksdale Daily Register contains a full account of the organization and activities of this Society.

On August 28, 1920, while visiting one of his daughters, Mrs. Walter Youngblood, at McNair, Miss., Dr. JAMES W. BALDRIDGE was suddenly overtaken by the enemy that must overtake us all. In the death of Dr. Baldridge the church has lost a faithful member. It was our privilege to meet him eight years ago, after his good wife had been called to her reward. We received him into the church by letter at Garland, La., where he came to be with his daughter, Mrs. Baker. There we found him to be a consistent Christian. Later he came to Vinton, to be with his daughter, Mrs. Davis, and it was here that we saw that beautiful Christian life as it unfolded itself, making our church there richer and better. He was an intelligent Methodist. He knew why he was a Methodist. He loved the prayer meeting, and when he prayed it made us feel that heaven was near, and that the heavenly Father was listening. He was eighty-three years of age, and had served four years in the Civil War. He leaves to mourn their loss three girls and five boys, who often long to hear his fatherly voice. Some time, after the evening shades have fallen and the morning light breaks in to awake us, we shall see and know and appreciate that life as it continues to unfold in that better world.

Now Gets 48 Eggs A Day Instead Of 3

Mr. Vincent Cured His Hens of the Loafing Habit. Easily Done.

"My egg supply has increased wonderfully. Early in January, I started using Don Sung. I had been getting about 3 eggs every other day from 70 hens. By the end of January I was getting 30 eggs a day. In two weeks more, I was getting 48 a day."—G. W. Vincent, South, Ky.

Mr. Vincent's results, in January, prove that you can get the eggs when eggs are high. It's no trouble and costs nothing to try.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) is a scientific tonic and conditioner. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health and makes her stronger and more active. It tones up the egg-laying organs, and gets the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather.

Don Sung can be obtained promptly from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer, or send $1.04 (incindes war tax) for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE STATE OF THE CHURCH.

(Read and Adopted at the Recent Session of the Mississippi Conference.

We, your Committee on the State of the Church, would report as follows:

We are gratified to note the continued liberality of our people, which we trust may abound more and more for the increase of the Kingdom and for blessings toward those who give in the spirit of the Master. We rejoice in the success of the Centenary Movement, and urge that in fidelity to God and for safety and enrichment of Christian character and the enlargement of our borders, we faithfully meet our obligations in the amounts pledged and yet unpaid. We would also impress upon our people the importance of Christian education in connection with the Educational Campaign now being undertaken by our church.

We further rejoice in that we report a larger number of accessions to the church than at any of our recent sessions and are greatly gratified at the number of revivals reported, and recommend that we pray for a widening and deepening of the evangelistic spirit among us, and that we have such a spirit of pastoral diligence as will conserve the results, by saving the new converts to the church and promoting their growth and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

We are grieved and alarmed at the tide of worldliness and sin that continues to sweep over our land, in such forms as Sabbath desecration, licentiousness, gambling, divorce, profiteering, dancing in its worst aspects, immodest and indelicate dress, together with extreme devotion to the motion pictures, which are too frequently suggestive and unclean. All of these the church seems powerless to check, some of them even reaching to its sanctuaries, being indulged in by members without direct pastoral rebuke or any form of church discipline. We feel that a serious hour is upon us; that the time has come to sound the alarm with no uncertain note and in trumpet tones. Judgment should begin at the house of God.

We believe this to be a time that calls for fasting and prayer, in which our ministry should lead by example and emphasize in their preaching. We are praying less than our fathers did, and the family altar has largely fallen down in the homes of our people, while fasting has almost wholly disappeared, despite the solemn vows of our ministry to recommend fasting by precept and example. At this crisis, when we are in such dire need of ministers, we need to fast and pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into his harvest.

Withal, we feel that our pulpits should emphasize holiness unto the Lord in plain, scriptural terms; that we should stress God's awful condemnation of sin and the gospel call to repentance. Also, that more euphasis should be given to such cardinal doctrines as conviction for sin, regeneration, the witness of the Spirit, and of growth in grace.

We would also call your attention further to the almost total neglect of discipline in our churches. Thank God, we still keep watch over our ministry, allowing none but clean men to remain in our pulpits. But what of our churches? Where is discipline being administered for breach of church vows, improper words and actions, or even immoral conduct? Have we forgotten this porton of our General Rule: "We will admonish him of the error of his way; we will bear with him for a season; but if he repent not, he hath no place among us; we have delivered our souls?"

Have we allowed our lust for membership, our financial demands, to make us compromise with the world? God forbid! If so, may he grant us repentance. Here your committee feels that the decline is so general that no one man or a few men can directly accomplish anything. Zion's watchmen must all awake. There must be unanimity of action. Alone we can only sound the alarm.

We would submit this report for your consideration, your prayers, your wise and just action, trusting that it may find such response in your consciousness and ours that we may give new strength to the church that she may purify herself and offer a more effective barrier to sin and evil and hasten wondrously to enlarge her borders. Respectfully submitted,

M. B. SHARBROUGH.

THE NEW YEAR.

By Willie C. Page.

Softly and slowly the bells of Time are ringing out the old year—auother milestone on life's journey. The joys, sorrows, pleasures, dreams and memories of the past year have gone from earth forever—its book of record is now irrevocably closed. Many of its white leaves are marred and blotted by our failures and mistakes, but the pages on the new scroll, representing each new day of the next twelve months, unroll pure and unsullied before us.

It is with awed hearts we stand on the threshold of the New Year, its hopes unfulfilled, its good deeds not accomplished, its golden opportunities still ungrasped. Many problems arise to confront us—financial depression, scarcity of money, economic and educational conditions, our relations with foreign affairs; but a greater question is: What are you going to do? What is your attitude toward your fellow-creature? Are you going to be helpful, unselfish, so pure of heart that nothing can harm or buffet you, tender, sympathetic with the sorrows of others?

Many hearts are sending white-winged hopes, sweet dreams and anticipations into the New Year — the beautiful fabrics of which the tapestries of life are woven. If the golden threads are tangled and broken, do your best and try again; if the band on the wheel slackens, try again, and trust to the Great Weaver of your destiny to make the patterns of life what they should be.

What are you going to do this New Year?

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

On December 15, we gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Smith, at Grange, Miss., to celebrate their golden wedding. The home of each of the nine brothers and sisters of Mrs. Smith was represented. Other relatives and a few friends were also present, the guests in all numbering almost one hundred.

Before the noon hour had come, a spacious table had been bounteously covered with eatables of all kinds.

At 12 o'clock we gathered in the parlor for the impressive ceremony. Miss Abbie Thompson sang, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," as the "wedding party" entered. An appropriate Scripture lesson was read by Rev. G. H. Thompson, Mrs. Smith's brother, followed by prayer by Rev. H. J. Maddox, the pastor, after which Brother Thompson, in eloquent language, pictured their noble, beautiful lives and wonderful influence. In conclusion, he presented a purse, containing $110 in gold coin lovingly contributed by brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews. After the ceremony we gathered around the table and enjoyed the bounteous dinner that had been prepared.

The guests left at a late hour in the afternoon, feeling that the day had been well spent, and wishing for Mr. and Mrs. Smith many more happy anniversaries.

NOTES CONCERNING THE REVIVAL CAMPAIGN IN THE COLLEGES.

At the opening of the meeting in John C. C. Mayo College, only 10 per cent of the boarding pupils were professedly Christian. At the close of the meeting only 10 per cent were non-Christian. The 10 per cent who are non-Christian were out of school at the week end. In other words, when the meeting closed on Sunday night all the boarding students present had made profession of faith. Getting them into the church was a more difficult job as the major part of them were from Hardshell Baptists, Come-outers, and other sects antagonistic to Methodism. There were three young men who acknowledged their call to the ministry.

At Meridian College, Meridian, Texas, the meeting opened auspiciously. During the first three days there were twenty conversions. Then came one football game after another in rapid succession, either there or their teams going elsewhere. This demoralized the meeting. No volunteers for life service.

The revival at Ferrum Training school, Ferrum, Virginia, was great; one hundred and nine professions of faith, ten young men called to the ministry, more than twenty girls volunteered for missionary work at home or abroad. These three meetings were held by O. E. Goddard.

The revival at Hendrix College, Conday, Arkansas, conducted by Dr. Tyler, of Washington, D. C., was remarkable for the deepening of the spiritual life of the student body. Acting president Green and the president of the Y. M. C. A. think vast good was accomplished. The manly appeal made by Dr. Tyler was highly commended by all.

Dr. Tyler also held the Henderson-Brown revival. The same reports that came from Hendrix came from President Workman and the president of the Y. M. C. A. at Henderson-Brown. Dr. Tyler left Arkansas with the love of hundreds of her best young people.

Reports of a wonderful revival in Galloway College have reached the office. This is perhaps the most intensive and extensive revival in the history of Galloway College. Nearly all the girls who were not Christians made profession of faith and there were a large number of volunteers for missionary work. Mrs. Steele conducted this meeting.

Dr. Hounshell had some difficulty in getting started in Southwestern University owing to lack of understanding as to dates, but the meeting got under good headway by the latter part of the week. A football game which had long been scheduled for the last of the week made it expedient to close the meeting Friday night. The meeting is reported as very helpful to the whole spiritual life of the college. There were some decisions for Christ and some volunteers for life service.

The Trinity Park revival conducted by Dr. Hounshell was quite a satisfactory meeting. Dr. Hounshell is in great favor with this student body. They greatly appreciate his services. His deep spiritual messages commend him to all and he cannot respond to half the calls that come for him.

One of the most remarkable meetings held this year was held in Grenada College by Rev. S. S. McKenney, Galveston, Texas. Every student in school not already a Christian made profession of faith and every one gave her name for church membership. More than one hundred signed tithing cards. More than a score volunteered for missionary service at home or abroad.

We have a most favorable account of the meeting held in Birmingham-Southern College by Dr. Frank Jackson. The college expressed great gratitude to the Board of Missions for sending Dr. Jackson there. The meeting left an abiding influence on the college that will be felt throughout the year.

Dr. Bromley, one of our General Evangelists, held the meeting for the Kentucky Wesleyan College. In spite of hindrances from football games long time scheduled for that week, the meeting gripped the student body and vast good was accomplished. Dr. Bromley is one of our most cultured and efficient evangelists. There is such a clamorous demand for him in the North that our Southern churches do not yet know him. When they do, he will be in demand in the South as he is in the North.

Rev. W. E. Sewell, of Tampa, Fla., conducted a successful meeting in Reinhardt College. It seemed best here to combine the meeting with the local church, which is quite unusual. The reports show that much good was accomplished. Brother Sewell is one of our home missionaries preaching to the Cubans in their language, but he also knows how to tell the story of Jesus and His love in his native tongue.

Dr. W. B. Cambell reports a good meeting at John Locke. A goodly number of professions of faith. Some very definite victories were achieved.

Mrs. Steele has just closed a good meeting in Greensboro College. It was a meeting remarkable for deepening the spiritual life of the student body. The services were serious, thought-provoking, and uplifting. More than a dozen volunteered for missionary work.

Reports have reached us that Dr. Bulla conducted a great meeting in the Woman's College of Alabama. We have no particulars, but the fact that they were having a great meeting reached us through Bishop Cannon.

Dr. Hounshell is just in from a gracious meeting in Martin College. Every student in the college not already a professed Christian made profession of faith before the meeting closed. About one dozen of the girls volunteered for some kind of missionary work.

O. E. GODDARD.

ANTILLA, WITH ITS WONDERFUL HARBOR, AND UNPARALLELED OPPORTUNITIES FOR THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH AND SCHOOL.

By W. K. Cunningham, Pastor-Director.

I want to tell you a little something about our new field of work, for nowhere has Methodism a greater opportunity or a greater responsibility than here in Antilla. Antilla is a growing city of 6000 inhabitants and the center of 185,000, situated on the north coast of Cuba. It has a splendid harbor; it is said that the navies of the world could be accommodated in the bay on which Antilla is built. The town, in common with most of the towns in Cuba, surely has a future, and this future is bound up with the Methodist Church. For in this city of 6000 there is not a church of any denomination, Catholic or Protestant, save our little chapel. And something else: in all this city there is not a sign of a day school, except one or two private families where children are taken in for a part of the day. So there it is—the Methodist Church, on the ground, with no opposition, and the entire city and surrounding province waiting to be taken for the Lord Jesus Christ!

I have done a great deal of visiting since I arrived, September 1, and by every family I am asked when we will open our school. I believe that we could soon have a school of 300 children if we had the facilities to care for them. The people are very friendly to the church, and NOW is the time to win them.

It is our purpose to open the school the 1st of November, but it depends on equipment and teachers. We have rented a private house in which to commence operations, but of course it will be entirely inadequate. For one thing, it will have no room which can be used for a chapel, and how religious exercises are to be conducted each day is something I have not yet been able to figure out. WHAT WE NEED IS A SCHOOL BUILDING ON THE SAME LOT WITH THE CHURCH. A friend of our mission work, a splendid architect, has drawn up plans for this building, and you will hear from them soon. I believe that $30,000 spent in this place at the present time would mean more for the cause of the Kingdom than any greater amount spent three or four years from now.

The church in Antilla has been without a regular pastor for a long time, and we have just begun to reorganize the work. Since September 1, the day school attendance has increased from 17 to 56. We have a membership of 28, most of whom are active. We have set a goal of 100 new members in the church and 150 in the Sunday school this Conference year, and are praying and working toward this end. Probationers received, 15; contributed for all purposes by the church, $64.60; by the Sunday school, $21.61.

The young people are very anxious to have an Epworth League, and I intend to organize one as soon as the necessary literature is on hand. Altogether, we are very much encouraged, and would not be anywhere else for anything in the world.

Of course the work is heavy, and the responsibility very great. It seems at times that our strength is very inadequate for the work that needs to be done, but we feel sure that the church back home is praying for us, and that the needed strength will always be supplied.

Don't forget us in this end of the Island. The door is wide open. Now is the time to win the Oriente for Him.

The birth of a little child reveals God; the helplessness of a little child proves providence; the innocence of a little child illustrates heaven; the death of a little child implies immortality. Surely no little one sent into an earthly home, even for a day, and bequeathing these beautiful and sublime lessons, can be thought to have come and gone in vain.—W. R. Alger.

So Disagreeable to Yourself and All About You.

Catarrh is generally conceded to be a constitutional disease. This medicine removes the cause of the trouble, which if not checked may lead to more serious disease.

In 46 years of use and test Hood's Sarsaparilla has relieved many cases as told by voluntary letters of commendation. Why not get a bottle today and give it a trial? It combines economy and efficiency. Keep Hood's Pills on hand as a family cathartic.

Simple Mixture Makes Hens Lay

By W. S. Burgess.

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A life long study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Combs' Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name — post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 158 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.—Adv.

HOW TO OBTAIN A REVIVAL.

By Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir.

I feel sure that we can safely say if the rule laid down by the Prophet Hosea 6:1, "Come, let us return unto the Lord," is truly carried out by the preachers and churches, that a great revival of Holy Ghost religion will be the result. We find that the Prophet of God did not exclude himself, but said "Come, and let us return unto the Lord," giving us to understand that preachers as well as the people must draw close unto the Lord if they would obtain the revival that will convict sinners deep enough to make them cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" The church of Jesus Christ cannot obtain a great revival of Holy Ghost religion except in the strength of the consciousness of God's presence.

For a real, genuine revival to come, all things that hinder must give way and the preacher and the churches must be wide awake, travailing in prayer. Prayer is the mighty bond which will place us in fellowship with God and give to us the revival that will sweep men into the kingdom of our Christ. A church that will not draw close to God is a powerless church, and the devil has cheated us out of many victories, all because some pet sin remains in the way. The revival has been constantly hindered, all because some hypocrital church member insists on holding to his sins. Achan kept God's people back in their march to the Promised Land because he had sin hid away. As long as David had sin in his heart, just so long was the revival kept back; but when he made a confession and got close to God, the refining fire fell and he was able to teach transgressors God's way.

To obtain a revival that will count for much, there must be perfect harmony between the prophet that is making the call and the pastor that he is helping. Very often the revival is hindered at this point, all because the preacher lends his ear to some backsliden church member that is in the way, and follows his advice instead of the prophet. Our prayer life must be greatly revived, if we get the real revival that our country is in such great need of at this time. There must be less talk and more real knee work if we have sinners convicted and born into the Kingdom. No physical birth can take place until there is travail. Neither can there be spiritual birth destitute of some travail. "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth sons and daughters." Too few of God's children have a real burden for lost souls and are able to pray down a real Pentecostal revival.

Many of our so-called revivals of today begin by seeking to get members in when we have our churches filled with the unsaved that need to be "born again" so that they would be in line to teach transgressors the way. Therefore, I fully believe in preaching to the sinners on the inside that we may get them in line with the Divine will. The Prophet of God said, "Come, let us return unto the Lord"; not the sinner on the outside, but Israel—the church. If the Holy Ghost revival is to come, we must begin to look for the old paths "at the house of our God," and that is God's way. The disciples obtained the revival in the upper room on their knees that aroused Jerusalem. When we quit flirting and bowing to the world, the fire will fall, and sinners will begin to ask about the way. Self-denial and agony of soul is the only remedy that will revive a spiritually dead church and invigorate it with holy zeal that will make the devil tremble. Jesus said that "one would chase a thousand and two would put ten thousand to flight." And the only way for us to do this is to have the rich experience that the disciples had. If the preachers and church members just will listen to the voice of the Prophet, and "return unto God," deep, pungent, Holy Ghost conviction will come upon the sinner and our altars will be crowded with deeply-convicted penitent souls.

Many of our churches of to-day are just ordinary meeting places without any power to influence sinners to God. Hence the prophet of to-day should cry about with travail of soul, "Come, let us return unto the Lord." If this is done by preachers and churches, the revival will be obtained and the church will become more than just an ordinary meeting place for suppers and socials. It will be a power for God. Oh, that the revival will come that will cause our people to love God more than they do the card party, dance, picture show and other things of that nature that belong to the devil!

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 231G Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

FROM LULA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: It may be encouraging to you to know that the prediction is made here that I will be able to renew all of the subscriptions to the Advocate and put the paper in every home in the church at Lula at $1.00. I hope the prediction may come true. I will make the effort in due time.

I am glad to report there is a hopeful condition here and the members of the church seem determined to take care of the interests of the church although they are suffering from the many losses they sustained in their farming operations this year. We are almost "marking time" now, hoping for a revival of business ere long.

Brother Holder, Educational Secretary, was with us yesterday and spoke at 11 o'clock on the Educational Movement. He made a splendid presentation of the subject, and I am sure there will be collection on the subject as a result. I believe the appointment of Brother Holder to this task was a wise one, and he will succeed. His sermon at night was thoroughly evangelistic, and stirred the hearts of the people. Permit me to say, I think I can see decided improvement in the spiritual life of this section of the Delta over what it was a few years ago.

The whole Greenville District holds Brother Curtis in high esteem for his faithful performance of duty as presiding elder the past four years, and many express regret that he had to be moved from us. We are all prepared to take Brother Felts into our hearts and give him every assistance we can, and hope to make marked advance in all of the district work. You may look for great things from the Greenville District this year.

CHILD MEMBERSHIP.

On my trip to South Mississippi in October, I made it convenient to visit my daughter, Mrs. Roy McDonald, and husband, in Jackson, Miss. While there, I attended services at the Galloway Memorial Church and enjoyed the splendid discourse by Rev. C. W. Crisler. But it is what I witnessed just prior to the preaching service that I desire to mention.

As the up-to-dates would say, I "arrived a little early"— about fifteen minutes before the preaching hour. While resting in one of those commodious pews I saw a brother, W. H. Pullen, leading his grandson, King Haynes Pullen, aged six years, to the altar for baptism. He said that the child's father was in New York on business, and that his mother was in the West for her health, but that he wanted to see him get the right start; so he had brought him for baptism. In accordance with his request, Brother Crisler performed that sweetest of rites in any church.

This occasion called very vividly to my recollection an incident in my own life. It was at the close of the pastor's earnest call for candidates for membership in our Methodist Church at Mabon that our baby girl, Mary, now a grown young lady but then a tot of four or five summers, said to me, "Papa, I want to join." I at once called to the preacher and said, "Brother Curley, little girl desires to join;" I went to the altar with her, and I myself answered all the questions put to us, bowing to her; for until she should be old enough to direct her own life; and while it is a fact that our other six children tried to live, love, and obey the Lord and our Discipline, yet none of them has done better than the baby member.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES AND THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

My Dear Sister: The leaders of the Christian Education Movement realize the desirability of having the fullest interest and heartiest co-operation from the women of the church in their great work, and realize also that the women best prepared to render this service are the women who constitute the membership of the Missionary Society. Hence, they have requested me to make a special appeal to our leaders in behalf of the Movement.

Three very urgent reasons can be presented as to why our women should give the Movement this cordial concern and assistance. In the first place, missionary women are church women. Our loyalty is first to the church. Since the General Conference has authorized this Movement and our leaders are promoting it throughout the constituency of the church, it has become of prime importance to us and on its success or failure much depends for us as church women.

In the second place, the success of the Movement will make a vital contribution to the missionary cause. It will make possible the standardization of our Methodist schools and colleges so that they shall be able to provide the educational equipment that our missionaries and deaconesses must have before they can be accepted for servic.

In the third place, the Woman's Missionary Council, through its educational institutions, is to have a very substantial financial return from the success of the Movement. Five of our educational institutions are listed among the connectional institutions which will share in the distributions of the funds ahead of all Conference schools, namely: Scarritt Bible and Training School, $150,000; Brevard Mountain School, $75,000; Vashti Industrial Home and School, $100,000; Sue Bennett Mountain School, $50,000; Laredo Seminary, $50,000. Total, $425,000.

While the Christian Education Movement has a direct bearing upon our missionary interests, the financial channels of the Movement are entirely distinct from those of any missionary organization of the church, and much confusion that arose in the Centenary funds will be avoided by care at this point. No contributions to the Christian Education Movement must be made through missionary societies or out of missionary society funds. Missionary societies as missionary societies are not to make subscriptions. No credit will be given missionary societies for money given to the Christian Education Movement, even though it be given to the institutions listed above. All subscriptions must be made as INDIVIDUALS.

Nevertheless, there are many ways in which we can render a very distinct service to the Movement, namely—by

1. Personal prayer, interest and influence.

2. Attendance upon and participation in meetings held for its promotion.

3. Serving as Minute Speakers.

4. Serving on local or Conference committees for carrying out details of the plan as our pastors and the officials of the Movement may direct.

5. By emphasizing its program of Prayer, Life Service and Stewardship in our Missionary Society meetings during January, February and March.

6. Personal contributions of money.

No one can study the Movement without realizing that it is a providential one, and that it should have the heartiest endorsement of every Methodist, and we believe that no element of the membership of the church is better prepared to appreciate the timeliness of the effort or fitted to render the service necessary to make it a success than our missionary women.

Realizing all this, and the great spiritual return that shall accrue to us individually and collectively as we take part in and help to put this program over, we urge the leaders of our organization in Conferences, districts and auxiliaries to give themselves in the most effective and sympathetic way to its successful consummation.

Cordially yours,
MISS BELLE H. BENNETT.
MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB.

LISTS OF OFFICERS FOR 1921, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Will the secretaries of the auxiliaries please see that full lists of officers elected for 1921 are sent without delay to Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, 7936 Zimple street, New Orleans; Mrs. A. P. Holt, Crowley, La.;; Mrs. W. W. Duson, Crowley, La.

Incorrect lists mean delayed literature, and officers are unable to keep in touch with the work. Please, therefore, see that lists are sent in immediately.

TO THE WOMEN OF LOUISIANA.

Centenary "Pay-Up" Week, January 16-23.

At the meeting of all the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference and others interested in the great Centenary, here in New Orleans on Nov. 30, it was unanimously agreed, after hearing a careful presentation of the work of the various Conferences by Dr. Ricks, of Nashville, that January 16-23 be made a Centenary "Pay-up" week, at which time every subscriber will be urged to pay at least 40 per cent of his pledge.

The great work launched by our church as set forth by Dr. Ricks was most gratifying indeed and will succeed only as these pledges are all paid up in full.

No one present doubted for a minute that the Louisiana Conference will do less than any other Conference in our great connection.

It is ardently hoped that every church in our Conference will take pleasure and special pains to accomplish this great result in this week.

At this meeting it was suggested that the pastors and laymen make short talks at every church, Sunday, January 16, on "The Centenary Making Good," and to urge all to pay 40 per cent due on pledges. Special literature will be sent to every pastor in ample time from the Secretary's office as well as to the district leaders.

No one is more keenly alive to the great Centenary interests than the women of our Missionary Societies, who are urgently requested to lend such help during this week as in their power. The same loyal support which the women gave to the church during the Centenary drive is again requested and urged during "Pay-up" week.

Mrs. C. F. NIEBERGALL,
President.

FROM ARKABUTLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you please allow me a word in the dear old Advocate? Last Monday we reached our new field of labor—the Arkabutla circuit. The day following our arrival, the good people of Arkabutla opened the doors of their hearts to us with sweet words of encouragement, and also placed as gifts of love and loyalty to the cause, hams, cans of fruit, flour and many other things that we do not take up space to name, along with a very fine lot of fuel for both heating and cooking purposes.

Brother Carley, we are with some of the pioneers of Methodism; they love God and the cause, and have voluntarily placed themselves upon the altar of service, and have given the boy preacher their hand and said, "Son, we are going to stand by you." They have the old-time religion. Why shall we not have a glorious year in the service of the blessed Master?

Remember us daily at the throne of grace. W. O. HUNT.

FROM AMITE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Our second year is starting off well. Our people are responding to every call that is made upon them. They have increased the pastor's salary $300 over last year, and are meeting their obligations monthly. Congregations are large at every service. The prayer metings are simply fine, and well attended, also, by men and women. The spiritual interest is the thing that pleases us so much. Since Conference the attendance has reached one hundred and thirty-five at one of the meetings. We are planning great things for our Lord this year. We expect to have a great time at our district conference, which will be held here. Then we are doing some planning about our revival meeting that we expect Brother Dan Kelly to hold for us. We are trying to make our lives count for the Master in his kingdom. Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,
LASHIE N. HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

You realize the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy you probably could not get as much curative power as there is in this home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either clarified granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, CENTENARY TREASURERS, AND MEMBERS OF LOCAL CHURCH CABINETS OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At a meeting of the presiding elders, with the presidents of the Epworth League and Missionary Society, Conference Lay Leader, and Conference Missionary Secretary, held in Capitol Street Church, December 22, the condition of the Centenary was discussed, and it was unanimously decided to put on a campaign in the Conference for collection of all the pledges for the first and second years—in other words, forty per cent of the amount pledged—and the time set for this campaign is February 6 to 13, 1921. Each of you is urged to begin now to plan for this in your church, with the determination to do everything in your power to make it succeed. Take for your slogan:

"Every Subscriber 40 per cent Paid-Up."

The following plan for the local church is suggested:

1. Make a list of all those who owe either for the first or second year, or both, giving name and amount due. The treasurer should do this, but be sure some one does it.

2. The pastor, with the treasurer, or some interested person, should select a sufficient number of collectors so that all past due subscribers can be easily seen in the week. (If you have an active committee now, use them.)

3. Call a meeting of collectors and assign names on lists prepared previously—keeping duplicate—so you can check up with each team.

4. Collectors will do well to canvass in teams, and they will retain lists until subscribers all have been seen in person.

5. All lists and money should be turned in to the local treasurer immediately, and he should issue official receipts, and the treasurer should promptly report to W. D. Hawkins, Conference Centenary Treasurer, Meridian, Miss.

6. In no case should the pledge cards be handed out; make a list.

It will take your co-operation and earnest effort to make this plan go in your church. May I count on you to do your part? A letter from you, expressing your willingness to do this will be appreciated.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

SPIRITUAL RESOURCES WORK.

The Christian Education Commission is holding up to the church conceptions of Christian Education which mean new ideals, not only in the education in our colleges but in the whole educative process, which starts during early childhood in the home. It realizes that, important and essential as higher education is, our church colleges cannot do their work of Christian education unless the home, Sunday school and church have done their work in the early life of the individual. The roots of Christian character and service are in the home and church.

It is for this reason that the Christian Education Movement suggests that the month of January be devoted by the church to an effort to deepen the prayer life of the family and of the church. It is hoped that a month's thought and effort in emphasizing the place of prayer will help tremendously in the endeavor of the church to bring up this generation of boys and girls with the love of Christ in their hearts and the spirit of service as their ideal.

FROM FLORA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We arrived at our new home in Flora, Miss., December 16, and we are comfortably situated. The good people of Flora received us cordially; they know just how to make a preacher feel at home among them. Many tokens of kindness have been shown us in a material way since we came. May God's blessings rest upon all of them, and may God help us to minister to them in spiritual things. We are hoping and praying for a great and glorious year. Your brother,

J. H. FOREMAN.
